WHAT DR. TAYLOR SAYS.

WAKE FOREST, N. C., March 7, 1893.

DEAR SIR:

I believe in Life Insurance, because I consider it the best provision that the average man who has some income, but limited capital, can make for those dependent upon him. I believe in the UNION CENTRAL COMPANY, because I have seen evidence of its square dealings, and because I think that some of the policies which it issues offer peculiar advantages to the Insurer.

Very truly yours, CHARLES E. TAYLOR,
President of Wake Forest College.

To Carey J. Hunter, Manager, Raleigh, N. C.

Geo. A. Fisher, President, GETS $10,327.68!!
GETS $10,327.68!!

CINCINNATI, January 9, 1894.

HON. JOHN M. PATTISON,
Pres. Union Central Life Insurance Co., Cincinnati, O.

DEAR SIR:—I take pleasure in acknowledging receipt this day through E. W. Jewell, your General Agent in this city, of $10,327.68, in payment of Policy No. 8,928 in your Company.

I wish to express to you my hearty thanks. My Policy was for $10,000, and on your Life Rate Endowment Plan. I paid you but the ordinary life premium, just the same as I would have paid any of the other leading companies for a Policy to be paid only at death, and yet your profits have been so large that in a little over 22 years it has matured for an amount over the $10,000, and thus I have an Endowment Policy at Ordinary Life Rates.

I am greatly pleased at my good fortune. No other company known to me gives SUCH A CONTRACT, or secures SUCH RESULTS. I carry policies in a number of the leading companies, but I have NONE whose results COMPARE with this.

I am glad that my own city of Cincinnati is the home of such an institution as the Union Central Life Insurance Company, and as a citizen I am proud of it. I am, Yours respectfully,
GEORGE FISHER,
President Equitable National Bank.

For more than eight years we have been paying off these life-rate policies to the insured themselves, though the agents of other companies claimed for 15 years that no company could pay the insured himself a life-rate policy until death.

The plan is perfect, for it is at the cheapest rate and still you do not have to die to win it so as to get the benefit of it in your old age should you live to be old. Should you die early, your loved ones win the face of the policy in full, though it has cost you but little.

WASHINGTON, PA., Aug. 29, '91.

Union Central Life Ins. Co., Cincinnati, O.

GENTLEMEN:—It is with pleasure that I acknowledge payment due me (through Hughes Bros., your agents at Washington, Pa.) of $1,011.29, being in full of my claim under Life Rate Endowment Policy No. 15,985. This policy has matured three years earlier than the estimates given me by the Company when the policy was taken. Therefore, I am entirely satisfied with the Company, and can cheerfully recommend it to all persons seeking a good and safe investment. Yours truly,
WM. PEASE, Wylandville, Pa.

Triune Hymnal.

A VALUABLE COLLECTION OF

Genuine Church Music.

Adapted to Music by A. S. KIEFFER.

This book has been published to meet the growing demand of village and country churches for a suitable book to use in the regular service of the sanctuary.

We call attention to the following points in which we have endeavored to make the TRIUNE HYMNAL as perfect as possible:

1. The hymns selected are such as are popular in Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian congregations.
2. Good, old, familiar tunes are selected.
3. Not too many hymns, yet enough for all subjects and occasions.
4. Hymns of the same meter are placed together, which facilitates the use of this as a music book.
5. Each hymn has a tune, so there can be no difficulty in starting the tunes in the right meter.
6. Convenient in size and arrangement, and low in price.

Any congregation desiring a suitable book for all occasions—church and prayer service, revivals, Sunday School, etc., cannot do better than to purchase this book. Send 25 cents for a sample copy. $3.00 per dozen, postpaid.

A Faultfinder Among His Brethren.—No. 1.

BY REV. JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

I am glad to see Dr. Pritchard after the grumblers. We have magnified our ills until we can see nothing to be thankful for. May the Pritchards live long and multiply on the face of the earth, for the times are sadly out of joint, and some power is needed to stay the swelling tide of discontent.

The spirit of complaining and faultfinding fills the air. It has its grip upon me, and I intend to tell something on my beloved brethren. It really does me good to do it.

The time was when I thought all preachers, as well as the Pope, were infallible. I now have no faith in the infallibility of any human being.

When faithful memory parades before my mental vision the numberless mistakes of my past life, alas! how humiliated I do feel!

But when I call to mind the mistakes of some of the best brethren I ever knew, then Oh! how I am comforted!

I mean mistakes about the Bible—in reading, interpreting, and applying it. Could we always have with us a self-pronouncing, self-explaining and self-reading Bible, and wise, faithful monitor to tell us how and when to use it, I suppose many of our mistakes would be avoided. But sometimes we are caught without these helps, and then happy is the brother who needs not to ask the Lord to "pardon error." I used to hear the old preachers, at the conclusion of their sermons, ask the Lord to "bless truth and pardon error."

I presume most preachers have wrestled with the questions—What topic shall I discuss? and How shall I treat it? Sometimes, the best of men amusingly fail in the selection and treatment of their themes. For instance, so good a man as our beloved who generally succeeded best when pleading for the poor Indian, was once invited to preach at a private house for the special benefit of an aged, invalid mother, whose afflictions had for a long time kept her from the house of God. I was there and heard the sermon. I think the text was Gen. 9: 10. He talked about God's covenant with the beasts, bringing in venomous spiders, scorpions, snakes and other reptiles that bite and sting and kill people. He gave us statistics, with which his pockets were generally crammed, of the number of deaths resulting from bites and stings in several countries. The sermon was just horrifying to a man sitting in a room from which the light had been partially excluded, and as to the sick, helpless invalid, I have often wondered how she stood it.

But, I must say that Bro. Dodson seemed to have reached the conclusion that the sermon was not appropriate or not productive of any good results, and before he sat down, he selected another text from which he preached a very consoling and strengthening sermon.

I have given the name of Bro. Dodson, because he couldn't harm me if he would, and he wouldn't if he could.

As to the other brethren whom I know and of whose delectable mistakes I shall speak, they are yet in the flesh and of the earthy earthy; and therefore, for our mutual benefit, I shall honor them with new names.

the second brother, I am informed, lives in or about Raleigh. The reader must not think I am writing about Bro. Bailey. The brother's name does not begin with "B," though I will not say that it doesn't end with that letter. I call him Bro. Penult because he has been repeating the Latin rule, "If the penult is long, it has the accent; if short, the accent is on the antepenult," nearly all his life. In a tight place, he has recourse to this rule. At a certain College commencement he was asked to read 2 Tim., 4th chapter. When he came to Tychicus and Onesiphorus, he applied his favorite rule by elongating the penult of each name and giving it a ponderous accent. This beloved brother is a scholarly man, a painstaking teacher, and a Doctor of Divinity. He wears his title more deservingly than some men I know. But I want to tell you about Bro. Penult's soporific sermon on King Solomon's temple. The time of its delivery was a few years before the Great Visitation of 1861-'65, when our Northern brethren came down to see us and brought their knitting with them. We thought they might possibly stay with us about three months, and then hurry back home, and we made arrangements accordingly; but they protracted their visit until they wore their welcome out, and we wore ourselves out in entertaining them.

At a meeting of the old Pamlico Association, held in the heart of the present Atlantic Association, Bro. Penult was appointed to preach to the colored people one Sabbath afternoon. It was a custom among us Southern barbarians to give the Negroes a special appointment. The house was filled. The preacher drew from his pocket a learned, elaborate sermon on the temple, and began to read it. He described the various parts of the structure, its dimensions, furniture, &c. When he reached the pomegranates, the Negroes were somewhat excited by the distant prospect of something to eat, and tried once more to refrain from sleeping. Their efforts, however, were unavailing. A few arose and walked out. Bro. Penult looked up from his manuscript and saw that if something wasn't done quickly, he would be without an audience, excepting the few white brethren who were in attendance upon the services. He heroically descended from the pulpit, walked the entire length of the house, locked the door, put the key into his pocket, and returned to finish his discourse. Hopeless and forlorn, the colored portion of the large audience resigned themselves to sleep, while Bro. Penult read his elaborate description of King Solomon's temple. He read it well, too, and the colored people concluded that he might at some time become a preacher of the gospel, if the Lord should call him.

Of course, no one knows who Bro. Penult is, and I am not the man to give him away.

There are several other brethren on my roll of honor of whom I hope to say a good word hereafter.

Literary.

Wilbur B. Ketcham, New York, will publish this month "The Art of Illustrating," by C. H. Spurgeon, being a series of lectures delivered at the "Pastors' College," London. The price will be $1.00.

Seventh Day Adventism is the name of the second number of Ray's Doctrinal Magazine, and is a pamphlet of 44 pages devoted to the discussion of the Sabbath question. This pamphlet should be read, as it refutes the errors of the Seventh-Day Adventists and others on the Sabbath question. Price, 10 cents per copy by mail. Address F. M. Ray, 1404 Locust St., St. Louis, Mo.

The Quarterly Illustrator is the leading magazine of American Art, and it improves with every issue. It is of especial worth to artists, and would be of great value to amateurs. The current number possesses the unique feature of a beautifully illustrated novel in addition to the usual admirable articles and hundreds of excellent illustrations. H. C. Jones, New York, Publisher.

The Century for August presents in its fiction a great variety of scene and character. Mr. Crawford deals with Bar Harbor, Mrs. Harrison with New York City, Mr. John Fox, Jr., with the Kentucky Mountaineers, Mr. George Wharton Edwards with the people of the Canadian sea-coast, Mrs. Virginia Frazer Boyle with the Tennessee negroes, and Mrs. Mary Hallock Foote with Idaho frontiersmen.

McClure's Magazine for August is fully up to its own high standard. "Personal Recollections of Gen. Sherman," with portraits; "My First Book," by A. Conan Doyle; "The New Evolution—Prof. Drummond's Ascent of Man," by Washington Gladden; "Human Documents," consisting of a series of portraits of Louise Chandler Moulton and Jas. A. Garfield, with some unusually good stories, make the number very desirable.

Southern Magazine for August may be said to mark an era in the history of Southern magazines. In this issue the Southern looks back upon the failures in the past of efforts to do just what it is succeeding so well in doing—"Making a Southern Magazine." Historical sketches with portraits of editors, managers, contributors, make this article valuable. An excellent lot of good summer reading is to be found between the tasteful covers of the number.

The North American Review seems to be the only publication in the world which has the honor of numbering among its frequent contributors Cabinet Ministers of the two greatest English-speaking countries. The latest addition to this series is an article from the pen of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Hon. J. Sterling Morton, which appeared in the June number, entitled "Protection and the Proletariat." "Resources and Development of the South" by Secretary Hoke Smith is in the August number.

Present Day Preaching.—Sermons by Rev. Thos. G. Selby, Hugh Macmillan, D. D., Rev. Hugh Price Hughes, James Walker, D. D., Rev. Mark Guy Pearse, John Hall, D. D., A. M. Fairbairn, D. D., and other distinguished clergymen. The sermons were originally published in The Preacher's Magazine, and are now sent forth in this form. They will be found suggestive to preachers, and useful to private readers. Such a galaxy of talent in one volume is uncommon. Publisher: Wilbur B. Ketcham, 3 Cooper Union, New York. Cloth, 75 cents.

The Homiletic Review for August contains articles worthy of special mention: among these is "The Causes and Cure of Ministers' 'Blue Monday,'" by Arthur T. Pierson, D. D., which is especially practical and helpful, and comes at a season of the year that will render its suggestions peculiarly appropriate. A noteworthy sermon is that on "Suicide," by Rev. C. W. Heisler of Denver, Col. Rev. B. F. Kidder continues his paper on Social Science and Comparative Religion, giving in this number "Some Modern Aspects of the Holy City." The living issue is a treatment of the subject, "The Religious Forces of the United States." Published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City, at $3.00 per year.

In his essay on the "Political Ethics of Herbert Spencer," Prof. Lester F. Ward goes through Mr. Spencer's various works and, taking together those parts in which his political views are expressed, analyzes these doctrines, and thus discovers Mr. Spencer's views on political science. He finds that Mr. Spencer, having begun as a revolutionist, has now, like so many other great thinkers at the close of their careers, become a reactionist. When in his later works he has changed any of his early views, it has always been with a backward tendency. Prof. Ward concludes that Mr. Spencer's system is, as Prof. Huxley called it, one of "administrative nihilism." The monograph, which will be read with interest by both friends and opponents of Mr. Spencer, is published by the American Academy of Political Science, Philadelphia. Paper, 8vo, 35 cents.

The Dawn of Christianity; or, Studies of the Apostolic Church. By Henry C. Vedder. 16mo, 208 pp. Price, 90 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

Mr. Vedder has won an enviable reputation by his work on The Examiner, of which he is editor, as well as by his "A Short History of the Baptists," which has attained a wide circulation. He has become well known to the young people of the country by his work in connection on the Christian Culture Courses, out of which this present volume has grown. This work is divided into four parts: The Founding of the Church; the Gospel in Asia; the Gospel in Europe; and Establishing the Churches. Hints for original investigation accompany each chapter, and directions as to the literature of the different topics which very materially increase the value of the book. It is therefore fitted for the classroom or for private perusal. It is just the book to put into the hands of a busy man who hates padding and wants facts. It is the thing for young people, for it eschews dullness and moves with a step as alert as it is sure. It is a book for all who want to know exactly and without special pleading just what the New Testament teaches regarding the founding and career and principles of the apostolic church. The work should have a wide reading among students and young people generally.

Ordination of Rev. C. H. Utley.

By request of Swift Creek church of which the subject is a member and pastor, Revs. J. M. White, C. Durham and the writer met at the church on the third Sunday in July, 1894; organized as a presbytery, and after a satisfactory examination of Bro. Chas. H. Utley, judged him to be a proper subject for ordination to the gospel ministry.

The presbytery then proceeded by Dr. Durham preaching a very appropriate sermon on "The Work of the Ministry." Prayer was led by the writer, and the hands of the presbytery were laid upon Bro. Utley in publicly setting him apart to the full work of the ministry whereunto God has called him. Rev. J. M. White, his former pastor and teacher, then delivered to him a practical and fatherly charge. An appropriate song of welcome to their pastor was then sung, and the right hand of welcome into the work of the Lord extended by the presbytery. The services were closed with the benediction by Rev. C. H. Utley.

Goes Too Far.

Dear Editor:—I have read with interest Dr. Taylor's letter opposing State aid to Colleges, and would like to say that I do not entirely agree with him in all of his conclusions. I think he goes rather too far.

Just how far a State ought to go in a matter of that sort, I am not able to say, but I think it goes altogether too far in appropriating money, in a large sum, for another purpose. I refer to an appropriation of ten thousand dollars per year for a geological survey as conducted by a Professor from Chapel Hill with several students who assist him in spending that much every year. They appear to be going about the mountains with an expensive outfit of wagons, cooks, boats and fishing tackle, and they pick up rocks and take photographs of scenery, while the Professor goes about everywhere and shows his magic-lantern views of the same.

As North Carolina has more minerals and mines already discovered than will probably be worked in the next hundred years or so, it seems to me that to spend ten thousand dollars a year on such a picnic party is paying very dear for the whistle.

Our next Legislature will do well to cut off this useless expense, even if it cuts the Professor and his boys out of a soft place. He can go back and take up his place at Chapel Hill which he seems to still hold as a hand plant. Very respectfully,

J. H. SMITH.

Notes from Bro. Bryan.

Dear Recorder:—I have made you many promises to myself during the past two months, but one thing and another, I hardly know what, has kept me so busy, that I have been unable to write you a few notes from from my mountain home. Your visits to us are very much enjoyed. Bro. Smith's articles, so strong, so clear, so Scriptural, showing our duty to support the gospel, and Bro. Porter's, giving the motive, are timely, and will do much good.

As Baptists, we believe in God's Word—have been living and dying for it for ages. When our people are properly informed as to their duty as taught in the Bible, and instructed in the needs and results of God's work as it is now carried on, I believe they will cheerfully give us the men and the means to evangelize the world.

What a responsibility then rests upon our pastors to instruct our people! First in God's Word, for the Bible is the first and best source of missionary information; then by scattering missionary literature, which can be easily and cheaply secured from the Maryland Baptist Mission Rooms, 9 W. Lexington St., Baltimore, Md. God bless you, Bro. Smith, for leading out on this important subject! May He bless what you have written, and impress many, yea all of our pastors, to follow your example both in the newspapers and in the pulpits!

We have spent too much time and money begging our people, and too little informing them.

Dear reader, will you not proceed at once to learn all you can about God's work, both from the Bible, as to the duty to support it, and from missionary literature as to its needs and results, and then give that information to some one else who needs it, will use it, and pass it on to some one else. Information is what we need. Let us ring the changes on that word.

How my heart aches to think of returning to China soon with only a few recruits; to leave behind even some of those who have been appointed. If our people only knew their duty, and their privileges, and the great need of China's millions, they would bring in God's tithes, fill up his storehouse, and send a large company of us rejoicing on our way to China.

We are trying to rest, but how can we, when China's piteous cries for help keep ringing in our ears, and our people do not seem to hear. I could not resist the temptation to accept invitations to go to Hickory, Statesville and Salisbury. I enjoyed my visit very much, but was very tired when I reached home, having spoken thirteen times in eight days.

Bro. Cashwell was not well, but was anxious for a revival in his church at Hickory, and willing to undertake it even against the advice of his physician. He is one of our best pastors.

Bro. Church at Statesville has worked himself down, but feels well paid for his services in the prosperity of his work, the love of his people, and the beautiful new chapel with Bro. Brown as superintendent of the prosperous mission Sunday-school.

Bro. Jones of Salisbury was away, but I saw from his picture that he was one of my Seminary class mates. His people spoke very highly of him as pastor and preacher.

I also enjoyed a country ride out to New Hope, where I spoke twice. I found Bro. Pool, the pastor, a very lovable man, a man of decided convictions, but tolerant of the views of those who differ with him. May God bless the good people at all these points for their kindness to his servant!

I rode one Sunday out to Beaverdam church, four miles from Asheville, and preached for Bro. Brown. Bro. White says that he is one of the best of the mountain preachers.

Bro. White has been away for two Sundays, and it has been my privilege to preach to his appreciative audience. I hear that the church has nearly made arrangements to pay off their large debt in five years. It is the best church building in North Carolina. A Presbyterian lawyer said to me the other day, "White is the finest pulpit orator in North Carolina." This people are worthy of both their pastor and building.

The French Broad church has been very unfortunate in the loss of their pastor, Bro. Brunson. He is a learned and lovable man. His people were all very much distressed when they heard that he had adopted unbaptistic, and what they believed, to be unscriptural views. There was hardly a dry eye in the house when they voted thirty-two for and nine against accepting his resignation. Bro. Brunson has acted nobly and honestly in this whole matter. He stated his views candidly, urged the church to accept his resignation, telling them that if they refused to accept it, he would feel free to preach his views.

I consider Bro. Brunson wrong in these views, but feel more like praying for him than criticising him. He has made a great sacrifice, and seems to be fully conscious of what he is losing from a worldly standpoint. I have been asked to supply the pulpit until they can secure a pastor. I shall help them, God willing, a few Sundays. Pray for me and them. Sincerely,

R. T. BRYAN.

From the Craven County Missionary.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I began a series of meetings here with the Cove Baptist church, Friday night July 20. The following Sunday, I baptized one that had been received sometime ago. I expected Rev. Rufus Ford of the Newbern Baptist church Monday morning. In his place came a card, stating that he was not able to come, but that Rev. B. W. Spilman would be down on the evening train to preach in his place. I have not seen Bro. Spilman yet. I don't know whether he has gone to Tarshish or not. Well, the Lord did not forsake us. But in our weakness and time of need, he came to our help. And we are having a good meeting. Some twenty-five or more have declared themselves to the Lord's side. A number of these are all ready members of some church. I find a great many church members down here who say they have never been converted. I think it is a very great mistake for people to get into the church before they are converted. I am glad, however, the Lord makes people feel their sins in the church as well as out of it. Well, the meeting will close here to-night. We have had two additions to the church. I will begin a meeting Sunday, July 29th, at Truit's school-house. I will not have any help at this point. We have but three Baptists anywhere near there. But I feel that this field is just ripe for us now. Pray the Lord to be with us and bless us.

I will help Rev. A. L. Stough of Kinston in a series of meetings at the Parriot Mission Chapel about four miles from Kinston, week after the first Sunday in August.

Yours for the Lord, J. W. ROSE

Cove, July 27, 1894.

Burke County Notes.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The Morganton saints are pushing the work on their house of worship. They are gaining ground every day under the leadership of Bro. R. L. Patton. He is the right man in the right place. They worship in the town hall—have a fine Sunday-school there in the morning, and mission school in east and west Morganton every Sunday evening.

Glen Alpine has no pastor at present, but will give Bro. J. S. Gwaltney a call perhaps.

Abees and Oak Grove are doing good work under the leadership of Bro. J. A. Rector.

Bro. D. P. Lowdermilk is still holding the fort at Zion, and Bro. C. E. Gower at Enon. Bro. P. A. Whitener is preaching at Pleasant Grove.

I am serving three churches—Hopewell, Mt. Home and Pleasant Hill, all within four miles of home.

MT. HOME

is a weak church, but is willing to do what she can for the cause. No Sunday-school is at this point. Have baptized one, and received two by letter this year. The Catawba Union meets with this church the last of this month (July). We hope to have a meeting of a few days just after the Union.

HOPEWELL

is in good working condition. We have a nice Sunday-school. Bro. J. R. Williams is the superintendent. They number about sixty. I have baptized two and received one by letter. Hope to have a protracted meeting with this church in the near future.

PLEASANT HILL

numbers 240. I give it half of my time. It has a large Sunday-school, conducted by Bro. F. E. Cook, who is a noble worker in the vineyard. We have the best choir here—led by Bro. E. H. Poteat—I ever met. We closed a meeting at this church some days ago: baptized twenty, restored four, and the membership greatly revived. Bro. J. S. Gwaltney did the preaching for us, and he did it well. The brethren fell in love with him. Hope he will come to see us again. Bro. J. W. Mull was with us and did some work.

Success to the grand old RECORDER, with heaven's richest blessings upon you.

J. L. SHINN.

Morganton, N. C.

From One of the Old Guard.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Looking at the label on my paper, I find my time is out. I have had access to the columns of the RECORDER from its birth until now, either as my father's or my own. We are about the same age. I expect to read it the rest of my days. Long may the paper live to cheer the people of God. Subscription enclosed.

Windsor, N. C.

"If all the gold in mint or bank,
All earthly things that men call wealth
Were mine, with every titled rank,
I'd give them all for precious health."

Thus in anguish wrote a lady teacher to a dear friend, telling of pitiless headache, of smarting pain, of pain in back and loins, of dejection, weakness and nervous, feverish unrest. The friend knew both causes and cure and flashed back the answer, "Take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription." The distressed teacher obeyed, was restored to perfect health, and her daily duties once more became a daily pleasure. For lady teachers, saleladies and others kept long standing, or broken down by exhausting work, the "Prescription" is a most potent restorative tonic, and a certain cure for all female weakness. Guaranteed to cure in every case or money returned. See printed guarantee around each bottle.

Fibroid, ovarian and other Tumors cured without resort to surgery. Book, with numerous references, sent on receipt of 10 cents in stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

is located in Franklin Co, N. C., 12 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days.) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.

Session 1894-95 opens Aug. 21, 1894, and continues nine months. For catalogue and particulars, apply to JNO. A. COPPEDGE, Sec'y,

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Congressmen Henderson and Brower have been renominated.

Rutherford College opened the 1st inst. with good prospects.

Negroes are migrating from some parts of the State to the Alabama coal regions.

Prof. Ed. Graham Davies of Baltimore, a native of Newbern, died last week at Boston.

Raleigh Aldermen have voted to macadamize the lower part of the main street in that city.

Colored firemen of the State met in annual convention and tournament at Durham, the 18th.

Two negroes, a man and a woman, recently escaped from Chatham county jail. Somebody's carelessness.

Orange Page, the jail-breaking ex-convict negro murderer, was successfully hanged in the Wake county jail-yard the 3d inst.

Two freight trains collided at Bolton, near Weldon, the 4th inst. Many cars were badly injured and a negro man seriously hurt.

The night of the 28th ult. eighteen prisoners escaped from the Robeson county jail at Lumberton. This is one of the largest jail deliveries in the history of the State. Of course carelessness made it possible.

Maj. Rufus S. Tucker, one of the most prominent and active business men in Raleigh, died at his home on the 4th inst. Maj. Tucker was one of the wealthiest citizens of the State and was prominently interested in many enterprises.

A twelve year old negro boy stabbed a thirteen years old white boy to death at Sanford the 2d inst. They had been fighting when another boy passed a knife to the negro boy. The white boy was named Hart; the negro, McIver. Both negroes are under arrest.

The Naval Reserve, detachments of which have been organized at Charlotte, Wilmington and Newbern go on their annual cruise this week on the United States Monitor, Nantucket. The new cruiser Raleigh will meet them probably at Southport, below Wilmington.

Rev. Jno. C. Kilgo was elected President of Trinity College last week and has accepted. Prof. Kilgo is thirty-three years of age, rather young for a college President, but his success as agent of and Professor in Wofford college, S. C., which positions he abdicates to come to Trinity, are assurance that he will prosecute his new duties with vigor.

The annual Grand Encampment of Odd Fellows occurred at Fayetteville last week. P. H. Pelletier, Newbern, was chosen Grand Patriarch; H. E. Heartt, Durham, Grand High Priest; W. Williams, Elizabeth City, Grand Senior Warden. T. E. Reynolds was chosen Grand Representative; G. L. Tonnofski and T. W. Blake, Raleigh, Grand Scribe and Grand Treasurer, respectively. Next encampment at Charlotte, August, 1895.

It is rather fortunate than otherwise that our asylums for the deaf, dumb and the blind are not filled up. We are glad to be able to say that there's room for many more afflicted children, everyone of whom should be placed in charge of experienced institutions. If you know of a blind child that has no instructor inform Superintendent W. J. Young, Raleigh; if you know of a deaf or dumb one write to Superintendent E. McK. Goodwin of Morganton. Let them be cared for now before the asylums are crowded.

At the November election this year the following are to be chosen: Chief Justice and three Associate Justices of the Supreme Court; a State Treasurer; judges of the Superior Court, for the Third District (to succeed Battle), the Fourth (to succeed Allen—who has succeeded Whitaker), the Eighth (to succeed Armfield), the Ninth (to succeed Graves), the Tenth (to succeed Bynum), the Twelth (to succeed Shuford); and an entire legislature, which will have several important questions to consider, the Senate of which will elect a Senator to succeed Ransom, a six years' term, and one to succeed Jarvis—successor of Vance—a two years' term.

The Populist Convention met in Raleigh last week and was unusually largely attended. The fusion members of the Republican State Executive Committee were at the meeting and took much interest in it. The fusion movement was not successful. Judge W. T. Faircloth was nominated for Chief Justice, Judges Furches, Connor and Clark for Associates, the two former Republicans, the latter two Democrats. W. H. Worth, State Business Agent of the Alliance, was nominated for State Treasurer. All the judicial candidates will await the action of their respective party Conventions before consenting to run for the offices.

The State Democratic Convention meets at Raleigh this week. There is no doubt but that it will renominate Chief Justice Shepherd, Associate Justices Clark, McRae and Burwell, and Hon. S. McD. Tate for State Treasurer. Its action in the primary matter cannot be anticipated. In this connection it is interesting to note that a determined attack has broken out against Senator Jarvis in the West, not so vigorous and wholesome, however, as the general opposition to Ransom in the East even in his own county.

The Republican Convention meets at Raleigh, August 30. The Populist Congressional Convention at Raleigh last week nominated Hon. W. F. Stroud of Chatham for Congress. Hon. C. M. Cooke will be the Democratic nominee.

General News.

Santo Caesario, Carnot's assassin, has been declared guilty and sentenced to death.

A conservative estimate now places the cost of the recent strike at $7,000,000, not considering smaller cities and towns.

The sugar trust investigating committee appointed by the Senate declares that it finds no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of any Senator.

It is said that the Texas cotton crop is the largest in the history of that State. The crop in the United States is estimated at 9,000,000 bales.

Elections for Judges of the Supreme Court and county officers in Tennessee last week went, with the exception of a few counties, in favor of the Democrats.

Six hundred commonwealers stranded at Washington, the leaders having returned home to run for office, are at the point of starvation. They are petitioning to be sent home.

It is now stated that the President will sign a satisfactory tariff bill within six days. The history of last week in Congress is the history of the week previous less the novelty of the affair.

China and Japan have not been on good terms relative to Corea for some years, and a rebellion in the little "Hermit Kingdom" now threatens to occasion one of the bloodiest of wars. For nearly twenty years Japan has not claimed authority over Corea, while China has; though Japan really had more right. While China claimed authority, it would not share responsibility, and certain injuries to Japan's commerce by the Corean rebellion which China would not have repaired, are the caus s of the present state of hostilities. Since the declaration of war, several gun-boats have been sunk in battle and about 5,000 men killed and wounded. The prospect for cessation of war is not very bright. Russia and England are looking on with interest, France has made no move, and Germany has declared its purpose of "letting them fight it out." Although China has 300,000,000 more inhabitants than Japan, the latter has the better soldiers and armaments, and will probably win in a protracted contest. The movements of both armies are directed by Anglo Saxons. The Presbyterians have petitioned Secretary Gresham to protect the missionaries; and we need not be fearful about them, as neither nation cares to make any more enemies than possible just now.

DIED.

SEARS—On July 28th, 1894, Carrie Lee, daughter of C. R. and M. E. Sears, died at the age of eight months and twenty days. The remains were interred at the Cold Water Baptist church, and the funeral exercises conducted by Rev. J. O. Alderman, pastor of the Baptist church in Concord. "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

PASTOR.

HARTS—Died at the home of her father and mother in Wilmington, N. C., on July 16th, 1894, Miss Sarah H. Harts, daughter of John R. and Martha L. Harts, late of Pender county.

This estimable young lady had been a useful and consistent member of Riley's Creek Baptist church for seven or eight years. She was about twenty-three years old when the Master called her home. She leaves mother, father, seven brothers and sisters, and a host of friends to mourn, not as those who have no hope. We shall meet again beyond the river, never more to part. M.

TAYLOR—Eliza Taylor, wife of John C. Taylor, aged fifty-seven years, died at her home in Wilmington, N. C., July 9th, and was carried to Southport the day following and buried in the city cemetery. The funeral services were held at the grave. She was a member of the Baptist church at Southport. She leaves a husband, several children, and a host of friends, to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. May the bereaved comfort themselves with the bright promises recorded in God's word, for his "word is truth." "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him."

J. H. HILDRETH.

WILLIAMS—At her home near Spring Hill church, in Robeson county, on Sunday morning, June 24th, in her eighty-third year, Mrs. Mary Nichols Williams fell asleep in Jesus. She had been a great sufferer for more than two years, and bore her trials with Christian patience. For weeks before her death she was often heard earnestly pleading with God to take her to rest, and often before her afflictions expressed a readiness and a desire to be with Jesus. She left an afflicted husband, Giles Williams, in his eighty-sixth year, who, in three short weeks, on July 15th, joined her in the spirit-land. Though he could talk only by signs, being paralyzed for many weeks, he made us understand that his hope was well founded, and that his home was in heaven.

Look to Jesus trustingly, bereaved and stricken ones; we will meet them with our dear sweet sister in the beautiful city of God. They are not dead but sleeping.

DAUGHTER.

HENLEY—Died suddenly, June 30th, Mr. D. Martin Henley, a promising young man of Yadkin Valley has passed from this life to rest. He was in Pennsylvania at the time of his death, staying with Mr. W. G. Embree, one mile from West Chester. Shortly after four o'clock, and while a storm was in progress, he started from the house to the spring preparatory to doing the evening milking. As he passed beneath the branches of an ash tree a heavy bolt of lightning descended, passing down the tree and through the young man's body, causing instantaneous death. A niece of Mr. Embree's saw him fall, and calling her uncle, who was only a few yards from the scene they hastened to the spot, but by this time there was not a throb of the heart, not a quiver of a muscle. The young man was unmistakably dead. The body was tenderly lifted up and carried to the house. There was not a scratch or a burn on the body. News was sent at once to West Chester of the catastrophe, and also to his parents of Yadkin Valley. Mrs. Embree came with the remains. He was laid to rest in the cemetery at Harper's Chapel, near Patterson, N. C.

Martin was a fine, noble young man, and a true Christian. In all the walks of life he was liked by every one who knew him. He was constantly living and showing to others a Christ-like walk. He was a member of the Society of Friends. About two years and nine months ago he went north to secure an education, and for eighteen months past had been working on Mr. Embree's farm, and had found many friends there in West Chester, having served milk there for his employer, and many were the expression of regret when they learned of his death. He was twenty-two years of age, and leaves a father, mother, two brothers and five sisters to mourn their loss, and a large host of relatives and friends, but we would say to the bereaved weep not, for he is only sleeping till Christ comes to call his children home, and remember they have a stronger tie in heaven.

A SCHOOL MATE.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, On May 26th, 1894, and in the forty-third year of his age, God in his providence saw fit to take from us Bro. John H. Mitchell, who has been a faithful and consistant member of Conaritas Baptist church from early boyhood to his death. He served the church for ten years as clerk and about five years as deacon, and has been superintendent of the Sunday-school for many years. By the death of Bro. Mitchell the church has lost a faithful worker for Christ, the community a good citizen, and the family a good provider. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss; therefore be it Resolved 1. That Conaritas Baptist church bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well.

2. That we commend his life as an example to both church and community.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

A Song of Faith.

I know not where
God me shall send,
Nor what the end
Of His love and care;
But this I know, where'er I go,
He's still my Friend.

I know not what
God me would bring,
Nor anything
He'd have me taught:
But this I know, where'er I go,
He's still my King.

I know not why
God me did choose
Nor how He'll use
Mine's not to make reply;
But this I know, where'er I go,
His love He'll not refuse.

I know not how
God me shall guide,
Nor what betide,
While here below;
But this I know, where'er I go,
He'll never chide.

John A. Jayne.

Doing More Than One's Own Share.

There seems to be a fear on the part of a good many people, and some really conscientious Christians, too, of doing more than their share of the work in which they are engaged. It seems to be wonderfully human and very natural for a great many to shirk responsibility, to leave whatever does not actually belong to their particular work to some one else.

This is very common in all the walks of life. In every kind of business most of us are looking for the easiest berth we can find. We heard two young men talking the other day, and one of them said, "Well, I should like to take that place, but I understand it is not a very soft berth, and that is what I am looking for. I am looking for a snap." Boys hinder and delay their usefulness and their chances for life in being afraid of doing too much.

We remember hearing a boy say that he entered a store as an apprentice, but did not like the work of cleaning windows; he did not like to sweep the floor; he hated to clean up the basement; and was always wishing for the time when he did not have to do that work. In fact, he was above his place, and it was not long before his employer realised it and his place was filled by another. Such plans and such maxims as these make work irksome. The time hangs heavily on one's hands, the days seem long, and there does not seem to be much in life worth living for except the anticipation that sometime one will have a very easy time and not have to work at all. This is an unhealthy sentiment—grows on one and gets to be a curse and blasts many a life. How different when we see a young man who, on starting in life, is ready for anything. Dirty work, hard work, disagreeable tasks of any kind are taken up cheerfully, pleasantly, and done with all his heart. No wonder that young man advances rapidly; no wonder he is liked; no wonder he soon has a bitter place; no wonder his fellow clerks envy him almost. He is always ready. He never has to be urged. His work does not need to be watched. It is well done; faithfully done. He does not leave work undone.

He is not afraid to look his employer fairly and squarely in the eye at all times. He does not realize the passage of hours. It is hardly time to commence work before it is over, the days pass so quickly. His whole heart is in his work. He cannot get enough done. He has the ambition to be all the help possible. He feels a deep interest in his business. He makes it his own.

We hope that some who are perhaps just starting out in life and will soon be holding their first position may see these words and thus save many heartaches and much distress; above all, taking Christ with them into everything, doing everything for Christ's sake and to God's glory.—Ex.

Child Labor.

Child-labor has rapidly grown to monstrous proportions within the last twenty years, but the more enlightened portion of the nation is waking to the folly and wrong of it. This is shown by the fact that legislation on this subject exists in many States, though often evaded, and that factory inspectors have been appointed though their number is inadequate. Some working people will not let their children go into the mills, saying "they learn too much badness;" others say it is better for them than to be on the streets. Mrs. W. F. Willoughby has shown that the rate of wages is lowered by child-labor, since the rate of wages depends on "the standard of comfort," which standard is lowered by the employment of the young children of a family. The effect of child-labor would be a permanent rise of wages, owing to the lessened competition, and also an improved condition of the laborer, rendering him more valuable as a consumer, which would lead to a better condition of the market. From the history of child-labor in England we may learn an instructive lesson for our own county. In the last quarter of the eighteenth and the first of the nineteenth century it existed there to a horrible extent. Restrictive laws have been passed from time to time, with good results, and the condition of the British workman is now improving rapidly.—Lippincott's.

"Canst thou minister to a mind diseased?" asked Macbeth. Certainly, my lord; the condition of the mind depends largely, if not solely, on the condition of the stomach, liver, and bowels, for all of which complaints Ayer's pills are "the sovereignest thing on earth."

Puritan Marriage Customs.

A marriage in church was rare, writes Alice Morse Earle in the Ladies' Home Journal, in an article on "Courtship and Marriage in Puritan Days." Occasionally one took place in the new home of the young couple. This was held to be somewhat unlucky. Thanksgiving Day was a favorite time to choose to be married, as friends were then gathered from afar.

The bride was universally advised to wear

"Something old, something new, and though she could dress before a mirror, she must not look in the glass when once here toilette was completed, else ill-luck, in vaguely-defined, but positive form were the result. Sunday was really the exhibition day for the bride; indeed, she found at meeting the sole place in which she could appear before an assembled public, and for this exhibition the happy pair donned their finest bridal attire. The bride and groom and bridal party opened the show by proudly walking in a little procession, through the narrow streets, to the meeting-house on the Sabbath following the marriage. In Larned's "History of Windham County, Connecticut," we read a description of such an amusing scene in Brooklyn, Connecticut. Further public notice was drawn to the bride by allowing her to choose the text for the sermon preached on the first Sunday of the coming-out of the newly-married couple. Much ingenuity was exercised in finding appropriate and sometimes startling Bible texts for these wedding sermons. The instance are well known of the marriage of Parson Smith's two daughters, one of whom selected the text, "Mary hath chosen that good part;" while the daughter Abby, who married John Adams, decided upon the text, "John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say he hath a devil."
Something borrowed, something blue,"

Like a Barrel of Cranberries.

"Ignorance of things generally pervents us from enjoyin' a dreadful lot of happiness in this life," said Aaron Scott to the minister one day. He was given to this form of discourse with the clergyman, doubtless on the same principle that led him to talk sickness to his doctor and crops with his neighbors.

"You git a ter'ble blind view of life an' the way things is runnin' if you don't edicate yourself up to knowin' a blessin' when you see it. When I see folks throwing their blessin's away it makes me think of a barr'l of cranb'ries."

A barrel of cranberries. If the visitor felt small interest before, he certainly lacked none now. He expressed his surprise.

"Yis, a barr'l of cranb'ries," said Aaron. "When I was out in the West Injies there was a man tuk keer of me when I was sick, and he wouldn't take pay, but said I could send him something off the farm; so when I got home I shipped him a barr'l of cranb'ries by a vessel that was goin' out from our place.

"Well, after a time a letter kem back. He wrote very perlite an' seemed grateful, but he said, most unfor'nate, that the fruit looked putty, but he hed to throw it away, for in comin' it hed turned sour."

And then Aaron added his moral.

"That's what I call missin' the sweetness of things 'cause you didn't know how to get at it."—Watchman.

Baldness is often preceded or accompanied by grayness of the hair. To prevent both baldness and grayness, use Hall's Hair Renewer, an honest remedy.

College Girls' Rooms.

For all sorts of striking and novel devices commend me to the rooms of college girls, writes Anna Isabel Willis in the Ladies' Home Journal. I should say some college girls, because many inhabit rooms which are as bare almost as the cell of a nun. But if there is any new and easy way of making much out of little, turning plain things into pretty and recreating generally, the average college girl is sure to find it. It is as natural to her to invent adornments for her bit of a room as to construct a ravishing costume for some "fancy dress ball," or for the amateur theatricals with which girls with a talent for acting delight to amuse and edify their classmates and instructors. It is these who arrange the folds of a tennis net so bewitchingly that its meshes snare many a word of admiration. The inventive power of the young woman who has a tennis net to find room for, sets to work, and the result is a graceful drapery over the pictures, extending half way around the room. Or it may be the net is arranged as a frieze, looped at intervals with ribbon, rackets being placed at corners.

Domestic Duties of Boys.

The boys, as well as their sisters, should be taught ordinary skill with the needle; at least such as to enable them to make necessary repairs, like the sewing on of buttons and the checking of a rent or rip while the "stitch in time" is still competent to save from further dilapidation or complete ruin. In fact there are many other little things about the house which any bright boy would be the more independent and the better satisfied with himself and all about him if he were taught to do; not alone that he might save a weary mother from many little tasks, but that he might be trained to a sense of independence, even in regard to duties of this nature.—Good Housekeeping.

The Queen and the Wife.

A private note from the Rev. Dr. Samson tells of an incident in the early life of Queen Victoria which has not been recalled for many years, and of another at a later periods, which we do not remember to have seen before, in print. Dr. Samson says:

My wife was in London visiting relatives when Victoria was proclaimed. When the Archbishop announced her succession, she burst into tears, knelt down and begged, "Do pray for me." When her good sense chose Albert, and their children were to be reared, a difference as to family training arose. Albert quickly retired to his study and locked the door. Shortly after there was a knock. "Who is there?" was asked. "The queen," was the reply. "The queen cannot enter," was the response. Not long after the knock was again heard, and again the question was repeated, "Who is there?" The response now was, "Your wife." The door soon flew open.—Exchange.

Our Forefathers.

Our own forefathers not many hundred years ago, were besotted heathen, and practised the most horrible rites of superstition, and heathens would we be to-day, if foreign missionaries had not gone forth from the South of Europe, first into Germany and then into England, to preach the gospel to our pagan ancestors. We have relics of our barbarious origin in the most familiar words of our language, notably in the days of the week. Sunday was the day in which anciently the sun was adored; Monday that on which the moon was worshiped; Tuesday was consecrated to Tuisco, the Saxon name for the Roman god Mars; Wednesday was Woden's day, another Saxon deity; Thursday was the day on which the Saxon Venus, Friga, was honored, and Saturday was Saturn's day, another heathen deity.

It is possible that the coming election will change the organic law of the State, initiate radical legislation of general nature, and change the attitude of the State with respect to the Federal government. It is a very important election.

This being true, no man should vote without thinking three times, at least; and every man should strive his utmost to secure a free and fair expression of opinion by ballot. Now it is not doubted but that each man will think on the matter more than three times, but it is certain that many will think in prejudice, and even in contumely and hatred. These should be disfranchised. Nor is it at all to be questioned that every man professes to desire a fair election. And yet it is a foregone conclusion in many minds that the election at some places will be conducted unfairly. Granting that this conclusion is justifiable, what can men do who really desire to secure a fair election? It is too late to make a new law; but, it is pertinent to add, the present law is good enough if it is enforced. So the question is, How can the present law be enforced? And there is but one answer: by the selection of honest men to hold the polls and count the ballots. All know how these men are chosen; and it is beyond doubt the duty of the commissioners to choose honest men. Certainly it is every citizen's duty to see to it that the ballot boxes of his precinct are honestly dealt with—in every voter's sight. Certainly it is every citizen's duty to see to it that some man in whom he has confidence attends the counting. If men in whom one has no confidence are selected to conduct the election a petition should be circulated. And if that don't succeed, the petitioners can appoint men from their number to work and watch for honesty. Every party concerned is morally entitled to a representative at the polls, and the party that opposes this impeaches the integrity of its own intentions.

When the election is over we do not wish to hear men crying out that the winners cheated, except they have evidence that will convict in court. Every good citizen should witness against fraud, but the court, not street corners and newspapers, is the place. It is unpatriotic to know of crime and not witness against it; it is base to accuse without evidence that will convict.

Election frauds at the North are as frequent and more extensive than at the South. Prominent representatives of both parties are in Northern penal institutions for tampering with election. New York City is even now exposing the fraud on which its present government was built. Philadelphia has lately undergone a regeneration, and Chicago needs one. At the North frauds are perpetrated by bribery and black-mail and brow-beating. At the South they are perpetrated by taking possession of the law. The former requires money, power and influence; the latter requires merely the power to get control of the elections by getting in office and the sheer boldness to defy the law by stuffing ballots or counting them out, or, in lieu of boldness, a degraded public sentiment—which, it is hoped, nowhere exists—that will sustain a man who breaks the law in the interest of a party.

It is clear that the two sections need laws of different nature. A voting machine, or even the Australian ballot system, will remedy the evil at the South, but at the North it cannot be remedied so long as men can be bribed, black-mailed or brow beat. And election laws do not remove such men.

Many plans for securing fair elections have been suggested. Most of them have proved either impracticable or inefficient. The Australian ballot-system is reported to have failed at the North, though the press states that it was pursued with gratifying success in Alabama the other week. A voting machine, which is a recent invention, seems to be more practical and efficient than any plan or device up to date. And a description of it will doubtless be interesting. Mind you, no machine can prevent bribery, nor can any amount of legislation, for that matter.

The voting machine is similar to a cash register—seen in many stores. It is placed in a room in which only one voter goes at a time. Entering the door one sees a large card containing the names of all candidates arranged according to their respective parties in columns up and down, each party's column being a different color. Opposite each candidate's name is a knob which, being pressed, registers and numbers the name of that candidate, and at the same time locks the knobs opposite the names of other candidates for that office. Thus secrecy is insured; and there can be no confusion such as sometimes accompanies paper ballots and scratching tickets. Moreover, if the voter cannot read (writing is unnecessary, though ability to read and write should be made prerequisite to citizenship) he can vote by colors, knowing his party color. Having voted, one sets out through a door opposite to that by which he came. And by opening this exit door the entrance door and the knobs which one has pressed down or locked, are brought back into position, and the room and machine are ready for the next voter. Corruptible man has nothing to do with registering or counting the votes; the work is done by the device so cleverly that immediately after the last vote is cast the result of the election can be announced.

The Treasury "gold reserve," which was doubtless designed to always be $100,000,000 as a bulwark of the Nation's credit, is now less than $50,000,000. The diminution of it, which has been going on periodically more than two years, is accounted for in the "out flow" of gold to Europe. But why gold continues to "flow" thither rather than to North Carolina or elsewhere is a question that many a man would be happy to solve, and which many are happy to think they have solved.

There are no philanthropists among the financiers. And therefore it is reasonable to conclude that full value is received, or has been received, for all the gold that "flows" to Europe or elsewhere through financiers' hands. But the fact that it goes to Europe, as to a long home, and the fact that there is little or nothing coming back to show for it, has provoked several reasons and remedies among financiers and others. Some in great fear aver that Europe is conspiring against our commerce, and plots to destroy it by getting all our gold. This is not credible, however, as only a very small per cent. of international commerce is carried on with the aid of gold, and, moreover, Europe is more dependent upon the United States so far as commerce is concerned than we are upon it. International commerce, it should be understood, is carried on by exchange of goods—cotton for cotton manufactures, for instance—and only the balance is paid in money. Others say that European investors, distrustful of the future financial system of the United States, are withdrawing all the loans they have made American companies in the shape of purchases of stocks, bonds, etc. This is reasonable; for if Europe fears silver as a general currency it does well to beware of this country. Finally, the likeliest explanation is that European financiers are confident of the soundness of American investments, and that the gold that "flows" to them is in payment of interest on these investments, of expenses of 100,000 American travellers in Europe annually, the average expense of each being about $800, the payment of freights and insurance on goods shipped to Europe, and that these payments seem great now because in other years the United States had so much more gold to spare, revenues being more plentiful.

The fact that the United States shipped in the year ending June 30th $380,000,000 more worth of goods than it imported is conclusive evidence that commercial transactions do not influence the "flow" of gold, else it would have been towards instead of from us in that time; and since that is true it is apparent that, while Europe is a good customer, the United States can carry on commerce with it, whether our financial policy tends towards bimetalism, monometalism or a greenback currency, for United States money is not needed.

That was a pertinent remark that a contemporary made apropos of the general defensive comment relative to the South-defaming negro woman lecturer in England, now, emboldened by success there, parading in New York City,—that the Southern press has concerned itself too greatly with such people. If a worthy man appears to be alarmed at an asperation upon his character, the fact excites suspicion among those who would not otherwise listen to evil reports of him. It is well to be sure that the defamer's character is better than the defamed before one resents defamations. A negro woman's statement cannot injure an entire section that any one who chooses may visit. But if the South gives dignity to her statements by noticing them, and if it goes further and anxiously adduces contradictory evidence, all people will be more inclined to hear her, and some will argue that she is speaking truthfully since we are so anxious to disprove her statements, which one should expect to be regarded as false by all intelligent people. Moreover, the more said, the greater the notoriety of these rabid liars; and they live only by notoriety given by people who resent their defamations.

Here, too, it is pertinent to try to add impetus to the extending conviction that none but Southerners can develop the South. Southern people must get rid of the idea that their future is dependent upon the North or upon immigrants of any kind. It is certainly better off for the absence of those who credit the words of a notorious negro woman in preference to thousands of witnesses and millions of testimonies. Neither Northerners nor Europeans are better than Southerners. And if they can develop the South, Southerners can do it better. Let there be an immediate end to the idle twaddle of Northern enterprise, the lazy dallying for Northern aid, the unreasoning and unworthy infantile cry of dependence upon aliens. Southern resources and Southern manhood are worthy of each other; God made them for each other.

The Farmer's Boy.

BY R. T. VANN.

"What shall I do with him?" This question is worrying many a farmer in North Carolina to day. He is thinking about his boy just turned from childhood into youth, and he knows that the next turn will be from youth into manhood. Time was when he cared mostly that the little one might be healthy and bright, and might bloom into vigorous youth. As to his manhood there was little care and as little planning, but only the feeling that somehow the dear baby must become an honored and successful man. But now, kind friend, as your boy stands midway between childhood and manhood, you begin to feel that if there is ever to be anything in the man it must be got out of the boy; that the man is to be made out of the boy. The rifle barrel, you have observed, is only three feet long, and yet it fixes the course of the ball for a thousand yards. So the man is apt to take his whole course from the boy. But the boy, gay, light-hearted, rollicking fellow, what does he know or care about the future? So preparation for this future must be made largely by you. The question once too far off to disturb you is now pounding at the door. What makes the matter more serious, too, is the thought that it will be very bad for the man to undo a mistake made on the boy. But the question pushes itself forward and must have a speedy answer. Well, have you decided? Wait awhile till you have thought the matter over again.

You see, the rest of us, as well as you and the boy, are deeply concerned about the kind of man he is to be. For remember, this boy represents the largest class of boys. Taking the whole country, farmers' boys are just about equal in numbers to all the other boys together. But in this State, where there are no large cities and but few manufactories, no doubt the farmers' boys out number all the others five times over. So this farmer's boy is to take the greatest share in controlling our State. He is to do most of the voting. He is to make the laws, directly or otherwise. He is going to step forward and take the reins of government, or say who shall do so. He will determine what kind of schools and churches we shall have, or whether we shall have any at all. So we are all anxious to know, dear sir, what kind of man you are going to turn out from your boy.

And, now, let us see your boy and try to make out what kind of a fellow he is. It may help you, too, to take him apart and look at him. You can tell better what kind of timber is in him. Well, he is pretty lively, I should say, up to any kind of frolic. He is apt to be so if a boy at all, and more apt to be so if a farmer's boy. You get him up soon in the morning and let the sharp air take him. You brace him up with plain food and healthy work. You give him a turn with the calves and colts, and a light sweat at the wood pile; and when night comes you plant him in bed early, and he sleeps till you call him. Well, if that kind of boy isn't lively, you had better put him in a doctor's hands, for he's about dead. But you don't want a corpse nor a mummy; you want your boy lively. Oh yes; who wants an engine with no steam? Only see that you keep the valves in order and the track in good condition, then pile on wood, and move things.

He is probably the best boy we have. Not better, perhaps, than other boys raised in the country, but better than the average town-boy. He has fewer temptations; he knows less about many things concerning which it is a virtue to be ignorant. Many of his faults come from the city, in one way or another. Many of his faults come from the city, in one way or another. He is apt to be more of a home boy than the town boy. He probably comes home earlier at night, and stays there better when he comes. His eye seldom falls upon the flaming play bills that run the town-boy crazy. The strictly moral exhibition, whose proceeds are divided with the orphan asylum, is not so plentiful in his neighborhood. Yet, he has a fair show of being better than the town boy—better, too, at the very time when character is forming, and when you have him in hand.

It seems, then, that you have a boy that ought to be something in life. What will you do with him? Well, suppose you give him a chance, and let him help make himself. Many a boy has failed to be a man just because his father wouldn't let him. Now a man, a really great man, need not be a lawyer, nor a politician nor a physician, nor a preacher; he need not be in any of what you call "the professions." He may just be a plain levelheaded, cultivated farmer, and still be a man. If the Maker seems to have endowed your boy with special gifts for any of the professions, why let him follow it, and lend him a helping hand while he is getting ready. But don't conclude that you must make a professional man out of him just because he is a bright boy. Where in the world did ever the notion come from that men must pick out their clever boys for lawyers, doctors, and what not, and save the fools to make farmers out of? A little thought will show you that the dull boy is quite as likely to succeed in other things as he is in farming. If any business in this world requires a clearer head and a sounder judgment than good farming does, this writer doesn't know what that business is.

Now, suppose your boy is to be a doctor; you try to get money enough together to give him an average general education, and then put him in a medical college. And you would try to give him the same chance, if he should wish to become a lawyer. Why should a boy who is to farm be neglected, and be the only one that is neglected? The preacher, the lawyer, the physician, are not made in the schools really, but by the actual practice in life; and yet, it is a good thing for them to learn the principles of their profession before they commence the practice. They might after awhile pick up those principles themselves, without ever going to school; but if they can learn from experienced teachers in a few months what they must otherwise learn after many years, if ever at all, it pays to go to teachers. Now, stop and think whether the following statement is true: One intelligent, thoughtful farmer in a community influences the farming of the entire community, because the neighbors watch him and learn from his methods. Well, if all could be trained and thoughtful, would it not be that much better? One may learn the art of hillside ditching after awhile by actual experience; but it would clearly pay him to lay out a little money in learning it before the soil has washed off. One may learn after awhile that some manures, excellent in themselves, kill each other by mixing; but it is surprising to know how many persons die in ignorance of that fact. One of the most successful planters the present writer knows, after fifty years of experience, wasted his money and damaged his crop by mixing Peruvian guano and hickory ashes.

The feeling is common that general education for farmers is purely ornamental, and that if a boy is certainly going to farm, a very meagre bit of schooling will do for him. There is even a prejudice against "book-learned" farmers as being theoretical and unpractical. Of many such farmers this is undoubtedly true; but is it not also true of many not "book learned?" If a man has not sense enough to put principles into practice, he hardly has sense enough to practice much without principles. The mill doesn't turn out flour if you put peas in the hopper; and you can't reasonably expect bread from an oven in which there was no dough. If you send a natural fool to college, you will probably get back about the same kind of fool. Pray consider, friend; education is not what you learn in books, it is the training which the mind receives for independent study. Very few college boys in after life remember much about the languages or higher mathematics, unless they refresh their memories by teaching; they didn't study those things expecting to remember them, and in most cases they don't particularly need to remember them. What they wanted was to stretch and toughen and strengthen their minds for whatever work they might have to do. And so, some of our best educated public men and farmers can't read a line of Latin, but they can put their minds down to close, hard thinking when they will, because they practised that in studying Latin. It seems to the soldier a useless and cruel thing to make him drill twice a day, and it seems to you a waste of money to keep an army so long in mere drilling. But when you watch those well-trained men by the side of new troops under fire, you will think it worth while to make soldiers drill—not that they may know how to drill, but how to fight. So don't be too hard on "book-learned farmers." What they learned in school-books may not help them much in farming; but the mental drill that studying gives may help them very much.

But it is not altogether certain that your boy ought to be a farmer. Possibly he ought to enter some of the professions, dull though he seems. He has as yet shown no signs of talent in those directions; but have you given him a fair trial in the matter? Gold often lies deep; but it is pure gold when you bring it up. I suspect there is a rusty old axe lying about your premises, which would make the chips fly if you would give it a helve and a little grinding. Whet the boy up a little, even if you hardly can spare him at home. Don't send him anywhere, just to say he is at school. The greatest trouble about our common schools is that they are so very common. Send the boy where he will be likely to learn something, if he has a mind to.

But, alas! the farmer's boy is a poor boy. It would be a hard pull for him to go to college, or even to an academy. But did it strike you that the poorer the boy is, the greater his need of education? And if he has but little money, hadn't he better invest it where it will pay best and can never be lost? Suppose you advance to the boy now what you had thought of leaving him when you die. Why not? To finish his education you might have to advance him more than his share of the estate. How would it do to give him his share and lend him the rest, as some parents are doing with boys at school now? Let no one get disheartened because he will have to work hard and live close to get an education. Whether rich or poor, it is best for all boys at school to feel poor. The boy always conscious of his wealth is from that very fact a failure from the start; exceptions to this rule are about as common as black swans. Any body who is ashamed to dress plainly and save money at school had better stay at home and live and die in the obscurity he deserves. But the boy with a good will and a good character and little else, need not blush to face the sons of wealth. There used to be at Oxford university some proud young noblemen, whose names are known now only because a young lad named George Whitefield used to black their boots. Ho for the poor boys! I wish I could set before you the long line of great men whose hearts knew the cares, and whose hands knew the marks of poverty. I would name John Bunyan, the tinker, and George Whitefield, the boot black, and William Shakespeare, the butcher, and Robert Burns, the plow-boy, and William Carey, the cobbler, and William Herschell, the cabin boy, and Benjamin Franklin, the soap-maker, and Thomas J. Jackson, the constable, and James Garfield, the mule driver. Ah! the carpenter's son at Nazareth forever dignified the work bench.

And now, friend, put these things together and see if you can't answer that troublesome question about your boy.

"The History of Baptism from Moses to John."

BY REV. O. C. HORTON.

Another borrowed heading, showing how little trouble it is for some people to trace things to their origin, and give a reason for such a beginning. There seems to have been no difficulty in our brother's tracing baptism back to Moses and working its history on to John.

He cites 1 Cor. 10: 1, 2, and finds in it the beginning of baptism. Paul says, "Israel was baptised unto Moses in the cloud and in the sea," while making the way through the sea out of Egypt. Here is the fountain-head, the very origin of baptism—a clear case—plainly made out, and therefore should be received by all without dispute or even a doubt. "The people of Israel were baptised unto Moses as an avowalment on their part that they accepted him as their leader. In the ocean depths of the divided waters, with the cloud pillar above them, they avowed allegiance to God's servant."—(Ford).

"Here, then," says another writer, is an acknowledged case of pure water baptism," when there is no Scriptural account that a drop of water touched one of Israel, either from the walls of water on each side, or from the cloud above. This cloud has been drawn on many times before, but there is no Scriptural evidence of its ever having furnished a drop of water, no matter how hard it was squeezed, or earnestly entreated to give forth; it has remained as rainless as the bottom of the sea, over which Israel passed, was dry.

How ingeniously some people can find water or dry ground as their position may require! Surely it would not be right to announce this as the beginning of baptism as practiced now. One would have to draw on imagination for the facts to support such a position, because Scripture testimony is so scarce. It will not do to slander the Bible, or as Christian people to have things just as we wish them, Bible or no Bible? Still, we have recently been reading after one who says, "The Bible shows that baptism has been in use from the time of Moses."

Well, it was an immersion, "baptized unto Moses" and not into Christ. By whom were these people baptised? Not by such an administrator and after the fashion of to-day, or there is no record of it. God dug their grave through the sea and made a slab or covering of the cloud, and we see them entombed while passing through the sea on dry ground, and not one drop of water fell from that cloud upon Israel during the passage, that we have a record of. Baptism is a burial and this resembles it, but it was not a literal baptism, as some would have us think. "The above used Scripture looks like a figurative baptism, properly so called on account of its resemblance to a literal immersion in water, which is the New Testament baptismal act."—(Clark.) "They went through the sea by faith." Heb. 11: 29. "He turned the sea into dry land; they went through the flood on foot." Ps. 66: 6. "Thus the Lord saved Israel that day out of the hands of the Egyptians." Ex. 14: 30. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," is the way the New Testament puts it. (See Mark 16: 15, 16.) Surely there is some resemblance to baptism—enough to suggest the words to Paul's mind; but it was not a literal baptism, and therefore, could not have been where this ordinance originated.

Another position, a little further on, making out the connection between Moses and John, seems based on Heb. 9: 10, and Mark 7: (—

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 15, 1894.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

In the death of Dr. J. C. Long, for twenty years teacher in Crozer Theological Seminary, our denomination loses a very strong man. Dr. Strong was a Southerner by birth, but most of his best years were given to work in the North. We mourn the loss of a dear brother in whom there was wisdom and strength to be admired and many virtues to be loved.

For Christian and Popular Education! Was there ever a slogan that meant so much? Was there ever one so worthy of the manhood of the State? Let it ring from mountain to seashore;—for the inculcation of Christian civilization, the principles of Jesus Christ; for the enlightenment of every child in the State. In what party will one find as much to inspire to action, as much to vote for!

In these days of democracies and democracies it is well to be able to know a democracy when you see one. In your last church conference you have an example of the purest democracy known to men. Of course this is humanly speaking, for in the proper sense each individual conscience is subject to Jesus Christ, who is thus ruler over the whole.

Every member of a Baptist church, man, woman or child, has a vote in conference; and the vote of one is not one whit more powerful than that of another; and this is democracy, pure and undefiled, such as is found in no other great sect, such as no nation nor State can boast. And what is far more to rejoice in, it is Christianity.

Doubtless many of our readers were interested in the complete program of the North Carolina Baptist Sunday-school Chautauqua last week. It is indeed well gotten up, and those interested in Sunday school work should preserve it.

Many a teacher would be greatly improved by attending the coming Chautauqua; and many a student would become a teacher by attending it and pursuing the lines of study that will be suggested.

One great cause of slowness in Sunday-schools is teachers who are not prepared to teach. The Chautauqua would remedy this by bringing together the successful teachers of the State to instruct themselves and all others.

Notice that, though State-aid is endeavoring to ward off the blows that have been dealt it, not once has it dared attempt to answer the arguments of the article that is the bone and sinew of our struggle. This virtually acknowledges defeat; but that means nothing if the county conventions of the several parties are "fixed" to nominate State-aid men. Many times has the will of the masses been contravened by such means. To win in debate is only a step after all; and yet it is a step that would have been sufficient had it been on the part of State-aid, which is to say, that had it been possible to refute Dr. Taylor's arguments it would have been done long ago. That the step has been on the part of Christian and Popular Education is assurance that our claims are just; that we need only to espouse them persistently to win against prejudice and misrepresentation and epithets and chicanery.

We often hear laymen complain of the difficulty with which they "get into" our church affairs. It is often used as an excuse by them when they have no excuse. For there is no excuse for them.

Preachers have many functions; but they cannot do all the work. They must feed and lead; but they can do neither well without knowledge of the inclinations of their flocks.

Just now the best opportunity that we know of is presented our lay brethren to "bring themselves out." There is need for them at every Association. Many of them have more judicial minds than the pastors, many of them are more eloquent of tongue, many know the popular inclination better, all should know the needs and be able to deliberate upon the plans of the Cause as well as the pastors, and all, the pastors included, will be better for such a state of affairs. Let the lay brethren take a more active interest in our Associations and other meetings. Study up on some subject and surprise the brethren. And do it this year; begin now. You can't imagine how much good it will do you.

The Lord's business is your particular business, if you are a servant of the Lord, whether as layman or preacher; and neither can afford to neglect it.

NO CAUSE FOR AMAZEMENT.

From recent statements we surmise that many people have become to such a degree inappreciative of the duties of a Christian as to be amazed at "lay preachers," as they are called; or, on the other hand, that Christians who are Christ like are so scarce that one is amazed to discover one. That one who professes faith in Jesus Christ unto salvation, and who has any appreciation of the daily life and teachings of Christ, should prove a power for good, is not more than should be expected. For a Christian to succeed in keeping in church and do less is reason for surprise.

The children of God must rid their minds of the idea that only those whom God calls to give their entire time to his work can work. A man or woman may never enter a pulpit, may attend thoroughly to a reasonable amount of business duties, and at the same time do more for God and man than many eloquent occupants of pulpits. And whether they do more than their duty is a question that only they may answer. Their success is certainly not a reflection upon those who give their entire time to the work. That God calls this man especially is no ground for a Christian to reason that any one is without obligations to God. That one may pay another to work for God is no ground for shirking certain every day duties that meet us face to face wherever we are, immunity from which no one can procure.

The children of God must learn, too, that the pastor, though he be the ablest and the blessedest of them all, cannot do all the duties of his flock or even a part of it. He does well to attend to his own. And though the Hebrews did have a way of packing all their sins upon a happily unconscious goat—what a load one would have to day!—we hope no one now living is laboring under the misapprehension that for any price all one's duties may be cast upon a long suffering pastor. And though there is one on whom all our sins may be cast, one able to bear, we cannot cast our duties upon him. Every church member has duties not dischargeable with money; and every one is conscious of one's duties, provided one has sought wisdom from God, has studied his holy Word. To profess Christ and not try to be as Christ-like as possible is to sacrifice one's profession and one's principle to the flesh, which is a shortcoming, and indeed, a sin. To profess Christ and not ask, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do," is selfishly sinful. And to ask, to seek duty and not find is impossible. There is but one conclusion to this reasoning: A church-member who is not active is unchristlike through wilful ignorance or mastery of the flesh; and in either case one cannot continue in a church, the inactive members of which Christ taught us should be cut off.

Of course no one holds that every Christian ought to be a "lay-preacher," if that means one who exhorts from pulpits. We do hold, however, that that one is negligent of duty who does not exhort by one way or another, by word or deed, and if necessary by both, all unsaved persons to seek the Lord and his righteousness. And we hold, moreover, that as the Son of Man carried the cup of cold water to the thirsty, comforted the sorrowing, and healed the sick, no one who professes that one's life is modeled after the life of him who did these things, would fail in doing them in the present time; and (need it be added?) to be a church member is to profess to follow Christ not only upward to glory, but through the wilderness and among the sick and sorrowing and sinful even to the cross, the cross upon which the flesh is sacrificed, upon which self is forsaken in the name of him who forsook himself for us.

Surely if this be the duty of Christians—and there is none who successfully denies it, howsoever great be the number of those who would—surely to be amazed at any Christian's activity is to betray that one has been dwelling in a desert country, where living waters are seldom seen.

Our State contemporaries are asked to read and reach their own conclusion of what is said in our leading editorial last week—"State Aid's Underhand Methods,"—rather than accept the statement of a daily contemporary for what is in it. We certainly did not insinuate or allege or broadly say that any paper had been bought.

We say now that but for certain inducements many of the papers that have published the letter addressed to the Baptists of North Carolina, the article appealing for continued State-aid to the University, or the article signed "X," sometimes credited to Dr. McIver, would not have published them.

We attributed baseness to men who preferred guerilla methods to open and honest contest; but by no means did we assert that any paper in the State was a conscious party to anything base. A reading of the editorial in question, however, will be sufficient.

Routed in open and honorable conflict State-aid resorts to the methods of the wire-pulling politician: it is now "fixing" conventions in which some of our readers will sit. Let them be on their guard.

We ask no party to espouse our principles; but we do ask all men. We ask no man to forsake his party, but we do ask each man to vote only for men who stand for his principles, to forsake any party or any candidate who, not being in sympathy with one's principles, cannot represent him. In whatever party you are, be sure you do not sacrifice your principles to the party name by voting for men who will misrepresent you. To put party above principles is to render our government representative only in name.

Dr. Hiscox's division of prayers into Preaching, Exhorting, Historical, Oratorical, Complimentary, and Fault finding prayers, is good. It has been our misfortune to hear all kinds.

Prayer to God is a communion with him or a petition to him, and always an acknowledgement of submission to his will. When prayer is put to the uses enumerated by Dr. Hiscox it is more worldly than otherwise, and is likely to fall barren to earth rather than ascend to heaven.

Prayer is one of God's best blessings upon men; without it a great deal more faith would be required to make the pilgrimage of life. Not to be able to call upon and hear "the deeper voice across the storm," would dishearten many a weary one who, inspired by communion with God, now journeys on undaunted by human obstacles.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

PILOT MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION.

It is always a pleasure to meet with the brethren of this Association. At each of its sessions it mends its gait, extending the limits of its work, and strengthening the bonds of union between the churches and among the brethren.

Bro. H. A. Brown has been in all the plans of work from the time the body was formed, is much with the brethren in all parts of the territory, yet his presence is always an inspiration to his brethren. I did not reach the meeting in time to hear his sermon, which was the introductory to the exercises.

This was the largest gathering of this body we have ever seen. The brethren were in the very best humor. They left their crops "smiling" and growing at home. The churches were all represented, and all pledges, and in many cases more than the pledges, were paid during the year which closed.

State, Home and Foreign Missions were discussed with more than usual interest, and the plan of all the churches seemed to be to do more for these objects than had been heretofore done.

The missionaries in the Association made encouraging reports and statements concerning the work in the Association, and Bro. Brown, the Treasurer of the Executive Committee, invited each one at the close of the session to come forward and receive what the Association was due him for his work.

By the way, the policy which this body stritctly adheres to—not to go in debt—has contributed to the quantity and quality of work it has been able to do.

Many of us missed Bro. Mills, who has not attended any of the Associations thus far. Several of the brethren spoke on the report of the Orphanage, and the Sunday collection was divided between this and State Missions.

The subject of general education was never so fully discussed as it has been at the Associations which have thus far met. Our people were never more united on any question than they are in their opposition to supporting higher education. The speeches of Dr. Durham and Prof. Poteat were listened to with an interest which told plainly what was in the minds of the people. Out of the three thousand people present, I heard of no one who did not heartily endorse the sentiments of the speakers.

I wish I could write more in detail of the exercises. It only remains for me to thank the brethren for the many kind things said of the Recorder, and for the hearty response which was evidenced by the handsome list of new subscribers and renewals received on the ground.

From here we drive to Winston and spend a most pleasant night with Bro. D. S. Reid, and early Monday morning we are on our way to the BEULAH.

I have seldom seen a more interesting audience than met on Tuesday at Kerr's Chapel. The men are well-grown, intelligent and clever; and the women were handsome and refined, and they have the most excellent cooks I have seen anywhere. This latter was suggested by brethren Lamberth, Durham, Hobgood, and perhaps others. All but two of the churches were represented. There was nothing said about forming the new Association. Greensboro and Reidsville churches asked for letters with a view of going into the new organization, and I hope churches enough will unite with them to form the new body and carry into effect the plans these brethren have in view.

The brethren love the name as well as the history of the old Association, and will not hear to giving up the present organization. If the discussion has done nothing more, it has created a new interest, and we shall be surprised if the old Beulah does not wake up and make a record in the future which shall be in keeping with what has made it so illustrious in Baptist history in North Carolina. The great need of this Association seems to be preachers. Brethren J. R. Jones and Harris are the only preachers now who spend all their time in this Association. Surely the "harvest is plenteous and the laborers are few." This is hard to account for. The people are well off and thickly settled. The best country homes I have seen in the State are those in this neighborhood and on the road leading from Kerr's Chapel to Burlington. The farms are in a high state of cultivation, and just now the eye for miles and miles can rest on broad fields of the finest corn and tobacco.

It seemed to me that the delegates were unusually prompt in making their pledges to the different departments of work for the coming year, and in addition to this the delegates, as they did at the Pilot Mountain, gave Bro. Conrad considerable help for the paying of the debts now resting on Ruffin and Walnut Cove churches.

This congregation was not only made up of Missionary Baptists, but there were a large number of representatives from other denominations present to hear especially the discussion on education. I have never seen people listen with more eagerness. Those who could not get in the house—and these were many—listened from the windows, and the universal verdict was, so far as I could learn, "we will vote for no man to go to the Legislature who favors taxation for higher education."

....At a recent meeting at Whiteville Grove—Rev. Josiah Elliott, pastor—there were ten additions to the church.

....Our proposition is bringing in new subscribers already. See if you can increase the number. A little effort will tell.

....Revs. W. H. Reddish and J. L. Martin recently held a good meeting at Midway, in which there were three conversions.

....Prof. W. L. Poteat delivered his lecture, "The Thirty Silent Years of Christ's Life," at High Point last Monday night.

....Dr. Jno. A. Broadus has cancelled his summer engagements, having found that his health cannot withstand continued work.

....Bro. W. R. Gwaltney baptized sister W. H. Edwards and R. B. White into the fellowship of Wake Forest church Sunday.

....Secretary of State Gresham has assured the Presbyterian church that missionaries in China, Japan and Corea will be protected.

....We were glad to have a visit from Bro. G. R. Bagwell of Garner, who has been a subscriber to the Recorder since 1867, last week.

....Dr. M. M. Riley of Georgetown, Ky., has accepted the presidency of Greenville Female College of South Carolina. He is a strong man.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton is spending a vacation at Crockett's Spring. The work on his new church-edifice at Roanoke is progressing.

....Dr. N. B. Cobb preached two good sermons in the pulpit of the First Baptist church of Raleigh last Sunday, Dr. Carter being absent.

....The Presbyterians at Wilson have offered the Baptists the use of their house of worship while the latter's new church is in course of erection.

....The Lumberton brethren and sisters are enlarging the Baptist parsonage there in the absence of Bro. Martin, who is on a vacation in Virginia.

....The Baltimore Baptist states that Dr. J. W. M. Williams, well known to many of our readers, is seriously ill at Buffalo Springs, Virginia.

....Rev. Jos. Hiden writes that our church at Morehead is moving along with increasing interest. Congregations are keeping up well both morning and night.

....Revs. A. A. Butler and J. L. Britt recently held a meeting at Beulah church, Sampson county, in which there were twenty two accessions to that church.

....A recent meeting at Mt. Creek church, near Rutherfordton, in which Rev. C. B. Justice did the preaching, was the occasion of twenty-five additions to that church.

....Attend your Association. You'll not have an opportunity to spend a day better in a year. Learn of the works of the Lord; and give them the benefit of your study.

....The members of the Baptist church at Matthews have near completion a handsome brick church, erected at a cost of over four thousand dollars.—Monroe Enquirer.

....Rev. B. H. Matthews changes his address from Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., to Plymouth, N. C. We presume Bro. Matthews is preaching at or near Plymouth.

....Revs. J. C. Sorrels and E. J. Harrell recently held a meeting at Silver Creek church, Polk county, in which there were twenty conversions. At the close seventeen were baptized.

....As a result of a meeting held at Virginia, Va.-N. C., by Revs. H. T. Williams and T. B. Hill, nine persons have been added to our membership there; eight of them were baptized.

....Reports of blessed meetings continue to come. We hope that there will be such a gathering in of the wandering this year as has never been known. Work and pray for spread of the gospel.

....The Leaksville Herald says that Rev. J. W. Lynch of Danville, Ky., occupied the Leaksville Baptist pulpit last Sunday morning and that Rev. W. C. Taylor of the same State occupied it at night.

....Bro. Jno. E. Ray is again in the "bright sunny South," as he joyfully writes last week in requesting his address changed from Colorado Springs to Danville, Ky. Kentucky is to be congratulated.

....Three thousand members of the Holy Rosary Catholic church at Baltimore have decided to disregard in the future the commands of the Cardinal and to establish an independent Catholic church.

....Miss Duffie Conn of the Raleigh First Baptist church left last Saturday for Glover, Nash county, where she has accepted a position to teach. We are sure Miss Duffie will give entire satisfaction as a teacher.

....Five persons were recently baptized by Rev. J. K. Howard into the fellowship of our church at Rocky Mount. Bro. Howell is greatly encouraged in the work there, and the church seems more active than ever.

....The Orphan's Friend is publishing a series of articles on educational institutions in North Carolina. Last week it contained a sketch of Wake Forest College with a photographic view of three of the buildings.

....The Western Recorder has purchased the Baptist Gleaner of Kentucky. It will run a "Gleaner department" hereafter, of which Bro. J. N. Hall will have charge. He will also serve as field editor for the Recorder.

....Bro. Mills of the Orphanage announces that so far he has not been able to attend any of the Associations on account of sickness at the Orphanage. In the mean time he hopes the brethren will represent this good cause.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth writes from Roxboro: "In the meeting at Ephesus, Bro. P. H. Fontaine did the preaching, and thirty joined the church. Many others professed faith. We number nearly three hundred members now."

....Rev. Geo. J. Dowell of Durham sends us a new subscriber, and writes on the 10th inst.: "We had a good meeting at Rose of Sharon last week. Start at Yates' Chapel to day. Never saw more promising corn crop in my life."

....Rev. E. C. Bobbitt of Smyrna writes that he, Revs. B. H. Matthews of Plymouth and J. D. Moore of Beaufort recently protracted a meeting at Woodville church, which resulted in eight professions and six additions to the church.

....Bro. B. S. Peterson has resumed work for the North Carolina Baptist, after having been incapacitated by ill health about eight months. Bro. Peterson was taken sick at the Elizabeth City Convention, and we are glad to note his recovery.

....Presbyterians and Methodists have more missionaries than any other denomination in Korea, the country over which China and Japan are fighting. A Baptist missionary is now on the way thither from Dr. A. J. Gordon's Boston church.

....Those who have heard him preach will rejoice to know that a volume of sermons and addresses by Dr. Thos. E. Skinner of Raleigh is in press. It will no doubt be very valuable, being the select work of a ministry of nearly forty three years.

....We regret to learn of the death of Bro. T. D. Cooper of Winston, at the age of sixty six. Bro. Cooper was a deacon of the church at Clemmonsville, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. He leaves eight children, to whom we extend sympathy.

....We are in receipt of the souvenir program of the State Sunday school Convention to be held at Durham 21st to 23d inst. It contains pictures of many of the officers and speakers, of which we note especially those of Prof. W. L. Poteat and Bro. L. G. Broughton.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews of Berkley, Va., writes: "I am now having a successful meeting at my church, conducted by Rev. J. J. Wicker of Louisville, Ky."

....Wake Forest College will open shortly. Good reports of the work there and the work over the State for it are coming in. Now is the time of times to keep Wake Forest ringing in the ears of the likely young men of your town.

...."The Farmer's Boy" on our first page has been put in tract form. It should be circulated from one end of the land to the other. Read it. We knew Bro. Vann was one of the most sensible of folks, but we didn't think him capable of so good an article as this.

....Rev. T. Bright of Forest City has been called to serve his seventh year as pastor at Waco. He is in a meeting there now, in which great interest is expressed. The Shelby Aurora reports that there have been two professions of faith and a number of reclamations.

....You can put the RECORDER in your churches from now until January 1st for fifty cents for each subscription. This is for new subscribers; and it will be to your interest to begin getting them now. Send the subscriber now and the money later, if you see proper.

....We are going to avoid sending out reminders this year if possible. It will be possible, if our delinquents (see the label on this paper) will send us a part or the whole of their renewals or the amounts they owe, or write us a postal saying when they will. Renew, if you can.

....Says Judge Armfield, one of the most conservative and well balanced of the North Carolina judiciary: "In my opinion Dr. Taylor conclusively establishes every proposition which he lays down" in his pamphlet on education. We will publish a letter from the Judge next week.

....Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., of New York, will deliver his lecture on "The Gates of Heaven and Hell in Modern Babylon" in the Academy of Music at Raleigh on Tuesday night, Aug. 21. He deserves and will doubtless have a large audience. Admission fifty cents.

....The Cold Spring church in the Western Convention is having great trouble with a liquor element that has withdrawn fellowship from certain of its members who oppose intemperance and its upholders. A whiskey-distiller should not be allowed fellowship in a church.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., has resigned the pastorate of the church at Jonesboro, Tenn. Bro. Howell has had charge of this church a little more than a year, and his work there was very successful. We think Bro. Howell purposes attending Wake Forest College this fall.

....This is a very important year in Baptist affairs; and we are determined that as many as possible shall know what is going on. The RECORDER until the new year for fifty cents should bring us a thousand new names. Let us hear from you. A small effort on your part will do great good.

....It is said that the attendance at the late Central Association was larger than in many years, and that greater interest than usual was manifest. At one time Dr. Durham was speaking within the church upon education and Dr. Carter preaching in the grove, both before large audiences.

....The meeting conducted by Rev. C. W. Blanchard and Rev. F. H. Poston at Blackman's Grove Baptist church closed last Thursday. The Christian people of the community were greatly benefited and six persons were added to the church. Several others professed conversion.—Smithfield Herald, August 9.

....An interesting "educational gathering" was held at Amherst Academy, near North Catawba, Aug. 1st, of which Prof. R. L. Moore is Principal. There were eight speakers, among them Prof. E. W. Sikes, late of Wake Forest, and education was treated in many phases. Recitations, etc., added to the interest of the occasion.

....Bro. G. B. Pruett of Ellenboro informs us that Rev. B. M. Bridges and A. E. Erwin have closed a very interesting meeting at the Bethel church near Ellenboro. Twenty-five have been baptized and others made professions. The brethren made a good and lasting impression on the people.

....Rev. J. W. Nobles writes that in spite of the rains the Lord blessed his efforts in a meeting at Piny Grove church recently. He writes that there were seventeen conversions, five converts having been baptized. Bro. Nobles changes his address from Silverdale to Ward's Mills, Onslow county, N. C.

....Rev. P. H. Fontaine of Elmo, Va., writes: "We have been blessed with a gracious revival at Enon, Granville county. Thirty-four have been baptized, one restored, and two received by letter. This church has been well prepared by its former pastors, brethren Marsh and Jenkens, and is as near being a model church as I have ever known."

....The new Baptist church at Bat Cave was dedicated on last Sunday, the sermon was preached by Rev. C. B. Justice of Rutherfordton. This is a handsome little church, and is dedicated clear of debt. There was a large crowd present, and the services were very interesting and much enjoyed. Protracted services will be held there for sometime.—Hendersonville Times.

.... From the Baptist State Convention, December, 1893, to August 16th, 1893, the churches sent to J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, $3,444 98 for State Missions; and from the Convention in Elizabeth City, December, 1893, to August 15th, 1894, the churches sent to J. D. Boushall, Treasurer, for State Missions $7,014 09. This gives a gain, in this department, for this year, over the contributions for the same object for last year, of $3,569.18.—C. Durham.

....Bro. J. S. Kilby writes from Trap Hill the 10th inst.: "A gracious revival just closed to day in our church (Trap Hill Baptist) conducted by our beloved pastor, Rev. J. W. Burchett, assisted by brethren Jolly and Becker. Bro. Becker is a ministerial student at Wake Forest. Several conversions and eight additions by baptism."

....We were glad to have a visit from Rev. W. H. Reddish of Six Forks last week. Bro. Reddish was on his way to Garner's, where he will protract a meeting this week. Rev. A. M. Simms of the Raleigh Tabernacle and Bro. John Pullen are expected to help him. Bro. Reddish informs us that he will probably attend the Louisville Seminary the coming session.

....We had a pleasant visit from Rev. J. D. Newton, Thomasville, last week. Bro. Newton had been assisting his nephew, Rev. W. C. Newton, in a meeting at Clayton, which resulted in twelve or fifteen professions of religion. And last week he spent at Ephesus church near Raleigh in a good meeting. Bro. Newton reported all his fields in good and progressive condition.

....We were glad to have a visit last week from Rev. Archibald Cree, Jr., who was recently ordained at Henderson. Bro. Cree was on his way to Rolesville, where he and Rev. W. B. Royall, D. D., are holding a meeting this week. Bro. Cree reports good meetings at Youngsville, where there were eight conversions, and at Ephesus where there were nine. Bro. Archibald Cree has good cause to be proud of his son.

....Prof. J. B. Carlyle made us a pleasant visit on his way from Robeson county, where he has been resting by working for the college, to Wake Forest, last week. The Professor's health is much improved and he is very hopeful of the College, assuring us that more students than ever will attend from Robeson and surrounding counties this year. Bro. Carlyle will spend the remainding weeks in work for the College in other fields.

....Rev. C. J. Woodson of Gatesville called to see us last week. We regret to state that Bro. Woodson's health is so bad that he has had to give up work for some weeks in order to recuperate at the Panacea Springs, Littleton, N. C., where we charge Bro. Fant to take good care of him. Of all the RECORDER'S friends, Bro. Woodson succeeds in getting more subscriptions than any we know. He is a model working pastor in many respects.

.... Rev. R. D. Carroll began a protracted meeting in the Baptist church at Ayden on Sunday. Rev. Thos. Carrick of Lexington, who was for ten years pastor in Greenville, arrived there yesterday to assist in the meeting. Mr. Carroll recently closed a very good meeting at Hopewell mission station in which he was assisted by Rev. J. W. Rose, from Cove, N. C. There were fifteen professions and eight additions to the church.—Eastern Reflector, August 8.

....A brother told us last week of the quietest and one of the ablest workers in these parts—Rev. J. H. Hutchinson of Six Forks. It is said that when Bro. Hutchinson preached his first sermon at Samaria, Wake county, he took his congregation away in a buggy, and then didn't have a load. He now has a good church there. Moreover, Bro. Hutchinson has built up, with the help of the Lord, a congregation of about three hundred, which he says he wouldn't exchange for any in his Association, in another part of Wake where the "Hard Shells" had taken charge.

....The Knoxville Tribune of the 6th inst. contains a long account of the ordination of Rev. J. A. Wray, lately called to the Winston Broad Street church. The ordination services were held at the First Baptist church of Knoxville, and Revs. J. P. Powers, J. H. Snow and R. R. Acree took part in them. Among many other favorable expressions we select the following from the Knoxville Daily Journal: "Mr. Wray goes to Winston, N. C. He gives promise of being a young man of great usefulness in the church and goes from here with the best wishes of his many friends for Heaven's choicest blessings. Hundreds of loyal hearts will watch with unusual interest as to his future ministerial life."

Facts and Figures; or, Side-lights on the Educational Discussion—No. 6.

BY REV. C. DURHAM.

In my search for information about the income of the University I have found some strange things. Since the election to the presidency of the present incumbent the ordinary sources of information give no data for an opinion. The public documents, for many years so helpful, are now silent and worthless. That the law has been persistently ignored or evaded is so plain no one can be in doubt. But, though these things had been found out, I supposed the authorities of the University would throw no obstruction in the way of a citizen seeking information. In this, however, I was mistaken. In answer to my request to have access to reports of the Treasurer and Bursar, Hon. R. H. Battle wrote, "with the consent of the Executive Committee" you may; and our honored Gov., Elias Carr, wrote, "if the Executive Committee will consent." I was not to be stopped by such obstacles, and very humbly asked, through the secretary of the Board of Trustees, that I might have the permission of the Executive Committee to copy the reports which contained the information needed.

The Committee met Wednesday, June 20th, 1894, at five o'clock p. m. to consult about this grave question, and after due consultation the secretary was instructed to furnish me the information desired. It was a new question. No such request had perhaps ever been made, and no such meeting had ever been held. It was a solemn time. To refuse would lead to trouble, and to grant the request might ——. These were public documents, and a citizen had asked through the proper channel to see them.

The President of the University was at this solemn meeting, and so soon as the motion granting me access to the reports was adopted, he exhibited a tabulated statement claiming, as I have understood from the secretary, that it contained all the information I had asked for. The secretary presented this tabulated statement, and on careful examination I found that it did not contain one single item of information I needed, or that I had in mind in making the request. The President of the University wrote that this tabulated statement was "prepared not for the Executive Committee nor by me (him) but was prepared for you (me) by the Bursar of the University. Possibly there are errors in the statement, made in the haste of copying. I need not add that the Bursar is a devout Baptist."

Why such haste in copying? If "I need not add that the Bursar is a devout Baptist," why then add it? He says: "Hon. R. H. Battle has charge of all invested funds, and his grandfather was a Baptist preacher."

But I pass on to the Bursar's reports. I have been seeking for them for several months. Study them carefully, and you will, I think, need no other explanation of the conduct of the University authorities in ignoring and evading the law of the State which required them to report these things. The disgrace of the Battle administration was the perversion of the county students' law, and the disgrace of the Winston administration is the establishment and use of free scholarships.

COLLEGIATE YEAR 1890–'91.

Report of Bursar, Aug. 15th, 1890, to Dec. 31, 1891:

185 students in all.
82 paid tuition in full, $30 each.
3 paid tuition in part, $25, $15 and $28 respectively, and gave notes for balance.
6 were medical students, who paid tuition to University of $10 each.
1 was a medical student, who paid tuition to University of $12 50.
1 was a medical student, who paid tuition to University of $3.
1 was a medical student, who paid tuition to University of $5.
1 was a medical student, who paid no tuition to University.
1 was a law student, who paid $8.
1 was a law student, who gave note for $12.
33 students gave notes for $30 each.
8 students withdrew on account of sickness, &c., and were excused from paying tuition.
2 students had Cameron scholarships.
3 students had Moore scholarships.
2 students had Smith scholarships.
1 student had ½ Smith scholarship and gave note for ½ ($15)
8 students were preachers' sons.
3 students were studying for the ministry.
3 students were preachers.
2 students were post graduates, who pay no tuition.
14 were law students, who pay only the annual fee of $5 to the University.
14 were summer law students, who pay no fees to the University.

[Seventy-six seem to have paid nothing at all this session to the University.—C. D.]

Report of Bursar, Dec. 31st, 1890, to Aug. 15th, 1891:

167 students in all.
73 paid tuition in full, $30 each.
1 paid tuition, $25.
1 paid tuition in part, $22.50, and gave note for balance ($7 50)
1 paid tuition in full, $20, having left early in the term.
6 were medical students who paid $10 each for instruction in the U. N. C.
3 were medical students, who paid $4, $15, $16 respectively each for instruction in U. N. C.
1 was a medical student, who paid no tuition to the University.
1 was a medical student, who left early in the term.
26 students gave notes for $30 each.
3 students were preachers' sons.
3 students were preachers.
3 students had Moore scholarships.

2 were law students, who paid $2 and $18 respectively for instruction in the U. N. C.
157 paid the semi annual fee of $5.
3 normal students paid each $2.50.

[Seventy seem to have paid nothing except the semi annual fee. Ten didn't pay even that fee.—C. D.]

COLLEGIATE YEAR, 1891–'92.

Report of Bursar, August 15, 1891, to December 31, 1891:

220 students in all.
100 paid tuition in full for instruction in the University, $30.
1 paid in part for instruction in the University, $10 and gave note, $20.
5 were medical students who paid $11 each for instruction in the University.
1 medical student paid $36 for instruction in the University.
1 medical student paid $14 for instruction in the University
4 were medical students who pay no tuition except to Dr. Whitehead.
1 was a law student who paid $4 for instruction in the University.
7 students had Alumni scholarship
1 student had Alumni fellowship.
26 students gave notes for $30 each.
1 student left early in the term and therefore, excused from paying tuition.
1 student paid by services in Chemical Laboratory.
1 student paid by services in Physics.
1 student paid by services as stenographer and Secretary to the President.
2 students had Smith scholarships.
1 student paid ½ Smith scholarship and gave his note for ½ ($15).

[159 students seem to have paid nothing to the University this time. Sixty one seem not to have paid room-rent.—C. D.]

Sunday afternoon seventeen applicants were baptized into the Clayton church after two weeks of meeting. Rev. J. D. Newton of Thomasville was with them the first week and preached with great power. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Newton, conducted the rest of the series. This church owes no man anything, not even the pastor, and there is not a known discord among the membership of over two hundred.

SOUTHERN BAPTIST COLLEGE.—We call attention to the advertisement of this College, which appears in another column. This new College, which is beautifully situated in a charming suburb of Atlanta, Ga., and is easy of access from all points of the South, opens its doors to higher education, September 12. An eminent and competent faculty is in charge of this institution and unexcelled advantages are offered those who are seeking to fully cultivate and train the mind.

A Good Resolution.

Dear Recorder:—I have read with great care all that has appeared in the RECORDER in recent months and much besides on "State aid in higher education;" and I have resolved to vote for no man for the Legislature who is not from principle opposed to State aid in higher education" and to the liquor traffic.

J. J. MCLENDON.

Here are found references to washings for purifications of the body by baths, and the teachings of the tradition of the elders. These are unlike the baptism of John, so much so as not to furnish the needed links in this history on Old Testament baptism, to show it the same as John's. It seems plain that John's baptism was very different, both in nature and design, from these "divers washings" and purifications of the old economy. The unclean among the Jews, whether male or female, baptized or bathed themselves often, while those who believed John's message were baptized by him but once. John required fruit meet for repentance, and faith in Christ before he would baptize, but none of these things were required of those who baptized themselves according to the ceremonial law, or those who washed their hands often—and their bodies, too—in obedience to their conceited goodness and the tradition of the elders. Frey says, "As for proselyte baptism, we have no accounts of such a ceremony in the Old or New Testament, nor in the Apocraphy, nor Josephus or Philo, nor even in the Mishna." John's baptism was a perfectly new institution. He was the first to administer it, and was, therefore, by way of emphasis, called John the Baptist, and his baptism termed John's baptism. If this ceremony had been in use ever since Moses, why should this name have been given to John more than any other or others who baptized before his coming?

Again, why should the subject have excited so much attention among the people if it was an old custom introduced by Moses, and in constant practice until John? Further still, when Jesus asked whether the baptism of John was from heaven or of men (Matt. 21: 25), why did they not answer at once, "It is an old ordinance introduced by Moses, and in use among us ever since"? If so familiar to them, and John's baptism was but an imitation of that practiced by the Jews, why answer as if they knew nothing about baptism of any kind? John's baptism must have been very unlike the divers washings and purifications of the Old Testament, in some respects, or so many questions would not have been asked about its origin and why John baptized.

The washings spoken of Mark 7: 1—9, and said to be from the tradition of the elders, were a sort of supplement to the Bible, and its teaching had come to be of more importance in their esteem, because they rejected the counsel of God that they might keep it, and so rendered the Word of God of no effect by its teaching. These traditional usages which came to supplant the Bible, were disowned by Christ and branded as hypocritical, heartless lip honor, vain worship, coming from the "doctrines and commandments of men." Read the Scripture, and see if you can find any link in these washings to connect them with the passage of Israel through the sea and the baptisms of John in Jordan, so as to make the history of baptism from Moses to John "all right." We know that John had his special commission and authority directly from heaven (John 1: 6 and 33), but it is not as easy to find the identity of these "divers baptisms" (literal) and the order from heaven which John executed. Hinton says: "The first historic record on the subject of baptism, as a moral institute, is found Matt. 3: 5 and 6—'Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, and were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.'"

History! what strange and contradictory things are found under that name! I am reminded of the sarcasm of Rev. F. W. Robertson on this subject. Said he: "History, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, is merely M. Historian's opinion or theory, substantiated by a dry romance, until somebody else and writes the romance in their way—the facts being pliable and equally available for both." It seems easy for some historians—especially if they are writing on baptism—to manufacture facts and events by "a frolic of the imagination," just to suit the emergency or fancy; and still those advocating strange views must be esteemed honest in their position, or they could not retain their place in our confidence. To base anything on history, however, except it be sacred history, written by inspiration of God, is to hardly know where we are in many instances. Such a base seems to be ever changing, and we may find ourselves without foundation, if we are not sure that our historian is infallible.

But what of history on our subject? We will make two or three quotations in answer and close this article: The judicious Mr. Jennings, after stating arguments pro and con, says: "Upon the whole, it is more likely the Jews took the hint of proselyte baptism after our Saviour's time, than that he borrowed baptism from theirs, which, whenever it came into practice, was one of those additions to the law of God, which he severely censured. There wants more evidence of its being as ancient as our Saviour's time, than I apprehend can be procured, to ground any argument upon it in relation to Christian baptism."—(Frey's Essays on Baptism, p. 108.)

Another, Daylinger, says: "The baptism of proselytes, in our opinion, seems to have been received by the Jews after the time of John the Baptist."—(Ibid.)

One more quotation from history, and we will leave our subject with the minds of our unprejudiced readers, if such are to be found. J. G. Carpzovius says: "We cannot be persuaded that the baptism of proselytes was prior to the baptism of John and of Christ."—(Ibid., p. 104.)

Are not the above quotations from history, and as good, perhaps, as we have? If so, its boring search to the origin of Christian baptism, the historians may be more reliable than modern writers. According to them and no Bible, the history of baptism from Moses to John the Baptist is not. To undertake to prove the history of a practice that never existed, is to be fully mistaken and sorely disappointed.

A Faultfinder Among His Brethren—No. 2

BY REV. JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

Several years have passed away since I became acquainted with BROTHER CRY, THE POCKET-DAIRYMAN.

He was just out of College, with the much coveted sheep-skin in his pocket. He is a clever fellow, and ever ready to welcome the travelling brother to his home and feed him on milk and butter.

I was making an entry in my diary, when he asked me the question:

"Brother Albritton, do you keep a dairy?"

"Well—no," I replied. "I have one or two cows; but I don't keep a dairy."

"I have been thinking of getting a little pocket dairy," he said, and left me wondering how he could carry a dairy in his pocket. After thinking over the matter, I came to the conclusion that he was talking about a pocket diary, and that one of us was guilty of mispronouncing a word. I know the old dictionaries and school teachers pronounce the word "diary" di-a-ry; but it was possible that this progressive age had changed the pronounciation to da-ry.

Superintendent Scarborough, who, like Bro. Rice Carroll, is well up in the world, and by giant strides can keep up with the procession, told me once that the colleges had made some great changes in pronunciation. For instance, they call old Cicero something like "Kick-er-oh!" and have converted Cæsar's immortal vici into "wickey"—the herb from which the old lady made a tea to bathe herself in for the itch. Methinks that if the old orator and warrior could come back, they would take part in this base foot-ball game, kick something over, and make things hotter than "wickey" tea.

I believe it is well to change names sometimes, when the change is for the better. One of our Northern brethren, who came to see us in 1861-'65, lingered sometimes among us after cessation of hostilities, and left us at last with much mutual regret; for we became much attached to one another. But his name was quite a serious obstacle to our friendship, and I will tell you how the obstacle was removed. The name of the brother was Buzzard, and we called him just as we call other buzzards, accenting the first syllable. He didn't seem to like it. Perhaps he had learned that the buzzard family, though very useful, didn't stand very high among Southern people. We fell upon the expedient of making the first syllable very short, and strongly accenting and emphasizing the last syllable, making the name Buz-zard instead of Buz-zard. I think the name was more euphonious and acceptable; and therefore, the change was justifiable.

Bro. Buz-zard was quick to recognize the kindly and delicate sentiment that prompted us to make the change, and gave us many proofs of his high esteem. He had the old wooden building that stood where now stands the handsome brick store of H. Y. Ham of Mt. Olive well filled with supplies for such of the Federal forces as remained after the last battle, and he would gladly let us Southerners have sugar, genuine coffee, &c., for cucumbers, collards, squashes, or anything else we might offer. I believe he would have taken shucks or old gourds, just for the sake of accommodation. May Brother Buz-zard soar a thousand times higher than any Southern member of the buzzard family has ever aspired to soar!

I am opposed to too much change, however, and shall hold on to my "diary" in spite of Bro. Cry's "dairy." Don't fail to call in when you pass that way, and refresh yourself with some of Bro. Cry's choice milk and butter.

He will also give you a good sermon, if you chance to be at one of his appointments.

I heard him some years ago at a Union Meeting. The text was, "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried," &c. John 7: 37. His peroration was in full blaze. In proof of the Saviour's great earnestness, he adduced the statement that he "stood and cried." "Yes, brethren," said he by way of explanation, "the Redeemer actually stood and shed tears while he invited the people to come to him."

Bro. Cry, the pocket-dairyman, is an excellent brother, but I am not sure that the word "cried" in the text is any proof that the Saviour shed tears on the occasion referred to. While he may have wept, and wept profusely, as he extended the gracious invitation, the text affords no proof of weeping at all. But Bro. Cry thought it did.

Two Questions Discussed.

BY REV. HAYNES LENNON.

Should not every church have a prayer-meeting? If so, what are the best means to be used to create and keep up an interest in them? Several things are to be considered: 1. What is a church? 2. What constitutes a prayer-meeting? 3. The appointed means to be used.

I. WHAT IS A CHURCH?

A church is a divinely organized body of baptized believers called of God by the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ under the energizing power of the Holy Ghost, out of the world that lieth in darkness, to the faith, fellowship, obedience, and the worship of the true God, being sanctified by the Spirit through the belief of the truth in him, so that all believers shall be partakers of his love and holiness, and thus see the salvation of God. All those who are the people of God by faith in Christ, their intercessor, and of repentance towards God, are taught of the Lord to make supplications and prayers to him continually for all men, that the household of faith may lead quiet and peaceable lives in all godliness and honesty.

II. WHAT IS A PRAYER-MEETING?

It is the gathering of the membership of a church, in part or in whole, at any stated place, to supplicate the blessings of God on his people generally, or in any department of Christian labor, whether at home or in the regions beyond. In a more restricted sense, it is generally understood to imply, first, entreaty with God, through the medium of his Son, for special blessings on our own souls, for our enjoyment of his grace and love, so that we can implore the Lord for all others that the mind and spirit of Jesus Christ may dwell richly in all the true Israel of God.

Secondly, that His people may harmoniously co operate in in the dissemination of the gospel, that the ends of the earth may be given to the Son of God for his possession, as well as their inheritance of eternal life through the intercession, redemption and propitiation of their High Priest, "who tasted death for every man," "that he might see his seed, prolong his days, and realize the pleasure of the Lord prospering in his hands."

III. THE BEST MEANS TO CREATE AND KEEP UP AN INTEREST IN THEM

We must realize our individual situation relative to God and his cause. What do our hands find to do in connection with our heavenly calling, and what is the moral and spiritual condition of the vineyard of the Lord? Decide these questions, and then what an innumerable number of facts present themselves before us demanding our coming "to the help of the Lord against the mighty,"—the mighty sins that beset us every hour of life; the hosts of enemies that lie in wait to lead us in the many by-paths in life wrought out by his Satanic Majesty for our miscarriage in a Divine life, and then for the destruction of God's people in overwhelming them in utter dismay when the last trumpet shall sound. If these considerations awaken us, then the Word of God is in hand; the Holy Spirit as a sword at hand to divide soul and spirit, marrow and joints asunder, the faith of martyrs to embolden, and the love of God to inspire us with Divine zeal and ability to "overcome by the blood of the Lamb." With such facilities we are armed with the means of private prayer for Divine help, for family prayer, that our households and our kinsmen may enjoy a special blessing as in case of Cornelius; for national blessings as in the dedication of Solomon's temple built for the Lord, that His name might be in everlasting remembrance; and lastly, the injunction of our Lord to his disciples, "Tarry ye here until ye be endued with power from on high" to establish the kingdom of God, which enured to all our spiritual blessings.

Only the Scars Remain.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

For the cure of all diseases originating in impure blood, the best remedy is

SAVES THE BABIES.

For Teething, Cholera Infantum, Summer Complaint, and other troubles common to children, Germetuer is beyond doubt the greatest of all remedies. Nothing on earth will take children through the trying ordeal of teething so pleasantly, safely and surely as Germetuer. They all like to take it, and it acts like magic in meeting the troubles of that critical period. It is perfectly harmless, containing no alcohol or opium in any form whatever. Thousands have tried it and it has never been known to fail.

"SAVED OUR BABY."

Mr. J. T. McAllister, of Atlanta, Ga., says: "Germetuer saved our baby, Paul, carried him safely through an extremely bad case of dysentery and teething, and from a mere skeleton of skin and bones, it has made him a great big solid chunk of thirty or thirty-five pounds.

"FAT AS A PIG."

J. J. Scruggs, of Sidon, Miss., says: "Our little girl, nine months old, was in a very low state from summer complaint, and Germetuer made her as fat as a pig."

"FAT AND GROWING."

Rev. J. I. Oxford, Atlanta, Ga., says: "My baby was sick from its birth, and we expected it would die. At the age of nine months we began to give it Germetuer. The effects were magical. It began to improve at once and is now fat and growing every day."

"WELL AND FAT."

G. W. Clarke, McGregor, Texas, says: "Our little baby daughter has been cured of a violent case of Summer Diarrhœa from teething, by the use of Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. She had been reduced nearly to a skeleton. The first dose of Germetuer helped her, and now she is well and fat."

Germetuer is the thing for children;
It's good as lemonade to take
And cures sick folks without mistake.

Sound Views from a Venerable Brother.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—It has been a long time since I have written an article for the RECORDER. I have two reasons for not writing for this long time: first, my age; I have now reached three-score and ten. It has been said—and I reckon truthfully—that after a man passes sixty-five, he lives in the past. That being true, it follows that young men are the ones to defend the ideas of the present. We are living in an age of progress. New ideas are taking hold of the mind—progressive ideas, that require men who live in the present to defend. If these new ideas are produced from new light shed on old truth, then they should be defended, and it requires young men—men who live in the present and not in the past to defend them.

I read with much interest, and I hope with some profit, the articles of Dr. Taylor on higher education by the State. It occurred to me when reading these articles, that to many some of his ideas were new, and as I was living in the past, it required considerable thought to decide whether or not the ideas advanced were the outgrowth of a progressive brain, or the legitimate results of new light on old truth. I read his articles carefully with this view, and reached the conclusion that the Doctor's arguments in support of his position are unanswerable. I do not think that the State can produce the man who would attempt, upon fair logical grounds, to meet and refute his arguments. Some one may attempt to ridicule his arguments: this is the most that any of his opponents can do; but ridicule is not argument.

After reading the Doctor's articles, and seeing in the RECORDER many indorsements of his position, these questions presented themselves: Is the subject treated by the Doctor an appropriate subject for discussion in a strictly religious paper? Has not the Doctor compromised his ministerial dignity by discussing this subject in a religious newspaper? To my mind, this is strictly a political question that must be settled at the ballot box; and you know that we old fogies have always held that we should never mix religion and politics; that the religious papers and the preachers should discuss religious questions, and let politics alone; that the political papers and political statesmen (?) are the only ones to handle political questions. The Doctor's articles are a direct attack upon a long established policy of the State, and we old fogies have always held that if government policies were wrong, the politician, whose duty it is to attend to the politics of the State, should make the discovery and discuss it through the political papers.

Old fogy as I am, I have concluded that it is perfectly legitimate for Dr. Taylor to attack this unsound policy of the State, and do it through a religious paper. The preacher and the editor of the religious paper are citizens of the State, and it is a duty they owe to their countrymen to carry their religion into their politics, and make their religion felt in their politics. I thank God that in North Carolina there is one editor and one preacher who are not ashamed to carry their religion into their politics without feeling that they have compromised their dignity.

Paul tells us that "when the wicked rule, the people mourn." For years we have been mourning under the load of heavy taxation that is not righteous, and who is better qualified to expose unrighteousness than the minister of righteousness? In years past these United States mourned under the unrighteous tax to support the church. Our fathers in the ministry carried their religion into their politics and it resulted in giving us soul liberty. It is strange that Christians ever allowed political demagogues to so deter them as to close their mouths and carrying their religion into their politics.

There is other wicked legislation under which the people mourn, and I think the Doctor's articles will serve as an entering wedge to expose much wicked legislation. Our people mourn under our systems of tax legislation, rum legislation, class legislation and political corruption in high places, and I fear that the ministry is responsible for much of the mourning of the people under wicked rule. I believe as a rule the ministry has been faithful in rendering unto God the things that are God's, but have criminally failed to render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's. I am glad we have a preacher who is willing to take his religion into his politics and expose a wicked and corrupt policy of our State. I hope others will follow. I believe they will. Brother preachers, get down from your ministerial stilts, and expose wrong anywhere and everywhere, and not be a party to legislative corruption by keeping your mouths shut.

2. This, in all probability, will be the last article that I shall write for the press owing to my affliction. I have been for a long time a great sufferer with rheumatism, and I find it quite painful to write.

A Correction—Our Orphanage Picnic.

Dear Recorder:—Please say the first four lines of the third paragraph of my article published in your issue of the 25th of July should read: "And since these principles increase and prevail as intelligence increases and education prevails, of all people, Baptists are most deeply interested in the progress of education."

Our Sunday-school and Orphanage picnic held here on the 26th of July was a success, notwithstanding several adverse circumstances. I came on the field late and we failed to begin to make arrangements at as early a day as we ought, so we could not get an excursion train and we did not advertise as thoroughly as we otherwise would have done; besides, the morning was rather gloomy and rain fell just at the dinner hour; still there were some eight hundred or more in attendance, and the receipts in cash and pledges amounted to over three hundred dollars, while the interest in the Orphanage was deepened and widened. The address of Profs. Carlyle and Sikes were all their warmest admirers could ask, and were greatly enjoyed by all.

Bro. Mills and a chapter of orphans added greatly to the interest. They went from this place to Cross Roads' church, Yadkin county, about thirteen miles from us and were present at a Sunday-school celebration which had been arranged for Saturday. Sunday at 11 o'clock they were at Eaton's and at night at Farmington. Prof. Sikes went with them. He made a forcible address on education at Cross Roads and an excellent talk on the importance of early and correct training at Eaton's. The people everywhere were deeply interested in the exercises of the children and the speeches of Bro. Mills. He carried to the Orphanage over a hundred dollars in cash, while the pledges amount to over that sum, and these latter will be increased by efforts now made.

The expenses were considerably larger than they will be next year, some thirty dollars worth of permanent improvements being made on the grounds. The property, which belongs to the Orphanage at Thomasville, is worth about and thousand dollars. It will soon be of larger value as the town is on a moderate but sure advance in growth and importance.

Yours sincerely, J. N. STALLINGS.
Mocksville, July 30, 1894.

From Sister Britton in China.

Dear Recorder:—Although we are passing into summer, we are having very cool days—unusually cool for this time of the year in central China.

Last Sunday, there was begun a special effort in the chapel work here. There are two services daily, and opportunities are given after the sermon for any, who wish to remain and inquire more fully into the plan salvation, to do so. We believe that the Lord is here and that he is going to honor his preached Word. Congregations are good-sized and remarkably quiet. Our prayer is that the Holy Spirit may come in His fulness and make alive these dead hearts, that many of our neighbors may be saved during these protracted meetings. My husband is doing all the preaching at present. We are hoping that Mr. Tatum from Shanghai will come next week and help some days.

For sometime we have wanted to speak of the excellency of the Convention Series of our Sunday-school Board at Nashville, Tennessee. We have been receiving the Quarterlies, Teachers, and Kind Words, and they are very helpful to us in our Sunday-school work. I am sure that there are no other helps so suitable for the Sunday-schools of our Southern States. In the Kind Words our mission work is especially emphasized. Much space is given to the subject, telling about the fields, work being done, and the needs; and, often articles and letters appear which give one a peep into the homes and customs of the people among whom the missionary labors. This Series, then, cannot but be a help in keeping before the teachers and scholars the work of our Convention at home and abroad.

We recently received, in answer to our subscription, some copies of the Young People's Leader, which is a twelve-page monthly, full of instructive reading. This paper, too, must be a power for good wherever it is read.

Many of our Soochow friends are preparing to seek a little rest in the mountains of Japan and elsewhere during the hot months. We are hoping to be able to spend our vacation at home in our much loved work. The health of all three of us is fairly good now, and may the good Father continue to bless us with the same. Best wishes to all.

In Christian love,
NANNIE S. BRITTON.

Men are saner, healthier, and wiser, since they began to find God in nature and to receive the facts of nature as a Divine revelation. Bro. Wray Called to Winston.

Dear Recorder:—Broad Street church has been the recipient of a great blessing in the form of a ten days' visit from Bro. John A. Wray of Knoxville, Tenn., and we would be filled with sorrow at his departure were it not that he is soon to return to us to lead us on, as we hope, to new and greater victories for the Lord.

I do not think I have ever seen a man get so deep into the hearts of a people in so short a time as Bro. Wray has has done in this brief visit, and this applies to outsiders, members of other churches and denominations as well as to our own membership. He was with us two Sundays and the intervening week, and mingled with us as if he had charge of the flock, and it is delightful to us to believe that he left here as favorably impressed with us as we were with him. The Spirit seemed to hover about him and our people as we "communed one with another," and we have been wonderfully strengthened spiritually by his visit.

On Sunday evening after service, there was a call made for subscriptions to pay off the floating debt of Broad Street church, and the Lord so moved in the hearts of his people that more was subscribed than was asked for, and we feel that God has indeed "poured us out a blessing."

On Monday night at conference meeting, Bro. Wray was unanimously called as pastor of Broad Street church, to take effect as soon as convenient to him, and he promptly accepted the call, to go into effect Aug. 15th, and has now gone home to arrange to come to us permanently.

Bro. Wray impresses us as possessing in an unusual degree all the qualities necessary for a successful pastor and preacher. He is an eloquent and forcible speaker, and possesses that magnetism in the pulpit which causes the truths he utters to strike home to his hearers. Frank and companionable in his manners, he has the rare gift of getting close to those with whom he comes in contact, and altogether promises to be the man we need to marshall and lead to great results the working forces of our church.

Broad Street church is in better spiritual condition now than at any previous time of its history. As a people I think we have always been fairly zealous in the work, ready always to walk a little further than we could see, faith leading us; but like other churches, there have been petty differences and minor disturbances at times among us. There now prevails a unity of purpose, a fervent brotherly love, a consecration of heart, a sacrifice of individual self to the cause of Christ, such as has never moved our church before. May God bless us with his continued presence in Spirit, and guide and keep us in our new relations.

Yours in brotherly love,
J. D. H., Church Clerk.

Missionary Day in the Sunday-schools.

"When I was a child, I spake as a child, I understood as a child, I thought as child." So says the great apostle. And I imagine he could have added, "and I did what I had to do in childish ways, along the line of my childish thought."

Blessed are those, who having to deal with children, even in religious matters, recognize the child thought and deal with them along its lines. I have a little five-year old girl at home who is remarkably familiar with the stories of Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Joseph, and other Old Testament characters. She not only knows the facts of their lives, but can draw from them some of the lessons which lie hid in them. Yet she has never been held down to listening to the account of their lives as recorded in the Bible. She would go to sleep over these. They have been told to her in "story" form, as suited to the child mind and the child mind has taken them in. I should not tell them so to a man. We have missionary sermons, addresses, articles, even days for grown people, and the children are but little interested. Everything is prepared for grown people. The fodder is too high for the colts to reach. Child minds are not provided for and child interest is not sought, so the children often think missionary services very dry and dull. Why not have the missionary facts and figures, eye, and missionary motives put in form and shape that will interest the children take hold of their minds and hearts and make them helpers in the great missionary cause? Why have a missionary meeting for grown people, and none for children? The Christian world is recognizing the value of child interest and child help in the work of missions, and all denominations are providing missionary services for them. I am glad that Southern Baptists are not going to lag behind in this matter. We are going to interest, instruct, and win as helpers, our children.

Last year the Woman's Missionary Union, at the request of the Board, arranged for a "Missionary Day" which proved quite successful—so much so that the Boards have decided to repeat it this year. It has been thought best, however, that the matter should be in the hands of the Sunday-school Board, and the Home and Foreign Boards have so requested, the Woman's Missionary Union heartily concurring. The Convention endorsed the arrangement, and so the Sunday-school Board has undertaken to prepare for it.

The fifth Sunday in September has been selected as the day, and a neat and attractive program has been prepared. The program will be furnished free to all schools which will use it, and take a collection for missions. The contributions are to go to Home and Foreign Missions but it is desired that they shall all be sent to the Sunday-school Board, so that we may know just what the schools do.

If our superintendents and teachers will take hold of this matter and encourage the children, this "Missionary Day" may be made a power for good in our mission work.

For programs, cards, &c., address the Baptist Sunday-school Board, Nashville, Tenn., and they will promptly forward.

Yours truly, T. P. BELL,
Cor. Sec. S S. Board

Central Association.

This body met with the church at Hopkins' Chapel in Wake county on the 31st of July. After the sermon by Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, the Association was organized by electing Bro. N. Y. Gulley, Moderator, and Bro. J. V. Devenny, Clerk.

The attendance was unusually large, and the speeches on the various reports were of a very high order.

In all the work of the Association the deepest interest was manifest.

Dr. Taylor made a strong speech for the College. Bro. N. Y. Gulley and Dr. C. Durham discussed education by the State with great ability, and the resolutions touching this subject, published in the last week's RECORDER, were unanimously and enthusiastically adopted.

The next session of this body will be held with Mt. Vernon church. G.

Relative to Intercollegiate Sports.

WHEREAS, We, the Pilot Mountain Association, believe that the intercollegiate sport and exercise, consisting in foot-ball and base-ball, has assumed a spirit and an attitude, and is being conducted in a way that is injurious to the students financially, morally and mentally; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Faculty and Trustees of Wake Forest College use such means as may be necessary to stop inter-collegiate games, both of foot-ball and base-ball.

Resolved, That these resolutions be sent to the RECORDER for publication, and that we request all our sister Associations to act with us in this matter.

D. F. KING, Moderator.
J. T. VALENTINE, Clerk Pilot Mt'n Asso.

From Rev. G. W. Gardner, D. D.

Dear Recorder:—Through the kindness of my most excellent church of Jackson, Ga., I am permitted to spend the month of August in this State resting and getting ready for the work which lies before me in the future. I came to this city on last Wednesday, and as it was prayer-meeting night I made my way to [illegible] BAPTIST CHURCH.

Dr. Pritchard had commenced the services, and I expected to have a quiet hour, and hear a good talk from him, but no sooner was I seated than I discovered that there was nothing for me to do but to do as he said. And so I had to go to the pulpit and do the talking. There was a good attendance, and I found the occasion quite a pleasant one, and I hope that it was not without profit to me at least. Since the Doctor began his pastorate, the church has erected a beautiful Sunday school and prayer meeting room, and the additions to the church have been seventy-odd, thirty of them being by baptism. I was pleased to see that he was not neglecting the matter of discipline as the church withdrew fellowship from some that night, and the announcement was made that there were others whose cases would receive prompt attention. This is certainly the way to build up the cause in any community, and it did me good to hear Dr. Pritchard speak in such positive terms to his people about the importance of keeping the church pure.

CO-EDUCATION.

I have been wanting to shake your hand for some time for the noble stand you have been taking against this innovation over which some few seem to be going wild. I hope the day will never come when Wake Forest will open her doors to women. I am free to confess that I have very little sympathy for the male colleges of high order which have gone into the thing. One thing is certain, the young women in the South are not crowding the institutions which have invited them to come in, and I must say that I commend them for their good sense, and I hope that they will continue to stay away. I am told that there were only three women in Furman University last session, and I have it from one of the best men in the State that the Baptists of South Carolina are far from being in sympathy with the action of the Trustees in opening this school to women which was established and endowed for the higher education of young men. I hope they will express themselves in such decided terms as to cause the Board to rescind their action and restore the University to its former position.

THE B. Y. P. U. A.

Again, I wish to thank you for your stand against National and State organizations of our young people. That means that we are to have women preaching and many other things counter to the teaching of the New Testament. In the Christian Index two of our brethren, who were anxious to induce the staid old Georgia Baptists to attend in large numbers the Toronto excursion, published over their names a promise that there would be no female speakers. But the thing run away, and the Index, which was represented by the proprietor, tells us that two women occupied most prominent places and harangued the great audience.

DRS. TAYLOR AND DURHAM.

Hurrah for Dr. Durham! I hope that he will continue to give the people the facts. They need them. Dr. Taylor's article is destined to produce a revolution not only in North Carolina but in other States as well. God bless him for his noble work. Where is there a better College President in the South than he! I leave to morrow for South Carolina where I shall spend some days. If the Spirit moves me, I will send you a line from my native heath. G. W. GARDNER.

Charlotte, Aug. 2, 1894.

Dots from the Beulah.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—On Saturday before the fourth Sunday in July I began a meeting with Trinity church and continued for eight days, holding two services a day. The Lord was with us from the start, and very soon the brethren and sisters who had grown somewhat cold, became revived and co operated with me heartily in the work. Fourteen were added to the church, and on the last day of the meeting it was my pleasure to bury eight of them in baptism. Six others are to be baptized at our next regular meeting, and several others are expected to join soon. It was certainly a time of rejoicing.

The brethren and sisters of Trinity are stirring for a higher life spiritually, and I am sure that most of them—to some extent at least—attained it during the meeting. The Methodist and Presbyterian brethren joined heartily in the meeting and seemed very much revived. I was aided two or three days by Bro. J. K Forsyth, a young Presbyterian minister. He is very earnest, and I think filled with the Holy Spirit. He did us good, earnest work and endeared himself to our people very much.

My work is in a very encouraging condition. All my churches have Sunday-schools, and some of them have mission-schools at school-houses that are very promising.

I am preaching at eight different points, and while my work is right much scattered, yet it is pleasant, and I find the Caswell people extremely kind and large-hearted.

D. J. HARRIS.

Yanceyville, Aug. 1, 1894

Nine Baptised.

Dear Recorder:—On Saturday, the 4th inst., Elder Hight C. Moore closed a meeting at Oak Grove church, Union county, which was in every sense good. The congregations were large and the gospel was preached in demonstration of the Spirit and of power. Christians were revived and sinners converted.

On Friday, Elder A. B Caudle, who did most of the preaching, baptized nine, some of whom had been Methodists, "before many witnesses." These were received by letter, two others for baptism, and several more professed faith in Christ.

BROADUS, Louisville, Ky.

Thanks.

Dear Bro. Batley:—I am always very glad to have my mistakes corrected. I feel very thankful to know that I have, at least, some kind friends and brethren who are so much interested in my welfare as to so kindly correct the mistakes that I may make.

So I return many thanks to Bro. Ward for so doing.

I meant to give the readers of the RECORDER some idea of the present Baptist work in Carteret county, and in undertaking to do so, I failed to find out about Bro. Ward's work in Carteret county.

Catarrh of the Stomach.

For years I have been a great sufferer from indigestion, and tried all sorts of medicine for relief. About two years ago I had a severe attack coupled with catarrh of the stomach. I was given up to die. I bought one, and within a week I was at my office attending to my duties and rapidly improved, gained in a few months twenty-five pounds, and am in better health to day than I have been for the past twenty five years.

About two weeks ago I had a severe attack of sciatica. Could not lie down. Suffered severely. I applied the 'poise and on the following morning awoke relieved; continued treatment for a day or two and have not had one particle of pain since. I believe in it and would not for many times its cost be without it. I used it for cramp on one of my children with instant success. If people would use according to directions I believe it will do anything claimed.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

A bequest of $10,000 has recently been made to Guilford College.

Good Road Conferences are being held in various parts of the State.

The North Carolina State Fireman's Association will meet at Greensboro the 30th inst.

The Roanoke Colony Memorial Association meets in annual session at Nag's Head this week.

Charlotte, Concord, Harrisburg, Newells and other towns are being connected by telephone.

Gold finds in Stanly county are becoming frequent. The industry there has become profitable.

Prof. J. C. Robertson has been elected to the Chair of Greek in the State University, to succeed Minister Alexander.

Good reports of the crops continue to be made. In some sections they are better that they have been in the memory of old men.

The cotton mills at Pineville have been purchased by Rhode Island parties, enlarged, and will be known hereafter as the Dover Mills.

Robert Matkins, or Madkins, colored, was hanged at Burlington last week in the presence of 5,000 people. His heinous crime is yet fresh in the public mind.

The North Carolina Presbyterian, published at Wilmington has passed partly into the control of Rev. J. W. Rawlings, D. D., who will edit it after October 1st.

The citizens of Winston voted last week in favor of issuing and selling bonds to the amount of $160,000 in order to establish a complete city water works system.

The Society of Friends in North Carolina met in annual session at High Point last week. The attendance was very large. A history of the Quakers in North Carolina and elsewhere is in the course of preparation.

The twelfth annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. of this State was held at High Point last week. It resulted in the election of Mrs. M. C. Cortland of Concord as President of the organization. Mrs. C. B. Cram and M. E. Mendenhall are Secretaries.

The Alabama elections resulted in a victory for Candidate Oates of the Democratic party. His majority is about 20,000. Kolb, Populist candidate, claims fraud. The negroes voted for Oates; and it is probable that the majority of white people voted for Kolb.

The will of the late Rufus H. Tucker of Raleigh has been probated. The estate is estimated to be worth over half a million of dollars, and was willed entirely to the widow. In case of her marriage, she is to retain one half of the estate, and the other half is to be divided among the children.

Jabez Myers—a "society man"—who travels for a northern house was shot in the chin and arm the 6th inst. by Mr. Fred Oliver, President of the Charlotte Oil and Fertilizer Co. whom he had threatened to kill. Myers was laboring under the misapprehension that Oliver had spoken ill of him to a young lady.

The Democratic State Convention at Raleigh last week renominated the present officers as forecasted last week. A platform asking for free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. Cleveland was specifically endorsed. Hon. J. H. Pou of Smithfield succeeds Simmons as Chairman of the State executive committee.

The directors of the new company that will run the News and Observer hereafter are, J. N. Holding, F. B. Arendell, W. N. Jones, C. M. Busbee, N. B. Broughton, R. T. Gray and Jno. B. Kenney. Mr. W. E. Christian of New York will have the local editorial work with the assistance of Hon. F. L. Merrit. Josephus Daniels, who organized the company, will have general supervision over the policy of the paper. He will retain his position under the Government. Mr. J. C. Birdsong has been chosen foreman of the composing department. The stockholders of the paper are substantial citizens from many parts of the State.

General News.

Cholera is spreading in some of the cities of Europe.

Thirty anarchists, including four women, are on trial in France.

The Hawaiian Republic has been formally recognized by the United States.

The Williams Settle contested election case has been put off until the next session of Congress. This is outrageous.

Anarchist Mobray of England has come to this country on a lecturing tour. He is notorious for making proselytes to anarchy.

The Constitutional Convention now in session in New York State will be asked to make it expressly unconstitutional to permit any school wholly or partly under the direction or control of any religious denomination to use State property, credit or public money.

English capitalists have offered to advance the money for executing the Nicaragua Canal scheme. The amount required is $80,000,000. Our government has been strenuously urged to back the effort.

A bill has passed the House of Representatives prohibiting the emigration of anarchists to our shores, and also providing for the deportation of those already here. Germany, France and England are adopting stringent measures against this increasing class of criminals.

Late accounts of the China-Japan war are favorable to the former. England, Russia and France are interested, and one of them may be expected to assert itself at any time, There is great suffering from famine in Corea, and the United States will probably send a cargo of food to its inhabitants. There is little evidence of early cessation of hostilities.

The congressional situation has been very serious all the week. At the present writing it is announced that the House backed by Cleveland will give up the struggle, and the Senate, and the sugar and whisky trusts and the coal barons and railways will have the tariff their own way. An attempt to frustate all the tariff work of the last year was made by Senator Hill last week, and only the vote of the Vice-President saved the bill, the vote being a tie.

DIED.

WHITAKER—Died at Pilot Mountain, Surry county, N. C., July 29th, Bro. W. F. Whitaker. He was a faithful member of the Baptist church, and lived such a life that he commanded the esteem and love of all who knew him. He leaves three children and a heart-broken wife. They are objects of sympathy and prayer. May God comfort and sustain them. I. S. BOYLES.

PHILLIPS—We have felt the force of the old adage that "death loves a shining mark." All that his skillful physician, loving parents and faithful friends could do, availed nothing. Paul R. Phillips, son of R. B. Phillips, died on July 19th, 1894. Paul was a bright, intelligent boy, preparing himself for usefulness in life. We were expecting him to become a bright and shining light in our community, but alas, our hopes are blasted. He professed faith in Christ in the revival of religion at Aberdeen. His funeral was preached by W. H. H. Lawhon at Tyson's Creek to a large crowd of sympathizing friends. Weep not, dear parents, brothers and sister, Paul is not lost, but gone before. LABAN MOORE.

WHITE—Marietta Frances White, daughter of James L. and Frances C. Battle, died in Rocky Mount July 26th, 1894. Her grandfather was Rev. Jesse Powell of Halifax. She was born June 10th, 1851, and married Capt. J. J. White March 11th, 1875. At sixteen she professed religion while at school in Murfreesboro and joined the Baptist church there. She afterwards joined the Rocky Mount Baptist church, and lived a consistent Christian and an earnest, active member of the church, much beloved by every one who knew her, until she sweetly passed "over the river" to rest forever in the presence of God, leaving a sorrowing husband and mother and two devoted children to mourn her loss. The Home Circle.

Mizpah.

Yes, brief our parting words shall be,
And few our parting tears;
The Lord shall watch 'twixt me and thee,
Through all the coming years.
His eyes shall be our guiding light,
Wherever we may roam,
Like beacon-fires that burn at night,
To lure the wanderer home.

We will not fear that time or change
Our perfect trust can dim,
No shadow of a wrong estrange
The hearts that rest in him;
But should they for one hour forget,
For one faint hour be cold,
The Lord shall watch between us yet,
His love our love shall hold.

Beloved, when we reach apart
The valley lone and dread,
Which, side by side, and heart to heart,
We once had thought to tread,
His faithful rod, thy staff and mine,
Through all the ways shall be
The comfort of his grace, a sign
Still, between me and thee.

—Sabbath Recorder.

A Surprise Party.

Rosa Morris is ten years old. The family count two boys older and three girls younger. One and two and three are six.

But Mamma Morris says she isn't at all like the old woman who lived in a shoe; she has not so many children she doesn't know what to do.

And Papa Morris says if their small house seems full at night, when they are all gathered in, it is the more like the nest of birds.

Then the brood warble a gay chorus,

"Birds in their little nests agree."

Rosa, who commonly helps care for and amuse the others, had been ill in bed for a few days. How much she was missed, indoors and outdoors, cannot be told.

"What shall we do?" they kept saying to one another. "O dear, seems as though we were most all sick abed, or gone away!"

"Who will sew our kite for us?" sadly asked the boys. Mamie whined, "Somebody put on me a clean apron." Little Lucy moaned, "We's so mis'able!"

At last Flora, who is eight years old, said: "I think it our turu to do a little for poor Rosa, now that we begin to see how much she always has done for us. I am going to get some goldenrod to make her room pretty and bright."

The pleased little sisters cried, "We too!"

"I know where the blackberries are ripe," said Edgar Morris, "I'll pick a cupful for Rosa."

Roy Morris added, "I'll bring her some of the great red apples from the tree on the hill."

I assure you it was quite a surprise when the sisters and brothers, from the least to the greatest, filed into the bed-room where Rosa lay propped up by pillows, and gave their gifts.

"How very good you all are!" exclaimed the little invalid, taking the flowers and fruit. The color came to her cheeks, the light to her eyes, and she continued, "This makes me feel almost well. To-morrow I am going to be dressed."—Lovina S Goodwin, in Our Little Ones.

Successful Prohibition.

Des Moines has not suffered from prohibition. On the contrary, the city has made a greater gain in population, business and improvements of every character since prohibition was a law of the city and state than any six cities, where that law has been entirely disregarded, combined. Taxes are no higher in Des Moines under prohibition than they were under license, while the annual public improvements under prohibition have been vastly larger than under license. It is idle to talk about the "good license fee" from dealers in liquors in "Council Bluffs, Sioux City, Dubuque, and fifty other Iowa cities." There is not a town or city in Iowa that has collected $25,000 license from the saloons in any one year since prohibition was enacted. If Des Moines had licensed saloons her police would have to be doubled, all the funds received for license would be exhausted in protecting the saloons, and there would be at least as much expense in suppressing illegal sellers under license as there has been under prohibition. —Des Moines Register.

Lean and lank,
He's such a crank;
My stars! I thank
I'm not his wife;
He'd make my life
A scene of strife.

Stop, lady, stop! his liver is out of order. "He's just too nice for anything," his wife says, "when he is well." Every wife's husband should, if sick, take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts the liver and kidneys in good working order, purifies the blood, cleanses the system from all impurities, from whatever causes arising, and tones up the functions generally. Guaranteed to benefit or cure, or money paid for it refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets permanently cure constipation, sick headache, indigestion and kindred derangements.

Oh, wonderful story of deathless love!
Each child is dear to that child above;
He agons for me when I cannot fight;
He comforts me in the gloom of night;
He lifts the burden, for he is strong;
He stills the sigh, and awakens the song;
The sorrow that bowed me down he bears,
And loves and pardons because he cares.

Rules for the Office Boy.

There is a deal of sound wisdom packed into an article by Edward W. Bok treating on "The Boy in the Office" in the Ladies' Home Journal. These rules are commended to all boys:

Be the first at the office in the morning, and the last to leave at night. Don't have your hat all ready to snap up and run for the door the moment the clock points to the hour of closing. Let your employer see you at your desk when he goes. Never fear an extra half hour or hour of work.

Whatever is given you to do, no matter how trifling it may seem, do it thoroughly. Do it as if it were the only act of the whole day.

Be at your desk as much as you can; be away from it only when it is absolutely necessary.

Don't play; don't fool at the office; you are not paid for that. Don't stay out at lunch longer than is necessary.

Ask to be "off" only when necessary, when such as sickness or death, demands it.

Don't eat during business hours; have neither candy, nor apples, nor nuts in your desk.

Don't cut out pictures and decorate your desk or the wall near you with them.

Don't sulk because your mother sends you to bed early. She does it that you may be fresh in the morning, and better able to do a good day's work. You need all the sleep you can get.

Be truthful. Don't think "a little lie" won't hurt. It will, just as much as a big one. Liars, small or large, never make a success in business. Stick to the truth, even if you lose by it. You will gain by it later. Be able to look everybody straight in the face.

Keep your boy friends away from the office. They have no business there, and you have no right to have them there. Your employer pays you to receive his callers—not yours.

Be polite to everybody—to the peddler as well as to your employer's best customer. Politeness costs nothing, and is more valuable than many things that cost much.

Do your very best in everything. When you do that you do all you can, but be sure it is your very best. Then will many things come to you, and you will soon outdistance other boys who do as little as they can, or only do things in a half-hearted way. Never mind what other boys do—be you thorough in everything. If you are that you have the key to success.

Causes of the Universal Increase of Crime.

The causes at work to produce this great increase of crime are not far to seek. One of them unquestionably is the marked increase in the consumption of intoxicating liquors which is shown by the statistics of almost every nation. Tolstoi may perhaps exaggerate when he asserts that alcohol is accountable for 90 per cent. of crime, and that of women who go astray one half yield to temptation when under its influence; but the best informed criminologists ascribe to it a large share not only in stimulating to crime and in blunting the moral perceptions, but also in producing the peculiarly dangerous class of born criminals, who are hopelessly incorrigible. Marro found by investigation among convicts that 41 per cent of them were children of drunken parents, and the incalculable extent to which such hereditary criminality will infect society is amply shown in Dugdale's remarkable study of the Jukes family.

The immense development in recent times of the urban population is another fruitful source of increasing crime, for cities through their temptations and contaminating associations are hotbeds of vice. The increase of wealth among all classes is to be reckoned as another cause, for contrary to the popular opinion poverty is not an incentive to crime. Morrison tells us that every rise in the rate of wages is followed by an increase of offenders, and that the prisons are never so full as in a period of general prosperity and abundant work.—Henry Charles Lea, in the Forum.

Keeping the Baby Amused.

Perhaps the following suggestions may help you to find occupation for your busy baby boy, writes Elizabeth Robinson Scovil in the Ladies' Home Journal. A baby will be attracted for a short time by some fine toy that he can simply look at, but he will spend ten times as long in putting pegs into holes in a board contrived for the purpose, or in taking out one by one from a well-filled basket articles, no matter what—spools, blocks, clothes-pins—anything so that they are sometimes changed and he does not tire of the monotony. Then the task of putting them all back keeps him busy for a still longer time. As baby becomes more discerning and his fingers more nimble, a pleasing device for his employment is a board with variously shaped holes, round, square, triangular, etc., with blocks and spheres to fit the various places. Should these be in bright colors his love for color may also be gratified, and learning these colors soon follows. Little tasks of carrying articles from one portion of the room to another, or from room to room, will often keep a child busy and interested for hours. A small hammer and tacks, with a soft wood board into which to drive them, is generally a delight to any old enough not to put the tacks into his mouth. So simple are the employments that will satisfy the little tot that almost any mother will find them constantly suggesting themselves.

The hair, when not properly cared for, loses its lustre, becomes crisp, harsh, and dry, and falls out freely with every combing. To prevent this, the best dressing in the market is Ayer's Hair Vigor. It imparts that silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

A Definition of Common Sense.

People who value themselves on living rigorously by common sense, and people who value themselves on living superior to it, are alike apt to regard it as little more than a sort of brute instinct. Yet even in the things that engage attention more commonly, the sense is brought out, if actually begotten, only by a long course of education. Thus, before it can compass so obvious a bit of wisdom as that, one must be at the station in time if one would not miss the train, a term longer than the term of a college must be spent in fruitful study. As the study is done with none of the familiar pains of study, and in the full ardor and joy of infancy—by explorations and experiments undertaken, apparently, in the idlest of play; by questions that to the tired and confounded mother who is asked to answer them seem nothing but a wantonness—we hardly realize that it still is study, and that the fruits of it still are education. But no less is the fact; and, in a way, no man is uneducated. Our phrase, "a plain, common-sense man" carries only by convention its disparaging implication. What it rightly means is a man whose experience and observation, as far as they have gone, have educated him, have brought him wisdom.—Scribner's Magazine.

Therefore come what may, hold fast to love. Though men should rend your heart, let them not embitter or harden it. We win by tenderness, we conquer by forgiveness. —Frederick William Robinson.

DURHAM, N. C., Mar. 27, 1894.
Mr. W. J. RODDEY, Rock Hill, S. C.
Dear Sir:—When the settlement of my policy for $50,000 in the Equitable was first made, I expressed some dissatisfaction at the outcome, but since I have had more time to look into the matter, I am persuaded that I have had cheap insurance. I have always regarded the Equitable as one of the strongest insurance companies in this country, and am carrying at present a policy for $35,000 on my wife and one for $50,000 on my own life, and have had these policies in force for more than 10 years.
Yours, very truly,
J. S. CARR.

THE tariff bill cannot be described. There is something about it that reminds one of a base ball that has done service through several games—misshapen, patched, bursted (the composition hanging out), and altogether woe-begone, and useful only as a symbol—a parody of the pledge by which chiefly its makers were elected. Let it be said in passing that this condition is due to the efforts of five or six Senators of the dominant party in unison with similar efforts of the Republicans. The Democratic House passed a good bill. The Senate was not strong enough to approve it.

Sometime ago it was reported that the tariff was reduced only five per cent. by the measure. Immediately thereafter many Congressmen sent out statistical statements showing that it would effect a reduction of twenty-five per cent.; and about a month ago it was given out that an average reduction of fourteen per cent. would be secured. The probable average reduction is twenty-two per cent.

Enactment of the bill cannot but be beneficial to commerce. Another "culminating atrocity" would not be injurious to it just now. Either would restore certainty in the commercial world; and in consequence buying and selling would be stimulated. If it does nothing more, enactment of the bill will restore certainty, make room for further legislation or give the Congress excuse for adjourning in order to "assist" in elections this fall, and, what is as desirable as anything else, it will demonstrate whether the McKinley Act and the recent tariff agitation, or a depreciated currency, caused the depression, or if either had to do with it.

It was first said very extensively in the North and East and by most of the financiers everywhere, that the Sherman Act was the cause of the financial troubles. That act repealed, the North and East turned their vituperation either upon the suddenness of the change in the administration of affairs or upon the McKinley Act; the South and West adhere to their original claim that failure to coin silver at the 16-to-1 ratio, free and unlimited, is the cause. The enactment of the tariff bill leaves only one cause—the last named—uninvestigated. If commercial and financial affairs do not improve considerably in a year after the passage of the bill, it will have been demonstrated that the South and West are correct in their diagnosis, if any section is. So, after all, we can be thankful that we are somewhat nearer the solution of the problem of the times, even if we are aggrieved at the perfidy that destroyed the Wilson bill and deprived the country of an honest tariff for revenue only.

ENGLAND and Germany and Russia and France troubled with spreading anarchistic tendencies; England, Russia and France intensely interested alike in the struggle between Japan and China for the mastery of Corea; Russia troubled with the epidemic of cholera and the usual poverty-stricken condition of her peasants—all four oppressed with the expense incident to maintenance of enormous armies, and only France—by nature restless—exempt from the restlessness of a people distrustful of monarchy, longing for new things; Italy, Austria and Spain and the other little nations, altogether dependent upon what the four great governments may choose to do, all more or less in unwholesome circumstances;—these are some of the general ills of Europe. China and Japan shedding blood and destroying property and suffering all else incident to war; China, plague stricken besides; the other countries no better conditioned than usual;—this is the rest. Of South America enough is known: if there is not a revolution between its mountains and seashore, revolutions are generating in every other man's head. Meanwhile, Romanism is riding rough-shod over the entire lot of petty transient governments built upon the emotions of their subjects, all fearful of the morrow—that is enough for South America. Central America is beautiful in scenery and wholesome of atmosphere, but its inhabitants are unutterably lazy and wretchedly poor.

Looking at it this way, the lot of a citizen of the United States is not altogether intolerable, but is comparatively enviable. And a great deal depends upon one's point of view.

SEVERAL weeks ago the following statement appeared in a great paper of the North, an advocate of the gold standard, that would not for a moment tolerate the idea of an unbolstered paper currency:

"The Treasury holds to day only thirteen cents in gold for every dollar of outstanding Treasury notes and greenbacks, which are distinctly gold obligations, and if we count in the silver certificates, which the government is pledged to keep at a parity with other dollars, the gold reserve is less than eight cents to the dollar."

The paper was pleading for another issue of bonds at the time, and it made it quite plain that if it required gold or silver to maintain the purchasing power of our currency, bonds ought to be issued; but it must have overlooked the fact that the statement is sufficient proof that neither gold nor silver is needed, and, therefore, the statement is a good testimony not only against bond issues, but against the claim that the government cannot create a medium of exchange. That the silver dollar, worth intrinsically less than sixty cents (measured by gold), and the greenback worth only the promise of the government, that these active factors in our currency are sustained at their face value by eight cents in gold seems to be the best evidence we know of that either greenbacks or silver will pass in this country for whatever amount our government stamps them, whether there is any gold on this side of the Atlantic or not. If a person will rely upon the mere promise of the government to pay the remaining eighty-seven cents that a dollar greenback calls for, is it not reasonable to think that one will trust it altogether? This is what every one who accepts a greenback or a Treasury note does. There is but one conclusion: this government needs gold currency only for the payment of the international obligations of its citizens.

A NEW heresy has evolved in Wisconsin—one that promises to make matters quite as lively as any of those affairs of our Presbyterian brethren that so interested the world. Prof. Richard T. Ely, once head of the Department of Economics at Johns Hopkins University, and at present occupying a similar position in the University of Wisconsin, is on trial for heresy! Prof. Ely is one of the leading students of Sociology and Economics—in fact, he is thought by many to be the leader in this country. He is the author of more than one work relative to these subjects that has received almost universal approval; and his articles in the magazines treating current problems are scarcely less than authoritative. And yet this man—one of whose books, we have failed to say, is a standard text-book—is being tried for teaching false and socialistic principles in a State institution, and will probably be convicted upon the testimony of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Prof. Ely is accused of taking sides with labor organizations, unions, etc., encouraging their maintenance and aiding in strikes. It is said, moreover, that the Professor claims that there "is sort of moral justification for attacks upon life and property" by strikers. We believe the last accusation is hyperbolical; for while the Professor may have said that strikers had a right to resort to forceful methods where they had no possible means of resisting oppression by law, he would not make the statement a general one.

Certainly there are circumstances in which strikes are morally justifiable; and, of course, Prof. Ely should teach that there are. Certainly the employer can oppress the employed; and when one does, every good man should be taught to consider it his duty to come to the aid of the latter. It would be saner to remove the scoundrels who teach that capital can commit no crime; that the employed have no rights which the employer must respect; that capital has more right to combine than labor.

This trial of Prof. Ely is of the greatest significance; it will have decisive effect upon the economical and sociological teaching of State institutions and incidentally of many other institutions.

IT HAS been announced that the Williams-Settle contested Congressional election case from the Fifth District of this State has been continued until the next session of Congress.

The folly of this act is obvious to all who are acquainted with the facts in the case. The case has been decided against the contestor, Williams, by two impartial sets of judges; and yet it lingers before Congress as if it were not certain that Settle did receive more votes than Williams. More than this, the next session of Congress can do no more than declare that Williams was elected, and pay him and Settle regular Congressional salaries for two years, thus giving the Fifth District two Representatives, as neither of them has demonstrated capability of doing more as a Representative than drawing salary. Whatever the outcome, the government will have to pay an enormous bill for the expenses of the contest, which was an uncalled for affair from the beginning, and which ought to be charged to the account of Williams, who brought on the contest without sufficient reason.

It is reported that in explaining one of his votes, Mr. Settle said he would have lost the support in this contest of Mr. Reed and others, if he had voted otherwise. This should settle Mr. Settle, if it is true; for it is an acknowledgment that he thought more of his seat than of principles or pledges.

IN OUR issue of August 1st there was a statement as to the amount of silver dollars that had been coined lately. A contemporary seemed to distrust the statement, apparently thinking that no silver at all had been coined. In response to a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, we received the following that settles the matter:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Bureau of the Mint,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 15th, 1894.

THE BIBLICAL RECORDER, Raleigh, N. C.

Sir:—In reply to your inquiry of the 11th instant, you are informed that during the month of July, the Mints of the United States coined 423,000 silver dollars. The cost of the bullion contained in these dollars was $285,661.75, showing a gain or seigniorage, to the Government, of $137,338.25. Consequently, $285,661.75 will be held for the redemption of Treasury Notes issued in payment for the bullion, and $137,338.25 will be used in payment of the obligations of the Government, adding that amount to the circulating medium of the country.

Very respectfully,
R. E. PRESTON,
Director of the Mint.

That Christian Talent which is Seldom Developed.

BY REV. JOSEPH HIDEN.

One of the oldest thoughts that ever troubled the brain of man is the insolent question of the first of murderers, "Am I my brother's keeper?" This question has never lost its suggestive power. It appeals to day to every thoughtful Christian, though in a different spirit from that which gave it birth. While it was originally conceived and uttered to conceal fratricide, yet it is now usually prompted by a charitable spirit, and it serves to excite even higher conceptions of obligation.

With the light of nearly nineteen centuries of Christian experience, we must decide this troublesome question in the affirmative. And yet to decide just how far we should go in looking after the spiritual welfare of our brother, or to define accurately the line which separates the personal conduct of an earnest, watchful Christian from that of the meddlesome critic is not always an easy task. The conduct of the former is earnestly advocated, while that of the latter is clearly condemned. The course of the one should be cultivated as a Christian duty; the course of the other should be spurned as hypocritical. (Matt 7: 3-5)

Now in connection with such work the question is often suggested, "Are we to judge another's conduct?" And in many cases this is answered in the negative, backed by a Scripture quotation. The misinterpretation of the Scriptures upon this subject, however, too often serves to pacify the inactive for their neglect of duty in this important matter. We readily see their argument, "If we are not to exercise judgment, how are we to perform this delicate work?" True, to the average reader the Scriptures may appear to support both sides of the question. For instance, Christ in discussing the lives of the false teachers said, "Ye shall know them by their fruits." (Matt. 6: 16) Now, this statement involves judgment in two directions, namely, that upon their general conduct, and that upon the condition of their hearts: consequently, the Saviour's remark is equivalent to this exhortation: Keep your eyes open and judge every man by his course of life. On the other hand, we are told to judge not. (Matt. 7: 1) Now in reconciling these apparently antagonistic passages of Scripture (both occurring in the same chapter), let me say that Christ never intended to encourage any one to disregard all evidences of conduct or character, as some seem to imagine. He merely meant to emphasize the observance of the "Golden Rule" in our estimation of the weaknesses of others. And upon a careful examination of the text (Matt. 7: 1), you will find that the connection supports this interpretation.

In the harmonizing of this so called discrepancy, it may also be added that Christ was antagonizing two prevalent evils of society—evils which still exist, namely, uncharitable severity, and also undue laxity. These predominating evils are seldom supported by clear conceptions of right and wrong; but mostly by the mere prejudices of popular sentiment. The brilliant Frederick Robertson has well said: "One man with gifted talent, or privileged by rank, outrages all decency, the world smiles, calls it eccentricity, forgives, and is merciful and tolerant. Then some one unshielded by these advantages, endorsed neither by wealth nor birth, sins—not to one tenth part, nor one ten-thousandth part of the same extent; society is seized with a virtuous indignation, rises up in wrath, asks what is to become of the morals of the community, if these things are committed, and protects its proprieties by a rigorous exclusion of the offender, cutting off the bridge behind him against his return forever." Could we not regard this a fair commentary upon American society when we view Col. W. C. Breckenridge's reception in Lexington, Ky.? If so, are we surprised that the Great Teacher should vehemently correct both of these evils in the same discourse?

This assumed impropriety, then, of forming a fair judgment of the conduct and character of others should never mar our activity in seeking the erring, and in convincing them of the error of their way. This kind of work is very needful. We can hardly emphasize too strongly its importance. It is becoming daily a pressing duty. And yet it seems a duty which but few have learned to successfully perform. When we observe that a brother has sadly stumbled, and his church decides to appoint a committee to wait upon him, how seldom do we find any one of that committee prepared to approach the erring brother? They nearly always by some unsympathetic remark or indelicate denunciation insult him, driving him still further from his path of duty. In fact, the work of approaching a disorderly brother has become so delicate a matter that in many cases the pastor himself has to be appointed as the committee for that purpose. Why should this be? Was Paul addressing pastors when he said, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness, considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted?" No, it is very evident that Paul earnestly taught that every consecrated Christian should learn and develop the talent of approaching the erring with the sympathy of a brother. The development of this talent is not out of our reach, and its importance demands our earnest attention. If the truth could be always told, many a sensitive, stumbling brother, who, in the moment of passion, appears so indifferent to his church obligations, feels (in his sober hours) like reiterating the sentiment of that old distressed saint, "O that one might plead for a man with God, as a man pleadeth for his neighbor!"

Yes, it is time for every true Christian to regard the restoration of the erring, not as the work for a few accomplished pastors, but as the personal duty of every Christian. And as a stimulant for greater ambition, let us ever recall the timely words of James, "Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him, let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

The Mission of Christ on Earth.

A SERMON BY REV. J. C. ALDERMAN OF CONCORD.

The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10: 10.

In the first part of the verse we find stated the mission of Satan. "The thief cometh not, but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy." Such, Christ tells us, is the mission of the evil one. After telling us Satan's mission Christ goes on in the same verse to tell us his own mission. We know full well by and experience the dread mission of the evil one. Many a dark cloud has he cast over our lives. Many a sad experience has he thrown in our way. Many a bitter pang of remorse has he sunk into our hearts. Surely, then, it were good and pleasant to consider for awhile that other mission—the mission of Christ the Lord. Possibly some of us know by experience some of the facts of this mission, too—how, instead of clouds, he has brought sunshine; how out of the depths of sorrow he has shown us the dawning of hope and joy; how, instead of bitter remorse, he has given us a sweet and abiding peace that passeth knowledge.

And it is of this blessed mission of this blessed Christ that I wish now to speak. Christ's mission, then, is

I. TO GIVE LIFE—NOT TO DEPRIVE OF LIFE.

Many have the idea that Christ came to rob us of earthly joys and pleasures, and give us instead a solemn, mournful journey through some wilderness of trouble and sorrow. The young man feels that becoming a Christian means dying to all earthly joy and pleasure. If he accepts Christ then he thinks he loses all the joys afforded by this life. But listen, young man, Christ is not a robber. Says he, "I came not to destroy, but to fulfil." He came to fulfil the old law. It is equally true that he came not to destroy but to fulfil—fill out complete human happiness. Again, the psalmist in the midst of God's blessings cries out in the fulness of his joy. "No good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Hence we very greatly wrong both Christ and ourselves when we conclude that he has come to rob us. Your child lies scorching with fever; appetite is gone; food is repulsive; everything is wrong. The doctor is called in, feels his pulse, prescribes, and says "take this." But the child refuses with a rebellious stomach and tongue, deeming the doctor an enemy trying to rob him of what little satisfaction he has by administering a nauseating drug. But the child is wronging both the physician and himself. It is only life-restored power to enjoy that the physician is offering. So do you and I wrong both Christ and self when we term him robber. No, he is not a robber. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the father of lights." Not, then, as a robber has he come, but as a benefactor—a giver of life. "I came that they may have life." His mission is to give life. And he gives life in a two fold way. He gives life here and he gives life hereafter.

First, then, He gives life here. I speak now not of the eternal life, but of the true life here on earth. What, then, is this life? Is it merely following and gratifying the desires and passions of the natural man? Or is the real life here—the one that is worth living—something more than this, a little less of the animal appetites and possessions, and a little more of a sacred nearness to him in whose image we were created, a little more of the Christ like in our daily actions? Which is more truly life, following Satan and developing sin or following Christ and becoming like him? For instance, here is a man that cares nothing for God or God's law. He chooses rather to be a man of the world, and have a good time in this life. Self is enthroned as his god. Pleasure and self-gratification are his own. He starts out. Truth and virtue are turned aside as hampering him in his pursuit of pleasure. Friends are sacrificed when necessary to gratify self. Blood begins to stick to his hands. Through blood he wades to power. Still passion calls. Here a young man is murdered. There a young maiden is dishonored and ruined. Life and virtue are as dirt before him. Still he wades on in his march of sin and self-gratification. The cup sparkles. It is drained. Again and again it is drained till Reason is shaken in her throne. Yet the flame of appetite and lust consumes him. Already morality is dead—truth goes, honesty goes; character goes, friends are murdered, every virtue lies murdered at his feet, and finally in a drunken debauch his god self is murdered. Such or worse is this life if Christless and fully developed. Such may any one of us without Christ become. Again: here is a man that fears God and loves his fellowman. He has admitted Christ into his heart. He makes God's law his law. In his young and riotous days he meets Jesus and learns the dignity and worth of the true life. He does not try to become the long faced, sleepy-headed old deacon. He simply becomes a real man living the real life. By his young energy and enthusiasm he invigorates his church. He leads in every generous and noble work. Every poor woman around knows his nobleness. Every social gathering feels his elevating purity. Every business firm of honor is eager for his services. As he grows older the gathering halo deepens and broadens around him until in middle life he is esteemed of all, trusted by all, honored by all, loved by all. All feel that in his presence and under his protection life and virtue and honor and character are as safe as in the very portals of heaven. Still time wheels on. Vigorous youth is gone. Strong manhood is passing away and his locks are silvering under the weight of well-spent years. His name is a household word. His declining days are redolent of all the flowers grown by all the virtues of such a life. Soft and mellow and tinted with divine glory is the twilight that closes out the earthly as a Gladstone or Washington nears the future home of such great men. This is the other life—the Christ-life,—only not fully developed. What say you? Which is the better life? Satan came to give the first; to give the last, Christ came. Yet the great majority of people are so blinded by Satan that they seem to think that Christ came to destroy human happiness. They feel that a life without Christ is, so far as concerns this present world, better than a life with Christ. And it is just here that I desire especially to call your attention to our text—to Christ's mission. I wish to make this bold and positive statement, that even aside from the future life, Christianity is the greatest blessing in life. I speak of the genuine. And I say that Christ actually gives life here. Either he saves from actual death or from that which is in effect death. "For to be carnally minded is death." This seems to be literally true of temporal life. For the giving up of self to carnal pleasures kills—kills morality, kills mind, kills all the finer feelings and sensibilities of one's nature, and sinks into degradation and misery until often death ends the race. This is the very thing Satan came to do—to steal, to kill, to destroy. And this is what he is constantly doing. A peep into our jails, penitentiaries, slums, etc., will demonstrate this. Satan robs us of reason, of will-power, of natural tendencies, till some of our cities are living testimonies of the truth of this, "to be carnally minded is death." Left to self with no help from Christ, as many prefer to be left, one's doom is fixed, and only time is needed to show how the wages of sin shall reach the one doomed to death. Left to self and sin and Satan, virtue and honor and life become cheap—so cheap that they are ever in danger. Says some one, after seeing much of the world, "Show me ten miles square out under Christian influence where woman's virtue and manhood's life are safe, and I will

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

IF WE conduct ourselves properly, the beginning of next year will witness two great forward movements in our State, namely, the mitigation and probable removal of the liquor evil and the abolition of State aid to higher education,—which former means more manhood, more happiness, more godliness, which latter means more enlightenment, more Christianity, more Christian civilization.

WHATEVER you do, do not let antagonists lead you "off the question." Bear in mind that up to date no one has answered Dr. Taylor's article; and be sure that in this discussion you have the right to demand that its principles be answered before it is proceeded further; for Dr. Taylor discussed fundamental questions.

Ridicule and misrepresentation do not prove that State appropriations to higher education are not wrong, inexpedient, unjust and dangerous. "And How Far Should a State Undertake to Educate" proves that they are.

WE ARE much gratified by the favorable comments that our cut of the Baptist Female University has elicited. It is, indeed, a well planned enterprise; and we hope we may yet publish that picture of it as it is.

It will interest our readers to know that the building is so planned that parts of it may be erected at a time. It is by no means necessary to raise the entire amount in money before we can open the institution. It is rather purposed to open the institution on a smaller scale and build up with the years.

Let us be true "THE HEELS"—according to The Baptist—and stick to this our youngest enterprise; and, as our contemporary intimates, that's about all that is necessary.

THE continuance or the discontinuance of appropriations by the State to higher education is a matter of State policy, a matter that cannot be settled except by the State legislature elected by the votes of the people. Now if any one believes that voting is going into politics, and holds at the same time that it would be worth the while to try to discontinue these appropriations without appealing to the public to vote for men who will vote to discontinue them—thus "going into politics,"—such a one is unreasonable.

There is but one way: voting. And he who talks and doesn't work and vote will not effect anything. It is said that the Irishman is so fond of rejoicing over his good intentions and principles that he never takes time to carry them out. We would rather have the rejoicing when we see our principles incorporated in the public acts.

It is not a question of going into politics; the question is, Are you in favor of taking way State appropriations to higher education? If so, you cannot have them taken away save through the ballot. If not, you cannot have them continued save through the ballot.

IF SOME one will write a book on the ethics of public controversy we will move to have it adopted by all schools. There is, indeed, great need of more extensive knowledge of this nature.

A brother wrote us some days ago, along with a letter occasioned by a statement of ours that was inserted only as news, and with no idea of doing any one injustice, that if we desired to do justice, we would gladly publish all he had written. Now the brother should have been liberal enough to presume that we had some idea of justice and injustice as well as he; for to mark us as not desiring to do every one justice merely because we didn't publish all he wrote, would, in our opinion, hardly be fair. There are always two sides and two opinions; and in most cases each should try to respect the other. That's the manly, Christian way, at least. And here, let us say, if we would carry the spirit of Christ along with us in our efforts to correct and make other folks do justice, if we would do these things as Christ would do them, namely, for the truth's sake, there would never be an unpleasant discussion, and editors would live longer, if not so well.

To disparage the exponent of the contrary opinion betrays anger and the weakness of one's case. The opinion is the object, not its upholder; and it should not be disparaged save by argument. To appeal to prejudice is not more worthy than personal abuse.

And one who is in honest argument on principles, never allowing disparagement of persons or anything personal to draw him from the principles of the question at issue, always deserves success, and will win [illegible]

GOD'S UNSUNG HEROES.

Though their glory is seldom sung, though their exploits are as silent as their voices, there are heroes among men to-day as heroic as have lived and boasted and been sung. There are great men on whom the world has not put its paltry stamp of greatness, and there are small men who wear it well. And of all the world's heroes, of all the great men unrecognized of the world, Christian heroes—God's heroes—are most prominent.

Since Luther cried to God for faith and declared that he could follow no other course than that which he had been told lead to death and perdition, other men have stood out before a threatening antagonistic world, and through faith in God won victories for Christianity, which, if less than Luther's, were none the less heroic, none the less marked as accomplishments of great faith in God. And these heroes were unknown, though the influence of God's power through them will never cease to be recognizable.

We lose sight of the fact too often that of all men Jesus was rated among the least entitled to consideration by most of the people who saw him. Certainly not even his disciples could have anticipated the fruits of his ministry or of theirs in his name. And it is worthy of remark, too, that they talked little of what the future held for them, and less of what effect their work would have upon current thought or even of what people were then thinking of them. There is a great lesson here. To be able to do what one thinks is God's will, to do this with God's glory foremost in the mind, is the key to success. To be able to work in the present regardless of present ills, trustful that in the future, near or far, all things will have worked together for good, to be able to do this is to have acquired a most desirable Christian virtue. And to work in God's name in the face of a depreciating world is a great testimony to one's faith, is a marked attribute of the hero.

It is Amiel who says "heroism is the brilliant triumph of the soul over the flesh—that is to say, over fear: fear of poverty, of suffering, of calumny, of sickness, of isolation, and of death." Such a triumph is possible only with God's help—with faith.

When one gives up home and friends and cherished prospects to enter the mission fields, that is heroism; for it is the triumph of the soul by the help of God over all the elements just enumerated. And to us a great testimony to this heroism is that they who have been capable of it seem amazed to know that any one looks upon them as heroes. When one lays aside other hopes and prospects and takes up the burden of the cross, and in response to God's call goes here and there always full and overflowing with the message of love, there's a hero. When one puts down the flesh and takes on God in the face of sneering former associates, there's another hero.

And all of these are God's heroes. Without God and the Saviour they could not be. A man without faith will not take a step in the dark. An ungodly, faithless man will not put aside present gratification. And, moreover, the existence of these heroes and the palpable instances of their heroism is a great testimony to Christianity and the strengthening power of God through faith in Christ.

A brother remarked several days ago that God laid much stress upon patience as a virtue,—and many references were aptly quoted. Any one knows from personal experience that impatience is a good sign of unchristlikeness. To wait, to say God knows and God cares, when all the world seems to storm around you; to say "amen" to all that comes from God, and wait the breaking of the storm with never an impatient word—this is sublime heroism. To be misunderstood, misrepresented, to lose the respect of friends for Christ's sake, to endure it all in his name without repining—this is heroism endowed of God. And yet there have been such heroes, and their names were and are unknown. But God knows; and if he knows, what matters it if men do not choose to know!

God's heroes are needed everywhere and all the time. No one is out of place so long as one is doing God's will. Any one can afford to be despised or hated so long as one does God's will. One can afford to be unknown in order that some few may know God and salvation better. There is more need for the small unknown than there is for the great; there is more of Christlikeness in the unknown or hated or despised than there is in those whose names are known and praised of men.

IF THE RECORDER hasn't a representative on hand at any Association, we will be very grateful to any brethren who will speak for it and take subscriptions. Don't wait until the last day; but if our representative does not announce himself the first day, take up the work then. We shall have to rely on the help of the brethren in this matter.

MISSIONARIES NOT IN DANGER.

Of the thousands whose eyes are anxiously turned toward warring, plague-stricken, heathen, pitiable China, the solicitude of none is more reasonable than that of North Carolina Baptists. Many of us have relatives laboring there in Jesus' name, some have friends, all of us have beloved brethren and sisters, and all have interests and hopes. Surely many prayers should go up from us daily for China and our brethren and sisters who are trying to bring it to God, lifting it out of the filth that makes plagues, and the moral degradation that breeds war.

It is a pleasure to us, however, to assure our readers that foreigners in China are not in any more danger than usual. Mobs occasionally attack foreigners, but the officers of the law do all they can to prevent them. There is no reason for uneasiness on account of the war. Korea, for which it is being fought, is far away from the scene of our missionaries' labors; the soldiers have to go to it—that is away from our missionaries—in order to fight. Of course the government is not as firm as to internal affairs as usual, having to pay so much attention to Korea; but it will very probably take care not to offend citizens of great nations, as it is trying to have as few enemies as possible just now. What is true of China in this respect is true of Japan: either government will take pains to keep on friendly terms with us.

It is said that there is no danger to Caucasians from the plague. It attacks only the lower classes of the Chinese, who live in most unhealthy conditions. This plague—"black death"—has been in China fifteen years, one report says.

Only last week the United States Senate ratified a very fortunate treaty with China. Heretofore we have never been able to exclude that nation's subjects without making it angry; but the present treaty pleases China, and at the same time accomplishes our purposes.

Its provisions may be briefly stated: No Chinese laborers are to emigrate to this country in ten years; and after that time the United States has power to make further provisions. And no Chinese can be naturalized. On the other hand no laborers of the United States can emigrate to China—missionaries are not laborers in this sense of the word; and all citizens of the United States who are in China or who go there must be registered, as the Chinese in the United States are registered.

This law is very satisfactory. China likes it and we like it. It saves us from China and permits us to carry salvation to China. Surely it is time we were sending more salvation guides to her despairing millions.

INFUSE all the life you can into your Association: by your prayers,—pray for it all the year,—by your presence—be there at the beginning and stay till the end,—by your knowledge—let the brethren know what you think,—by your study—be sure you have been thinking well,—by your interest—let no part of the Lord's work be neglected by you. The editor wishes he might go to all the Associations again and shake the hands of the brethren and sisters and take part with them; but next to attending them is hearing that they are being largely attended and are full of the Spirit. When we meet together to make the year's reckoning at Charlotte this winter we hope there will be such reports of progress and such evidences of God's blessings upon the labors of his servants as have seldom been witnessed.

IT IS high time that those parents who have boys and girls to be educated were about it. The first of September we hope to be able to say that more boys and girls are on their way to school than ever before. Education is an essential to progress. And if Christianity stands for anything it stands for education—enlightenment.

We have nothing but pity for those parents who cannot send their children to school or those who have no schools within reach. It is a hope of ours that in a not distant day every boy and girl of school age in North Carolina will spend most of the year in schools. That means that the work of some parents must bring more money; that either the State or private enterprise or philanthropy must establish many more schools, must devote a great deal more money to their maintenance. Such a consummation would quickly rear such a race of men within our borders as would incite the admiration of all our neighbors; and it is not impossible.

We hope to be able to say that the enrolments in all our higher schools are larger than ever. If every boy and girl in the State cannot get higher education, it is our duty to bring it within reach of as many as possible. And here we are particularly concerned with our own Wake Forest. Every Baptist father in the South should strive to give his son an education; and should strive to give it him through Wake Forest. Every Baptist in the State can do the denomination and the cause of Christ a service by seeking to turn students to Wake Forest. We do not say this particularly because Wake Forest is a Baptist institution, but because we know it is the best institution in the State for Baptists, and because it is not excelled in the State by any institution of general learning.

THE preachers of the gospel are the conservators and preservers of the State. They are by far the strongest factor in the State's uplifting. Every phase of gospel promulgation bears its part. Men may philosophize, and men may legislate, but—the heart remaining unregenerate and carnal—all to no effect. Make men Christ-like in the inner man, and the problems are solved; the wilderness blossoms as the rose.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

That sounds very well. But, brother, it will be altogether vain to go to preaching the gospel to a whiskey legislature after it is elected. Preach to voters now; tell them what the attitude of the Christian man on specific questions is (as you see it); and then tell them, not to vote for a man with the intention of converting him after election, but to vote for a man who don't need conversion.

....We were glad to have visits last week from Prof. Crocker of Wake Forest, who was returning to Smithfield to resume his work in the Institute, Bro. W. J. Wyatt of Durham, and Bro. S. C. Edwards of Hunt's, Nash county.

....It is still necessary to emphasize occasionally our rule that anonymous communications, however meritorious, cannot be published. Send your name, brother, not for publication, but because it is always best so to do.

....Rev. J. A. Stradley held a good meeting with his church, Amis' Chapel, recently, says the Silver Dollar. Bro. Stradley has been pastor there nearly thirty years. He was assisted by Revs. John Downey and J. H. Gordon.

....Rev. T. S. Wright, missionary of the Pee Dee Association, is being blessed in his labors. Forty or fifty converts have lately been baptized, resulting from meetings held by him, says the Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer.

....Don't let Home or Foreign or State Missions slip your mind. There's a great deal else to take your attention, but there's nothing more important. We are not keeping up our Home and Foreign contributions as we might.

... We are informed that brethren L. B. Pierce, Superintendent, and W. C. McNeil, Secretary, are conducting a successful Sunday-school at Pleasant Home church, near Miller's Creek. It has seventy-four scholars, who attend well.

....Bro. C. E. W. Dobbs starts off well with the Indiana Baptist. He is a bright and able writer. The confident way he handles his exchanges will get him into a dispute in two weeks if he don't hold his tiller mighty hard.

....Rev. Rufus Weaver is being blessed in his labors with our High Point church. Last Sunday five converts were baptized, and progress is being made all along the line. This church has decided to remain in the Liberty Association.

....Rev. C. A. G. Thomas preached his second annual sermon at Greensboro last Sunday. In the past year there have been sixteen additions to his church by baptism. Bro. Thomas preached more than two hundred sermons in the time.

....The corner-stone of the High School building at Winton, so Rev. C. B. Williams, the Principal, informs us, will be laid with appropriate ceremonies Aug. 29th. Rev. J. Paul Spence, who is supplying at Elizabeth City, will deliver the address.

....Keep our offer of the RECORDER from August 15th till the new year for fifty cents, in mind. Information must be spread. A little work now will tell mightily before the year is out. Send the name now and the money later, if you see proper.

....It is gratifying to announce that Miss Carrie L. McLean, a graduate of our Chowan Baptist Female Institute, has secured a position in the Charlotte Graded Schools in a competitive examination with fourteen applicants from other institutions.

....Rev. Walter M. Gilmore is back from the Seminary, visiting his parents near Sanford. We are glad to know that Bro. Gilmore intends to locate in our State; and if he has not been secured, we hope some church will be directed of providence to secure him.

....Bro. J. B. Strain reports that Revs. Coppedge and Chappell had one of the best meetings he ever attended at Pleasant Grove, Wake county, last week. There were more than fifteen professions; seven have united with the church, and others will follow.

....Rev. J. B. Newton has resigned his work at Fork church, this county, and will shortly return to his home in Bertie county, where he will take charge of other pastoral work. Mr. Newton has made friends in Davie who will regret to see him leave.—Davie Times.

....Dr. W. H. Edwards of Wake Forest made us a pleasant visit last week. He reported having held a good meeting at Merry Oaks recently in which there were nine professions, and the church was greatly revived. Bro. Edwards is at Mt. Gilead in a meeting this week.

....Rev. Jasper Howell, Jr., informs us that in the year that he served the Jonesboro, Tenn., church, there were thirty eight additions, and $1,500 was given to all purposes. Present membership 190. Brother Howell returns to Wake Forest this September to complete his course.

....Rev. S. F. Bristow of Coleraine writes that he has resigned the care of our church at Bethany to take effect at the end of the year. He has been asked to reconsider his resignation, but has not decided upon his course. He has been serving this church about four years and speaks in good terms of it.

....Rev. M. A. Adams has baptized five converts at Reidsville recently. At present there are eleven awaiting the ordinance, six of them having made professions at one of the missions. There is every evidence of the presence of the Spirit in Bro. Adams' ministry. Since he came to Reidsville the church has paid the last of its debt; the congregations are from four to six hundred and all the work hopeful. Bro. Adams is aiding Rev. J. B. Richardson in a meeting at Meadow Branch this week.

....Rev. L. W. Overby of Macon closed a meeting the 19th at Sandy Level, in which there were fifteen converts, ten of whom have been baptized. They hope to build a new house of worship at this point this fall.

....Bro. A. M. Yates, who graduated at Wake Forest in 1893, has taken charge of the Academy at Winton, which opens Sept. 3rd. We cheerfully commend Bro. Yates to the good people of that section and hope he will have a good school.

....Rev. B. H. Matthews, lately returned from Crozer Theological Seminary, where he took an extended course, has returned to us and accepted a call to the church at Plymouth. We extend Bro. Matthews a cordial welcome back to North Carolina, and hope to hear from him.

....Make yourself felt. Don't support things because other men do. It's not whether other people are being represented, but whether you yourself are. Make it very perceptible that the man that stands for you shall stand for Christian and popular education and for removal of the whiskey traffic.

....That sturdy old soldier of the Cross, Bro. T. Bright of Forest City, closed a meeting at Waco Baptist church the 15th inst., in which there were forty five accessions to our church, thirty-three of whom were by baptism. Bro. Bright is now in an interesting meeting at New Hope church at Earl Station.

....The excellent sermon that begins on our first page was prepared by Bro. J. O. Alderman of Concord to be preached as the introductory sermon at the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus Association last year, which he was unavoidably prevented from attending. It contains meat for old and young. Read it.

....Rev. Jno. T. Albritton, who, by the way, is telling some interesting tales on his defenceless brethren in the RECORDER these days, and Rev. A. A. Butler, held a meeting at Piny Grove church, Sampson county, the 4th to 11th inclusive, that resulted in four additions by baptism and six or eight by letter.

....Rev. J. F. Love of Suffolk, Virginia, known and loved by hundreds of North Carolinians, and Miss Carrie Gregory of Oxford, were married at the home of the bride's father at Oxford, N. C., the 14th inst., Dr. C. E Taylor officiating. They are on a trip to New Hampshire. Our best wishes follow them.

....Rev. R. B. Collier of Baltimore, on his vacation, has been preaching at Cobham church, Northern Neck, Va., where there were twenty-four professions; also in Richmond county, Va., he held another meeting which resulted in more than twenty accessions. Bro. Collier is on his way to North Carolina.

....A meeting at the new church near Parrott's School House, that was built by our Kinston church, resulted in twelve accessions to the church. The edifice was dedicated the 12th inst. by Revs. A. L. Stough and J. W. Rose. This mission station has been the means of adding thirty members to the Kinston church.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard of East Durham has returned from his recent trip to Kentucky, which he enjoyed greatly. While in Kentucky he aided in a meeting in a church of which Bro. C. J. Thompson, now of Lynchburg, has had care, that resulted in eighteen accessions. Brother Blanchard is thinking of attending the Seminary.

....A brother, who has on hand forty-five dollars for the Gospel Mission, wishes to know who is their Treasurer. We cannot inform him; but think money is usually forwarded by Bro. J. T. Bostick of Asheville or Rev. T. W. Patton of Morganton. We hope some one will inform us if we are mistaken, as the inquiry has been made more than once.

....Bro. M. L. Kesler of Red Springs made us a hurried visit last week. He came to Raleigh very unexpectedly, being called on to conduct the well-known music teacher, Prof. Wood, who had suddenly become insane, to the North Carolina Hospital near this city. Prof. Wood's acquaintances all over the State will grieve to hear of this sad calamity, and many will be the prayers for his restoration and the consolation of his family.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter informs us that he expects the Raleigh West End Mission will become an independent church the first Sunday in September. The progress that has been made in this field is very gratifying. Beginning as a little Sunday school point, it has received the Lord's favor, and stands now as an arm of the First church of Raleigh, with power to receive members and administer the ordinances. It is a promising work, and bids fair to become stronger.

....Rev. W. B. Waff, one of the East's ardent laborers, has just passed through two good meetings—one at Cool Spring and one at Middle Swamp. Zealous Brother C. W. Scarboro of Murfreesboro did the preaching at Cool Spring, where there were twenty additions by baptism, four by restoration, and more are to follow at next services. Pious Bro. Josiah Elliott helped at Middle Swamp, where thirteen were added by baptism and one restored. "Both churches," writes Bro. Waff, "seemed to be revived and helped spiritually. The Lord be praised for his goodness."

....Flat River Association met last week with Creek church, Granville county. It was largely attended. Rev. O. L. Stringfield preached the introductory sermon. Deacon Parham presided, says Charity and Children, and the clerk and treasurer were re-elected. Brethren Durham, Taylor, Marsh, Stradley, Stringfield, VanDeventer, Mitchell, and others, spoke on the usual subjects. The Association meets with Concord, near Creedmore, next year. We hope to have full reports of the Yadkin and Flat River Associations by Bro. Stringfield and our travelling agent in our next issue.

....We are grieved to learn that the beloved wife of our missionary to Lagos, West Africa, Rev. C. C. Newton, has died after months of ill health. Sister Newton lived well for the Lord, and was an active helper in the work until her health failed. She leaves four children, a daughter being a missionary with her father, and three sons, one of them the pastor at Clayton. The family have our heartfelt sympathy in their affliction. We are also informed, to our great grief, that Bro. C. C. Newton was ill at the time of his wife's death. Let us pray God to restore Bro. Newton and comfort the family.

....The following letter from good Bro. J. R. Pace of Whitaker's, N. C., is encouraging: "As I believe it is the duty of each pastor to report his work to the RECORDER, in order that the people of North Carolina may know what the Baptists are doing, I will inform you that the first Sunday in this month I commenced a meeting at Fishing Creek, which continued eight days. It was one of the most delightful meetings the writer ever conducted. The Spirit was with us in great power. The last day I baptized ten converts with Christ in baptism, one being prevented by sickness. Others were almost persuaded." Bro. R. E. Peele is with Bro. Pace at Gethsemane this week.

....We are very glad to print the following from Sister Fannie Knight, written from Pingtu, North China, July 5th: "I am still here in Pingtu doing what my hands find to do. It is very warm and damp now. Only Mrs. Bostick, Mrs. Sears, myself and the little Bosticks and little George Sears are at home. We are all well. Eleven persons were baptized and received into fellowship with the Saling church on the 6th of June. I was one of the happy witnesses. There are others who are ready for church membership, I think, and I should be so glad to see them "buried with Christ in baptism" before I go to another field. God has been with me and blessed me here, and I believe he is going with me farther into the interior."

The Female University.

The BIBLICAL RECORDER printed last week a beautiful picture of the North Carolina Baptist Female College as it will be. It is yet on paper, but the Tar-heels know how to stick at a thing, and will doubtless make it a reality. If so, they will have reason to be proud of their college.—Baltimore Baptist.

The new Baptist Female University to be built at Raleigh will be a grand building when completed. The picture in the last Raleigh BIBLICAL RECORDER represents a massive, elegant structure in its design. It will be a very decided ornament to the little capital city, and we trust will prove a blessing to North Carolina through centuries to come.—Wilmington Messenger.

That's a handsome picture in the BIBLICAL RECORDER of the new Baptist Female University as it will appear when finished. It will be a large institution and is quite modern in appearance. May it soon be completed.—W. N. C. Baptist.

"Establishes Every Proposition."

DR. C. DURHAM. My Dear Doctor:—I am much obliged to you for a copy of Dr. Taylor's pamphlet entitled "How far Should a State Undertake to Educate?" I have long held opinions similar to those expressed by Dr. Taylor, but I have held them in a confused and ignorant way, because I had not investigated the matter. I am under great obligation to Dr. Taylor for the vast amount of research and knowledge which he brings to bear upon the subject. He exhausts the whole matter, and in my opinion, conclusively establishes ever proposition he lays down. It appears to me that every candid and thoughtful man who carefully reads Dr. Taylor's pamphlet must come to the conclusion:—

1. That under our constitution and form of government, the education paid for by the State must be absolutely void of religious instruction, even to the exclusion of the reading of the Bible in the schools.

2. That unless infidelity and atheism are to dominate all higher education given to our people, the denominational colleges must be maintained and sustained.

3. That in order that the denominational colleges may be maintained it is absolutely necessary that any money given by the State for higher education must be used for matters and things that cannot and will not come in competition with any works that can, and ought to be done by the denominational colleges; and that if institutions that receive State aid do any work that comes in competition with work of the denominational colleges, as to this work, these State-favored institutions must stand on an exact equality with the denominational colleges; that is, for this work they shall have no State aid.

Nothing is more remarkable about Dr. Taylor's pamphlet than the fair, judicial temper in which it is conceived and expressed. It is in every respect an admirable paper, and well worthy of the thoughtful consideration of every citizen.

I am, with much respect, yours very truly, R. F. ARMFIELD.

How North Carolina Stands!

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1, 1894, to August 15, 1894, for $2,625. In that time we have received $543.60; Western Convention $116.05.

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gathering when I come."—1 Cor. 16: 2.

The work is the Lord's and we are his.

Fraternally, R. J. WILLINGHAM,
Corresponding Secretary.

Death of Sister E. F. Woodard.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fisk Woodard died Aug. 3d, 1894.

She was baptized into the fellowship of the Edenton Baptist church by Rev. Joseph Carter. For more than thirty years she was a consistent, active member of that church. For quite a while she had been in declining health, still, her cheerful nature and pure soul crowned her life with beautiful resignation to God's will. Though she was a woman of great energy, and found it trying to be afflicted, no one heard her complain or repine. I knew her not only intimately as a parent, but as a pastor's friend, and can say that the pastor has lost a friend in the truest sense. The church has lost a most valued member, one who was interested in whatever concerned its welfare.

Those who knew her loved her for her conscientiousness. Surely the Master's words apply to her: "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

They loved her for her gentle nature, mellowed and beautified by the grace of her Lord.

Her neighbourly kindness entered homes with a refinement that added appreciation to the courtesy. There is no one to fill the vacant place, and the sorrowing ones turn to the "Comforter."

May the God of grace be with each one, and help them to follow her as she followed Jesus. V. D.

To the Churches of the Eastern Association.

Dear Brethren:—We wish to make an appeal in favor of the brethren who are working under the direction of the Executive Committee of the Eastern Association in the destitute sections of our territory:

Bro. M. C. Walton is serving the churches at Jacksonville, Rose Hill, Catharine Lake, and Richlands. All are pleased with him, and everybody says, "He is the right man in the right place."

Brethren Bilbro, Swaim, and Vanhoy are doing their entire duty in the churches assigned to them.

These are all performing their part of the contract faithfully, but we are failing to do ours, simply for want of means.

Dear brethren, will you not help us, and help at once? It is only about six weeks till our Association. We would be delighted to meet you without indebtedness.

Will you not, dear pastors, take liberal collections at your churches at as early a day as possible for this work, and forward the same to Bro. F. A. Fennell, Harrell's Store, N. C.? May the Lord help you do it, and thereby relieve the wants of the laborer and your Executive Committee of present embarrassment.

L. R. CARROLL, Chairman.

A Word from Bro. J. Q. Adams.

Dear Recorder:—In your paper of the 8th inst., under the head of "Personals and Other Items," appears the following: "A Professor Cook of South Carolina is sending a circular about trying to get appointments to lecture in our churches. He lectures in the interest of the Gospel Mission."

Let me say that he is the honored Professor of Greek in Furman University, Greenville, S. C., and Superintendent of the Sunday-school and senior Deacon of the Pendleton Street Baptist church of the same city. Besides this, I know him to be a high-toned Christian gentleman and a brother beloved in his own State. He has recently made a visit to North Carolina seeking to raise a support for Miss Knight and Bro. King of the Gospel Mission. J. Q. ADAMS.
Wadesboro, N. C.

Meeting at Clayton.

Dear Recorder:—Again I come to tell you of fresh blessings which God in his love and mercy has bestowed upon us. Our meeting of two weeks closed last Sunday night to the regret of every one; for there were a number of penitents still at the anxious seat and the large crowds which came to every meeting were deeply impressed. Sunday afternoon our pastor, Bro. W. C. Newton, baptized seventeen as a result of the meeting.

Bro. J. D. Newton assisted our pastor during the first week and his earnest, efficient and effectual preaching won many to the truth. And our faithful young pastor with his tender winning way got right at the hearts of all his hearers. From the first we have loved him and his preaching, but during this meeting he has been revealed to us in a new light. He is young in years but old enough in grace, spirituality and consecration to lead us upward and onward in the path of righteousness.

We were without a pastor about a year and there were times when we felt despondent and scattered almost as sheep having no sheperd. And it has been due mainly to the efforts of our dear Bro. J. B. Roberton, our archdeacon, and some other faithful few that we were left together till God through their instrumentality sent us our present well beloved pastor. And now our church is in a better condition than it has ever been. No debts, no strifes, large attendence, earnest listeners, and a powerful preacher.

But in this life joy and sorrow go hand in hand. Our Father means it so that our hearts may be constantly lifted upward. We have just heard of the death of our dear pastor's mother. A telegram brings the sad news that, in far away Africa amid the sultry scenes where she has so long labored as a missionary, she breathed her last. O how our hearts grieve for our brother in this, the saddest sorrow he has ever known. Wherever he is he has our love, our sympathy, and our prayers. May our dear heavenly Father give him grace to bear this bitter affliction, and may the Christian's hope gleaming in his troubled breast point to a joyous reunion in a better and brighter home one the eternal shore. All the bereaved family have our tenderest sympathy and we assure them their sorrow is ours. May God help us to bear life's bitter partings, looking to the time when we meet to part no more. H.
Clayton, August 16, 1894.

True and Timely.

"Large delegations and enthusiastic meetings," is the heading of The Inland Illustrated Christian Endeavor Monthly," beginning its report of the Cleveland convention. Then follows a statement, "In spite of the strike there were about forty thousand registered delegates." Taking this convention and the Toronto convention of about six thousand attendants, we have probably forty-five thousand who attended, at say, an average cost of the low figure of twenty dollars, and we have an expenditure of money on railroads, hotels, boarding houses, etc., footing up nine hundred thousand dollars. We doubt not but the cost was one million dollars. This is indeed a large sum to pay for large delegations and enthusiastic meetings. The Toronto convention cost more than all Southern Baptist churches paid the last convention year for missions.—Christian Index.

give up Christianity." Sin kills. Look at that black cap pulled tight over the face, that rope knotted for the drop, those trembling limbs that once ran to a mother's call, and carried joy and sunshine into a father's heart. What means it? The trap is sprung. You shut your eyes to shut out the spectacle, but the fellow has paid the penalty of a violated law, and thereby murdered the hopes and hearts of a father and mother. Into the eternity is he gone. Whence, think you, found he his way thither—from God's house and service, or from Satan's workshops? Had Christ been admitted into that heart, and moulded that life, such a sad tragedy would not have been played there upon the gallows. And from just such a tragedy has Christ saved you and me.

Again. Following the carnal appetites a poor innocent woman becomes enslaved to opium. In her slavery she feels that it is killing her, yet she can't give it up. She feels that giving it up is giving up life. She must have it. Even the poor, starving infant at her bosom, with all its claims upon her care and protection and love, is left to starve that the few pennies may go to buy opium to satisfy her enslaving appetite. Even the pitiful cries of her own helpless infant fail to save her, while yet she knows and feels that her course is bringing her destruction. So Satan has drugged man with sin till he feels that he cannot give it up—that giving it up is giving up life. And Satan knows and we know that this same drug sin is killing us. This is the disease, namely, sin. This is the thing that Christ, the Great Physician, desires us to give up. It is not the pleasures, but the sins of the world that he disallows. Yet, like the opium slave, many find it hard to give up sin, thinking that so doing is giving up pleasure; that outside of sin there is no pleasures. The prescription they find hard to take. Yet Christ desires for us only life, —only restored power to enjoy—to enjoy even the pleasures of this life, just as a sick child, after recovering, enjoys more really and thoroughly his wonted food and play. It is not that bitterness may be in the mouth that he prescribes, but that sin and death may be destroyed from the system. "I came that they may have life."

Often did the tired feet of Jesus bear him on the blessed mission of giving life. Often did the sweet tones fall from his lips calling back from the very gates of death the departing spirit. So all down the ages, even until now, Jesus has been on his mission giving life. Years ago he went to the isles of the sea, and his voice was heard. Mothers accustomed to seeing their children roasted and eaten by her fellowman saw the miracle in which Christ spoke with power, and gave to the mother on her bosom her child no more to become the fatted calf of his brother. Look again there in the far isles and see that poor widow worshipping her Saviour. Ah, what wonder her heart is in the service! A few years ago and she would have been burned upon the funeral pyre of her husband. But Christ came and spoke, and she lives. Ah, poor heart, what chord would not respond to the call of him that gave her life! Thus has Christ for the last eighteen hundred years been going on his mission giving hope, giving inspiration, giving release from slavery, giving the power to become noble, giving restored power to enjoy life, giving actual release from death. He comes to the civilized Greek and raises woman from her degraded position as a mental slave and gives her a life of usefulness and honor. He comes to the civilized Roman and rescues the child from that cruel law that gave the father authority to slay his child if he desired to do so. He comes to the hoary Hindoo and gives him, instead of his effete death-dealing religion, his own life-giving gospel. He comes to the savage African and gives him an insight into a better, a nobler life, and lifts him from his vile superstition and crime into the light and liberty of the glorious gospel of God. Now he comes to India and rescues from cruel torture the innocent girl-widow superstitiously given over to torture as the cause of the natural death of her boy husband. Now he knocks at the door of the man-eater and bids him go bury those human bones from which he has just eaten the flesh, and rise to another life, and he obeys. Now he comes and scatters the hot embers from around the stake and bids it consume no more, and the fire grows cold. Now he greets the new-born America and bids her cease persecuting her servants, and behold the dawning of a new and glorious day. Now he knocks at the great empire of China and bids her awake, and she, great snail that she is, is slowly awaking. Lately his voice has been heard in Cuba, and almost a second pentecost has resulted. Such has been, and is, Christ's mission, giving wherever he goes a better, a fuller, a nobler life, even here in this present world.

This is a great and glorious thing that Christ does for us, viz.: this giving us temporal improvement and life—this making life here worth living. But a much greater and more glorious thing he does for us, namely,

Second, He gives us life hereafter—eternal life. This also Satan came to destroy. This is Satan's special work. Satan persuades people that this life is all, and that they must get the most possible out of it. Let us then address ourselves to this phase of the subject. Is there any other life? Are we not already possessed of life? Are we dead? These are important questions, for many be dead who yet think they are alive, and many do not sufficiently realize that life is something that reaches into eternity. What, then, is life? Is it mere physical feeling and motion? The worm under our feet feels and moves. There is sensibility. There is motion. You say he is alive. A step, and my foot crushes and destroys the worm. Was that life? Was that the end of the something that came into existence when "man became a living soul?" The stopping image—the wheels of life stop—the great beating pendulum of the heart is still. You call that death. Is that the end of life? You sit beside that little bed and watch those bright eyes grow dim. Often they have been your delight. But they grow dim and yet more dim. You protect as best you can the flickering light till, despite all your hopes and care, you see a mere breath dash it out, and before you, or on your bosom, is a cold, lifeless form. O mother, is that the end of that life? That light that so often shone through those eyes and blessed your heart, is it ended? or did the angels catch up the little life and bear it away to await the hour when it shall again smile upon you? "I came that they may have life." "I am the resurrection and the life." Such is the bright, beautiful teaching of him whom we call Lord. Death is not all darkness. It is the key to a glorious and eternal brightness.

There is, however, a death full of darkness. This death Satan is trying to make ours. Through our own possessions he is trying to work upon us this death. "For the wages of sin is death." But let us hear the rest of the verse. "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Ah, blessed truth. Death may be robbed of its sting and become the very means of bringing life and light. Let the passage here be ever so dark and threatening, let the clouds and thunders and lightnings play alarmingly close, let old Satan himself churn the very waters that bear our bark, if Christ has come into our boat, and holds the tiller, we shall ride into a peaceful harbor and live in that glorious eternity. Whatever, then, be the seeming, Christ came a benefactor, a giver of life and life eternal. Ah, brother, as you laid away your dear child in that narrow cell, that grave seemed dark and drear, but if Jesus stood by the side of it, it was but the door into a bright and glorious eternity. Such is Christ's mission. Such is life.

But we have yet another question. You admit the eternal life, and do it gladly. "But how shall I secure this great blessing?" you ask. This is a part of Christ's mission. Says he, "I am the way, the truth and the life." Again he says, "Follow me." In him is burned out all the base, developed all the divine. Following him we rise above the weak and groveling appetites, direct and control the natural desires, and especially follow and develop the divine impulses, thus becoming good, noble, God like. He is our elder brother, our leader, our guide. If we follow in his footsteps and develop his character by being with him, we shall live. This character, viz., goodness, nobleness, God likeness, is life. Living with Christ makes us like Christ. Being like Christ makes us "heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ." And if heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, then we obtain eternal life.

But Christ's mission is not only to give life. Says he, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." Hence, Christ's mission is

II. THAT THEY MIGHT HAVE ABUNDANT LIFE.

He is not content with merely saving us. He wishes us to abound. He is not the one to lift us from death in the miry pit and then leave us in our weakness and filth to save ourselves; but he sets us upon the firm rock, helps to renew our strength, gives us clean garments, and helps us from day to day to become more and more like the great God in whose image we were made. His mission is not only to give life, but to give it abundantly, more and more, until he perfects it and makes it shine forth in all its beauty. And this also he does even in this present world. Possibly the sinner still in the pit may not see the beauty, the perfectness, the great superiority of the life that Christ gives; but to the good, to angels, and to God the transfiguration is intensely glorious. And like a beautiful sunset which grows upon one in beauty and interest, this new life, to one observing it, grows more beautiful, more interesting, more absorbing, the longer and more closely it is observed. And even the poor sinner pays tribute to this full life that comes from association with Christ. Not long since, in our own land of America, there died a man of the world leaving his millions of wealth. A magnificent funeral was given him. All the papers noticed his death. Yet none of them seemed to lament it. None of them were wet with tears. None of them recorded his as the death of an heroic benefactor leaving friendless many poor souls. On the other side of the waters died a poor woman, leaving none of the wealth. A magnificent funeral she had, too, though of a far different character. As the corpse lay in state, the poor of London crowded around to catch one last glimpse of those pale features so familiar to them. Many were the tears that fell there, the silent testimonies of the deep place she bore in their hearts. London bowed in reverence to the last remains of one who had so nobly consecrated her all. All tongues and eyes testified to the nobility of the dead heroine. Christ had lifted Florence Nightingale from death to life, and called her to follow him in his mission of helping the poor. She followed him, and now she lives in blessed memory in the hearts of London's poor. So Christ bids us follow him from high to higher, from life to greater life. Turning us back from death he beckons us on to life, ever climbing higher, ever growing better, ever adding grace unto grace till by and by when the summer is ended and the weight of years shall bow our gray locks towards the grave, these same gray locks shall be the insignia of our honor, of our nobility, of our benevolence, of deep-seated respect and love for us in the hearts of those around us. Could we but have our last days embalmed in the blessed glory that enshrouded Abraham and Moses and David and John on the isle, what would we not give! And it is Christ's mission to give us such full and perfect life. Even when some poor soul is so immersed in poverty that only dark clouds surround her chamber, Christ drives a rift in the clouds and penetrates that dark home with a joyous ray of light, and lightens the burdens by lending a loving, supporting arm, on which to lean. And through Christ the slovenly shrew becomes a light shining in darkness unto many around her. Thus Christ gives life, and gives it abundantly, making wholesome the few and making fruitful the desert.

But there is yet a thought more blessed than these. In the hereafter Christ gives more abundant life. When we shall enter that other world it will not be merely passive freedom from pain and death. It will be life, active life, abundant life, filled with fervent interest, with burning joy, with deep rooted love. Nor shall the tramping ages dull our interest and pleasure. But Christ will continue to unfold to us the ever deepening and broadening glories of himself and the home that he has gone to prepare for us. Before interest shall dull in one thing another new wonder shall break upon us. Hither and thither among the countless wonders of God's universe, deeper and deeper into the mysteries of self and God, higher and higher in the approach towards Jesus our Saviour, fuller and fuller of love and joy, till, time having ceased to be, we shall in that eternity of development realize the fullness of Christ's mission—that of giving life, and giving it abundantly. Oh, that he may give us such life, and the zeal and energy to follow it to its great consummation.

Commended.

I was very glad to see your words in regard to publishing programs and proceedings of Union Meetings. They are mainly of local interest and should not crowd out matters of greater and general interest.

I wish to endorse Bro. Thomas in regard to the Board's going in debt. I think the country should come to a cash basis in every department of life as soon as possible.

A Gentleman

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that it is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarcon, Bastrop, Tex.

REV. SAM P. JONES,

THE GREAT EVANGELIST

Tells How Germetuer Has Blessed His Home.

"My wife, who was an invalid from nervous sick headache, has been entirely cured by Royal Germetuer. I wish every poor suffering wife had access to that medicine. Two of my children were cured of nasal catarrh by it. It is truly

A GREAT REMEDY."

It is said that proprietary medicines are usually endorsed only by the lower and most ignorant classes of the People, Germetuer is a notable exception. Its endorsers and its friends are everywhere among the very best and most prominent people. Its very pleasant effects and harmless nature, its singular merits and the mentioned superiority recommend it to intelligent people everywhere as the best, surest and most remedy known to medical science for the relief and cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Nervousness, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Bowel Complaints, Fevers and all Malarial Disorders.

$1.00, 6 for $5.00. Sold by Druggists.

The Case of Elder J. H. Booth.

At the solicitation of three brethren we publish the following relative to Rev. J. H. Booth, which appeared in the RECORDER on the dates named. The case is not opened for discussion as ample opportunity for that was given in 1887.

"ELDER J. H. BOOTH—RESOLUTIONS OF NEW BETHANY CHURCH."

(Published in BIBLICAL RECORDER, Oct. 12, 1887.)

WHEREAS, Elder J. H. Booth has publicly avowed himself as holding views not in keeping with those held by Baptists, and, moreover, has voluntarily withdrawn from the church; therefore,

Resolved, That we have withdrawn from him the hand of fellowship, and declare ourselves no longer responsible for his conduct or teaching.

Resolved, That a copy of the above preamble and resolution be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and to the Western Carolina Baptist for publication.

Adopted by New Bethany Baptist church, Iredell county, Sept. 21, 1887.

ROBT. INGRAM, Church Clerk."

"ACTION OF SOUTH YADKIN UNION."

(Published in RECORDER, Nov. 16, 1887.)

"Your committee appointed to take into consideration the attitude of Rev. J. H. Booth to the Baptist churches of the State, and particularly of the South Yadkin Association, begs leave to submit the following:

WHEREAS, The said J. H. Booth stands excluded from New Bethany Baptist church, on the charge of heresy; and, whereas, he claims that two or more of the leading ministers of this Association are in accord with his peculiar views, the same, after investigation, being found untrue, therefore it is the sense of this committee that the churches carefully guard their pulpits, warn the people, and, as far as possible, counteract the influence of his heretical teaching; and that this report be published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER. (Signed)

J. F. TUTTLE,
W. J. HOPKINS,
A. T. HORD,
Committee.

"A CORRECTION."

(From Elder J. H. Booth, in RECORDER Nov. 30, 1887.)

Dear Recorder:—From what has recently been published in the RECORDER, I think it but due my personal character, at least, to be allowed space in your columns to say:

1. I have not turned "Second Adventist," nor have I named the time when the Lord will come.

2. As to claiming two or more of the ministers of the South Yadkin Association as being in accord with me in my "peculiar views," I never thought of such a thing, nor entertained such purpose for one moment.

Letter from Wake Forest.

I cannot refrain from a brief tribute to the memory of my beloved teacher and friend, John C. Long, who died recently at Charlottesville, Va. When I was a boy of thirteen, I learned under him my first Latin at Richmond College. He was a faithful instructor. He made his pupils respect him and love him. He was absolutely free from affectation, and knew how to be genial, even in the school-room, without any loss of dignity. He was a true scholar and was impatient of all pedantries. I shall never cease to be grateful to him for the care and patience which he bestowed upon the small boy who liked bandy better than books, but who knew, nevertheless, how to appreciate the full knowledge and delicate taste of his teacher.

During two years of my student life at the University of Virginia, he was pastor of the Charlottesville Baptist church. Some of his sermons I still remember well. They were most carefully prepared,—often written in full. One hardly knew whether most to admire their literary finish or their spiritual power. It was very often my privilege to dine with him on Sundays. His conversation was always stimulating and helpful. He was an omnivorous reader and had the rare power of digesting what he read. I think he gave me my first thoroughly sympathetic introduction to Tennyson's poetry. Bro. Long was an optimist. He could always see the bright and hopeful side of people and events. Perhaps it is for this reason, in part, that I think of my many interviews with him as altogether pleasant and inspiring. He carried sunshine with him wherever he went.

For about twenty years he has been Professor of Ecclesiastical History at Crozer Theological Seminary in Pennsylvania. We have kept up an occasional correspondence through these years and have met almost every summer. I shall miss his cordial greetings henceforth. He never called me otherwise than he did when he was the young professor and I was the little boy.

He was so modest and retiring that he was not so widely known as many other men who had not half his knowledge or mental acumen.

I think that he was as strong and vigorous, intellectually, as his brother, Gen. A. L. Long, who was Gen. Lee's Chief of Artillery. But, withal, he was as gentle as a woman. If he ever had an enemy, I have never heard of it. The number of his friends was only limited by the range of his acquaintance. His death causes a vacuum which it will be hard to fill.

Don't lose your faith: God is everywhere.

The Old Guard.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I notice in the RECORDER you are asking for the name of the oldest subscriber to your paper.

I first subscribed for the BAPTIST INTERPRETER, published at Edenton, N. C., by Rev. Thomas Meredith; and then it changed to the RECORDER; then to the RECORDER AND WATCHMAN, and then again to its present name. I have continued a subscriber ever since, and you can put me down as a subscriber the balance of my life. I have entered in my seventy-eighth year. I shall recommend to all Baptists to subscribe for the RECORDER and read it, whether Democrats or Republicans. There is no politics in heaven, though I notice some of our "Revs." in a late issue of the RECORDER say that all Baptists are democrats. I think if we would do more work for Christ and less for politics, we would sooner Christianize the world. May God ever bless your paper, the RECORDER. AARON WRIGHT.

Carl, Montgomery Co., Aug. 6, 1894.

North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts.

The Institution has now completed its fifth year. Its development may be best noted by the number of students matriculating each year: Seventy-one in the first, 84 in the second, 110 in the third, 115 in the fourth, and 191 in the fifth year.

The scheme of education, as decided on in the beginning, has not been changed, but it has been enlarged. It was an innovation on the methods of the past. It is true that some of our institutions of learning contemplated certain industrial features in the beginning of their career, but these features were, however, soon abandoned.

The College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts promises the youth of the State an education which could be procured at no other institution in North Carolina; an education broad and thorough in its basis, omitting the classics and metaphysics, but including the principles of production by skilled labor, with the essentials of development and improvement in such things as constitute the basis of all true prosperity to the commonwealth.

A four years' course is necessary to graduation; but shorter courses are being prepared for special cases.

In the first year the course is not elective, but arbitrary. In the second year the student must decide which of several courses he will take, viz.: Agriculture, Science, or Mechanics. The students in the Agricultural course, however, are allowed one more year in Mechanics.

It will probably be asked, is the work of the College practical? Is the worth of the education at all commensurate with the outlay in providing for the same? Such questions will occur to all thinking men. It could readily be shown that in the industrial development of the resources of the State, that the agricultural and the mechanical pursuits (including all kinds of manufactures), easily outrank all others combined. Of course we have mines, fisheries, lumber interests, etc., which add to the wealth of the State. Preachers, teachers, lawyers, physicians, bankers, merchants, etc., etc., go to make up the remainder of the population. Yet it will be readily conceded that all products upon which mankind, the professions and all trades, subsist come as the result of manual labor, which, therefore, should be well trained and directed. As a matter of course only a fraction of the population can learn to be experts, but these can be of the greatest service in guiding and directing others.

State Fair of 1894.

The great State Fair for 1894 will be held October the 23d, 24th, 25th and 26th, the date having been changed from the week beginning October the 16th on account of conflict with the Richmond Fair. Practical and documentary indications are to the effect that this Fair will be the most extensive in point of exhibits, and the most largely attended one ever held in this State.

President J. S. Carr will, himself, make displays that will be the admiration of every one who sees them. They will come from his factories and his famous Occoneechee farm. The immense McIntyre estate of Onslow county will be represented in a manner as to show the resources of eastern North Carolina. The great Vanderbilt estate of western North Carolina will make exhibits of live stock, farm products, minerals and the like.

The premium list this year is more liberal than ever before. One hundred dollars is offered for the best bale of cotton, forty dollars for the second best, and there are six other cash premiums. The premiums for stock exhibits are liberal, and so well proportioned as to insure the expense of almost any creditable exhibit, and to handsomely reward any exhibit of superior merit. Forty dollars is offered as a premium for the best milch cow, twenty five dollars for the second best, fifteen dollars for the third best, and so on; the cow to be tested at home by a representative of the Agricultural Experiment Station, under the most favorable conditions. Fifty dollars is offered to the lady resident of the State making the best exhibit of woman's handiwork. An eight hundred dollar piano is offered to the female school making the best exhibit; the second premium for this feature is a handsome gold medal, and the third premium is a two volume edition of the new and incomparable edition of the Standard Dictionary. The premiums in every department are well scheduled, and ought to be examined by everybody.

Premium lists will be sent, and all information given by

H. W. AYER, Sec., Raleigh.

Pastoral Vacation.

Such is becoming a very universal custom and at the same time becoming very hurtful to the churches.

There are not more than one out of every twenty-five of the membership of any church that can take an outing of the sort, and they are they who can attend church and have gospel privileges where they go. Those who have to stay at home are deprived of the preaching of the gospel in their own churches and need the pastoral care of the under shepherd in the hot weather—for the sick, the dying, and the dead. Result:—estrangement from their preacher, lukewarmness in the work, necessitating the calling in of professional evangelists to stir them up again at exhorbitant outlay of money, the regular and systematic way of raising it having been impeded. Few churches in small towns are able to employ supplies.

Bro. W. H. Sledge Ordained.

At the request of the Leaksville Baptist church, a presbytery, consisting of Elders H. A. Brown, C. C. Haymore, J. B. Richardson and P. Oliver met at the home of the last named on the night of August 3d, and were organised by calling H. A. Brown to the chair and making P. Oliver, Secretary.

They then and there proceeded to examine Bro. W. H. Sledge upon his Christian experience, call to the ministry and views of doctrine. The examination being satisfactory, his ordination took place at Mt. Olive Baptist church on Sunday, August 5th, Elder J. B. Richardson leading in prayer, Elder H. A. Brown delivering the charge. Laying on of hands, and hand of welcome by the ministers present. Elder C. Durham preached the ordination sermon from Rom. 8: 18 to a large and attentive congregation. Benediction by the candidate.

According to the report of the Indiana Baptist—a paper famous for good reports, by the way—they seem to have had a high old time at Toronto. The saluting the flags roused great enthusiasm. They gave three cheers to Queen Victoria, President Cleveland, the stars and stripes and the Union Jack. Maryland seems to have especially distinguished herself, as the Baptist reports: "Maryland spoke and sang and read a telegram, and sang again and whooped." Now if there is anything which is exhilarating and enthusiasm-rousing in a religious meeting it is a "whoop."—Western Recorder.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Two young children were killed by lightning in Pitt county last week.

A telephone line between Charlotte and Gastonia has been completed.

Two new factories for the manufacture of tobacco are to be established at Winston.

The mortgage indebtedness of the State was $3,461,000 in 1880; it is about $5,000,000 now.

The State Sunday-school Convention is in session at Durham this week. It is largely attended by Methodists.

A statue of Maj. Jos. Winston will be erected at the Guilford Battle Grounds by ex-Gov. Thos. M. Holt.

Chas. Briggs, engineer of the Southern Railway, was accidentally run over and killed at High Point recently.

A $35,000 national appropriation for a quarantine station at Southport, below Wilmington, has been agreed to by both branches of Congress.

The annual meeting of the Friends at High Point recently was largely attended. A debt of $2,500 was reported. The meeting denounced whiskey and tobacco.

A delegate to a recent political convention brought some "fire clay" to the State Museum. He was from one of the Western counties. The clay is said to be genuine terra cotta.

Plans are being considered for a new building at the Western Insane Asylum at Morganton apart from the present building; it is to be used for sick inmates. Probable cost, $10,000.

The Western North Carolina Railway was advertised to be sold the 21st inst. We go to press too early to announce the purchaser and the price. No bid less than $500,000 was to be accepted.

Hon. Chas. Mather Cooke received the nomination unanimously for Congress from the fourth district at the hands of the Democratic party last week. The nomination was never in better hands.

The promising young man of Rowan county who was a candidate for the Senate from his county until someone told him he wasn't old enough, is not a hopeful candidate for a seat in the House. "Anything."

It is stated that our State has more small cotton mills than any State; that it is building more. It is very evident that manufacturing interests of all kinds are awakening. It will be more evident when the country becomes stable again.

It affords us pleasure to say that the News and Observer of Raleigh has been greatly improved by the new management; and that there is evidence in its policy of still greater improvement. A first class paper at the State capital has been, indeed, a "long-felt" want.

Heavy rains in the Eastern part of the State did much damage last week. $50,000 damage was done the bridges in Wayne county. The crop outlook generally, however, is wonderfully encouraging. It is said that one man has complained that this year's crop will exhaust the soil.

Hon. Thos. Settle was renominated by the Republicans of the fifth district last week. The following congressmen have also been renominated: W. A. B. Branch, from the first; Jno. S. Henderson from the seventh; W. H. Bower from the eighth; W. T. Crawford from the ninth. Woodard from the second will be renominated.

The State Farmers' Alliance at Greensboro last week was well attended. The question of establishing a produce exchange was discussed. Home manufacture of shoes was another question that excited interest. Salaries of the Executive Committee were reduced from $3 00 to $2.00 per day, and that of the Secretary and Treasurer from $1,400 a year to $1,000. Women members of the order will be taxed five cents each hereafter. All officers re elected. It is refreshing to know that a tendency to discuss matters of more relevance than usual was manifest.

General News.

The Wellman expedition to the North Pole has failed; the ship destroyed; the explorers are on the return.

The first bale of cotton from the Mississippi valley was sold at New Orleans last week for 9¼ cents per pound.

Gautemala, Nicaragua, San Salvador and Honduras are contemplating a union into one republic of Central America.

The "Campania" crossed the Atlantic in five days and nine hours last week, thus making the shortest time ever made.

Press dispatches state that at the annual meeting at Dublin, Ga., it was decided to disband the Farmer's Alliance in that State.

The Pope has suggested to his bishops in Brazil that they begin to educate the people under them. After three hundred years—well!

The Western and central States have been suffering severely from drouth. The corn crop will be less than half as large as last year.

It is stated that Hiram Maxim, the great inventor, has made a flying machine that will fly. It is 145 feet long, and weighs 7,300 pounds.

Preparations are being made to have the constitutionality of the law taxing State banks prohibitively, decided by the courts. There is a possibility that the law may be decided to be unconstitutional.

In the war between China and Japan England is favorable to the former and Russia to the latter; thus the peace of Europe is somewhat menaced.

Friends of the evangelist Moody have subscribed seven thousand dollars for an auditorium at Northfield, Mass., where he holds his summer meetings.

Congress will adjourn in the near future. So many members are at home campaigning already that a quorum cannot be secured and legislation is lagging.

Drexel, Morgan & Co. purchased several railways last week, one or two of them being large systems. This is the firm that re organized the Richmond & Danville.

Conductor Goodman, who killed H. C. Parsons for circulating infamous reports about his family, was sentenced to eighteen years' servitude in the Virginia penitentiary the 18th.

The South Carolina Dispensary act has again been decided unconstitutional, this time by Judge Aldrich. We do not feel justified in guessing what will be done about it. Tillman, it is said, will succeed Senator Butler in the United States Senate this winter. Jno. Gary Evans has been nominated to succeed Tillman as Governor.

The tariff bill has been passed. It was formulated largely by Senator Gorman. Protective duties are levied on coal, iron ore and sugar. The President, who has gone to his summer home at Gray Gables to ward off an attack of malaria, will either sign the bill, or allow it to become a law by the ten-days' limit. An immediate revival of business is anticipated.

Under the McKinley revenue law, whiskey was taxed ninety cents per gallon; under the new tariff act, it is $1.10 per gallon. Consequently, the distillers and dealers all over the country are paying the tax on as much liquor as possible before the President makes the new act operative by signing it. The whiskey trust will save about $10,000,000 thus. This extraordinary payment of revenue—ninety cents per gallon on about fifty million gallons—has increased the "gold reserve," which is now about fifty-three million dollars, and increasing.

The end of hostilities between China and Japan for the control of Corea is not in sight. The battle is about even between them so far, though China has by far the advantage of numbers, and does not have to cross water to get to Corea, while Japan does. Japan, however, has the advantage of superior armaments, experience and skill. Corea is an Asiatic peninsula projecting into the Yellow Sea and Sea of Japan, and separated from Japan by the Straight of Corea. It has been opened to foreigners since 1875. It is about the size of England and thickly inhabited by the lowest type of man. Its products are rice, rice, wheat, rye, cotton, tobacco, fruits and minerals.

Publisher's Announcement.

The American Baptist Publication Society is making a grand clearance sale of one hundred thousand volumes of Sunday-school books. These are not second-hand or shop worn books and are substantially bound. The sale is made with the view of modernizing later editions of their older publications. This is a rare chance for Sunday-schools to replenish their library or secure reward books at absolutely less than cost. Think of securing books that sell for $1.00, $1 25, and $1.50 for only twenty five cents. This is what the Society is offering. Write for particulars at once if you want a share in this big offer.

From Rockyhock.

Dear Recorder:—Last January was a bewildering time for me. I was called to the church at Green's X Roads, Bertie county, N. C. Bro. Bristoe of Coleraine, N. C., a student of Wake Forest, a good preacher, and I think a Christian gentleman, had been preaching for them. I was young, had just began preaching and couldn't begin to fill his place. I knew I would have a hard time in doing the best I could. The church at that time was in a deplorable condition. Some of the members were disunited, pledges were unpaid, and repairs on the house were necessary. But I tried to go to work in the spirit of the Master with perpetual prayer, trusting, as our ancestors did, that God would build up his church in that community.

Now we have all our pledges paid, made some repairs on the house, the members are more united, and best of all two precious souls have been added to our little flock.

I know not what God has in store for me in the future, but be what it may, I will trust him more and more.

Fraternally, GEORGE W. WHITE.

Non-Partisan Temperance Meeting.

The State Prohibition mass meeting assembled in Bogart's Hall the morning of August 15th. About thirty counties were represented. Rev. Jesse Cunningham was called to the chair, and Rev. G. F. Simmons, to be secretary. D. Atkins stated the object of the meeting, and presented strong prohibition resolutions to the convention, which were unanimously adopted. A committee on plan of organization was appointed, and while the committee was out a stirring speech was made by Rev. D. H. Tuttle on the necessity of voting only for men who are opposed to the saloon.

Mr. J. H. Southgate read the prohibition law now in force in Mississippi, and made a motion that the Executive Committee be instructed to present something similar to our next Legislature. This provoked a great deal of discussion, but was heartily and unanimously endorsed by the convention. The committee on nominations reported the following names for officers for the ensuing year: President, Rev. D. H. Tuttle, Raleigh; Vice-President, Rev. F. Hunt, Charlotte; second Vice-President, T. J. Candler, Candler; Recording Secretary, C. H. Ireland, Greensboro; Corresponding Secretary, Dr. D. Atkins, Greensboro; Treasurer, Dr. D. W. C. Benbow, Greensboro. Executive Committee, J. A. O'Dell, Greensboro; (chairman) Dr. C. D McIver, Greensboro, J. A. Oates, Fayetteville; F. S. Blair, Guilford College, and W. H. Worth, Raleigh.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. This will serve to prevent mistakes in the acknowledgment, and save the time, correspondence and printing to correct them.]

Cedar Rock Academy & Business Institute
(MALE AND FEMALE,)
is located in Franklin Co., N. C., 19 miles east of Louisburg. Unsurpassed for health and refinement. Situated in the country, it is free from the objectionable features of city and town schools. Good board in 300 yds of the Academy at $7 per month (28 days.) There are two regular boarding houses, one for young men, the other for young ladies, besides a number of private homes in which board can be had. Girls who board are required to board with the principal, unless otherwise requested by parent or guardian.

A FULL CORPS OF EFFICIENT TEACHERS. Commercial instruction is a specialty. Diplomas are awarded to those who complete the commercial course as prescribed in catalogue. There is great demand for young men of a business education.

MUSIC, both instrumental and vocal, holds a prominent place in our school. We keep posted as to the requirements for matriculation in the different colleges of the State, and so direct the courses of those who expect to attend college that they may take good stands in their classes. For those who wish to prepare for teaching in public schools we arrange a special course looking towards that end. Our school is not for young men who wish to play the dude, nor for young ladies who wish to be society belles and pass their time in idleness, but for those who are earnestly desirous of a practical business education, or of sufficient preparation to enter colleges.

Session 1894-95 opens Aug. 21, 1894, and continues nine months. For catalogue and particulars, apply to JNO. A. COPPEDGE, Sec'y,

A Methodist Preacher's Sentiments.

Editor of Recorder:—Will you allow a Methodist preacher to express his views of the matter of State aid to Chapel Hill, &c., in your paper. I ask this because there is no other channel through which to express my sentiments.

I am confident that there are thousands of Methodists in North Carolina who are with you in this matter, and I would that our Organ would come to the rescue of our own institutions against the mighty.

Trinity College, Greensboro and Littleton are hurt as much by the State schools that are run in competition to them as schools of your denomination; but somehow our would-be leaders in other matters are afraid of the "Big Bugs," or they are still endeavoring to show appreciation of honorary degrees conferred in other days.

I have a contempt for leaders who will keep their mouths shut when a great struggle is going on as now—and when the battle has been fought by others then raise a feeble cry to rally to our own institutions. All honor to the RECORDER and the Baptists of North Carolina for their courage and boldness in this struggle. I unhesitatingly say Dr. Taylor's articles are unanswerable, and are written in fair spirit. When he began to publish them the newspaper correspondents promptly announced that Dr. Winston would reply to them, and I believe he did reply to the first, but somehow he changed his mind and wisely "sings low" now.

I congratulate Dr. Taylor on his victory, I am with him heart and soul, and I am with you all in this work. Let us fling the banner to the breezes and see to it that we vote for no man to represent us in the Legislature who is in favor of such "wild-cat" appropriations.

I propose to inform my people along this line from this on. Tell Dr. Durham to continue to turn on the light. I am filing every copy of your paper now and I propose to show them to my people.

If Winston, McIver & Co. come this way and pervert their institute work by bolstering up this miserable business they will be promptly answered.

Let the people of North Carolina open their eyes and put a stop to this thing or quit pretending to love their church schools.

METHODIST PREACHER.

It is waste of good things to use "pearl glass" or "pearl top," unless you get the right shape and size for your lamp. See the "Index to Chimneys" —free.

Literary.

"The Flying Man," Herr Otto Lilienthal of Berlin and his flying machine will be treated of in McClure's Magazine for September by a writer who has been an eye-witness of Lilienthal's latest experiments in the art of flight. Pictures showing Lilienthal on the wing will accompany the article.

All who are interested in musical education in this country will be glad to hear of a new periodical which is devoted to that subject, and the first number of which is just out. It is called the New England Conservatory Quarterly and is published by the celebrated institution of that name in Boston, Mass. In addition to much matter of general musical interest it contains a summary of the daily events of the quarter, the programme of all recitals, and in each number there will be one or two compositions by pupils of the theoretical department. Such a publication has been rendered necessary by the ever increasing connection of this great institution.

The Treasury of Religious Thought. Its midsummer number (August) comes well laden with the sincere meat of the gospel. The sermons are by Rev. W. H. Allbright, Drs. M. V. Macduffie, J. B. Whitford, J. Robinson, and James Stalker. Under the heading "Thoughts of Eminent Educators" are given extracts and outlines from baccalaureate sermons and addresses from a number of our leading college presidents and educators, including Yale, Harvard and Brown Universities, Amherst, Williams, and Allegheny Colleges, also Moody's Training, and the Michigan State Normal Schools. Leading Sermonic Thoughts and Bible Themes are outlined from Drs. Barrows, Bristol, Stone, Burnett, Mansfield, and Storrs. Annual subscription, $2 50. Clergymen, $2.00. Single copies, 25 cents. E. B. Treat, Publisher, 5 Cooper Union New York.

A Young Man's Study of Baptism. By Geo. W. Anderson, D. D. 16mo, 32 pp. Price, 5 cents. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

In this little booklet, Dr. Anderson has given us a calm, dispassionate, and as it seems to us, unanswerable discussion of the familiar baptismal question. A young man was led to Christ by submitting his will to him. This formed the crucial point in his career, for he felt the essence of sin to consist in being disobedient. He adopted as a principle what had been the means of guiding him to peace. Brought face to face with the duty of baptism, his only question was as to the will of Christ. This, by the examination of passages of Scripture that are given, he found to indicate Immersion. He therefore became a Baptist, and the teaching of the pamphlet is that any similarly situated should pursue a like investigation led by the same principle. This would honor Christ, and tend to produce unity among Christians.

The Art of Illustrating. By C. H. Spurgeon. 12mo. Cloth. 208 pp. $1 00 post paid. Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, 2 Cooper Union, N. Y.

Whatever Spurgeon has written is worthy of careful attention. He has shown himself a master of the subject of which the volume treats, and the reader will not be disappointed in finding it a storehouse full of suggestions, most interesting and valuable. No one can afford to be destitute of the helpfulness it imparts. These lectures were originally delivered to the students of the Pastor's College. The title is one which the author himself selected, and among the subjects are the following: Illustrations in Preaching. Anecdotes from the Pulpit. The Uses of Anecdotes and Illustrations. Where can we find Anecdotes and Illustrations? The Sciences as Sources of Illustration. It is the first of his unfinished books to be published, and one to which he had himself given the title, "The Art of Illustration."

If a man wants the news of our National Capital in full and yet in concise style, along with the news of the world, and editorials that are not excelled, he should get the Washington Post. It is one of the few independent papers that are really independent. Type good, columns clean, general make-up attractive, policy conservative and honest, it is just such a paper as should be published at the Nation's capital.

MARRIED.

WATTS—WHITELAW—On August 15th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father in Raleigh, N. C., Mr. John Whitelaw, by Rev. A. M. Simms, Mr. J. T. Watts and Miss Maggie Whitelaw.

DIED.

THOMPSON—At Concord, Aug. 14th, 1894, Miss Sallie D. Thompson, aged twenty-one years.

MASON—J. E. Mason was born in Chatham county, N. C., June 19th, 1835, and died in Manchester, Va., Aug. 6th, 1894, in the full triumph of the gospel faith. He leaves a wife and two sons to mourn for him.

LOVING FRIEND.

GREGORY—Died in Perquimans, N. C., Aug. 9th, 1894, Mary, wife of James A. Gregory, aged twenty-three years. Raised by pious parents, in early life she accepted the Saviour. Though the race was short, the victory was won. She will be missed at home, in the social circle, and by Woodville church.

J. B. FERRELL.

HALE—On the morning of July 9th, 1894, the angel of death alighted in our little town and bore away our gentle, loving friend, Beulah Hale. She had been lingering on the bed of disease ever since the last of May. Though only seven years of age, she was a bright and thoughtful little girl. Although we are sad and mourn our loss, yet we believe that he who said with sweetest voice of love "Suffer little children to come unto me" hath taken our darling Beulah to the beautiful land where mansions are prepared for the innocent and good.

C. B. WILLIAMS.

SMITH—On Thursday morning, Aug. 9th, 1894, Willie T. I. Smith, son of Bro. J. T. Smith of Middle Swamp, aged four years and ten months. Willie was a bright and good little boy, the joy and pet of the household. Home is so sad and lonely now that the patter of his little feet is no longer heard, and his voice is hushed in death. But Willie is safe now; safe from all temptation and care, safe from the sufferings and sorrows of this world; forever happy with Jesus in the bright home above. May the Holy Spirit comfort the hearts of the bereaved ones.

W. B. WAFF.

BROWN—At her home in Rockingham county, N. C., July 6th, 1894, Mrs. E. Brown, the mother of Elder H. A. Brown of Winston, departed this life in the seventieth year of her age. She was married in 1845, and was the mother of seven children, four of whom are living. She united with the Baptist church in 1872. She loved her church and pastor, and like her Saviour, she was sympathetic and self-sacrificing. For several months she was a great sufferer, but she has learned ere this that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared to the glory that is now revealed in her. Truly a good woman is gone. She will be greatly missed in the home, church and community, but heaven is dearer to us than ever before. It is sad to say good bye, but we shall meet again.

W. H. WILSON.

MATTHEWS—Charley Russell, infant son of C. W. and Nannie H. Matthews, died at the home of his parents in South Norfolk, Va., Aug. 9th, 1894, aged six months, lacking two days. He was born in Moyock, Currituck county, N. C., Feb. 11th, 1894. Five months of his precious life he was an intense sufferer. I never saw such a battle with death as our little jewel fought for four long hours preceding his death. But he suffers never more. Thank God, heaven is nearer and dearer to us now that our babe is there. In that brighter and better world we shall see him one day.

"Eddie 'Ussell," as his little brother Owen was wont to call him,

"Has gone to that land,
On whose blissful shore
There rests no shadow, falls no stain;
Where those that meet shall part no more,
And those long parted shall meet again."

MAMA.

Tributes of Respect.

Bro. J. M. Cagle was born September 7th, 1860, and died at his home Aug. 8th, 1894, aged thirty-three years and eleven months. He was buried at Union Grove. Bro. Cagle has been an active member of the Missionary Baptist church for nine or ten years. He was a good worker in the church and Sunday school. The church and community mourn to give up such a member as Bro. Cagle, but God in his wisdom and providence knows best. The departed brother left a wife, who is also a member of our church, and two little children, with relatives and many friends, to mourn his loss. In respect to the deceased brother be it Resolved 1. That we extend to her bereaved companion and friends our deepest sympathies, and pray that the Master whom he loved and served may now give to each of them the consolation of his sustaining grace.

Resolved 2. That a copy of these statements and resolutions be made a part of the records of this church.

Resolved 3. That these statements and resolutions be published in the BIBLICAL RECORDER.

The Home Circle.

The Golden Side.

There is many a rest in the road of life
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land
If the querulous heart would make it.
To the soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Though the winter's storm prevaileth.

Better hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the curtains clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning,
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer than the jeweled crown
Or the miser's hoarded treasure;
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And do God's will with a cheerful heart,
And hands that are ready and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, minute thread
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame heaven for tangled ends,
And sit and grieve and wonder.

—Charles Mackey.

"Can't be Made Over Again."

"Your house was pretty badly used up," remarked a visitor to the flooded district in Cincinnati, to an old man who was sitting on the broken steps of a frame cottage that was twisted out of all shape.

"Yes," he replied. "Thar ain't much left of the old house. The high water done a heap of mischief."

"But you'll soon make things over again, as good as new," continued the first speaker.

"Stranger," said the old man in a husky voice, "thar are some things in this yar world that you can't make over ag'in. This was my house, and so it is yet; this was my home, stranger, but it will never be my home ag'in;" and he paused, gazing sadly about him.

"Thar are some things you can't make as they was. When the high water come, my wife was in bed with a fever, and the water come and come, and all the time I thought it couldn't come any higher, but the last thing I knowed it was clear in the house. Then I had to move her, and what with the fright and the cold and all, she was no sooner under a roof on high ground than she died—my old wife, stranger.

"Yes, she died; died 'fore Bill—Bill was our boy—come back. He was a good boy to his mother and me, but I didn't understand him, and he went off; yes, went off, to make his own way in the world.

"But his mother said he would come back, and she used to pray the Lord to watch him. She said he would surely come back, and she used to keep his room and his things, just as he left 'em. His mother, stranger, always fixed that room every day all ready for him, and if he had come back, everything would have been as he remembered it.

"That room to us, his mother and me, was wuth more than all the world; but the high water come, and I didn't get a chance to save a thing. All his little boyish things were washed away; the walls is cracked, and when he comes back there will be nothing to tell him of home—no mother, none of his old things, and nothing to show the love of years that has waited for him. Stranger, thar are some things you can't make over ag'in as good as new."

With a dreary shake of the head that told of a sorrow too deep for tears, too holy for expression, the old man looked again at his ruined house. But the other's eyes were brimming with tears, and he did not trust himself to speak for many minutes.

But the homely phrase, "Cannot be made over," conveyed to mind another and a deeper meaning.

To say at the end of an unwise life, "If I could live my time again, I would do differently," is but an empty breath. Live now, and when comes the judgment day of final years, you will not find your service for God and others an experience that you wish "to be made over."—Youth's Companion.

A Large Waist

Is not generally considered a necessary adjunct to the grace, beauty or symmetry of the womanly form. Within the body, however, is a great waste made necessary according to the condition of things—continually in process and requiring the perfect action of all bodily functions to absorb or dispel the refuse. When there is irregularity or inaction, ladies who value a clean, pure, healthy body will take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the only remedy for woman sold with a positive guarantee to right all the peculiar wrongs.

To those about to become mothers, it is a priceless boon, for it lessens the pains and perils of childbirth, shortens labor, promotes an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child and shortens the period of confinement.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness, constipation, sick headache, indigestion, or dyspepsia, and kindred diseases.

A lady once asked Bowland Hill, when he was minister of Surry Chapel, if he would kindly interview her son and examine him, for she felt sure he had special talents for the ministry, although they were hidden. The preacher examined the youth, and then wrote to the mother: "Madam, I have surveyed the chapin, but I cannot find the talent."—Homiletic Review.

The Degradation of Our Citizenship.

We are confronted by the fact, if the situation in New York is any criterion, that the administration of our political affairs is largely in the hands of the criminal classes. By criminal classes is meant the classes which habitually break the law, not merely thieves, prostitutes, gamblers, and rogues of every hue, but men who buy or sell office, legislation, official action, or protection. The police official who sells police protection (a new form of Papal Indulgence) to a thief, a prostitute, or a gambler, is a criminal. Will any one dare to maintain that the "reputable citizen" who purchases a United States senatorship, or a statute, or the privilege of storing his goods upon the sidewalk in defiance of the rights of his fellow-citizens and in plain breach of the law, is not a criminal. Into such hands as these has the control of our country mainly passed. The making of our laws is the business of a partnership between the men in office who sell, and the men out of office who buy, legislation. The execution of our laws, or rather their nonexecution, is also a partnership between the men in office who sell, and the men out of office who buy, indulgences.—John Brooks Leavitt, in the Forum.

A Little American Girl.

Last summer a little girl, ten years old, living in Indiana, was walking across one of the railroad tracks near a trestle across a deep ravine when she discovered that it was on fire. She knew that it was almost time for a train to come. She knew that the train would drop into the ravine unless stopped. She took off her red flannel petticoat and went running up the track waving her danger signal. She stopped the train at the curve and saved it. There were a number of French people on the train going to the World's Fair. These people were so grateful to this brave little girl that they, on returning to France, petitioned that the little girl should receive a medal of honor. President Carnot ordered the medal struck off, and was sent to the little girl. This medal is given in France only to those who have done marked acts of bravery. It is the medal which France gives her soldiers.—Young People's Leader.

The Decline of Marriage Among the Worldly.

"The list of Easter marriages among people of wealth throughout the country is far below the usual average in point of numbers," says a New York society journal. "Every woman knows that marriage is slowly but surely dying out in these United States. The rich are the first to feel its effects. Bachelors' apartments are multiplying everywhere. The skyscraping hotels that are ascending in all our cities are being built for the celibacy, not of married life.

"The rush for admission into clubs is unprecedented. The women are the cause of the strained relations of the sex. They feel they can get along without the men, and the men feel they can get along without the women. The American girl has set a standard of luxury to which the American man refuses to follow her. If her father, says the American man, will pay for her extravagances, let him. She will never find a husband to do so. And marriage goes on declining."

Cold Meats in Summer.

It is not wise to advocate the use of cold meats in summer, because they are more difficult to digest. The system is somewhat enervated and requires light food that is easily digested. Heavy meats, like roast beef, though cut in the most tempting slices, remarks an exchange, are much more difficult to digest when cold than when served hot in a rechauffe. Cold custards, ice-creams and other iced puddings, on the contrary, are so light and delicate in nature that they are easily digested; at the same time they are cooling and refreshing and far more wholesome than the national dessert of pie.—Watchman.

On May 24th, 1894, Queen Victoria was seventy five years of age. In the Ladies' Home Journal, Arthur Warren has this to say of her:

For fifty-seven years Victoria has reigned as Queen. It may be truly said of this long reign that it has been marked from the beginning with strong womanly qualities that have made Victoria the most beloved Queen of England. Her very first act as Queen was womanly. Immediately upon her accession she indicted a letter of condolence to the bereaved widow of King William. This letter she addressed to "Her Majesty, the Queen." Some privileged person, fearing that the young monarch, unused to the new dignity, had overlooked the peculiar etiquette of her position, ventured to explain that the form of address was incorrect; the she, Victoria, was the only one entitled to be know as "Her Majesty, the Queen," Adelaide being only the Queen Dowager. Victoria replied: "Yes, but I shall not be the first to remind her of that fact."

The New York Times is responsible for the statement that those persons who had the good fortune this year to see the thirteen-year and the seventeen-year brood of locusts at the same time had an opportunity that will not occur again for 221 years, for it will only happen at the end of this long period, viz., in the year 2115, that the two broods will make their visits simultaneously. And if the seven-year brood is added, the period of the appearance of all three together will only be at the end of 1,547 years from the present time. No doubt the records made of these matters will be read [illegible] great interest by those in future generations who will witness what this generation has observed about the insects named.

Men drink because they are physically and morally weak. They drink to assuage the pain and sorrow forced upon them by poverty. A more equitable distribution of the bounties of earth and the fruits of industry would relieve, to a great extent, the degrading struggle into which mankind is forced, and take away some of the most potent causes of universal degradation. This would most certainly assist in solving the drink problem. The great evils that threaten the body politic are the result of a diseased condition, and the only way to effect a permanently radical cure is to treat it constitutionally. The drink disease is only one disease, and so with the many others,—all the result of a diseased condition of our social organism.—Nashville Advocate.

Archbishop Whately once startled his listeners by asking: "If the devil lost his tail, where would he go to get another?" and then after a pause he replied, "Why to a gin-palace, of course; for there it is that you find bad spirits are re tailed.—Homiletic Review.

Colored population in the United States was in 1891, 7,470,040. It is estimated that in 1900 the colored population of the country will be probably 12,000,000, while at the rate of increase during the past twenty-five years, 1,500,000 of them will be members of the Baptist churches.

We shall be judged hereafter not by what we have felt, but by what we have done.—Robert Hall.

THAT letter published by the RECORDER last week from the director of the mint was a revelation. Three statements respecting coinage of silver had been circulating to our confusion: One, that about three hundred silver dollars had been coined this year in order to deceive the voters in the late Alabama election, being proof, it was alleged, that the administration was well disposed to silver; another, that these three hundred dollars had been coined merely to test some new machinery, and that no 1894 dollars were in Alabama; and another, that 180,000 silver dollars had been coined lately. Now the director of the mint contradicts all three of these statements, which appeared in reputable papers time and again, with the statement that the United States mints have coined 423,000 silver dollars recently.

In the light of this revelation the statement that truth is having a difficult time of it, since news gatherers and newspapers become partisan, seems reasonable. Indeed, there are frequent evidences that facts are distorted and fabrications are circulated for partisan purposes. One who reads the Herald, Times, World and Tribune of New York, and the Post of Washington, would land in an asylum for the insane should he try to reconcile their versions of every day events, not to mention the contradictions of their editorials. The news agencies, it is also alleged, are open to bids to spread invented or distorted news, and to suppress facts. We know that sensations are often invented, that the morbid and criminal and brutish in men is proclaimed, to the sacrifice of the pure and edifying, because sensations are favorite food with the public.

A news agency or newspaper or reporter or editor that stoops to these uses is unworthy of the contempt of human beings. "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Surely if difficulty in getting the truth is conducive to slavery, the reader of the great daily paper is a slave.

Returning to the letter: Another characteristic is remarkable. It contains an unmistakable definition of the word seignioriage, as accepted by the government. Number of silver dollars coined, 423,000; cost of bullion used in coining this lot of dollars, $365,661.75; profit of the government in silver dollars, $137,338 25, the difference between the number of dollars coined and cost of the bullion in them—the seignioriage. There is yet another revelation. Secretary Carlisle, who redeemed treasury notes in gold all last summer and fall, has returned to the usual and proper method of redeeming them in silver.

We had thought since the President vetoed the seignioriage bill that coinage of silver was unlawful. If it is lawful to coin 423,000 silver dollars a month, it is lawful to coin the entire $120,000,000 worth in the vaults; and that, indeed, includes more than $40,000,000 of seignioriage. And, therefore, the seignioriage bill was unnecessary.

One often hears it said that silver has been demonitized. The truth of the statement depends entirely on what demonitize means; and, in our opinion, it means to deprive silver of its use as money, as an officially recognized medium of exchange. Consequently we hold that silver has not been demonitized so long as the government recognizes the silver dollars, bearing its stamp, already in circulation, as mediums of exchange; and certainly silver is not demonitized so long as the United States mints are coining it into money each week. The word demonitize is not defined in Webster's or Worcester's or Stormonth's dictionaries. The Standard defines it thus: "To divest of the character of standard money; withdraw from use as currency."

If, after all our government's silver bullion is coined, no more is purchased to be coined, silver, so far as the silver-mine owner and the miner are concerned, is demonitized. Even then it is not demonitized so long as silver dollars are recognized by the government.

THE Constitution of our State was modeled after that of the State of New York; consequently there is reason for especial interest among us in the outcome of the constitutional convention in that State which has been in session several weeks. So far it has incorporated nothing really radical in its work of revision of the Constitution. New York, of course, has many matters to deal with peculiar to itself; and what has been done has related to these. However, as the Convention has almost another month yet to deliberate, as many of its committees have not yet reported, and as it is announced that more than seventy amendments are yet to be introduced, many changes of interest to North Carolina may be made. Up to date the hearty refusal of the Convention to recommend female suffrage is the most noteworthy of its actions. May all of them be as worthy of emulation.

IT IS worthy of remark—the statement was recently made in an exchange—that one thousand women are employed in the United States Treasury where only one—and she was put in a loft—was employed thirty five years ago. Although the number of government officials has greatly increased, it has in no degree been proportionate with the increase of the number of female office-holders.

It is said that women are sought after for positions that require great care, neatness and dispatch. It is known, moreover, that in office-seeking, man's persistency cannot be compared with woman's.

It has been often said that there is no more remarkable feature of our times than the growing determination among women to make their own living, and to make it in positions heretofore monopolized by men, and to secure it by working better than men. There is scarcely a field of occupation in which woman is not seeking employment:—we mean, of course, a certain kind of woman, for the real women confine themselves to the gentler arts, in which they easily excel.

WE WERE speaking the other day of the books of our government. Here's how they stood for the year ending June 30th: Receipts from tariff, $182,234,242; from internal revenue, $146,945,778; from miscellaneous sources, $17,720,815; total income, $296,900,836. Income the year before was $385,819,628. The expenditures for year ending June 30th were: Pensions, 141,177,284; civil and miscellaneous, $101,403,455; war, $54 357,600; navy, $31,527,195; Indians, $10,286,416; interest, $27,941,405; total, $366,593,359, which is $17,000,000 less than the total expenditure of the year ending June 30th, 1893. The income for the year ending June 30th, 1894, was $89,000,000 less than the year preceding. In this connexion the appropriations of other Congresses is interesting. The Congress that assembled in extraordinary session last summer and has continued in regular session to date appropriated $490,668,369—a tremendous lot for hard times. It is less, however, than those of the last session of the Congress preceding by $28,895,989, less than the appropriations of the first session of the last Congress by $16,931,819. As the present session is the first session of the fifty-third Congress it will have to be very careful in its second session not to appropriate as much as it did in the session just passed, else it, too, will go down in history as a billion dollar Congress (lacking $20,000,000).

These figures show that the government is run on an enormous scale; and we are persuaded that one half or two-thirds of the present expenditure is unnecessary, as explained sometime since.

MORE figures worthy of closest study:—There were twenty-three miles of railway in the United States in 1831; there are 177,753 miles of track in our country to day. The reader can begin to imagine what that means if he knows enough to realise the value of quick transportation. The actual difference between traveling then and now cannot be realized. The debts of railways in the United States amount to $11,443,888,892; the assets $11,855,968,166. Passengers carried last year, 628,965,973; tons of freight carried, 15,246,711,952. Gross earnings, $1,223,618,290; total expense, $859,027,181.

It is apparent that the management of our railways is a far greater task than directing any government. What would it be if all this were added to our already cumbersome government? All who "served the party," or were akin to men who served the party in this or in preceding generations, could get an office; for three offices to every present one would be established by the parties for rewards.

But look at some more figures: 153 railways with 43,000 miles of track are in the hands of receivers. They represent capital amounting to $3,500,000,000. They constitute nearly one-fourth of all railway property in miles in our country. If one argues that since they are in the hands of receivers, who indeed are appointed by officers of the United States, they are controlled by the United States; and if the latter can control one-fourth of the railways—and they the bankrupt ones, too—why, certainly, it can control the other three-fourths. This seems reasonable; but, mark you, when a railway goes into the hands of a government appointed receiver, it means that the railway is running itself and using the government to keep off its creditors,—that is, running the government instead of the government running it. You have heard of people who always make money by making an assignment. A prominent railroad official remarked to us the other day that railways always made money by going into receiverships. And you may count upon it, a railway in receivership runs the government rather than is run by the government.

OF ALL the follies—known of fools the North Pole expedition is the acme. In two years not less than five expeditions have set out for the Arctic regions with no other legitimate object than going farther into them—more barren, more useless, more hopeless of reclamation than the most arid of deserts—than any one else has.

It is a pleasure to us to say that one Wellman, who set out on the usual errand some months ago, is now on his return, having made the usually complete failure unusually complete by losing his boat before he reached real cold water.

But Wellman and the rest are not cranks. They don't go through all the deprivation and danger for nothing; they are the last people on earth to sacrifice their noble selves to Science. They supply a demand; and they are paid for it. There are a certain number of cranks on earth who must be amused, and some of them are able to "pay the fiddler." These equip Arctic expeditions, these pay well to hear their heroes lecture of what they saw and did, most of which is drawn from the imagination, no doubt; these pay well for books and newspaper articles these "explorers" write—rather, invent.

"The public likes to be humbugged," said Barnum,—who made a profession of humbugging, and who boasted his success in his profession. To become great these days, to have an admiring, tribute paying herd at one's feet, one needs only jump off the Brooklyn bridge, shoot Niagara's rapids, ride a bicycle out of reckoning, go around the world quicker than Nellie Bly, or do any of the thousand and one things that are useful only to amuse certain morbid classes of humanity—anything that real human beings would not do or approve.

Sermon Outline by a Missionary.

PREACHED BY REV. S. J. PORTER.

"And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and taken nothing; nevertheless, at thy word, I will let down the net."

In all literature there is not to be found a description more real and more true to life than that given in the first ten verses of the fifth chapter of Luke. In what clear relief are brought out the toils, the failures and the cares of human life! Where man's efforts fail, Christ's fulness begins. In these same verses we have fine examples of faith, obedience and love on the part of man, and on the part of Christ, compassion and power.

These humble fishermen had toiled all the night, and had taken nothing—they had toiled without the presence of the Master.

Some of my readers have doubtless spent many nights of toil, and know something of their darkness and melancholy. Whatever may be our sphere of duty, times will come, when it seems that we are walking in the dark. I have often heard faithful souls exclaim, "Oh, I am doing so little for the Master!" "It seems that my work is a failure; how I do long for some approval of my work from the Lord!" "Will the Saviour ever hear my prayers, and own my poor service?" This may be the expression of some discouraged pastor, or of some tired mother, who for years has been laboring and praying for the salvation of an erring child. Yes, we all know what it is thus to "toil in the night" without any apparent success. But is it not a higher proof of love to labor, purely in duty to the command of God, and dependence upon his goodness, rather than with the assurance of speedy success? The race is not always to the swift; hence, we should learn to labor and to wait. We have only to do our duty, and leave the event with God.

"God helps those who help themselves." Simon and his partners had been fishing faithfully all the night before without any result, but now the Master steps into their boat, and tells them to "launch out into the deep." My brother, if you have been working for God, and have not yet met with desired success, do not despair, but at the command of the Master, "launch out into the deep" once more, and let down your nets for a draught.

We have here an example of strict obedience to the command of Christ. "Nevertheless, at thy word, I will let down the net." Though they had toiled all night, yet if Christ gives the command, they will renew their toil, though they have taken nothing. If Christ bids them let down for a draught, they will obey, hoping to take something. Probably they had fished in that same place the night previous, and reason would tell them that it was useless, but faith said, "at thy word." The word of Christ is sufficient ground for action. Obedience is properly called the proof of love, and, with equal propriety, it may be called the proof of faith.

Let him, who has toiled long nights and days without much success, simply take Christ at his word, and apply himself anew to his labors, knowing that he who labors in the Lord, labors not in vain.

Hades, Tartarus and Paradise; or the Intermediate State of the Soul.

BY A. B. ERVIN.

My mind was directed to this subject by an article in a western paper. The writer alleged that Hades was the receptacle of all departed spirits, both bad and good; that Tartarus was the prison of all wicked spirits, and Paradise the abode of all the righteous, and that both these places were in the region of Hades.

Tartarus is the first word to be considered. It is a Greek word, and occurs but once in the Scriptures. 2 Peter 2: 4, "For if God spared not the angels that sinned, but cast them down to Tartarus (rendered hell) and delivered them into chains of darkness to be reserved unto judgment." Here Tartarus is the prison house of fallen angels only. No intimation of wicked men being there.

Hades is the place the departed spirits of wicked men are cast into. It means the unseen world, or the invisible world. The word itself expresses nothing as to character or to their condition. But we learn from other texts that Hades is a place of intense suffering. In Psalm 18: 5 it is said "that the wicked shall be turned into Hades, and all the nations that forget God." Luke 16: 23, that in Hades the rich man "lifted up his eyes, being in torments," and called for one drop of water to cool his tongue, "for I am tormented in this flame." From these texts we learn that the wicked shall be turned into Hades, only the wicked, not the righteous to be turned into Hades, and from the case of the rich man that it is a place of torments. I further state that it always relates to the soul in a disembodied state, and never to the body, so that it should never be rendered grave; for there are other Greek words that express the receptacle of the body, such as are rendered tomb, grave, etc. Hades has no such meaning in the New Testament. It admits of nothing material. Hence its true and only application in the New Testament is to the departed spirits of wicked men, during the space between death and the resurrection. I emphasize this point, (except when it is used figuratively.)

Hades being the New Testament word, we take it in its true and only application. It never applies to anything beyond the judgment. Tartarus, another Greek word, the same as Hades, applies only to things this side of the judgment, with this difference: it is the prison of the fallen angels, while Hades is the prison of wicked men, and applies to nothing beyond the judgment; therefore Hades and Tartarus cover the whole ground this side of the resurrection. The Greek word Gehenna relates entirely to the period beyond the resurrection and the judgment. It relates to the final state of the wicked, after the body is resurrected and Hades has delivered up the imprisoned spirits, and the soul and body are reunited, then both soul and body will be cast into Gehenna, which is the lake of fire, which is the second death. And Hades itself will be cast into the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone. We regard it as a thing made out that Gehenna and the lake of fire and brimstone are the same thing; for they both relate to the period beyond the judgment—both are eternal in their duration. They both apply to the final state of the wicked, and they both apply to both soul and body.

In the discussion of Gehenna I did not refer to its original history or its primary meaning in the Old Testament, but to its application in the New Testament; for it is evident that our Lord used it in reference to the punishment of both soul and body after the judgment. In Matt. 10: 28, and Matt. 18: 8, and Mark 9: 43, Gehenna is used in reference to eternal punishment of both soul and body in unquenchable fire, where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched.

Paradise is the next word. Our blessed Redeemer said to the penitent thief, "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." And Paul, when he was taken up to the third heaven, calls it Paradise; and from the account given by him it was so overwhelmingly glorious that he said he heard words not lawful to be uttered; that human language was powerless to express them. Therefore Paradise is inexpressibly glorious, and Hades is a place of torments; and they have no connection with each other. And there is no intimation in the Scriptures that Paradise is in Hades, for it is down beneath, and heaven is far above, and Paradise (as I expect to prove) is in heaven, and is a part of heaven itself. It is in the midst of the throne of God. I will prove it in this way. In Revelations 2: 7 it is written that the tree of life is in the midst of the paradise of God; and in Rev. 22: 1, 2 it is written that the tree of life stands on either side of the river of water of life; and the river of water of life proceedeth out of the throne of God and the Lamb; hence the paradise of God and the throne of God are the same thing. They both mean the same place, that is, the home of the soul during the intermediate state. When Jesus said to the penitent thief, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," he meant that he and the thief would meet in the midst of the throne of God; in other words, that they would meet in Paradise, which signifies one of the highest, holiest and happiest places in that bright world of glory. In Rev. 7: 15, John, in speaking about the saints which he saw in heaven, said, "Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them;" and Rev. 7: 17, "For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them." Recollect that John saw these saints in heaven before the judgment day. It was disembodied spirits that he saw in the midst of the throne of God. This is the same place that is the second chapter he called in the midst of paradise. This is the intermediate state of the soul; and they were in heaven, right before the throne of God. Rev. 6: 9, John "saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held." Rev. 6: 10, they "cried with a loud voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth." And white robes were given to every one of them. John saw these disembodied souls under the altar before the throne of God. This vision was before the resurrection, and heaven was their abiding place. They were praying for the general judgment to come on those who were yet on the earth, and they would not have done this had the resurrection been past. Then it is a thing made out that the souls of the dead in Christ abide in heaven during the period between death and the judgment, as Paradise is in heaven where God's throne is, where Jesus lives and reigns and leads his saints, and feeds them, and gives them to eat of the tree of life which is in the midst of the Paradise of God, and at the resurrection their souls will be reunited with their glorified bodies, and they will enter in through the gates into the holy city, the New Jerusalem.

A Faultfinder Among His Brethren.—No. 2.

BY REV. JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

BROTHER SPRINKLE.

Bro. Sprinkle was not a preacher, but an honored officer in his church. He was a good man, who believed in the doctrines of his church and zealously defended them against all assailants.

Bro. Sprinkle belonged to one of the highland tribes that cannot endure the swellings of the Jordan, but revel amid the many waters, little rivulets, and pebbly brooks of Enon near to Salim. Bro. Sprinkle thought, as do many of his brethren, that the immersion of the multitudes in Jordan by John and other administrators of Apostolic times was impracticable, nay, impossible. "Guy's Paraphrase," Vol. 1, page 18, says: "It seems, therefore, to me, that the people stood in ranks, near to, or just within the edge of the river, and John, passing along before them, cast water upon their heads or faces with his hands or some proper instrument, by which means he might easily baptize many thousands in a day."

The same sentiment has been poetically expressed by another writer, as follows:

"The Jews in Jordan were baptized;
Ergo, ingenious John devised
A scoop, or squint, or some such thing,
With which some water he might fling
Upon the long-extended rank
Of candidates that lined the bank."

This was Bro. Sprinkle's fifth, or, at least, a part of it.

I set down, however, to tell what a difficulty Bro. Sprinkle got into, and how I tried to help him out of it. It happened late in the fifties while I was Principal of the Hookerton Academy in Greene county.

There came to our quiet village a visitor in whom were combined all the qualifications and functions of lecturer, editor, politician, and preacher. His mission was to unify the contending sects of the Jordanic brethren and procure subscribers to his paper. He drew large crowds and met with very gratifying success. He took great delight in turning his batteries upon the Missionary Baptists, and my brethren of other persuasions—especially Bro. Sprinkle—were equally delighted with the performance. I was truly sorry for myself, for I was the only Baptist of our sort in the village, and I keenly felt my weakness and loneliness. I retired from the audience, "weak and wounded, sick and sore," yet hoping that Divine Providence would, according to the general law of compensation, bring to me some great joy to set over against my grief.

Hope ended in fruition and the joy came sooner than I expected. The visiting brother, with a mission, opened fire upon the advocates of infant baptism. He came down upon his admiring, highland brethren like an avalanche. So sudden and unexpected was the turn in affairs, that the highland brethren withdrew from the field badly scalded, burnt, sizzling, frying, boiling over, and sorely in need of much water to cool their rage. I could add several more figures and then fall short of an adequate description of their sad condition as they left the scene of conflict.

I was here at hand for Bro. Sprinkle as I

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

BE SURE to take advantage of the opportunity your Association offers for learning, for rejoicing, for renewing old acquaintances, for working, and for having a good time generally. The opportunity is not presented but once a year.

READ what the Christian Index man saw at the Toronto meeting of the B. Y. P. U. A. Read and beware. If such is B. Y. P. U. A. polity, then there is a difference, a great difference, between B. Y. P. U. A. polity and Baptist polity, as we know it.

FOR Christian and Popular Education. That's what we are working for now; and we are sure we have the right of it, and we know the right will win—sooner or later. It is our duty to enthrone right as soon as possible. A united effort by those who believe in this work will bring about the desired result in half a year. It is one of the easiest of duties to determine to have no representative who will not represent one.

A BROTHER writes in an exchange "four reasons why that at death one should will a part of one's property to the Lord." One who hasn't sufficient faith to give as much as he ought to while living will probably have more than four reasons for not giving at all. There are forty reasons why one should give a part of one's property to the Lord on the first day of the week while living to every four why one should give at death. Selfishness is the most common of sins, and, what is more, it is hardest to overcome among church members.

THE closing words of Sister Knight's letter to the Chowan brethren and sisters, "If you only give money because of your attachment to your missionary, then it is money poorly spent. If it is given because of attachment to the Foreign Mission Board, again would I say poorly spent," are wise and timely; and in study of them the reason why the Association withdrew support from Sister Knight is revealed, and, also, why the action of the Board is justifiable.

THERE are people who claim to comprehend every word of the Bible,—there is no limit to claims, you know; there are people who think that parts of it were not designed for human perception, and will not be revealed until heaven is attained; and there are people who are so fortunate as to comprehend so much of it that they perceive God and his goodness and wisdom in those parts they do not comprehend as well as in those parts that are clearer. So it is with the afflictions of this world. Some people claim to know all about them, explaining them by science and all that science is made to include; others don't think they are to be known, and they often spend their time bringing on wrinkles and gray hairs and early death by railing at what they cannot remedy; and others live in happy trustfulness that God has them as in the hollow of his hand, and that God is wise and good.

IF A Christian knows his or her duty—and we never saw a Christian that didn't—but never does it, what should be done? If one claims to have faith and lacks works, one is condemned. Surely one cannot know one's duty without previous acquirement of faith; so such a one should be condemned, yea, truly, is already condemned of God as a liar.

It seems to us that there is no better time than the present for cleansing our churches. To put it off is to permit hypocrisy yet another day, and that is sin. The barren branches should not be carried, if it is certain that they are barren; and there is no reason why a mistake about their barrenness should be made. The barrenness of the fig-tree is plain; a church-member without works is plainer. There is not a pastor in our State of any experience who don't know every one in his flock who says he has faith but has not works; and there's no one who doesn't know what ought to be done in such cases.

We are sure that our churches will be greater testimonies for Christ, more worthy to wear his name, if they are thoroughly purged. Inactive Christians are not Christians; they do not do any good, they cannot do any harm except to their churches. Merely because good works cannot save a soul does not argue that all regenerated souls are not engaged in doing good, and therefore one who does not do good for man in Jesus' name is not regenerated, and should not be in a Baptist church.

WISDOM THAT IS FOOLISHNESS.

Paul was very suspicious of men. He kept those who had been converted to Christ under his ministry well in mind. He went back to the places where he had preached and strengthened the cause; he wrote letters to his churches after another pastor had taken them under his care. He wrote a great deal to all Christians. He was very solicitous of the church. It seems to us that next to winning souls he spent most of his energies in maintaining the Christian character of those whom he had won.

What Paul had to contend with in his work among Christians cannot be related in few words; but one great cause of his solicitude and object of his suspicion was the wisdom of men. The people, some of them, at least, were inclined to designate themselves as "of Paul" or "of Apollos," or of one who had preached to them rather than the Christ that was preached. They placed the preacher above the word, the interpreter above the author, the symbol above the fact, the messenger above the message; and Paul was so concerned that he wrote them a letter setting forth his opinion of them, telling them the vanity of their ways, and directing them to the only foundation, the only Master. "I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. So then neither he that watereth; but God that giveth the increase." And just preceding this he had significantly asked, "Who, then, is Paul, and who is Apollos?" It was just as if to day some young convert should aver that he or she was a Christian by or under him who was in the pulpit when the conversion occurred, just as people often now attach importance to the time, place and man involved in their conversion. A man may easily create the impression upon young people that he is very important; he can attach meanings to words and sentences of the Bible that make him seem very wise, but which may not be true at all. Such is a danger of the wisdom of this world.

A preacher takes a three line text; he may preach two hours about what scholars say of that text, and never draw a correct or a good conclusion; and he can attach significance to the text that God never intended. We have all seen it. Theory after theory is brought out, and hair after hair is split as to this and that, one small word is made the subject of half an hour's speculation, and never a word is said that will make man more spiritual; but much is said that is calculated to impress one with the preacher's wisdom. This has been made possible by the wisdom of this world, the wisdom that "is foolishness with God."

It is doubtless true that scholars in their foolish wisdom have added a great deal to the Bible that the inspired writers never dreamed of. It is also true that church-members are to some degree divided according to the added meanings of foolishly wise scholars; and some call themselves of this one, some of that. In public controversy what the scholars say is quoted more often than what God said. We need to hearken unto Paul's suggestions to the Corinthians. "The wisdom that is foolishness" is destroying our spirituality.

It seems to us that the human race would be nearer simple saving faith to day if scholars had directed their presumptuous learning upon other things than God's Holy word. It seems to us that most of the troubles of Christianity have arisen from what scholars said rather than from what God said. Translations, indeed, are necessary, but only such as translate without adding jot or tittle. Was not the gospel preached to the simple and uneducated? Did it require scholars to make it clear to the first churches? Did not God know what he was about? And yet as the years have come this man and that has added his idea of God's intentions—misunderstood all the preceding centuries, if the idea is correct,—until the modern Bible student has to brush away the obscuring cobwebs of foolish wisdom, has to study for years what men have said and supposed, before he is pronounced competent to study what God has said. Biblical scholars know but little more of the Bible than any one with a good mind would learn who has studied long and well; and yet the scholars know infinitely more of other men's opinions from the day of the old Roman Catholic disputants until to-day. Some people do not think a preacher is prepared to preach until he knows what the scholars have said and imagined and assumed. To such a state of mind has the wisdom of men—whom they have placed above God—brought them.

If one cannot read the Bible and find God's entire will, so far as earth is concerned, expressed; cannot read the Bible and know what God said through the inspired writers, then that one is beyond being taught by scholars or any one else.

The Bible was made for babes in Christ as well as the old and learned. It is the simplest of books, it teaches the simplest of religions, it is wrapped about the simplest of lives; and yet these simplest of things have been subjects of foolish disputes these thousands of years, while half the world has no means of knowing that there is a Saviour.

If Christendom would ask God for wisdom to-day and forsake the scholars, if each man would have that religion that his Christian conscience approves, it would not be many days before all Christendom were laboring in concert, it would not be long before all the world would be evangelized. The wisdom that is foolishness is leading men away from God to man, leading God's preachers away from the sincere gospel to disputes and contentions, delaying the coming of the kingdom with a burden, the burden of contention and strife, that should not be known of Christians. This end Paul saw threatening the Corinthians; and he forthwith wrote that matchless letter, in which the key-note of Christian conduct is sounded in the words: "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

IF THE time and energy that is now devoted to disputing over what men think about God's word were devoted to personal work on the one faith, one Lord, one baptism plan, it would not be many days before all our energies would be concentrated on foreign fields, our home work having been fully cared for. It will be vain, if we take forever to get started right. Do the best on what wisdom God has given you, and he will give you more when necessary; meanwhile let other workers work as they think wise.

WE ARE tempted to sympathize with a man that has to come out every week or two with a declaration of principles, saying that he cannot be bought or frightened. A man of character would never think such a thing necessary; one with a good reputation would think it unnecessary; one who had confidence in his principles would despise his accuser. If a brother came to us every morning and told us he was a Christian we would begin to fear that his actions spoke otherwise and that he suspected that we had found it out. Imagine the United States proclaiming its independence every month. Christians don't have to proclaim themselves; nor do honest men. Character is never established by advertising; and never while actions speak louder than words, while daily life is a greater testimony to one's Christian principles than mere repetition of words, should any one have to resort to the latter means; for it always incites suspicion. The world seldom overlooks integrity, even if it is deceived by the worthless self-lauder sometimes.

THERE is no work like personal work. Christ went through many hardships that he might show us what it is. The modern worker may not encounter as many and as severe obstacles as he did, but one cannot encounter any obstacle that is not paralleled in the life of Jesus. His example has been a great blessing upon personal workers; it would have converted the world long ago if one-tenth of those who profess to look upon him as the great Exemplar had adopted his methods and practices; and is that not what he meant by "follow me"?

Let us get into this personal work now. Contributions alone are not sufficient. Prayers are not sufficient. Self also is needed. To give money without sacrifice is too easy to be Christ-like, to pray and not to work—that's an inconsistency that the Bible says cannot be legitimately explained. Prayers and personal work will bring about the desired result.

Now here's the trouble: You want to put off the time to begin; you want a set day for turning about. That is a subterfuge by which the devil gains time and souls. Duties are not to be put off. Begin now, and by word and deed encourage and help, lift up and succor whomsoever you can. Go to your church-meetings, to prayer-meetings, to conference, to associations and union meetings; give them the benefit of your personal prayers and personal efforts; but do not stop here; go to the poor, the sick, the fatherless and widows, give them your prayers, uplift them, succor them. That is what religion is; that is what personal work is. That is what Christians ought to be doing every day.

IT IS said that small contributions "are pouring in like a stream to the treasury of Tremont Temple, Boston." An appeal was sent out to the Baptist press of the country, and this is the response. We never published the appeal because we thought the contributions of North Carolina could be placed elsewhere better than in a great $100,000 structure in a great and rich city, where pastors' salaries are greater than the pews of our church-houses. Surely in this case it is unwise to give "to him that hath."

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

FLAT RIVER ASSOCIATION.

This body met Aug. 14th-16th, at Mountain Creek church. By ten o'clock the first day there was a large crowd of representatives from every section of the territory which compose this large body of Baptists. For the past two or three years, the farmers in this section from various causes have not realized good crops from their farms. Last year a severe storm about the first of September did great damage to the growing crops. This year they have the finest prospect that the oldest citizens ever saw. There seems to be no end to the fine tobacco and luxuriant corn crops. Already the warehousemen are out among the farmers, soliciting them to carry the golden weed to their respective markets.

School-men were present in full force. Prof. Hobgood, for the Oxford school; Bro. Stringfield, for the Female University at Raleigh; Bro. Beam, from Bethel Hill, and Bro. Thompson from Virginia.

Dr. Taylor came on Wednesday, and the brethren were delighted with the hope of hearing him in the interest of Wake Forest and upon the general subject of education. A tremendous rain storm broke up the afternoon session, the house being so crowded that it was impossible to speak with any satisfaction.

The people in this section are intelligent and have read with interest what has appeared from Dr. Taylor and others on the subject of higher education.

The reports on the different subjects were well written and most suggestive and helpful to those who spoke. The home talent of the Flat River is abundant and strong, so that under favorable circumstances no discussion lags or becomes uninteresting. Besides the preachers in the Association who are among the best in the State, there are a fine body of laymen—men like Prof. Hobgood, Street, Hester, Parham, Wilkinson, Foushee and others, whose interest in the cause and good judgment on all matters to be considered, constitute much of the activity of this body.

Bro. Willie Foushee, who recently graduated at Wake Forest, was elected Clerk of the Association. He did his work well and made a good impression on the brethren.

Bro. Mills was present and was listened to with interest while he spoke for the Orphanage.

Bro. Fontaine, whose coming to the Flat River from Virginia is hailed with joy by the brethren, was elected to preach the introductory sermon at the next annual meeting of this body.

The fifth-Sunday meetings, which were of great interest but which had been let go down, were revived with much enthusiasm by the brethren generally. This and the going back to naming of specific amounts by the delegates for the churches to attempt to raise for the different objects, struck us as hopeful signs of progress.

The entertainment provided was simply immense in quantity and most excellent in quality.

This is one of the strongholds of the RECORDER. This is an interest never forgotten by brethren Stradley, Marsh, Parham, Hester, Beam, Howard, Malone, and others. I always leave the meeting of this Association under renewed obligations to these brethren for their help and encouragement.

Bro. Hobgood is in good spirits over the prospects of a fine opening of his school next session. I spent a night pleasantly with him on my return from the Association. He is making some nice additions to the already beautiful grounds, of shrubbery, flowers, evergreens of various sorts, &c. The session opens soon, and we hope the number of girls will more than justify the hopes of Prof. Hobgood and friends of the school.

YADKIN ASSOCIATION.

This body met with Swaim's church in the western part of Yadkin county, Aug. 16th—18th. It was a pleasant trip to our representative up there, and for once he "thought he was sure enough in the mountains," Charity and Children says.

There was a good discussion on the subject of temperance; and, by the way, this matter is attracting no little attention from the Associations now. It cannot attract too much until it is clear that Christians have done all they can to prevent intemperance.

Prof. Sledd of Wake Forest made a characteristic talk in behalf of that institution. The Professor is one of the most versatile of men and even in a speech at an Association seems somewhat at home. He thoroughly interested his hearers.

The usual objects were discussed and encouraging reports made and adopted. Bro. Burrus is an able presiding officer and his impartial manner elicited the praise of the brethren. Bro. J. E. Johnson is Clerk of this body.

A visitor to the Association who was more than ordinarily interested was Rev. S. M. Brown, pastor of the First Baptist church, Kansas City, Mo. Bro. Brown is one of North Carolina's best gifts to the West. He was born in Yadkin county, being a son of Bro. W. G. Brown. He is State Mission Secretary in Missouri. His staunch North Carolina Baptist principles were manifested in a series of articles he wrote for the RECORDER last winter. We hope to have a visit or hear from Bro. Brown before he returns.

The Association was unusually well attended, and it seems to be growing in size, in interest and in zeal for the Lord. The body will meet with Antioch church, Surry county, next year.

....The Baptist City Missionary Society of Richmond dedicated a "Gospel Tent" for revival purposes, which recently came into its possession, last Sunday. Dr. J. H. Hiden has been holding services in the tent.

....While Bro. G. W. Greene's message from China in this issue is not reassuring, it is well to note that Sister Knight, whose letter is dated nine days later, doesn't seem to anticipate any unusual disturbance.

.... Rev. Rufus Ford of Newbern came through Raleigh on his return home last week. He remained over through Sunday and preached for Bro. Stringfield. We were glad to have a visit from him while in Raleigh.

....The Yadkin Association has voted unanimously to debar any church from it that retains members who use or deal in intoxicating liquors. A good resolution, if the Association and the churches will observe it.

....We learn from the Gastonia Gazette that Rev. M. P. Matheny has recently closed a meeting at Mt. Holly, in which there were five additions to the church membership. Rev. J. J. Payseur is helping Bro. Matheny at Belmont now.

....The RECORDER's offer of four months' subscription for half a dollar still holds good. Our list is growing, but not so fast as it ought in this important period of our work. Make a final effort this week. Sample copies sent on request.

....Keep our offer of the RECORDER from now until the new year for fifty cents, in mind. Information must be spread. A little work now will tell mightily before the year is out. Send the name now and the money later, if you see proper.

....Rather than go to the expense of printing, directing and mailing a great number of reminders, we have waited until now, relying upon our suscribers to regard the label on their paper. Look now; and send us a part at least of the amount due.

....Rev. W. C. Newton visited our office last Saturday while on his way to an appointment. He stated that he had no further news of his father's illness than that he was stricken with typhoid fever in July. The prayers of Christians are requested.

....Rev. W. B. Morton of Louisburg made a pleasant visit to our office last week. He was on his way to his old home at Lilesville, where he will spend a vacation. While here he made it convenient, of course, to attend the lecture by Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr.

....The Baptist Chronicle of Louisiana got out an illustrated edition recently, the occasion being the annual State Convention. Among others to were pleased to see the likeness of our old friend Dr. W. I. Penick, pastor of the church at Shreveport, La.

....Rev. Dr. Thomas Hume of the State University has been preaching in the Baptist and Presbyterian pulpits at Harrison, Va., by special invitation, this summer, says the Wilmington Messenger. Brother Hume's summer home is Waynesboro, Va.

....Rev. Jno. A. Summey of Hanesville writes us of a good meeting at his Liberty church. Rev. Henry Sheets preached with great power, and there were eighteen accessions to the church, and such a revival among the members as is seldom witnessed.

....Dr. W. H. Edwards called on us last Monday, and reported having held a good meeting at Mt. Gilead, Chatham county. There were eight additions. Bro. Edwards baptized three at Merry Oaks Sunday.

....Rev. R. T. Chambers, lately accepted by our Board as a foreign missionary and at present assisting Bro. Willingham, Secretary of the Board, married Miss Mattie Hall a Baptist young lady of Richmond, Va., the 29th.

....Wake Forest College opens before another issue of the RECORDER reaches its readers. At present there is every prospect of a large attendance and unusually good work. Probable attendance is estimated at about 200 first week and 250 the entire year.

....Rev. S. F. Bristoe of Colerain reports two meetings: one at Bethany in which Bro. Jordan preached, and after which Bro. Bristoe baptized eight converts; another, at Colerain, which resulted in nine baptisms. Bro. B. B. Williams helped, and the congregation did good work.

....Those who lay the flattering unction to their souls that the cause of Christian and popular education is waning must be entirely out of touch with the people. From all directions we hear that the friends of Christian and popular education are increasing in number and in zeal.

....Dr. W. B. Royall closed a meeting at Rolesville the 21st inst. There were many evidences of the presence of the Spirit; and eighteen persons professed conversion. Several were restored. Rev. A. Cree, Jr., was with Bro. Royall in this meeting. He is now visiting his father at Roxobel.

....Rev. J. A. Bivens is helping Rev. J. L. Bennett in a meeting at Polkton. The protracted meeting in the Baptist church at Union in Lane's Creek township is very interesting. The meeting is conducted by Pastor J. W. Little. The church has been organized recently.—Monroe Enquirer, August 23.

....Dr. Pritchard left for New York City Monday, to be gone a month. He will supply the Central Baptist church while there. Rev. C. S. Cashwell of Hickory will preach here for him the first and second Sundays, and Rev. L. R. Pruitt and Dr. Jno. Mitchell the third and fourth.—Charlotte Observer, Aug. 26.

....Young men are becoming interested in the question of the State's educational policy. Among other constant inquiries and applications for information, two young men wrote us last week that they were preparing to make addresses upon the subject. That's the way; personal efforts are effective when nothing else is.

....Rev. J. T. Riddick of Bethel Hill informs us that he engaged in a meeting at Mountain Creek church recently, in which there were thirty-two professions of conversion; he has baptized seventeen. Bro. Riddick has been pastor there nine months, and he is so well pleased that he will stay with them another year.

....The brother who is too tired, too busy, too indifferent, or who has so many lodge meetings to attend, that he cannot go to prayer-meeting, ought to read his Bible and pray a great deal, and do much Christian work, or else he will grow cold, careless, useless, unhappy, and in the Christian life, dwarfed.—J. A. Stradley.

....Rev. J. Q Adams of this place closed a very successful meeting at Peachland last Sunday night. There were eight accessions to the church and twelve or fifteen conversions. Very large congregations attended all the services, and the entire community was profoundly stirred.—Wadesboro Messenger and Intelligencer, Aug. 23.

....The RECORDER has several excellent books on hand that it will review as soon as possible. Semple's History of Virginia Baptists, a model State Baptist History; "Anglo Israel Jewish Problem;" "The Road to Wealth Leads Through the South;" "Ills of the South;" and others, including some hymn-books, shall have early attention.

....Rev. T. Bright writes from Forest City the 23d: "The revival at New Hope church, Cleveland county, closed the 21st. There were about thirty additions to the church. I baptized twenty-three, one being eleven years old, another eighty. This was a glorious meeting. I start to Milford tomorrow to hold a meeting of several days."

....New Hope Baptist church has had a wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit, twenty-four having been baptized and joined the church.——A protracted meeting has just closed at Elizabeth Baptist church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr. As a result of the meeting fourteen were baptized and joined the church.—Shelby Review, Aug. 23.

....Prof. G. F. Hankins, of whom many a Wake Forest boy has pleasant memories, has taken charge of Antioch Seminary in the Western part of the State. He writes that Prof. C. P. Sapp, another Wake Forest man, is meeting with gratifying success as teacher at Mars Hill College; and that he himself is feeling at home in a community of regular Wake Forest people.

....The editor of the Western Recorder and Rev. C. H. Jones had accepted invitations to take part in a late Sunday-school convention in Kentucky; but having found out that two women speakers were on the program, they declined point blank. Good. Bro. Eaton well says: "The Holy Spirit distinctly and unconditionally forbids women's addressing public assemblies of men and women."

....An interested audience attended the Middle North Carolina Road Conference last week at Raleigh. Many counties were interested; and the discussions will no doubt be fruitful. Our next issue will contain an article prepared for the conference by State Geologist Holmes, entitled "Good Roads and Country Church Going," which received many commendations. It will be followed by another article on making roads.

....Bro. B. E. Bostick writes that we were correct in stating that Bro. J. B. Bostick, Asheville, N. C., will receive and forward all money sent to him for the Gospel missionaries. So the brethren who wrote us will act accordingly. Receipts will be acknowledged in Charity and Children and the Gospel Watchman. Money sent to Rev. R. L. Patton, Morganton, N. C., will be forwarded to Bro. J. B. Bostick at Asheville.

....All preparations have been completed for raising the new church building at Macon—the land, the lumber and the workmen at hand. Enough money has been received to weatherboard and cover the building. We feel like congratulating Bro. Jno. H. Nicholson, to whose untiring efforts the hold we have at Macon is largely due. Services are held there every fourth Sunday for the present in a warehouse, by Bro. Fant, under the Warren Union.

....Rev. A. M. Simms will have been pastor of the Raleigh Baptist Tabernacle one year next Sunday. Bro. Simms has endeared himself not only to his flock but to many others since he came to Raleigh. The Tabernacle work has grown, and his congregation seems united and zealous. Morover, a decided impetus has been given to Raleigh Baptist work by Bro. Simm's presence and interest. We congratulate him and the Tabernacle, and wish them many returns of the day.

....The thirteenth annual State Sunday-school Convention at Durham last week was of unusual interest. An excellent program had been arranged, and several eminent speakers secured. Bishop W. W. Duncan, J. H. Southgate, Prof. J. W. Gore, Prof. F. S. Blair, William Reynolds, Prof. W. L. Poteat, Bishop Rondthaler, and Bro. N. B. Broughton took prominent parts. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, N. B. Broughton; Treasurer, James H. Southgate, Jr.; Corresponding Secretary, M. H. Muse; Superintendent of Primary Work, W. H. Dodd; Superintendent of Normal Work, Prof. L. T. Blair. Bro. W. A. Albright is one of the Executive Committee.

....Rev. Thos. Dixon, Jr., delivered his lecture, "The Gates of Heaven and Hell in Modern Babylon" in Raleigh on the night of the 14th inst. The lecture deals with the problem of the city, which by common consent is the civil problem of the times. There is nothing sensational in the lecture. If the speaker's manner is sensational, it was born with him, and we suppose he can't help it. Bro. Dixon had facts; and he made them very impressive by a delivery that many have imitated but none have attained. The lecture is highly instructive, and never a moment is allowed for interest to wane. We enjoyed a visit from Bro. Dixon during his short stay. He spent the remainder of the week with his venerable father at Shelby.

....Rev. L. G. Broughton writes from Roanoke, Va., the 22d inst.: "Am just back from the Valley Association. It is an active body; there are sixty five churches in its bounds. Our Calvary church was able to report a net gain in membership the last eight months of 144. Our contractor is under bond to give us our new house of worship Nov. 15th. It will seat 1,000 people with a Sunday-school as large. Rev. J. L. White of Asheville is to help me in a meeting as soon as we get the church completed. Rev. P. A. Anthony, a Wake Forest boy, though a Virginian, has taken charge of East Roanoke church. He starts off well. I will be at the Sunday-school Chautauqua. Rev. Jno. A. Wray of Knoxville was in our prayer meeting last week on his way to Winston. He goes to as good a land as ever the Lord made."

From Rev. G. W. Greene, China.

Written to Mr. Jos. G. Brown of Raleigh, from Canton, China, under date July 9th:

"The last month or two has given us a taste of the anti-foreign bitterness so easily stirred up among the Chinese. There has been a fearful scourge of bubonic plague in Canton and among the Chinese in Hongkong. Scarcely any foreigners had it, and the Chinese persuaded themselves that the foreigners were to blame for its being among them. They also charged that the European authorities of Hongkong brutally treated those afflicted with the plague. These reports were industriously circulated by placards all over two provinces, and for a time there was intense excitement and some riots. Two lady physicians (Americans) were stoned and considerably hurt in a village across the river from Canton, one native preacher was killed, and several chapels destroyed, and two colporters severely beaten, in the county around Canton. But everything seems to be growing quiet again."

Stovall—Island Creek.

From the second Sabbath in July the meeting at Stovall was protracted six days. Rev. R. Van Deventer aided the pastor. His preaching was greatly enjoyed. About twenty professed faith. Seventeen have been added to the church; twelve by baptism and five by letter. Three others have been approved for baptism. It was a precious meeting.

From the third Sabbath in July the meeting at Island Creek was continued six days. The pastor had no ministerial aid. It was a meeting of great power. There were about thirty professions of faith. Twenty five have been baptized, one restored, and three others have been approved for baptism.

J. A. STRADLEY, Pastor.

CORRECTION.—It is stated in the first column of our first page that the word demonttist is not defined in Stormonth's dictionary. Since the "outside" of this paper was printed we have found that this is a mistake. Stormonth and the Standard agree in their respective definitions of the word.

Capt. S. A. Ashe has announced himself as a candidate for the U. S. Senate to the seat occupied by the late Senator Vance.

A Statement from China.

TO MY BRETHREN AND SISTERS OF THE CHOWAN ASSOCIATION WHO PROMISED TO SUPPORT ME IN CHINA:

I hope you will give me your attention while I make this

STATEMENT:

It is not my plans of mission work which have undergone a change. The policy of the Board's missionaries of North China has changed, and their plans of work are very, very different from what they were one year ago. I will give you as many facts to prove my statement as you desire.

I do not choose to labor under their "new dispensation," as one of their number has appropriately called this introduction of subsidizing elements into the work. Nay, verily, I prefer to suffer afflictions with those of right principles rather than enjoy the pleasures of a "big" salary and flattering encomiums for a season. I only asked you to give me less money and send it directly to me, in order that the fragments be saved and nothing lost.

If you have said that you will withdraw support from her whom no one has called unfaithful, then let me inform you that the North China Mission, without consulting you, the Board, or your humble sister, have withheld my salary for three and one half months. Not one cent have I received from any source since the last of March. I do not give this information to excite pity. I do not want any money which is given through pity for the "poor missionary." My support is a small matter: I could earn that if I were in America, but I want justice to God's work and to His laborers wherever or whoever they be. I have not suffered for any good thing. I shall not suffer, for He who feeds the little sparrows still careth for me. If you let me know certainly that it is the voice of those who have supported me with your prayers and your gifts, which is echoed in "J. C. C.'s" account of the last session of the Chowan Association, then I turn away, though with sadness. At the same time, with the news from my Association as recorded in the RECORDER of May 30th, came a letter from an unexpected source requesting that I might be adopted by the churches of another Association.

What shall I do, brethren and sisters? If you only give the money because of your attachment to your missionary, then it is money poorly spent. If it is given because of attachment to the Foreign Mission Board, again would I say poorly spent.

Yours in earnest for missions.

F. S. KNIGHT.

Notes From the East.

Dear Recorder:—Dr. C. S. Blackwell is spending his much needed vacation on the beach, and your correspondent is supplying his pulpit in his absence. The Doctor has done good work here since he came among us, and his church is now in excellent working condition. Besides his regular work here, he preaches twice a month at Salem, a church about twelve miles in the country, at which place he has recently conducted a protracted meeting that resulted in the addition of ten or twelve members to the church. Brethren Wood of Sawyer's Creek and Saunders of Murfreesboro have just closed a delightful meeting at old Ramoth Gilead church as a result of which six were baptized and two restored to church fellowship.

Owing to the serious illness of his aged and faithful wife, Dr. R. H. Overby could not be with his church at South Mills in its meeting last week. But we are told that it was a glorious meeting, resulting in twenty-four additions to the church. It was conducted by brethren Josiah Elliott and S. B. Overton. Bro. Elliott says that the church seems to be thoroughly revived, and is once more united and harmonious.

The recent meeting of the Yeopim Union was one of the most pleasant and prosperous in its history. Rev. W. B. Waff preached the introductory sermon, which means, of course, that it was a good one. Perhaps the most interesting feature of the session was the discussion on the present ruinous and unjust policy pursued by the State in giving aid to higher education at the expense of common schools and the denominational colleges. The audience, as well as the speakers, seemed to think that the views set forth so forcibly by Dr. Taylor were such as every loyal and patriotic citizens should hold.

Old Reynoldson Academy seems to have recently taken on a new lease of life. The boom inaugurated last year by Prof. J. G. Mills has been continued this year by Prof. M. O. Carpenter who graduated from Wake Forest last week. This is an old and famous institution and deserves to live and flourish. J. PAUL SPENCE.

Elizabeth City, August 20, 1894.

Church Action Rescinded.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Two years ago in September the Gold Hill Baptist church brought a charge against Rev. J. C. Denny and excluded him. Since that time the church has seen that they made a mistake, and in justice to Bro. Denny, to ourselves and to the cause, we wish you to publish our reconsideration as you did our first action. It is as follows:

We, the Gold Hill Baptist church, met in conference Tuesday night, Aug. 7, 1894, and on motion reconsidered Bro. J. C. Denny's case and finding no evidence to prove the charge, we therefore rescinded our former action and ask him to pardon our blunder.

L. D. MCCORMICK, Church Clerk.

Col. Wm. H. Richardson, a well known newspaper man, and at the time of his death City Editor of the Raleigh Daily Press, died on the 23d inst.

Congress adjourned on Tuesday, 28th inst., and the new tariff bill is a law.

Pinnacle and Mount Airy.

It was my pleasure to visit Pinnacle, N. C., and spend nine days there from Sunday, Aug. 12th, to Monday, the 20th, in a meeting with Bro. C. C. Haymore, who is pastor of Shiloh church at that place. The meetings were well attended and we hope good accomplished. Shiloh is a good church, beautiful for situation, and shepherded by a true man. My home was with Bro. E. W. Culler, a reader of the RECORDER, an exemplary Christian, and a fine business man. His wife knows how to make home happy and visitors comfortable.

Prof. W. L. Poteat and wife, mother and sisters were visiting relatives there, and made it more interesting to me. This modest man, scholar, Christian, and representative of Wake Forest is my ideal of a Christian gentleman.

I would like to say more about the people and beautiful surroundings of this place, but want of space forbids. I came up home with Bro. Haymore to spend a few days here in Mount Airy. I am glad I came, for it is a delightful spot, and he has a charming home. Maj. Robert Galloway, who has so largely builded the town, is going to take me out to the White Sulphur Springs this evening. No place in North Carolina has a brighter future than Mount Airy.

On leaving these beautiful heights I go to Leaksville, where I have an engagement to meet my friend and schoolmate, "Cujus Jones," pastor of the First Baptist church in Chattanooga, Tenn. We will spend a few days amid the scenes of our boyhood days together, and then go back to our fields of labor. J. H. LAMBERTH.

Evangelists, and their Methods.

The class of preachers known among us as "Evangelists" seems to be on the increase, and our people are, as a rule, becoming more familiar with them and their methods of procedure in winning souls. Speaking in general terms, evangelists are certainly possessed of one great and important, and, we may say, absolutely essential qualification in the prosecution of their work, and that is intense earnestness. Without this, all evangelistic effort is a failure. A humdrum "poke-easy," going about attempting the work of an evangelist, and lacking intensity of purpose, both in manner and method, would simply be ridiculous to saint and sinner everywhere.

But while we admire the vim and the vigor, the fire and the zeal of the specialist, in the line of work indicated, and oft as we sit under their burning words and feel our own souls becoming all aglow with the same sacred flame, yet we cannot help criticising to some extent the apparently new methods of drawing out and "catching," so to speak, the sinners before them, in order to commit themselves to those same methods.

All evangelistic methods are not equally objectionable: some are much more so than others; but if we would save men, under God we must arouse the slumberer from his death-like sleep, and show him the only Saviour, even Jesus, ready to save.

In four meetings with an evangelist, Rev. J. T. Jenkins, we have found few objectionable methods. We have not always approved, but have borne quietly, giving hearty sanction when and where we could, and withholding it when we could not approve; but, on the whole, we have had real pleasure and comfort in working with this faithful and fearless, open and candid, and intensely zealous brother, whose labors as an evangelist God abundantly blesses in all places where invited by pastors of our churches.

Twelve at Manchester were baptized; ten at Lebanon; fifteen received at Mount Gilead, and several at Dunn, while quite a number at all these professed to accept Christ, who did not unite with our people.

The Dunn meeting under Rev. J. T. Jenkins was soul-stirring and fruitful, although the church is without a pastor, and was even while the meeting was held, but the brethren were revived, and great good, no doubt, will result from the work and labors of the evangelist.

May God bless Bro. J. T. Jenkins, our Baptist evangelist, wherever he goes.

had been for myself. For while the roar of artillery was a cooling, healing balm, and a delightful serenade to me, it was a rumbling earthquake, forked lightning and balls of fire to Bro. Sprinkle.

He walked with me to my room, and talked faster than he walked.

"Brother Albritton," said he, "did you ever hear the like?"

"Well—no," said I, "not exactly the same."

"What audacity in him to say there is not in the whole Bible one example of infant baptism, or one command requiring it!"

"It was a bold assertion, Bro. Sprinkle," said I, "but it has often been made before."

"Why, I don't profess to know a great deal about the Bible; but I know more than one passage that clearly proves the practice of baptising infants in Apostolic times."

"You do!" said I.

"Of course, I do!" said he. "When we get to your study, give me a Bible, and I'll show them to you."

"Good!" said I. "You need not find but one passage, as it is getting late, and one will do as well as a dozen. When you find it, we'll enter into a confederacy and whip that fellow to-morrow right out of countenance. I mean, we'll whip him metaphorically," I added, lest Bro. Sprinkle, in his unhappy state of mind, should interpret the language literally.

Bro. Sprinkle was pleased, and when I disclosed to him the fact that a small fortune lay almost within his grasp, his curiosity was raised to a white heat.

"How is that?" said he.

Said I, "There is a fellow in Tennessee who has in bank $1,000 to be paid to the first man or woman that finds one plain example of infant baptism or command for it in the Bible. Now I propose that, as soon as you find one passage, I will forward it, draw the money, and turn over to you $500, or one-half of it."

"Agreed!" said he. "It's the easiest money I ever made."

"Better wait until you make it," I cautiously suggested.

By this time Bro. Sprinkle and I were seated in my study and hard at work, he with a Bible, and I with a concordance.

"The plainest passage that I can now think of," said Bro. Sprinkle, is the one that reads, 'Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me and be baptized; for of such is the kingdom of heaven.'"

"Good, sir! if that's in the Bible, we will have the money at once," said I encouragingly.

"It's there; for I've read it time and again, but I can't find it just now," said Brother Sprinkle.

Turning to the word "suffer" in my concordance, I told him to look for Matt. 19: 14

"Here it is!" he exclaimed, and hurriedly read, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me and be baptized: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Joyful over the completeness of his triumph, he threw the book upon the table, and asked me what stronger proof-text did I want.

I told him it was strong enough. It would certainly bring inglorious defeat to the visiting brother, and a thousand dollars to our impecunious pocket-books. "But," said I, "Bro. Sprinkle, you are excited, you read too rapidly. I wish you would read it again and slowly."

He read slowly, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me—and—and—and—"

"And what?" said I.

"Really, there is no 'and be baptized' here; but I thought there was. I am sure I have seen the words somewhere."

Still looking at my concordance, I told him to turn to Mark 10: 14, where he would find the same passage or one much like it. He failed to find the much-wished-for words there. Finally, I directed him to Luke 18: 16. But the missing words were not there. I had done my best for Bro. Sprinkle, but I saw that he wore a look of distrust and suspicion, as he asked me the question:

"Isn't your Bible a Baptist Bible?"

It is like your Bible," I said, "and all other Bibles in the community; and I confess that they all favor the Baptist view of baptism; but I cannot say they are Baptist Bibles."

"Well, I don't believe my Bible is like yours. I'll go home and see." So saying, he arose to retire.

"Hold on," said I, "can't you think of any other passage?"

"Not now," impatiently answered Bro. Sprinkle.

"Neither can I; but my sympathy for you," I tenderly said to him, "moves me to render you all the help of which I am capable; and there is one passage in my mind that, while it might fail to overwhelm the visiting brother who has made war upon the infant rite, or to draw the $1,000 from the Tennessee fellow, has been quoted as giving support to your practice of baptizing infants."

"Where is it?" eagerly asked Bro. Sprinkle, picking up the Bible.

I told him to turn to 1 Peter 2: 13, and read until I told him to stop. He read: "Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake."

"Stop! that's far enough. That's the strongest proof-text I know of," I said as comfortingly as I could.

But Bro. Sprinkle went out with a mingled expression upon his face, that I have never been able fully to interpret. He didn't seem to be very happy. I am still wondering what was the matter with Bro. Sprinkle.

A dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral taken in time has prevented many a fit of sickness and saved numerous lives. This proves the necessity of keeping this incomparable medicine where it can be readily reached at all hours of the day and night.

New People's Dictionary.

It is with pleasure that we add our judgment of "The New Standard Dictionary." From the best information we regard it as the first complete scientific work of the kind which has been published. A study of the names of those who have given their time and thought to the "Standard Dictionary" shows that in every instance they have been carefully selected, and after an examination of the work, we must admit that it has been prepared with great thoroughness and with a keen discriminating sense of what the public needs.

It would seem as if no pains had been spared to make the Dictionary complete within the limits assigned for it, and it occupies a place among the dictionaries of the English language which had not been occupied before, and which it ought to hold for several generations.

The growth of the language in its volume of words is almost beyond belief. When Dr. Johnson published his dictionary, he brought the language within 45,000 words; Stormonth raised the list to 50,000, Worcester to 105,000, Webster (International) to 125,000, the Century to 225,000, and the Standard to nearly 300,000. Thousands of words are here admitted for the first time into a general dictionary, and over 4,000 have come from the electrical developments of the last few years. The space gained by throwing out obsolete words, or those which are of no practical value, has been many times occupied by the introduction of living words that should be found in a dictionary that appeals to the whole of the English speaking race.

Another point of great importance is the grouping of derived words around their primitives. This was a feature attempted by the Century, but it has been immensely enlarged upon in the Standard, and a great many compound words that needed only the briefest definition have been brought under the chief words from which they were derived and defined by a single phrase suited to each case. This plan saves space and time. It is of immense service to the student to have the stem word and its compounds with other words grouped where they can be read immediately, and hundreds of times in the Standard long lists of scientific terms are brought together under the heading of the root which enters uniformly into all their compounds. It is not only a book of definitions, but explains and throws light upon phrases in common use and shows what their authority is and what they mean.

The Standard Dictionary occupies about 2,300 folio pages of three columns each, cost about $1,000,000, and the editor wisely says that it has levied contributions upon nearly every living person who could furnish something of value to its pages.

A notable feature of the Standard is the extent to which it has come under the control and guidance of experts. All dictionaries reach their perfection in this way, but the Standard seems to have been specially indebted to experts in different departments of knowledge for its accuracy and thoroughness and discrimination.

It is surprisingly full of information on every point in which a dictionary ought to be strong, and it is so thoroughly systematized and so easily accessible that it can be consulted easily and satisfactorily. It has eminent usefulness as a school dictionary. It is particularly valuable in the definition of scientific terms, and it is rich in its service in presenting the classification of the sciences. It is not surprising that leading scholars and literary men all over the country have recognized the Standard with a growing sense of its value. It is a monument of the highest character which the publishers of this work have reared in honor of the English language, and it is a marvel that in the last four years such a work should have been prepared. It is evident that in its preparation no pains have been spared to make it an authority in every department of knowledge, and it is plain that great care has been exercised at every point to avoid the introduction of superfluous matter. It will find its way everywhere by its abundant and original merits.

We take pleasure in calling attention to the advertisement of this wonderful work in this issue of our paper, and that the State Agency for North Carolina has fallen upon the shoulders of Mr. Wayne Allcott, a man we believe fully capable of pushing the sale of this extremely valuable work as it deserves in our State. Let us all be wise and purchase a copy of this great work and enjoy its valuable information for so little cost.

An Eastern Letter—Conversions, Baptisms, &c.

Dear Recorder:—Five weeks ago I left my home and family for Hamilton on Roanoke river. There I met Bro. E. J. Edwards engaged in a meeting. We labored there ten days, resulting in much good to the church. At the close of the meeting, Bro. Edwards disturbed the waters of the Roanoke. We hold in kind remembrance the Sheridans, Robersons, Pipkins, Saulsberrys, Williamsons, and others whose names I have not room to mention.

I spent a few days at Williamson in Bro. Edwards' home. I visited his church and was much impressed with his excellent people and the work of the church.

Eastern Carolina is the finest country in which I have traveled, either in this State or in the States of Georgia, South Carolina or Virginia. But where there are advantages, there are some disadvantages. The trouble with Eastern North Carolina is whiskey, "Hardshelliam," and worldliness.

I like the borders of the old Cape Fear the best; so I next put my foot on the sand at Shiloh church, with Brother E. C. Beard, preaching for his people seven days, which was attended with a great awakening among the unsaved. A forty-eight hours' rain broke up the work for the present; but it will be resumed at the next meeting. Sixteen were received for baptism. Bro. Joseph Fisher came in and did some excellent preaching.

Next we stopped at White Oak, in charge of Bro. Wm. Brunt. Here we labored six days and nights until we wore our lungs and body down, and had to call a halt for a few days' rest, suffering with great hoarseness. This meeting was truly a gracious one. At first call penitents responded, and continued to increase. When we left Monday night, the 13th ult., there were fifty penitents at the front seats. Bro. Fisher was present and did well his part in the meeting; so were brethren E. C. Beard, W. S. Melvin and Ellis, all working in harmony. We await the results. These people are among earth's nobility. We were nearly overwhelmed with their kindness and helpfulness. Bro. Brunt is included in this statement. The country is grand; money not very plentiful, but milk and honey, bread and butter, pork and hominy are in abundance. Bright-eyed young people are numerous, and there is a good academy building for school purposes. Besides they have the largest church house in the county, and during the meeting it was well packed, many standing at the entrance, &c. I am not able to say how many were present during the series of services, but probably between 400 and 500 people. Many stated they were benefited. I never preached with as much freedom as I did during the last three nights of my stay, and also enjoyed talking to and instructing the penitents.

I am now at home resting and doctoring my throat for another campaign in South Carolina. After my return, I shall go to Shiloh; then to Beaverdam, where I will meet Bro. R. C. Sanderling, and thence to various points with Brother W. S. Melvin, closing my round of labors on or about the the third Sabbath in September.

Other brethren and churches desiring my services later can let me know in due time. (All through Brother Brunt spoke of Brother Fisher as "wheel-horses.") I have no power only as God gives it. I am trying to devote my time to evangelistic work. I will say that no one will have cause to regret inviting Bro. Fisher in this work of winning souls to Jesus. We have no clap-trap methods: prayer and faith are our supports. God be with your readers.

Saved Her Life.

Mrs. C. J. WOOLDRIDGE, of Wortham, Texas, saved the life of her child by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"One of my children had Croup. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe. Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doses, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."

Christian Character.

BY REV. H. C. STANDRIDGE.

1. Christian character is something very unlike natural character. Natural character is that which comes with us into the world. Moral character is the natural, rather tamed, by being kept in good company. Or it is the natural, fettered by so much long and tedious good discipline, that some good habits are formed. Character is what a person is, and not what may be said of one. Reputation is not character, but is the best proof of it. Christian character is of a peculiar origin, and primarily and pre-eminently an excellent grace. It is the work of the Holy Spirit on the soul, changing all of its desires toward holiness. It makes a remarkable impress in our memories, in our minds, in our hearts and in our affections. It is soul-revolutionary in its advent; we never can forget it. It is a new life—a life from death eternal, to life evermore. It means salvation from condemnation. This life is evidenced by the most wonderful potentialities. This Christian character is made up of the most noble principles. They are heaven-born.

2. Love is one constituent factor in this marvelous character. Not mere natural love, but something more, higher and purer. There is a law of natural love in man which may be denominated the highest instinct. But it is selfish and blind, when compared with this noble principle of love that abides as part of Christian character. Divine love pervades a broader and deeper space of the soul. It reaches out after things that are good, righteous and heavenly. It does not abolish those affections of nature that are legitimate in their tendency, but gives them strength and lustre, and becomes their finishing touch. This Christian love looks up to God as its supreme object. It sympathizes with fallen humanity, prays for its enemies, hates sin, and loves sinners. It is the chief antidote against universal confusion. It sets in tune that discordant soul which knew no harmony with God. It draws back the wandering child to its Heavenly Father. Love is the golden chain that binds the faithful in one great brotherhood. Love is the ever-blooming flower of Christian character. It is the adamantine chord of ecclesia—the driving-wheel to good works. When the soul is tossed, as a ship at sea, by the powers of darkness, love to God will lower the sails, calm the crew, and save from wreck. When anger would rage and break forth in destruction, love awakens the cry of eternal mercy, and prevents devastation. Or, when blind enmity would stain its hands in the blood of the innocent, it says, pity them, for they know not what they do. When our tongues would throw off poison, love hears the call, "return not railing for railing." Love is the white flag of peace planted on the highest pinnacle of the soul: its rolls are unfurled and waved over the world by Immanuel's breath. Nowhere else can these peaceful colors be found; no other point is suitable. The Holy Spirit put the ensign there, and left it there to signalize its victories, and declare its possession forever and ever: it is an everlasting memorial.

Spiritual love finds its beauty in holiness, and pleasure in the praise of its God. Its delight is in the law of the Lord, and its glories in raising the world to the high planes of faith. This love is like Christ its giver, changing the heart of man more and more like the Messiah, until it shall be made fit for those mansions not made with hands. Without it, life is a failure, hope unfounded and faith a myth.

"Oh, it would be
A world without a sun,
Cold as the snow-capped mountains,
Dark as the myriad nights in one,
A barren scene without one spot
Amidst the waste,
Without one blossom of delight
Of feeling, or of taste."

3. Kindness is another feature of Christian character. It is unique in the world of expressions, sublime in its force and simple in display. All people and tongues can speak it. All minds can understand it. It is a language of purest diction and simplest euphony. One has said, it is a harp on which the tiniest fingers may play heaven's sweetest music on earth. Kindness is so mysteriously connected with love, that it may be said to grow as a grafted bough, or rather as the fruitage of it. And its association with pity is as the bending knee to prayer, or the tearful eye to a melting heart.

Kindness is as varied in its offices as the world of flowers. To the downtrodden it stretches forth its tender hand to lift them up; to the thirsty, it gives a cup of cold water; to the hungry, a loaf of bread. To the restless, weary soul, it points to the shades of grace, and to Christ the great rock in a weary land. To the sorrowing and despairing, it would dry up their tears and heal their pain. The pillows 'neath the aching head are softened by its deeds: it is much found in the house of mourning. It goes on the battle-field; it wanders among the disease stricken and in the destitute homes, visits the prisons, makes donations, builds almshouses, and works and prays for the betterment of fallen humanity. Kindness to the hearts of men is like the summer dew to the flowers, or as the showers to the parching fields. This blessed principle does not grow and thrive in every heart, but is found only in the renewed, only in good ground, where it has been prepared by the Holy Spirit.

4. Humility is the evergreen of a Christian heart; it is the under-carpet of a rich scene. It is like a twin-sister to charity; like Christ it can commune with publicans and sinners in order to do them good. The prayer of the publican, "God, be merciful to me a sinner," is the true poetry of humility; or like Samuel, when he said, "Speak, Lord, thy servant heareth," or like Moses at the burning-bush, will take off its shoes at the command of the Master. Humility gives to man what Christ said to Zacchæus, "Come down." This is the good seed planted within the soul by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit. It is a creature that is found in no character-climate, but that of the Christian's. Paul learned it when on his way to Damascus. Jonah when in the fish's belly, and Nebuchadnezzar after seven long years of judgment lecture in the fields with the beasts, got some smattering notion of its importance. The Pharisee thanked his God that he was not like other men, because there was no humility in his soul. Christ gave the most perfect teachings on this principle and the only full and faultless examples. His life is the living rule of humbleness, and those that have this living gift are known by their conformity to this rule, and their fruits are after the kind of Christ, the great tree of life. Humility is the heaviness of the cross. It is the powerful foe to the world, the flesh and the Devil. The humble shall be lifted up by the power of God and shall be victorious by the might and glory of his promises. Humility like death tends to a universal. God's mingled judgments admonish the world to humility; and Sinai's awful thunders, her smoking top, her sounding body and playing lightnings amid the swelling peals of the trump of Jehovah, are beseeching mankind to the humility found in Christ our Lord. Humility is a most wonderful attribute of the blood-washed throng: it is so powerful that all the forces of hell cannot smother it out. It is so buoyant that the floods of sorrow cannot drown it—so vital that the chilly winds from the polar regions of sin do not destroy its vigor nor stop its ever-blooming energies. It shall triumph most gloriously, and like the polished opal-stone, shall show many features of grace divine now and ever more.

Individual Effort.

Applied Christianity will avail to avert the dangers which appear in the clouds of our horizon to-day. Every man, woman and child who dares to hope that his own sins are pardoned, his own name registered above, must prove his love to country, to God, and his fellowmen by earnest individual effort to carry the gospel to every home and to every darkened heart for whom Christ has died, and then, and not till then, will that matchless prayer of our Lord, "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven," cease to be a mockery on the lips of the professed followers of Jesus.

Recommendations of the Home Board to the Woman's Missionary Union.

ADOPTED AT ANNUAL MEETING IN DALLAS, MAY 11, 1894.

1. The Home Board would emphasize the need of moneyed contributions for the support of missionaries and their families on the frontier, and in other places of great destitution.

2. That there be a continuation of the blessed work of sending boxes to the missionaries.

3. The Board asks aid in its work for Cuban schools, among the foreign population, the Germans in Baltimore, St. Louis, Kansas City, Louisville, and other places, the Chinese, the Cubans in Florida, the Mexicans in Texas and New Mexico, and especially for the colored women in and around our homes.

4. The Board, having requested the Sunday-school Board to arrange for the observance of Missionary Day in the Sunday-schools, asks that the Woman's Missionary Union give to that Board such assistance as it may solicit.

LETTER FROM DR. I. T. TICHENOR EXPLANATORY OF THE RECOMMENDATIONS.

Executive Committee of Missionary Union:

DEAR SISTERS:—We submit to you in the accompanying recommendations the objects for which the Board desires that the Ladies' Societies composing the Union should work during the coming year. No argument is needed to justify their selection, and no appeal is necessary to create interest in laboring for them.

The meagre salaries the Board is able to pay the men who in the midst of so many hardships and privations are sowing gospel seed in the broader fields of our country, makes its own appeal for increased contributions to this part of our work.

The blessed results that have followed the sending of boxes of supplies to our frontier missionaries, and the increasing interest in the good work are enough to commend its continuance to all the Ladies' Societies.

Nor is our work among the foreign population of our own land, whom God is sending by thousands to our shores where they may learn those truths that make wise unto salvation, less in its importance, or less powerful in its appeal to our sympathies for help. We cannot deny to the stranger within our gates the bread of life which we have so freely received. Our Cuban work every year surprises and rejoices us with new developments of its depth and power. That alien race, which God for wise purposes has suffered to be brought among us and multiplied until it numbers seven millions,—who are not only at our doors, but are parts of our households—must not be forgotten in our efforts to save the lost. All these classes, each in its own peculiar way, call for help from the Christian women of the South. We are sure the supplying of their needs will meet with a ready response.

May the Spirit of God incite them to their full duty to these needy multitudes, and bless them in their efforts to save those who are ready to perish.

I. T. TICHENOR, Cor. Sec.

A Permanent Agency.

A good man may do much good. He may touch keys that are to sound away down the aisles of time. He may start influences that are to bless generations unborn. But alas! how soon is it all over. "For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time, and then vanisheth away." The most eloquent tongue becomes silent, the most flashing eye loses its lustre, and the most stalwart frame lies down weary in the embrace of death. "The faithful fail from among the children of men." If we rely on individuals great will be the gaps often made. We will be often sore distressed as to what to do. But if we have an organization through which the work is done, the worker may die but the work goes on. Another steps in and takes his place. The work is already outlined, the great lines of policy are understood, and almost without a jar, everything moves on. We should love and honor great leaders as we do, but the work should be so arranged that it dies not with them.—Rev. J. S. Felix.

Home Field.

The field of our Home Mission Board is undergoing great and rapid changes. Railroads are penetrating it from every direction. Old cities are growing with marvelous power, and new cities are springing up like magic. We have a rich land. Capital is pouring into it, and all sorts of combinations are being devised to develop its immense resources of coal, iron and timber. It has been stated upon good authority that one thousand million dollars of wealth have been added to the South during the past twelve months. As the South is just beginning to be developed, is it not true that we are just beginning the work of this Board? The Lord is opening more doors to us than we are entering. Let us not trifle with the great trust. It is no longer a question of our ability, but of our willingness, to pray and toil and give.—Rev. Wm. Harris.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

A telephone exchange is to be established at Monroe.

The State Republican Convention meets at Raleigh next Thursday.

Capt. Nat. Atkinson, a leading citizen of Asheville, died suddenly the 25th.

A butter and cheese factory is to be established at Murphy, Cherokee county.

There is talk of building a railroad from Sanford to Dunn, by way of Lillington.

Prof. E. S. Sheppe has been elected Superintendent of the graded schools of Reidsville.

The American Pharmaceutical Association meets at Asheville next week. A great crowd is expected.

Hog-cholera, or something like it, is doing much damage to swine in Sampson county, says the Democrat.

Senator Ransom recently bought the telegraph line from Wilmington to Southport and placed the sale in the hands of citizens of Wilmington.

Fall session of Oak Ridge Institute opened last week with the largest attendance in its history. The school has the confidence of the educating public.

Col. A. Q. Holliday of the State A. & M. College went to Massachusetts last week to deliver a lecture, "Resources of North Carolina," at Boston and Pittsfield.

Associate Supreme Court Justice, Walter Clark, is engaged in completing the Colonial Records of this State, so admirably begun by the late Hon. Wm. L. Saunders.

The trustees of the State University have released Prof. J. C. Robertson, lately elected to its Chair of Greek; and F. K. Ball, Phd. of Harvard University has been chosen in his stead.

Monazite mining has lately become an industry in Cleveland and Mecklenburg counties. It is a substance, unusually heavy, found near streams in alluvial deposits, and, it is said, one can make $3 00 a day mining it.

Col. J. M. Winstead, seventy years old, a prominent and wealthy citizen of Greensboro, being President of the Piedmont National Bank, committed suicide the 23d by leaping from the city hall tower at Richmond, Va., a distance of 100 feet.

The Southern Railway Company purchased last week the Winston & Wilkesboro Railway for $350,000; the Western North Carolina Railway for $500,000; the Oxford & Clarksville and the Clarksville and North Carolina. The Southern Railway embraces 1,500 miles of road.

County conventions have been busy putting out tickets. The Democrats have nearly all theirs out. The Republicans and Populists are putting out fusion tickets or straight Populist tickets as a rule. The campaign in this State opens at Smithfield, when Hon. Chas. M. Cooke and Hon. W. H. Kitchin have a joint debate.

Jail-breaking continues frequent. One in Pitt county and another in Union county last week; five prisoners escaped at the former, four at the latter. They have averaged one a week, it seems to us, for several weeks. Better jailors and better jails are the remedy; and if the later element be lacking the sheriff should be the more careful.

The "Christian Index" at the Late B. Y. P. U. A. Convention.

The brother, who reported for the Index never, before he witnessed it at the Toronto convention, saw a minister of the gospel get out on the platform or pulpit, as it may be termed, and at the top of his voice exclaimed, "Three cheers, hip, hip, hurrah! Hip, hip, hurrah! Hip, hip, hurrah! Such an occurrence was rather startling. He never saw before in a religious meeting, a minister of the gospel, conducting the services, rise to his feet in the rear of the speaker, with a white handkerchief in hand, give the signal for the Chautauqua salute, which was taken up by the audience. He never saw before, in a religious meeting, a brother encored, with a view to calling him back to the stand, until a minister felt constrained to rise and beg that the applause be suspended in order that the regular program might be progressed with. He never before, in any sort of religious gathering, saw a brother with guitar in hand, stand by the side of the minister, who was to preach the sermon of the occasion, accompany the song with the guitar and be applauded at the conclusion. This he saw as Dr. Henry McDonald of Atlanta delivered the sermon on Sunday night at the closing up of the Toronto convention.

The brother who reported for the Index has never heard the churches so characterized as he heard from the editor of the Examiner, when he said, "Many of our Christians, many of our churches live at such a poor dying rate. They are in such a state of coldness and paralysis and collapse, that they need the stimulus of a great enthusiasm to rouse them from their icy slumber and give an uplift and an impulse to their spiritual life."

The brother, who reported for the Index, is heartily of the opinion that the power which is to renew the spiritual life of the churches in such a condition as the editor of the Examiner described, will not come from human conventions where story-telling, wild applause, and great surges of enthusiasm are the principal features. Such influences will only produce a sort of galvanic, spasmodic effect, which will last but little longer than the meeting that set them at work.

The influence which is to revive spiritual life permanently, and to restore soundness to every muscle and nerve in the body—the church—is that of the living God and that alone. To call enthusiasm spiritual life, and to say that the churches need this influence to flow into them from the Young People's societies, is to make them superior to the churches, and to say the churches depend upon them for a renewal of life and energy. It is placing a human institution above the "church of Christ, the pillar and ground of the truth."

The brother who reported for the Index was surprised to hear a delegate from Connecticutt, say that, since B. Y. P. U.—"Baptists in Connecticutt knew why they were Baptists." Is it possible that the young people's movement has done more that all the Baptist preachers and Baptist churches have done since the days of Roger Williams? Is this statement not more the result of a "great surge of enthusiasm" than anything else?

If the statement has any meaning, it certainly places the young peoples' movement infinitely above the churches in importance and usefulness. If the story telling, applause and laughter and disparagement of the churches is carried further, anywhere brother Examiner, than "the brother who reported" for the Index saw in the Toronto meeting, please let us be content with such gatherings as you term our "own section, where applause is not allowed and laughter rarely heard."

Amen.

Stanly and Montgomery.

Dear Recorder:—Stanly Association has bounteous crops growing within its borders, and while the many good brethren are hopeful and are looking for an era of prosperity, they are working and planning for greater success of the Lord's work among them. Prof. E. F. Eddins, a noble brother, has a flourishing school at Palmerville. He is not only a zealous and successful worker in all that pertains to educational development, but he is also to the brethren truly a fellow-helper in every good work.

MONTGOMERY

Association with its good crops, gold mines, and pine forests is hoping for brighter days. Brother Bostick, with a few others, is trying to "hold the fort" against odds. They would be glad to have some consecrated workers to labor zealously and wisely with them in building up the kingdom of Christ among the people who are hungering for the gospel as the Baptists hold it; and who would hear it gladly. Here is a good and wide field for some who may have the success of our cause at heart.

Prof. A. P. Harris is working up a fine school at Troy. His patrons are building for him a large and well arranged academy which will be a credit to the town. Prof. Harris has recently been elected county Superintendent of Public Instruction for Montgomery county, and he, like all true Wake Forest men, will distinguish himself in the faithful discharge of the duties of his office.

Fraternally, W. J. F.

The Baptist Female University.

At no time since the Baptist State Convention passed the resolution for its establishment have we been more encouraged than we are now. The Building Committee have received the specifications from our architect, and will be ready in few days to put them into the hands of a contractor with instructions to complete the building by August, 1895.

In the mean time, the Building Committee confidently rely upon the Baptists of the State and other friends of female education to see to it that the money will come as it may be needed to carry on the work. We are not afraid to trust our people with reference to any work that means so much for the progress of Christianity and good government as the establishment of this institution does.

From the sea-coast to the mountains we have received hearty sympathy in the work. A brother whose words are worth much said, "It is the most popular enterprise we have ever had in the State, and we'll make it succeed." O. L. STRINGFIELD, Sec.

At Holly Springs.

I have just closed a glorious meeting at Holly Springs, Harnett county. I was aided by Rev. J. M. Henly who did most of the preaching. He presented the truth in a very simple way, yet very forcibly. Certainly he is a man in whom the spirit of God is. The meeting continued eight days and resulted in fifteen conversions. Eleven have been added to the church and others will follow. True it is that his word will not return to him void.

W. G. KING.

CORRECTIONS.

In the last issue of the RECORDER, $1.80 for State Missions and $91.87 for Foreign Missions was reported as from Oxford, it should have been Mt. Zion church, Flat River (interest on Slaughter estate.)

In the report dated Aug. 4th, Mt Tabor church was credited with $2.50 for Foreign Missions. It should have been W M S, Mt Tabor ch.

This Letter Speaks for Itself.

LUMBERTON, N. C., January 1, 1894.

DEAR SIR:—After using the Electropoise only a few months I sent you a testimonial which those that did not know me doubted, and those that knew all about me said the half was not told. When I think of the good long rest I have enjoyed for nearly two years from excruciating pain and extreme nervousness. I find that language fails to express my appreciation for it, so I only say as I have said before that it truly is the most wonderful of God given remedies to alleviate the suffering of all humanity. And I do believe it will help any one that will use it properly. I hope that others may be persuaded to buy it as I did, without faith, and get as much relief, and that you may be spared to help thousands of poor despondent sufferers as you did me. I shall ever be grateful to you for your kindness and sympathy.

Yours truly,
MISS LIZZIE CALDWELL.

We are at your service.

Oxford Female Seminary.

The next session opens Sept. 4th, 1894, and all indications point to a largely increased patronage.

The school is well equipped for thorough and efficient work. The Faculty has been strengthened by the return of Mrs. Twitty, for many years the wise and careful Lady Principal, and by the accession of Mrs. M. A. Lacy, of whom Dr. Hume of the University of North Carolina has this to say: "Mrs. Mary A. Lacy, it gives me pleasure to say, is one of the most accomplished and scholarly of the teachers with whom I have been associated and would be a most valuable addition to the staff of any college or school. Her character and abilities well fit her to be the Principal of a first-class institution. Both in the Mathematics and the Languages she has such qualifications as entitle her to a higher place than most teachers could claim. I commend her with confidence as a Christian lady and excellent teacher."

The Director of the Music Department, after graduating from the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, proceeded to Germany and completed his education in the Leipsic Conservatory.

The Art Department is in charge of an honor pupil of the Cooper Union Art School of New York City.

The teacher of Stenography and Typewriting was educated in the Bryant and Stratton Business College of Baltimore.

The Normal Department in charge of the President provides instruction in the theory and practice of teaching, and will meet the wants of a number of young ladies who prefer obtaining their technical education in a denominational College under distinctively Christian influences.

Correction.

Dear Recorder:—I find in your paper an article written by Bro. George W. White in reference to Green's X Roads. Part of his article is misleading. He says the church was in a deplorable condition, disunited and pledges unpaid.

I want to say when I left there the pledges were all paid, and for the four years I preached for them they never fell behind in redeeming their pledges nor in paying their pastor. They have always paid what they promised. There was no division except concerning hymn-books.

God bless Bro. White in his labors.

MEREDITH—WILLIAMSON—On August 19th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father at Hannersville, N. C., by Rev. Jno. A. Summey, Mr. D. M. Meredith and Miss Lizzie Williamson.

DIED.

BEACH—Died at his home in Caldwell county, after an illness of several months, Aug. 7th, 1894, Bro. Zero Beach, in his fifty-seventh year. Bro. Beach was a good father, husband, neighbor and Christian. He was a devoted member of King's Creek Baptist church. Judging from the Christian life our brother lived, he has entered into rest. We extend sympathy to the bereaved family.

PASTOR.

ROBINSON—On August 20th, 1894, in Goldsboro, N. C., Mrs. Margaret Ann Robinson departed this life at the ripe age of seventy-five years.

She was a member of the Baptist church for more than fifty years, and died triumphant in the faith she had professed. She bore her sufferings with calmness and beautiful resignation; and, when the measure of her days was full, her spirit passed away as softly and as gently as a summer's evening.

She was truly a noble specimen of saintly womanhood, adorning all the relations she sustained, whether to the home, or society, or church. Few have left a brighter record of integrity and consistency, and few will live longer in the admiration, memory, and love of the community.

She leaves a son and three daughters, together with a large circle of friends, to lament her loss. We know that it is well with the righteous dead; and while the stars were looking down from their golden thrones, amid the swell of harps and the songs of angels, her spirit passed into glory. C. R. JENKINS.

BLANTON—Our dear brother W. P. Blanton finished his earthly career Tuesday morning, Aug. 14th, 1894, at his home in Marion, N. C. The day before he appeared to be more comfortable than at any time during his illness of thirteen days, hence how severe the shock to all when at 7 o'clock p. m. he was seized with a severe rigor that ended in death as above stated.

He was born May 4th, 1862, and was aged thirty-two years, three months and ten days. He joined the Baptist church here in 1885, and married Miss Minnie Neal, daughter of ex-Sheriff Neal of Marion, May 4th, 1886. He was the son of W. M. and Josephine Blanton, now of this town. He was reared in this country. After marriage he moved to Asheville, N. C., and engaged in livery and mercantile pursuits, but for the past year has been merchandising in this place.

Bro. Blanton had the entire confidence and esteem of his church and community as an honest, upright, devoted Christian man, being ever ready to take part and contribute to all matters for the good of church, pastor or friends. His pastor's every want was anticipated by him. How he will miss him! A number of his friends have said to the writer since his death, "He was among the best friends I ever had, if not the best." So the precious memory of this brother, and sweet communion in the home, church, Sabbath-school, will be with us as long as life lasts.

He was a devoted, loving husband of the widowed wife and father of five sweet fatherless children he has left here in the hands of him who promises to be "a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow," also assuring them that his grace shall be sufficient for them, that he will never leave nor forsake them. With these promises and the assurance that Willie sleeps in Jesus, and that we can go to him, let this comfort all hearts. Look up bereaved wife, children, parents, brothers and friends, the star of faith will guide you heavenward, lead you from the shadow of sorrow to the bright realm where the gates stand ajar. May Jesus comfort and keep all his dear ones through life, and grant them a happy reunion in heaven.

"There is rest beneath the quiet sod,
When life with all its toils cease,
And in the bosom of its God
The Christian finds eternal peace."

The worth and high appreciation of our brother was attested by the large gathering on the evening of Aug. 14th, when at his residence a short funeral service was conducted by his pastor, and then with the Knights of Pythias (of which he was a member) as pallbearers, his body was borne to the Marion cemetery and given to the earth from whence it came, awaiting that great day when the Lord shall come to gather in all the redeemed. "Then we shall ever be with the Lord."

HIS PASTOR.

Marion, N. C., Aug. 17, 1894.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, On Monday, the 6th day of August, 1894, God in his infinite and omniscient providence saw fit to take from us our dear member and sister in Christ, Mrs. Robert Holloway, who for many years had been one of the leading spirits in all that pertained to the Master's work, and especially in the Woman's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society of the First Baptist church of Durham, N. C., be it Resolved 1. That the Woman's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid Society bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well.

2. That by her death the community has lost a noble spirit, her family their best friend, and the cause of Christ a faithful worker.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication, and a copy be sent to the family and the daily papers.

MRS. S. E. WATTS,
MRS. C. M. V. FOLLETT,
MRS. C. H. NORTON,
Committee.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH,
WILMINGTON, N. C.

God has taken from among us our loved and honored brother, B. F. Mitchell, who was our senior deacon and one of the oldest members of our church, who had for many years gone in and out among us an example to all who would lead a Christian life.

His life was marked by loyalty to the interests of his church, a strict adherence to the principles that mark the upright man, and a devotion to his family. The poor blessed his name both for his own giving and for his constant remembrance of their needs. The members of his church loved him and felt his presence among them as a benediction. His household mourn his loss as a tender father and honored patriarch.

We, the members of his church, desire to express our belief that we have enjoyed a blessing in having his life and labors cast among us, and desire to return thanks to our Heavenly Father that he has given us this example of a high Christian life. May the Lord set before us another such pure and humble life.

We would point his relatives to that source of comfort that faileth not, believing that if they submissively accept their loss the sanction of the Holy Spirit will fill their hearts.

When the pure and upright man departs this life in his ripened years, a gracious influence ever extends from his life over the community where he lived. So it is with him whose loss we now deplore. While we mourn, we are conscious that our own lives are made better and purer by remembrance of his.

We resolve that the clerk tender this expression of our feelings to Bro. Mitchell's family as a token of our sympathy with them and as an evidence that we believe God's Spirit dwelt with our brother.

Resolved, That these expressions of our feelings be spread on our minutes on the space devoted to the memory of Bro. Mitchell.

WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?
THE STANDARD DICTIONARY
OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,300 pages. 5,000 Illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (347) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE
appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED
when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer the purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one-half of the language,) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary
you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary, containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court
and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary
in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN
enables any to begin to enjoy the use of the Dictionary at once, paying only a small sum down. Write to us and learn how favorable are the terms upon which it is sold. Our first agreement wanted in every county in North Carolina. Address

PERIODICALS
OF
The American Baptist Publication Society.

Arranged by the most eminent scholars in the Baptist denomination North, South, East, and West, in the interests of Baptists.

The Society desires to call attention to the mechanical excellence of its publications. All things else being equal, publications that are attractive and develop the artistic sense of the scholar are the ones which eventually accomplish the most good. If the printing is first-class and the pictures good the scholars are more likely to preserve and use the periodicals. The Publication Society has always tried to obtain the best results in the issuing of their publications, and no expense is spared in the mechanical work of its periodicals and books, while providing the best also for the subject matter. Compare our periodicals with others.

STILL GROWING IN EXCELLENCE, IN INFLUENCE, IN FAVOR, IS THE
Convention Series of Sunday School Helps.

Fine Exegetical Work,
Strong Denominational Lessons,
Distinct Missionary Features

Make this Series exactly suit our Southern schools.

And They Are Realizing It.

Rev. H. C. Dargan, D. D., (in the Teacher); Rev. R. J. Forrester, D. D., (in the Advanced Quarterly); Rev. S. Boykin, D. D., (in the Intermediate and Primary Quarterlies), will furnish the comments on the lessons for the fourth quarter; while a number of our best men will furnish articles for the TEACHER.

Every Teacher should read the articles on the life of Christ, which began in the TEACHER in July and will run twelve months. Prof. A. T. Robertson, of the Seminary, is doing fine work on these.

Kind Words, beginning with August, contains in its missionary department, once a month, an outline program for children's bands. Let LEADERS OF BANDS note this fact. And in October the third page will contain a Bible Reading Department. Look for it.

The Home Circle.

The Promises.

The day was so warm, and before me
The cares rolled mountain high.
"As thy day, so shall thy strength be,"
The promise came flittering by.

But I could not grasp the blessing,
I was weary and worn and weak;
My soul was athirst, my heart cried out
For one lone hour to speak

To him whom my soul loveth;
But not one moment came;
I could only look up in the midst of toil.
Again the promise came—

"Ye are kept by the power of God," child,
"Through faith," his gift to you—
"Unto salvation," the price is paid—
Just wait on the Lord and be true.

Ah! just to the passive, Savior;
In thy hand as the potter's clay—
I take the promise, my Master;
I believe and accept thy way.

A Swarm of "B's" for Boys.

Be gentle boys, there could be no higher praise than that given to a lad I once knew, of whom it was remarked, "He is as gentle as a woman to his mother." It is anything but manly to be rude, and it gains for you no admirers that are worth the having. Gentle boys make gentle men—gentlemen.

Be manly, boys. A frank, straight forward manner always gain friends. If you have committed a fraud, do not try to conceal it. Step forward and confess it, and your friends will trust you again; but concealed faults are sure to be found out later, and then your deceit will not permit any one to trust you.

Be honest, boys. Do not cheat at marbles. It is as wrong to steal melons as to steal money. A boy-thief is on the road to the penitentiary.

Be pure, boys. Never tell, or listen to a story that you would not have your mother hear. A man who will pour a stream of pollution into the ears of a boy is a villian, and it will not be saucy if you tell him so. Never do anything which afterward may cause a blush of shame to come to your face.

Be courteous, boys. It is just as easy to acquire genteel, courteous manner, as an ungracious, don't care style, and it will help you immensely in making your way through life. The boy who lifts his hat, who knows the use of, "I beg your pardon," and "I thank you," will be chosen for a position, three to one, to the boy who neglects these common courtesies.

Be prompt, boys. Tardiness, carelessness, slackness, will spoil any boy's prospects in life. The boy who is always behind-hand causes others much annoyance, and they soon come to feel that they cannot depend on you for anything. Make it one of the first principles of your life, always to be on time.

Be thorough, boys. Black the heels as well as the toes of your boots, and be sure that both shine. Pull up the weeds by the roots. Do not study simply to recite well, and get marks, but to know. And when you are in the employ of another, do your work as thoroughly, and as faithfully as though you were chief owner in the business.

Here is a swarm of seven "B's,"—a perfect number, a complete hive of them. Take good care of them, and they will work for you, and add sweetness to your life, and to the lives of those around you.—Evangel and Sabbath Outlook.

Children's Prayers.

The Turks have a beautiful custom. When the plague rages at Constantinople they collect hundreds of little children upon a hill nigh to the city, and then they instruct them to offer prayers to heaven that the plague may cease. Are there no plagues in this city? No plagues of lust and lewdness, no bodies once dedicated to God and once temples of his Holy Spirit, polluted and defiled? Are there none, who, even in boyhood and girlhood, have lost the "shame which is a glory and grace?" Is there no plague of drunkenness, dishonesty, lying, slandering and malice? No plague of blasphemy and profaneness? Is all sound and pure in your heart and mine? No sin which does not so easily beset us? Is there no leprosy of sin in our midst? As Naaman, the Syrian, was brought to a miraculous cure in the waters of Jordan upon the entreaty of the little maid who waited on his wife, may not some poor sin stained soul be brought by the supplication of Christ's own children to his living waters?—Dean Hole.

Three Wants.

"Reason's whole pleasure, all the joys of sense,
Live in three words, health, peace, and competence."

So says the poet. Competence counts for little when one is sick, and peace is disturbed when health is upset, so that the poet rightly places health first. To have good health you must have pure blood. From the blood the system receives all its material of growth and repair. The best blood purifier is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is world-famed and sold everywhere. It is a sovereign remedy for all diseases due to impoverished or impure blood, as consumption, bronchitis, weak lungs, scrofula, old sores, skin diseases, and kindred ailments.

Delicate diseases of either sex, however induced, promptly, thoroughly and permanently cured. Send ten cents in stamps for large illustrated treatise, sent free and securely sealed in plain envelope. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Distinction.

"Yes, I suppose you may call Eben a successful man. He does a good business, but in my mind he isn't prosperous." So said Mrs. Tracy to her sister, who had congratulated her on the purchase by her husband of a mill which he was thought to have bought at a bargain.

"Well," returned her sister, "it seems to me everything he touches comes out just right. He's the busiest man in town."

"That's just it," retorted Mrs. Tracy. "He's busy, and he succeeds in his doings, but that isn't prospering—not as I understand it. You see," she continued, "when we were first married he leased the little woolen mill down on the stream, and got along first rate. He wasn't overbusy, and we used to ride round together every afternoon and have lots of company and good times.

"But he began to make money and buy more wool, and more mills to take care of it and more store-houses to put it in, until it takes about all his time to get from one mill to the other. Sometimes I see him on a Sunday, but he is generally busy resting up to start again. He's about as much a slave as if he was chained in a galley."

"Yes, but he does make money," said one.

"Well, perhaps so, but it all goes to buy more wool. If anybody hankers for lots of wool in this world, that's one thing. Eben has any amount of wool, but when it comes to getting the real solid goodness out of life and enjoying it, he's forgotten how to do it. Really, as I look at it, Eben is the most *un*prosperous man in town."—Youth's Companion.

Where he Found His Voice.

In our town was a gracious revival. If you have seen sweet showers come after a long drought, and all the sere and withered things lift up their leaves and rejoice, you have a picture in your mind of what this revival did for us.

Among those to whom church membership was not a new thing, was a young business man, who had been accustomed to speak of himself lightly as "a silent partner in the concern"—he couldn't lead in prayer, nor teach in Sunday-school; and as for addressing a meeting of any kind, O dear, no! During this time of revival our young man was walking down the street one afternoon, when a sound from the open window of the village tavern made him pause; somebody was singing a hymn in there—somebodies indeed, for there were several men's voices. He had heard many curious sounds from that place, but none like this; and as the sweet influence breathing through the old town had quickened his spiritual pulses too, the solemn words and tender tune drew him right in through the door.

"Ah," said one of the singers, as the hymn closed, "now we can have a bit of prayer. We were just wishing for a church member, sir, to pray for our souls. All we knew how to do was to sing a little."

To pray for their souls! It was the barkeeper and two of his companions, whose hearts had been touched by the Holy Spirit to seek salvation. They never doubted but that this church member would pray for them. Whether he halted and stammered and mixed his metaphors, he does not know, nor do they; but day after day he met with them; he read the Bible and prayed, and they sang hymns. Seeking, they found the Saviour; asking, to them salvation was given; knocking, the door of the kingdom was opened to take them all in.

Meantime our young church member has found his voice, and it has seemed to us that he is making up for lost time, so ready is he to speak and pray and sing in his dear Lord's service.—Kind Words.

What Made a Little Girl Glad.

A Prussian nobleman, who did not believe in God, nor in the Bible, once overheard a little girl singing. It was a sweet strain, and a child's voice is always irresistible. As he drew near he saw tears upon her cheeks, as if she had been weeping.

"Why are you crying as you sing?" he kindly asked her.

"Oh! I am so happy," said the little girl.

"But why do you weep if you are so happy?"

"I love Jesus so well that I was crying for joy," the little girl said.

"But where is Jesus?" asked the nobleman.

"In heaven."

"How can he do anything for you if he is in heaven? He cannot give you your clothes and playthings, as your parents and friends do."

"Oh yes, he can do something for me. He comes to my heart, and makes me happy."

"Nonsense!" said the nobleman, "that is nonsense!"

"Oh no, it is not nonsense!" answered the little evangelist, "I know it is the truth, and it makes me glad."

The nobleman turned away, but an angel had touched his heart. He sought the little girl's Saviour, and found peace and joy.—Journal and Messenger.

A Tight Place.

There used to be a sharp story told of a stingy millionaire in New York who was solicited to contribute toward rearing a statue to Washington. The miser refused with the the excuse, "I keep Washington always in my heart." "Well," replied the indignant solicitor, "I don't believe the Father of his country ever got into such a tight place as that." Unfortunately many of our good causes are similarly afflicted.—New York Observer.

Along its front no sabres shine,
No blood red pennons wave;
Its banner bears the single line,
Our duty is to save."

Putting up Fruit—The Cold Process.

Get fresh fruit, wash it clean, put in three or four gallon earthen jars, and press it down as closely as you can without injuring it; then take two ounces of compound extract salyx (you can get this from any druggist); dissolve it in four gallons of boiling water. When cool, pour on enough to cover the fruit. The salyx prevents fermentation, and the water keeps the air from the fruit. Twenty gallons of strawberries, twenty-three gallons of raspberries, forty gallons of peaches, seventeen gallons of grapes have been put up, and not a single gallon lost. Every jar kept perfectly fresh. The fruit looked and tasted just as it did when picked. It is much finer than canned fruit. It is strange that every one does not put up fruit that way, as it is certainly elegant, cheap and healthy.—Philadelphia Methodist.

When Children Smile.

O little one, smile and bless me!
For somehow—I know not why—
I feel in my soul when children smile,
That angels are passing by.

I feel that the gates of heaven
Are nearer than I knew,
That the light and the hope of that sweeter world,
Like the dawn are breaking through.
—Ernest W. Shurtleff.

THE next time you list your taxes you may not find paper money among the exemptions from taxation. The late session of Congress enacted a law making it a matter of discretion with the States whether or no they should tax "circulation notes of national banking associations and United States legal tender notes and other notes and certificates of the United States payable on demand and circulating or intended to circulate as currency, and gold, silver or other coin;" that is, all money is subject to taxation, if the State so enacts

The law is a good one. There will be no more converting taxable property into untaxable money, after the States have had time to advantage by this law.

WHAT contrasts there may be in the life, —one might say, lives—of a person! Emma Goldman, a rabid apostle of anarchism, sentenced to twelve months penal servitude for making incendiary speeches, leading mobs to violence, a menacing firebrand to law and order, spent her time of servitude in ministering unto the sick and weary and other unfortunates. Only a few weeks ago she shouted for joy at the news of the assassination of France's good President; and yet, so kind was she to the weak and world-trodden and helpless that prison officers hesitated to have her depart after she had paid the penalty of the courts, and some of the inmates wept when she was gone.

There is innate good in that woman, even though something has made hatred of the powerful the predominant feature of her feeling. Doubtless she might have been reared properly and become a true philanthropist,—which, no doubt, she now believes she is. Her life indicates that we need more schools; the crowded cities need more reformatories,—somewhere to save growing children from the polluted and anarchy-breeding atmosphere of the tenement districts.

A thorough and unhampered public school system is the remedy for nine tenths of the ills of citizenship.

North Carolina is becoming to be a manufacturing State. Our river banks will be as crowded as those of New England after awhile—not long; and in due time the England across the sea will acknowledge us a dangerous rival. We do not wish to be as either New or Old England is; we would rather have our river banks silent and overgrown, our forests untouched, our hills untilled, than have them become the scene of oppression, suffering and strikes. We can keep aright, if we begin now. We cannot build aright later upon an unworthy foundation. Now is the time; and the broadest and most thorough public school system possible the thing needful. Every child in North Carolina should go to school, and go not a few months in a year, but most of the year for several years. Money invested in the intellects of the children of the State is the best investment the State can make. How long shall our crippled school system reproach our foresight? How long shall it mock our wisdom? How long shall it menace our present and our future?

An illiterate person is one who can neither read nor write. Not all illiterate persons are menaces to citizenship, but it is reasonable to hold that very nearly all of them are unfit for citizenship. On the other hand, not all persons who can read and write are good citizens, for sheer ability to do these things is no indication of that breadth of intellect essential to good citizenship. One must have ability, not only to read and write, but to think and reason and be considerate of others. Anarchists have all but the last quality. It may be held, also, that there are many citizens capable of all three qualities, who are unfit for citizenship because they have paralyzed their consciences by continued evil associations, or by failure to use them, which is very possible.

Of a total population more than ten years of age in the United States, which numbers 47,418,559, there are 6,324,702 illiterates, or thirteen in each hundred. The number of illiterates in the white population is 7½ of each hundred, and of the colored 57 persons of each hundred, nearly all of the latter being in the South. How many persons there are not illiterate who are incapable of good citizenship is not known; but their name is Legion. These facts warn us to send forth enlightenment as speedily and as extensively as possible; for they show that our citizenship is vitiated; that there are elements in it sufficient to decidedly promote deterioration.

THE power of organized labor, a power that is a triumph of and a monument to unity, and a power that used indiscreetly is most cruel, and one withal that is pregnant of great good,—is never so clearly manifest as on Labor Day, the first Monday in September, now a national holiday, like the Fourth of July.

The chief labor organizations in this country are the American Federation, the Knights of Labor, the Farmer's Alliance, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen, the United Mine Workers and the International Typographical Union. These are essentially separate organizations, though it is possible to unite them all temporarily. All the railway organizations were on the point of uniting at Chicago lately under the American Railway Union. If all Labor were to unite and strike it would result in suffering on the part of Labor struggling against the tide, while Capital rested upon its oars, full secure with its resources made by Labor and laid away for Capital's "rainy day." Strikes are cruel only to the poor; and they are effective only through pity for the poor, which is to say a successful strike is exceptional.

The flute players of Rome were the first strikers, it is said; and the builders of Solomon's Temple were the fathers of organized labor, a mason will tell you. The first American labor organization was effected by some tailors in 1806, though laborers had organized in England against new inventions before this. Beginning in 1825, for half a century nothing has been more remarkable than the increase of labor organizations. All classes of labor are now organized; and the laborer without an organization, while not an outcast, is almost helpless, for capital, in whatever form, is organized to accumulate capital; men who have money love it too dearly to regard the Great Commandment; and the rich deceive themselves that the fate of Dives is a myth, an hyperbole that will not become fact over and over again, that does not become fact day after day.

SPEAKING of labor, here is something that is being extensively circulated, which laboring men everywhere may well think on: Laboring men in the United States pay $750,000,000 annually for intoxicating liquors. If they will save this money—and there is no reason why they should not and every reason why they should not spend it except for the essentials of life and happiness—they will have saved in fifteen years nearly enough to buy every railway in the country, more than $11,200,000,000. "This," a writer proceeds to say, "is no chimerical scheme; it is practicable;" and he proposes that, the railways having been purchased, the saloon-keepers be reformed and made railway men.

That is a fair dream,—and, while it seems a dream now, one would be bold, indeed, to say that a consummation so devoutly to be wished, will not be a gift of a kind Providence somehow, sometime.

THE western grain crop, the government reports inform us, is very meagre this year. Scarcely one third as much corn as usual will be harvested, and the harvest of wheat is considerably less than the average. In Russia, however, there is an almost unprecedented yield of this cereal. A great drouth prevailed some weeks in July and August throughout the central and western States; and in this year of financial depression it was direfully inopportune. There will be suffering on the plains this winter; and it will be cruelly destructive unless a merciful Providence "tempers the wind," unless they who have give to them that, through no fault of theirs, have not.

While a great crop of cotton is on the farms of Texas, it is said that the boll worm is wreaking havoc in that State, and the crop will not reach harvest. In the Southern States proper, however, crops are unusually good. Virginia, North and South Carolina are more fortunate than any of the others, with prospects of the best crops since the war. The prices,—well, its an ill wind that blows no one good;—crops being short elsewhere, looks like prices might go up; and surely its not unbrotherly to hope that they will, for low prices will advantage the broker and the speculator rather than the poor and unfortunate. Low prices in the South cannot help the Northwest, because the merchants and buyers turn our products northward and across the sea; and they would do it even in a famine, if it were possible.

THE second session of the Fifty-third Congress adjourned the 28d ult., after almost a year of well-nigh unprecedented wrangling and legislating, (if we may include the extraordinary session called in August, 1893, with the regular session that assembled in December.)

What Congress has done may be briefly told, though the doing required a deal of telling. In the extraordinary session the Sherman act, the only law that authoriz d purchase and coinage of silver, was repealed. In this session it was made clear that the Executive department of our government may exert a dangerous influence upon the legislative; that the Senate needs a better system of rules. In the regular session State control of elections was restored, a bill permitting States to tax money of all kinds was enacted, a bill to tax incomes, and a tariff bill reducing tariffs about twenty-two per cent. were passed; a bill restoring to the United States 85,000,000 acres of land now held by railways, and one giving $400,000 to denominational schools for Indians, of which the Catholics will get most, and which, we protest, no godly sect will use,—these also were enacted. In the two sessions $490,668,869 were appropriated. In the regular session it was demonstrated that pledges and prinipies are as nothing when the power of trusts—"the communism of pelf,"—and sectional selfishness are in the balance against them; and many other things, of which we will speak later, were made apparent or suggested.

The power of the President, the objectionable feature of the extraordinary session; the power of trusts, the blemish upon the regular session: we dare not say which is more to be deprecated.

Good Roads and Country Church Going.*

Not long ago it was my good fortune to spend a bright Sabbath day with friends living in the hill country of north eastern New Jersey. And when after breakfast the question of church going was brought up it was decided that we go to a church in the country ten miles distant. My natural love for the country made this prospect more than agreeable to me, but I raised two objections: that as much rain had fallen during the past few days the roads would be quite muddy; and such being the case it would be a long drive for the pony that was to pull our buggy. "We will see about that," replied my friend, "you are not in North Carolina to day."

The road had been relocated, graded and macadamized three years before. Its surface was as smooth as the shell road at Wilmington or one of those beautiful highways of Europe, and our pony made the ten miles easily in an hour. There was no mud and no mud holes (although there had been a heavy rain the night before), no jolting, no twisting of the buggy by cross ditches, and the road had been so carefully laid out that although we were travelling through a hilly country there was hardly a place where it was necessary for the pony to slacken its speed. We met a number of conveyances drawn by single horses which trotted along with loads varying from one to five persons as though this were no load at all. Every vehicle and every horse looked as clean and fresh as the people who rode behind them with their Sunday clothes on. At the church when we arrived were a number of similar vehicles, which had come distances varying from one to ten miles, and there were a number of bicycles which had been ridden from even greater distances.

All the principal roads in that region had been macadamized during the past ten years; and when I asked the question whether any people in that neighborhood were ever kept away from church by bad roads the answer was that "such was often the case in years gone by, but never now." Neither rains, nor winds, nor sunshine affect these roads; they are always the same,—always good.

The average North Carolinians living in the country are already too familiar with conditions somewhat different from those just described. Any of them who may read these paragraphs, and who recall the winter time or even the summer time roads over which they must pass when they go to church in the country are ready to exclaim, "What a contrast!" But for the few of my readers who live in towns and cities and who walk short distances to church over stone or brick pavements, or to the door on an electric car, I may add a paragraph or two.

While out on one of my recent excursions through the hill country of North Carolina, Saturday night found me near the home of a minister who preached at four widely separated country churches. I accepted his kind invitation to spend the Sabbath with him, and also to accompany him to one of his churches, a dozen miles away. It was in the early spring, and the roads were in the condition into which the rainy season of this time of year usually brings them—a condition which the spring usually inherits from the winter.

The minister's wife and daughter wisely decided that it would not be safe for them to try to go, and their near neighbors reached a similar conclusion. The minister and myself had gone but a short distance before we realized the wisdom of their choice, for notwithstanding the fact that we were driving a pair of strong horses to a strong buggy, we were several hours in making the journey. On the way we met but a lone horseman; we passed one broken and deserted wagon stuck in the mud, the occupants of which had taken shelter in a house near by; and we overtook one buggy and one wagon pulled slowly along by strong but tired mules. It was mud hole after mud hole, rock after rock, hill after hill, ditch after ditch. And when at last, bespattered with with mud, with weary horse and fretted souls, we reached the church, we found there out of a summer-time congregation of nearly two hundred, less than a score of faithfuls, nearly all men.—all in the same condition as ourselves, greatly in need of, but in poor plight for, religious duty. I said to a good brother who stood near the door as I approached, "Where is your congregation—the women and children?' "At home, sir," he replied, "they can't get to church when the roads are in the fix they are now in, and they have been that way a good part of the winter. My wife and daughters haven't been able to come half the time since the last of December; and we have had a small crowd here every preaching day." "Yes," said another man standing near me, "we country people have a hard time of it in the winter season, especially the women and the children. The roads are so bad that they can't half go to preaching and Sunday-school; they can't go visiting, the children can't half go to school, and we can't half do anything."

And the man was right. We have in this great country of ours the poorest roads traveled by civilized man. They retard our material development, and their use costs us annually in North Carolina several millions of dollars; they seriously interfere with the religious, educational and social life of a large portion of our people; they are an injustice to our women and children; they are a disgrace to our civilization. How long will we continue to put up with them?

A Faultfinder Among His Brethren.—No. 4.

BY REV. JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

REV. MR. SITFAST.

You don't know Bro. Sitfast? As old Uncle Jack Kornegay used to say, I know him, if you don't. Having been intimately associated with him nearly sixty years, I can truly say that, while I do not know him very well, I know him better than I do any one else.

Soon after Bro. Sitfast became a preacher in the embryonic state,—that is, soon after he entered upon that period and condition of life that lies between the date of his license and that of his ordination,—he began to get from the post-office letters and papers addressed to "Rev. Mr. Sitfast." The preachers all know how pleasant it once was to have their names adorned with this weighty and complimentary prefix; and, therefore, I will not stop to describe the thrilling sensations that ran through and over this young gentleman. I confess that the weightiness of this honorable prefix always gives the name of the brother that has to wear it the appearance of heavy ended-ness, that may be remedied only by appending to the other end of the name a balancing suffix, as, for example, "D. D.," or something like it. Some of our brethren are fortunate in getting their names evenly balanced between two titles; but the greater portion of us have to go through life with an unbalanced, dipping name on account of the light endedness of the latter end of it. How this evil is to be met I can't tell.

Now, if matters were here as they are in the country whence came this story, then we half-titled preachers might catch up with our favored brethren that sport a caudal appendage to the latter end of their names. The story runs thus:

At a time when a certain institution of learning in Scotland sold her honors, an ambitious minister, seized with an unconquerable desire to obtain what the Germans called the doctor-hat, put fifteen pounds sterling into his purse and set out for said institution to "purchase to himself a good degree." He took along with him a servant, who, unknown to his master, likewise obtained the coveted degree. On their return, the titled master addressed the titled servant thus:

"Noo, Saunders, ye'll aye be sure to ca' the Doctor; and gin onybody spiers at you about me, ye'll be aye sure to say 'The Doctor's in his study,' or 'The Doctor's engaged,' or 'The Doctor will see you in a crack.'"

"That a' depends," replied the servant, "whether ye ca' me the Doctor, too!" The minister stared with astonishment; but the servant continued, "Ay, it's just so; for when I foond that it cost so little, I e'en got a diploma myself; so ye'll just be good enough to say 'Doctor, put on some coals,' 'Doctor, bring the whiskey and hot water,' or gin onybody spiers at ye about me, ye'll be aye sure to say 'The Doctor's in the stable,' or 'The Doctor's in the pantry,' or 'The Doctor's digging potatoes,' as the case may be."

As for Bro. Sitfast's case, he could have been doctored long ago, had he only known, later in life, as much as he thought he knew when he had that set to with old Uncle Tommy Moore on final perseverance, about which I sat down to write.

Uncle Tommy was a Free-Will Baptist minister, whose school-days could be counted on your fingers, but his hard, practical sense, devout piety, and wonderful familiarity with the Scriptures, coupled with his strong constitution, splendid voice and fiery eloquence, made him one of the most influential ministers that ever lived and labored in Greene county. I had the good fortune to make my home with him during a part of my early ministerial life, and learned to love and honor him as a strong and faithful minister of the Word. Often would he, even in his old age, travel from forty to eighty miles upon his sulky to preach to his brethren without a dollar's compensation or the expectation of it. So fond was he of his chosen life work, that during his last illness, on the day before he died, he preached to a large congregation which had assembled at his residence to hear his last sermon. He closed by telling them that he would die and go to rest on the day following.

Bro. Sitfast's hobby was final perseverance. He was bristling for a fight. He was eager to mop the floor with so illiterate a man as Uncle Tommy. Uncle Tommy, by the grace of God, could and did sit fast and hold on to the end, as well as Bro. Sitfast; but he believed a fellow could, and would, and sometimes did, turn loose, fall off, and fall away, and never get up and come back again. So Bro. Sitfast affirmed the final perseverance of the saints, and Uncle Tommy denied. They piled arguments and counter arguments upon one another in great heaps. They went through the history of Adam and Eve, Solomon, Peter, Hymeneus, Alexander, the fallen saints in Hebrews, and the washed sow in the mire, Bro. Sitfast carrying flying colors now and then, until they reached the history of Judas, and were about to wind up his case, when Bro. Sitfast made the clinching argument by quoting a passage of Scripture which he had held in reserve for his climax. He intended to rout Uncle Tommy and drive him from the field, discomfited, dismayed and thoroughly whipped. The supreme moment had arrived. The point to be proved was, that Judas never was a Christian. Bro. Sitfast wanted no easier task. One passage of Scripture was all he needed, and that was upon his tongue, "Judas was a Devil from the beginning."

Uncle Tommy demanded the book, chapter and verse. It grieves me to say that these have never been found. Bro. Sitfast, paralyzed, humiliated and defeated, retreated to his room a wiser and a more cautious man. He still believes in final perseverance, but he has ceased to quote that Scripture in support of his dcotrine.

He has also discarded other Scripture passages which he had learned at second hand, such as, "Let every tub stand on its own bottom," "Charity begins at home," "As the tree falls, so it shall lie," "All's well that ends well," "Everything is for the best," &c., &c.

Poor Sitfast shrugs his shoulders every time he thinks of that set-to with old Uncle Tommy Moore, and I feel sorry for him to this day.

Why not Open Our Female Colleges to Males?

This is a question which I am sure the reformers will spring before a great while, and advocate with all the vehemence with which they have been wont to press other questions which seemed to the conservative portion of our people long since settled. Granted that it is proper to open our male colleges to women, then I am fully prepared to advocate the opening of female colleges to men. The same reasons which would justify the one apply with equal force to the other. Indeed, I do not know but that the question under discussion has more and weightier reasons to be urged in its favor. It seems not only desirable, we are told, but necessary to have co-education. Then we must open our female colleges to males, because,

1. The girls seem not disposed, in the South at least, to attend the male schools for higher education which have opened their doors to them, and I fear that they never will patronize them to any extent. We are failing to draw the young women to the young men; and so we must see if it is not possible to draw the young men to the female schools. In male colleges, open to young ladies with two hundred and more students, there are all the way from two to a dozen girls. At a Baptist College which with a great flourish of trumpets went into this advanced movement last session, there were two or three young ladies, and the University of Mississippi, which for ten years has been open to girls, has not averaged possibly more than a dozen each session during this time. Co-education, in the minds of some, is a necessity; then, I repeat, in order to meet this necessity, we must allow the men to enter the female schools since the girls will not patronize the male schools.

2. As a matter of justice, I do not think that it is fair to debar men from any of the privileges afforded the women. This we do when we close the doors of our female colleges to them. Why let women go to male schools and not allow men to go to female schools? Besides, men are equal mentally to women, and what sense is there, to say nothing of justice, in denying them opportunities which, properly improved, would qualify them to take their places by the side of women in the race of life. Professions and vocations are now open to men which were closed to them. They are capable of studying music, art, housekeeping, dressmaking, etc., and may by proper training become as proficient as women in such things. Many of the minds of our young men are being turned in these directions.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1894.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

Your Association needs your prayers and your presence.

Keep "Christian and Popular Education" prominent in your own and your neighbor's and your candidate's mind. Know that State-aid means the crippling of the best institutions of higher education in the State; know that it now waxes fat while the common schools are suffering; know that it is taking all it can get and crying for more of the taxes you pay,—know these things, and let it not be your fault that your neighbor and your candidate don't know them.

We wrote some time ago of three of North Carolina's great immediate needs; we desire to add a fourth—one that is in no way least—good roads. There are no means of estimating how much good roads will do for our State. They will be worth millions of dollars, they will insure unspeakable convenience and comfort, and, Prof. Holmes persuades us on our first page, they will promote religion. "Country Roads and Church Going" should be circulated as widely as possible.

The whiskey traffic is a curse anywhere; but, if possible, it is more malignant in North Carolina than in some sections. For many years have we desired some clean means of curtailing it. We have found a way. See that your representative does not impugn your Christian character by voting against the proposition to restrict and prevent the sale of intoxicating liquors in the towns, counties and townships of North Carolina. It is not often that one has opportunity of voting against liquor selling without becoming party bound.

One hears much of sermon preludes, but we warrant no one has heard a more timely or better one than was recently delivered in the Baptist Tabernacle at Raleigh. Bro. Simms took occasion to speak a few words for Foreign Missions. The Missionary Society in his church has divided the membership into districts, and it is so arranged that all will have opportunity of contributing; and Bro. Simms was speaking to emphasize this latter. He urged every member in his church to give; he wanted them to give often, but, if that were impossible, to give occasionally. And, if we mistake not, all the members of the Tabernacle will soon be in the habit of giving—one of the few habits that one may safely tie to.

Let there be more preludes of this kind. One can't preach missionary sermons all the time; but, we are persuaded, no pastor's efforts will be vain if he takes every possible opportunity to speak a word for missions, Home, State and Foreign.

Try to get your people into the habit of giving.

That there are six hundred applications for admission into the State "Normal and Industrial" School, and that two hundred of these must be turned away, are two statements that one may see in any current paper of the State.

Laying aside suspicion that the statement is an advertising dodge, we make bold to say that if it can be proved that the State "Normal and Industrial" as now conducted is a wise and just institution of our government—and the friends of the school scout the idea that it isn't most just and supremely wise,—we make bold to say that the State should appropriate $50,000 or $100,000 to the school as soon as possible. Right is right; and in all reason, if it is right for the State to have such a school as the "Normal and Industrial"—so called—for four hundred girls, it is a compromise of principle to deprive two hundred girls of its advantages, a compromise that is severely unjust.

Equal and exact justice, equal rights, equal privileges to all citizens, these are pillars of republican government. Rights and privileges are about to be given four hundred girls, and two hundred others are to be deprived of the same rights and privileges.

Conducted unreasonably, illogically, anomalously, yea, illegitimately, the State "Normal and Industrial" is an incessant agency of injustice. Let it be reformed; or if the State dare not correct the policy of the school's o'erweening genius, let it, at least, be just enough to give him full play; let it authorize him to close out all other institutions for the higher education of girls in North Carolina, and announce that she that desireth shall have the best in the way of learning the State affords.

This is the logical and the ultimate end of State-aid.

"THE FARMER'S BOY" AND THE FARMER'S GIRL.

If school-openings were not even now upon us, we would call upon Bro. Vann to complete his practical and most worthy article, "The Farmer's Boy," with a similar one for the boy's sister. And although the season is late we cannot let slip such an opportunity for saying a word in behalf of this oft-neglected creature.

First, let us apologize, once for all, to the farmer. We do not know why it is, but it is a fact that all the world loves to advise him. Perhaps people think he is the typical human being. Even the government pays men—thousands of them—to experiment and write agricultural tracts for him, which, we apprehend, most farmers never heed. Advice-giving is nothing to be despreciated, however, as one may or may not take it—as one cares,—and, moreover, it signifies interest in one and, in some cases, love. The former may be accounted for in that all men deal with the farmer soon or late, and a great part of human happiness depends upon him. Anyway, advice is good to think about. Moreover, advice about education that is good for the farmer is good for any worthy man or woman; and we are sure there are men everywhere who should read Bro. Vann's article over and over again.

Most folks think that the chief end of education is increase of income. If this were not a common opinion many a boy and a few girls would not be on the way to school this week. Perhaps, yes, probably education does increase one's income; but that is far, very far, from the true end of schools and school-books. It is, indeed, very far from the true end of human life; and one cannot conceive of education not conducing to the true end of life. To have a competence is very well, but it does not require education to secure that. Work will do it. To become rich may be very well for some people; but it is as nothing when compared with becoming educated—enlightened, instructed, uplifted, introduced to the world and mankind, and thereby brought nearer to God and rendered abler to appreciate his gifts, abler to serve both God and man. That's what schools and school-books are for; and if one uses them merely to become able to make money, that one has a pitiable conception of life. If the world were composed of such folks, the animal kingdom would be divided into but two classes, the four-legged and the two-legged. Think of God making man and the world with a mercenary idea; think of Christ accumulating wealth!

Now we suspect that many a girl is out of school to day, and there's many a one grown to darkened womanhood in our midst just because fathers and mothers have put it down that "its no use educating the girls because they can do nothing but teach, and we cannot afford to educate them enough for that." They reasoned, on the other hand, that educated young men always did seem better off than the uneducated, they dressed better, and they looked more prosperous generally. There never has been a more serious misapprehension. In the first place, as we have stated, increase of income is an unworthy consideration; and in the second, incomes, so far as practicability is concerned, are not increased. For when you increase one's ability to make money you increase one's capacity to use and enjoy it; and we rely upon your personal acquaintances to prove it. And if it were not true, a properly educated boy would not hoard money; and you should be the last person to desire to have your boy become a miserable "money-bags."

Now if the object of educating is what we have said it is, and if you are determined to be promted by a motive so worthy, it is clear that it is just as much a duty to educate your girl as your boy,—not to increase her ability to make money, though doubtless this will follow, not to add a source of revenue to your family, not to sharpen her wits as one would a knife—in order to make it cut the better,—none of these things; but to elevate a human being, to give her capacity for enjoying life and appreciating God's goodness,—to bring her nearer to heaven and fit her better to elevate earth.

"But she's going to marry off," says one. That doesn't make development any the less essential. Even if it did, it is our opinion that she will have a harder time getting married and after she's married, if she is uneducated. But we do not wish to argue that "making good matches" is worthy of consideration in education. We do wish to impress the fact that girls will have to do with the moulding of the characters of all those "farmer's boys," who, Bro. Vann showed, are to direct this nation of ours, on whom the work now done by Christian men in our denomination will devolve. Bro. Vann may talk of his schools, but she who wraps her life about the tenderest years of "the farmer's boy" cannot but wrap herself about him in a myriad impressions that no education can efface. And if she be uneducated,—well, yes, some great men have had mothers who never went to school,—the probabilities are that her boys will have all the harder time of it, and will likely be mere agencies in others' hands. And here, we take occasion to say, that not only those who have been to school are educated. Schools educate; but experience does, too, and experience is always surer though severer and slower. Schools are, at best, but places where capacity to appreciate experience is increased, and where experience itself is concentrated to be dealt out in diluted form in large and frequent doses. An education may make one experienced; experience—the right kind and enough of it—will make one educated. And if the mother is educated, it matters not whether by experience or schools, or both, her children will be the better for it. A boy reared by a mother in whom what is best in life and religion has been developed and instilled, will be more civilized, more humane, more Christian for it; and, on the other hand, the horizon of the son of an undeveloped mother is usually fixed by men whose mothers were more fortunate. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules."

Reasoning thus one will conclude that the girl's education should be of first consideration. That may be; but we desire to have both boy and girl educated. One can afford almost any sacrifice to do it. If all our boys and girls are educated the world will be brought to God, even if educations have made a few infidels where it has blessed thousands of soldiers of the Cross. A developed citizenship will deliver the world from the dominion of pelf; and poor and rich, if both be properly educated, will come together on a common basis. It is the mind, the mental development and acquirement, not the gold in one's pocket, that makes men who are men, who are worthy of the image of their Maker, who are fittest to glorify him.

STATE-AID'S APPEALS.

We have almost been persuaded that we were the aggressors in this struggle for Christian and Popular education. The piteous appeals of State aid—it has not yet assumed the dignity of argument—are calculated to persuade any one, who is not acquainted with conditions, that we were making an uncalled for fight against higher education; that we had nothing to struggle against, and nothing to struggle for; in fact, were seeking whom we might destroy.

If there ever was a more determined, insidious and inimical aggressor on the face of the earth than the representatives of State-aided institutions in North Carolina, we have not heard of it. For years they have been making inroads upon the strength of institutions in which we have hopes and interests, upon institutions out of which the manhood—not the office-seekers, mind you,—of the State must come. And they are institutions which, it seems to us, it is every Christian man's duty in the name of God to defend against all aggressors.

If you desire to know who began "this fight"—let it be called thus in order that State-aid's own epithet may fall upon its apostles—ask Crowell of Trinity, now gone, Shearer of Davidson; and both will tell you that Dr. Taylor is right in saying that the State and the State's employees had been fighting the voluntary institutions many years; that lately emboldened by the silence of the latter under imposition, "the fight" was made severer until a meeting was held at Raleigh to try to adjust matters. They will tell you, too, that efforts for adjustment met with ridicule, that petitions for existence were sneered at. The Methodist Conferences spoke out, the Baptist Convention spoke out; Dr. Taylor promulgated his views, and terrified State-aid fell back, crying piteously that bad Baptists were fighting higher education; that it was being grievously wronged! A clown never played the innocent better. And even now gullible people are sloping over with "appeals for higher education."

State-aid began hostilities. It began them openly. It is repulsed for the present by the extensive and aggressive resistance to its heretofore unhindered onslaughts. It will play the innocent until the Legislature gives it another appropriation; and then we may well pray for Wake Forest, Trinity, Davidson, Guilford, Elon and the rest; and we may hang our heads in grief or shame—according as we have worked.

Meanwhile, let everyone know that appeals for higher education may be appeals for State subsidy that will destroy nearly a dozen institutions of higher education in North Carolina. Remember that President Winston has said, "If my policy destroys Wake Forest, it is not my look-out." Remember that the effect of his policy upon Wake Forest is, if not his, most emphatically our look-out.

There is a constitutional requirement that the State shall provide for the support of institutions where higher education may be had.—Charlotte Observer.

"The General Assembly * * may make such provision * * as may be necessary and expedient for the maintenance and management of the University." Constitution of North Carolina, Article IX, sec. 6. (Italics ours.)

Whoever fails to read the article favoring co education, beginning on our first page, will miss something unusually good. There are rich veins of humor and irony throughout it that can be appreciated better by those who have kept up with the efforts in behalf of co education at Wake Forest than any others. The article, however, is not all irony and humor; there is solid sense in it; it is logical, and it effectually reduces five arguments for co education to absurdities.

Opening school, picking cotton and pulling fodder are the joyous duties that September, first month of glorious harvest-hastening autumn, brings; and, we apprehend, there is about as much of these things to be done this heaven-favored season as the good old State can stand up to.

The summering preacher's return to his pulpit, the rest seeking lay member resting at home, and the wool hat's reappearance once more in the place that knew it months ago,—these, also, mark September's welcomed advent.

K. G. Averitt has replied through the Progressive Farmer to Dr. Taylor's articles on State aid. So has Dr. Manning in the Observer.—Charity and Children.

You mean these gentlemen have had something to say on the subject. We are sure neither of them has attempted to refute or answer any argument in Dr. Taylor's entire article. Mr. Averitt made a puerile "plea for higher education," holding that Dr. Taylor didn't wish the University to be endowed; Dr. Manning overlooked the fact that Dr. Taylor's argument on the question of the State and religion is based on the Constitution, not on what Dr. Taylor as a Christian gentleman would have taught in every institution.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

LIBERTY ASSOCIATION.

The Liberty Association met in a good neighborhood, ten miles from Lexington. Bro. Bennett is pastor. The brethren had not completed the new church, but enough had been done to permit our holding the Association in the new building. The house is large and well constructed, and when complete will be a model house of worship. Many of the brethren have made great sacrifices to do this work. The hard times have not kept the people from building church houses. I do not think I ever saw so many nice houses of worship being built as during this year.

Brethren Carrick, Sheets and Smith met us at the train, took care of us in their homes Monday night, and early on Tuesday we were on our way to the Association.

Bro. R. Van Deventer, Vice-President of the Foreign Mission Board for this State, consented to preach the introductory sermon. The brethren were specially pleased with his sermon, and the splendid effort he made in his speech for Foreign Missions was responded to by liberal pledges from the churches for this department of our work.

The State Mission Board has no truer and more zealous worker than brethren Carrick and Sheets. The influence of these brethren and the masterly effort of Dr. Durham (for I never heard him when he did better) insured a good showing for State Missions. This Association is doing some excellent work under the head of Associational Missions, conducted by the Executive Committee.

The discussion of Education was the most enthusiastic I have yet seen. Dr. Mitchell spoke earnestly to the part of the report pertaining to ministerial education, and the subject of general education was discussed by Dr. Durham and others.

In my judgment there has never been any question upon which our people are so united as upon this subject. The wonder is that they have learned so much about it in so short a time. I did not see nor hear of a single individual who is not actively opposed to the State furnishing higher education to any of its citizens.

NOTES.

The farmers are all in a good humor over the fine prospects of abundant crops of all sorts.

Bro. Peterson has greatly improved. It will be remembered he lost his voice last winter at the Convention. He has almost regained that, and if actions signify anything, he may soon have some one to assist him in talking, then it will not be so hard on him. Newspaper work gives a widower a fine showing.

The finest discussions on Temperance I have ever heard we have had at the Associations just closed.

Prof. Sledd is not only doing excellent work for Wake Forest in direct efforts to get students, but is also doing much to encourage and stimulate the work in academies as he finds them in the State. Prof. Hendren of Moravian Falls greatly appreciated an address he made to his school a few days ago.

BRUSHY MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION.

This body held its session with North Wilkesboro. This town saw the light in the days when towns were "boomed" sure enough. Its friends and citizens here say it has survived it, and is now on the solid road to prosperity and great success. And really, it looks as if this might be so. Situated at the terminus of the N. W. N. C. R. R., with Wilkes, Ashe, Alleghany and Wautauga counties from which to draw its trade, it would seem that it ought to be a large town in a comparatively short time. The new church has just been completed, and I should judge cost all of $1,200 or $1,500. I have not seen a nicer house to the cost of it anywhere in the State.

There are only about twenty members in all, and here, as in most cases, a few brethren have borne the burden; but the house is complete, and there is now a debt of only about $100 on it, and this is soon to be paid off. Rev. W. R. Bradshaw, the pastor, is a recent graduate of Wake Forest: he has not only done fine work here, but is rapidly gaining a good influence in the entire Association.

The churches in this Association, with but few exceptions, are doing very little. The preachers are more to blame for this than the people. Many churches do not give as much for all objects, as one member could give for a single object, and not feel it. The personnel of the Association seemed to me to be the best I ever saw it, but the pledges were about the same as last year.

A number of visiting brethren are present—Bro. Gwaltney, to represent the Board of Education; Prof. Sledd, Wake Forest College and general education; Bro. Bridges, the Theological Seminary,—and many from sister Associations.

A large crowd came especially to hear the discussion on general education. It looks here as it does in other places where I have been, that the people are all one way on this subject. The Representative from this county opposed the appropriations last session of the Legislature. He has again been nominated and will be opposed to the same measure. Notwithstanding, a scholarship, so I hear, has recently been sent from the University to his boy.

We were glad to meet again old Father Curtis, who is perhaps the oldest Baptist in this section, and has taken the Recorder for the last sixty years.

We spent a night at Moravian Falls with Bro. Spainhour, the Moderator, and found the same bountiful supply of grapes, apples, and sourwood honey, as we have heretofore.

Now the hack is ready, and we are off over the mountains to the beautiful river running through the hunting grounds where Daniel Boone first met the Red men in North Carolina.

....Rev. W. C. Tyree of Durham recently took part in a meeting at Hunting Creek, Va., in which there were nineteen professions.

....Rev. M. J. Willoughby of Marion, S. C., recently held a meeting at Terrell's Bay in that State, that resulted in seventeen accessions by baptism.

....Hertford Academy, of which Prof. Josiah C. Kittrell, who graduated from Wake Forest in 1893, is principal, has opened under auspicious circumstances.

....Eleven Associations have been held. The attendance has been large, and the spirit of the people good. The prospects for all departments of the work are good.

Ground has been broken at Morganton for the new Baptist church. It will be a large and imposing brick structure with a seating capacity of from 500 to 600, says the Herald.

....Rev. R. E. Peele has been preaching for pastor J. R. Pace at Gethsemane for ten days. He preached with power, Bro. Pace writes, and he trusts that good seed have been sown.

....Rev. J. J. Hall has returned from his vacation in the western part of this State to his Norfolk work; and, his strength renewed, we know his new church house will be quickly erected.

....September and October is the time specially given to State Missions. The Board should be enabled to go to the next Convention without debt. This can be done if all will help.

....Rev. H. H. Mashburn baptized eight candidates the 26th ult., who had professed conversion in the meeting that was protracted from the Flat River Union. Rev. C. R. Hairfield aided in the meeting.

....The American Baptist Publication Society of Philadelphia has purchased a $60,000 lot and will build a fire proof business house thereon at a cost of $75,000. The Society is going to enlarge its facilities.

....An exchange says that Rev. J. A. Brunson, who lately gave up care of French Broad church, Asheville, is expected to deliver a series of lectures or sermons in a tent at Waynesville. He is with Adventists.

....The Broad Street people at Winston greatly enjoyed a visit and a talk from their former pastor, Rev. L. G. Broughton, who took opportunity to stop over last week while on his way to Mt. Vernon Springs.

....Rev. Jno. E. White returns to Edenton this week after having spent several weeks vacation at Cary, during which he supplied mostly for Bro. Tyree at Durham, and one Sunday for Dr. Carter at Raleigh.

....Brethren Brewer and Hobgood both expect large attendance and good work in their institutions; and we sincerely hope they will not be disappointed. They deserve the patronage of the brethren and sisters.

....Rev. G. W. White informs us that he has resigned the care of our church at Bynum's school house in order to accept a call from Cashie Neck church, where he will preach the same Sunday that he gave to Bynum's.

....Death, the reaper, made sad inroads upon our ranks last week—Williams of Baltimore, Albright of Durham, and Neathery of Raleigh: these were good and faithful men, and their places will with difficulty be filled.

....Bro. Chas. E. Taylor, Jr., son of the President of Wake Forest College, at which he graduated last June, has accepted a desirable position in Washington City with the Southern Railway Company. We wish him abundant success.

....Rev. J. E. Yates' school is near Auburn, not at Auburn as we stated, and it is called Mt. Moriah Academy. Bro. H. Gower informs us that the prospects point to a good school. Miss Lillie D. Rogers teaches music for Prof. Yates.

....Bro. Pastor, tell your people that they can get the RECORDER four months on trial for fifty cents. It is very important that as many people as possible be reached this fall. Send the names now, the money when crops are sold, if you see proper.

... The harvest season should be one of prayer and thanksgiving; and every one should lay by for the Lord "on the first day of the week." Look upon the fields of the Master white unto the harvest, and come to his help, as he has prospered you.

....Elders Blanchard and Billings held a good meeting at Cary last week. Bro. Billings, who graduated from Wake Forest College last June, and who is from Virginia, thinks of locating in this section. We were glad to have a visit from him last week.

....Rev. G. O. Wilhoit had the assistance of Rev. J. W. Suttle in a series of meetings at Mt. Gilead, Montgomery county, in which there were professions at every service, there being thirty-one in all. Twelve candidates for baptism have been received.

....We were delighted to have a visit from Bro. L. R. Yates of Williams' Mill, the only living brother of the lamented Matthew Tyson Yates. It is indeed a privilege to know and talk to a member of the household in which the great missionary grew up.

....The subscription of any one who sends us twelve new four-months subscribers at fifty cents each, in the next three weeks, will be advanced six months. A little effort will tell. Send the names to us or give them to our agent at your Association. Mention the matter at your next appointment.

....Dr. J. W. Carter has returned from his vacation which he spent in West Virginia. Dr. Durham occupied the First Baptist pulpit last Sunday morning and Dr. Carter at night.

....The minutes of the sixty-first annual session of the Liberty Association are before us,—quick work. Bro. Sheets, the clerk, deserves congratulations. The minutes are well written, and altogether tastefully gotten up.

....Rev. J. H. Austin reports that a recent meeting conducted by himself and Rev. Thos. S. Wright at Silver Run church resulted in twenty-three baptisms, and eleven or twelve accessions by letter. Others will be baptized next Sunday.

....Rev. B. H. Matthews writes from Plymouth 1st inst.: "I have just closed a good meeting at one of our stations, the first protracted meeting that was ever held at the 'Dismal School-house' by a Missionary Baptist. We hope to organize a church here at an early day."

....Rev. J. R. Pace has sent us twelve new subscribers under our offer. He writes: "I am thankful to you for your new offer. It gives me a chance to introduce the RECORDER. I think I can send you some more subscribers as soon as I can see the brethren and sisters."

....We regret to say that the last three editions of the RECORDER have been exhausted, so that our offer of the paper from Aug. 15th is withdrawn. We will send it four months from date to trial subscribers for fifty cents. Make an effort to get us one or two new names.

....Dr. R. H. Graves, the venerable missionary to China, who is now in this country, thinks that the present contest between China and Japan will eventually advance the cause of missions. Amen. Meanwhile, let us do what God will let us to advance them in spite of war.

....Rev. T. N. Wright of Peachland came in to see us last Monday. Bro. Wright was on his way to Buffalo Lithia Springs, Va., for his health. He reports good progress in the Pee Dee Association, of which he is missionary. We hope he may be greatly benefited by the Springs.

....A new Baptist church has been organized at Wilmington. It is called the "Southside," and Bro. Oliver will occupy its pulpit until a pastor is called. It will build a house of worship, and for the present it is worshipping in an edifice that it will occupy only temporarily.

....Rev. H. R. Mosely of South Carolina, Southern Baptist Missionary to Mexico, was lately arrested and imprisoned by authorities in that country, a tract on Romanism being the occasion. Bro. Moseley has been released and is now in the United States. His arrest may receive consideration from our National Government.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins closed a six days' meeting at the Baptist church here last Friday night. There were eight accessions to the church, the church members greatly revived, and we hope much lasting good done. Mr. Jenkins will commence a ten days' meeting in Fayetteville Oct. 15th.—Jonesboro Progress, Aug 29.

....Bro. Walters Durham, eldest son of Dr. C. Durham, has been chosen director of the Gymnasium at Wake Forest College, succeeding Prof. E. W. Sikes. Young Bro. Durham graduated at Wake Forest last June, and is eminently qualified for the position to which he has been called, as was frequently manifested in his career there as student.

....So far no bad news comes from our brethren and sisters in China. We hear rumors of threats and danger, but anticipate nothing worse than giving up their fields and for a time moving to the seaports by our missionaries. There is always danger in the interior. We expect letters every week, and so far all that we have seen are reassuring.

....We were glad to have a visit from Dr. Taylor last Saturday. He has recently been North, and on his return, he informs us, there were many letters awaiting his attention. Wake Forest opens the date of this issue, and there is every reason to anticipate one of the most successful sessions in its history. There will be more new students than ever before; and the College is better prepared to take care of them than ever.

....The death of Bro. John B. Neathery at his home in Raleigh last week was a sad though not unanticipated blow to the community. He was a man of varied accomplishments, and altogether a useful citizen, who will be sorely missed by the many whose pleasant lot it was to come in contact with him. Brother Neathery was for many years a member of the First Baptist church of Raleigh. We extend sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

....Rev. J. B. Newton passed through Raleigh last week on his way from Fork church, Davie county, to Aulander, Bertie county. He has given up his work in Davie and Forsyth reluctantly, but goes to Aulander willingly. Bro. Henry Sheets assisted Bro. Newton in a meeting at Advance, since which five have been added by letter. This is a good mission point, and Rev. B. K. Mason, who has a school there, is pastor. The latter labors also at Union Hill.

....Elder Thomas G. Wood writes from Belcross, Aug. 27th: "Sawyer's Creek and Ramoth Gilead churches have just closed good meetings. Rev. Samuel Saunders of Murfreesboro was with me and did the preaching. Fourteen were baptized, two restored, and others await baptism. The preaching of Bro. Saunders was a rich feast to us all, and I look for blessed results yet from it among my people. It was the old, old story, earnestly, ably, tellingly and fearlessly told. He is a splendid fellow, and an able expounder of the Word, and Murfreesboro is to be congratulated."

....A new Baptist church was constituted at West Raleigh on Sunday afternoon last. The presbytery consisted of Dr. T. E. Skinner, Chairman, Rev. A. M. Simms, Secretary, Dr. C. Durham, Rev. A. D. Hunter, and a number of laymen. The church starts with thirty-six members, and the name selected was "West Raleigh Baptist church." The work at this point has been much blessed from the beginning, and is an inviting field of labor.

....We are grieved to have to announce the seemingly untimely death of Bro. W. A. Albright at Durham last week. Bro. Albright was an ardent and useful Baptist, and an upright and respected citizen. He had served for some time as secretary of the Ministers' Relief Board, which position he resigned lately. He was prominent in the counsels of his denomination, and will be greatly missed by his brethren. A more extended notice will appear.

....Rev. E. J. Harrell writes from Nealsville that he aided pastor J. C. Sorrells in a meeting at Bethlehem church, McDowell county, the first of last month that resulted in seventy-one professions of conversion. More than forty have given their names for church membership, and others will follow. Later in the month Bro. Harrell aided Bro. Sorrells in a meeting at Bethel church, continuing one week, in which thirty-four professions were made, and which has so far resulted in twenty two baptisms. This is said to be the largest church in the Green River Association.

....We are grateful to Bro. J. S. Kilby, Traphill, N. C., for the following encouraging news: "Our church, Traphill, set off an arm for the purpose of constituting a church at Parks', N. C., five miles east of this place. This church was organized August 25th with fourteen members. On Monday, Aug. 27th, we organized another church at Mulberry, sixteen miles Southeast of here, with ten members. This is a mission point that Rev. J. W. Burchett has been preaching at. Both these churches delegated to our (Elkin) Association, and both elected Bro. Burchett as pastor."

....A brother who can speak with authority writes: "Prof. Sledd of Wake Forest College has been doing well in travelling. He is not eloquent on the platform, but he is doing more good for the College than any man I have yet seen in the field. He believes in personal, face to face efforts; and so busy is he that he scarcely takes time to eat." It is not often that one who is so efficient in the class room, as Prof. Sledd is, makes a success in work of so different nature as canvassing for students, yet, we dare say, those who knew him are not surprised to hear of his success even in this.

....Rev. J. M. White of Apex sends the following encouraging news: He was assisted by Rev. S. W. Oldham in meetings at Salem church, Wake county, and at Lystra, Chatham county. At the former there were sixteen professions, and thirteen have been baptized; at the latter, twenty-three professed, of whom fifteen have been received for baptism. At Ephesus, Moore county, an interesting meeting of six days was held, there being one or two professions; at Green Level, Wake county, a meeting in which his son, Rev. J. E. White, assisted, resulted in six or eight professions. Bro. Blanchard, pastor of this last church, was in Kentucky when the meeting was held.

....Dr. Cobb writes from Pittsboro the 3rd inst.: "The meeting at Emmaus seven miles from Pittsboro closed last Thursday. It was a meeting of great spiritual power—a genuine revival of religion under the plain preaching of 'the old-time religion.' Among the converts was an old man named Thrift seventy-two years of age. I went from there to the Baptist Chautauqua and returned to Pittsboro in time to baptize three young men and receive one young lady by letter. Pittsboro church will bring up a splendid financial report to the Sandy Creek Association, having gone far beyond its pledges for all objects."

....The committees of the Southern Baptist Convention and the American Baptist Convention and the American Baptist Home Mission Society will hold their Conference at Fortress Monroe, Sept. 12th and 13th. The Convention committee is as follows: T. T. Eaton, B. H. Carroll, H. H. Harris, J. B. Gambrell, A. J. S. Thomas, T. P. Bell, O. F. Gregory, W. J. Northen and I. T. Tichenor. The committee of the Home Mission Society are: J. L. Howard, J. B. Thomas, N. E. Wood, E. H. Johnson, A. S. Hobart, H. K Porter, E. T. Hiscox, L. K. Fuller and T. J. Morgan. These committees are to confer in regard "first, to co operation between our Home Board and the society in work among the colored people of the South; second, with reference to a more definite understanding in regard to the territorial limits of the work of the Board and the Society among the native white people, the Indians and the foreign population of the country."—Western Recorder.

... Rev. J. W. M. Williams, D. D., pastor emeritus of the First Baptist church, Baltimore, Md., died August 28th at Chapel Hill, N. C., where he was visiting his daughter, wife of Prof. Gore. Dr. Williams was born in 1820 at Portsmouth, Va; was educated at Richmond College, Columbia College, Columbia University, and Newton Theological Seminary. After serving several churches in Virginia he was called to the care of the First Baptist church, Baltimore, in which he continued in the Master's service nearly forty-four years—a remarkably long and successful service. Advanced age compelled Dr. Williams to resign his pastorate last November, whereupon he was made pastor emeritus, and Rev. C. L. Laws active pastor. Of dauntless courage, great capacity for work, and fervent zeal, it may be fitly written of him, "Well done, good and faithful servant;" and that he has entered into that rest which remaineth to the people of God, none who have Christian faith can doubt.

Dr. J. W. M. Williams.

My heart is sad, very sad. I have just returned from the depot whether I had accompanied the surviving members of the household of this beloved brother as they started on their melancholy pilgrimage to Baltimore with his mortal remains. He died here at the house of his son-in-law, Prof. J. W. Gore, about noon on yesterday, Aug. 28th, of heart trouble. He began to decline about two months ago and gradually became greatly enfeebled, though able to move about the house to the last day. During the morning he seemed to be much brighter. He had slept much better the night before and had enjoyed his breakfast exceedingly. But about noon, while the devoted daughters were arranging for his comfort, they turned to find that the lamp of life had suddenly gone out as he sat in his chair. He was seventy-four years old in April last. Death has made frequent inroads into this family recently. In March of last year the beloved wife and mother was taken. The son and brother followed in September. And now, before a year has quite elapsed, the venerated father is summoned away. Only the two daughters remain of this affectionate family circle. The Lord sustain them in their sore bereavement.

Of the life and labors of Dr. Williams in Baltimore, Lynchburg and elsewhere, others will write. But I wish to bear my humble testimony to the wholesome influence he exerted during his sojourn here in our University village. He won and held fast the highest respect and esteem not only of the members of our church, but of the faculty and students also, and of the villagers generally. When in health he was uniformly hopeful and helpful with sermons and prayer-meeting talks at the church and always ready to take his turn in the services at the University chapel. He had a kind and cheery word for everybody, and his presence was welcome everywhere. We shall greatly miss him now that he is gone. But his memory will linger green and fragrant among our people for a long time. Peace to his ashes.

Revival at Ruffin.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The Lord is still blessing me in my work. I began a meeting at Ruffin, N. C., on Saturday, Aug. 11th, 1894, which continued eleven days. The Spirit of the Lord was with us from the beginning, and gave us power with the people. Sinners began to manifest an interest in the early part of the meeting, and that interest continued to grow and congregations to increase from day to day until the close. Sixteen professed faith in Christ and twelve were added to the church. The church was very much revived, and brought nearer to God, and are looking forward with expectation for greater blessings.

Bro. Rufus W. Weaver of High Point was with us four days and did some most excellent work. He is a very earnest man. His sermons were pointed and forceful, and while the Ruffin saints had learned to love him before, he doubly drew our hearts to him in these meetings. I thank God for giving us such men as Bro. Weaver to fill up the ranks as the old veterans one by one are being called to their reward.

The church at Ruffin has a bright future before it. It is persecuted on every hand, but this only serves to stimulate the brethren to greater efforts and to keep on them the whole armor of the Lord; and with such a man as Dr. F. P. Tucker as our "Moses" to lead the Baptist host from victory to victory, we may reasonably expect that under God the church at Ruffin will in the near future be strong and able to reach out a helping hand to other weak and struggling churches.

A Rare Privilege.

Bro. Bailey:—It was my privilege to attend the Baptist church in this place last Sunday, and hear Rev. R. D. Haymore preach, pastor of the Central Baptist church, Chattanooga. The sermon was one of the best, and delivered in a way to interest every one present. At the close of the sermon, his father in his eighty-ninth year came out and made a public profession of his faith in Christ. At 4 o'clock he was baptized in a beautiful stream of water running near the church, in the presence of a multitude of people. The scene was very touching indeed, and all present seemed to realize that the old man was following Christ in his last days. I had never witnessed such a baptism. A son baptizing his father in his eighty-ninth year. The Lord be praised for it all. EYE WITNESS.

To the Churches of the Chowan Association.

Dear Brethren:—On or about the 23d of June last I forwarded, by mail, express and otherwise the minutes of the eighty-ninth session of the Chowan Association, held with the church at Shady Grove, May 22–24, 1894.

Blanks, upon which to make report to the next session, have also been sent to each church clerk. All churches that have not received the minutes and blanks are requested to notify me at once.

Yours fraternally,

LYCURGUS HOFLER,
Clerk Chowan Association.

Gatesville, August 20, 1894.

Rev. J. W. Rose, who is employed for all his time in Craven county and paid by the Newbern Baptist church, is succeeding finely in his work. Bro. Rose and Rev. Rufus Ford, pastor at Newbern, organized a church on last Saturday with thirteen members, and others have since been added.

Your attention is directed to the excellent showing made by the U. S. Branch of the American Assurance Company in this issue. It is a substantial institution.

What We Are Doing.

During the month of August the churches sent to the Treasurer of the Convention for Foreign Missions, $529.39—$601.11 more than in July. This is an improvement that is cheering. Our churches ought to contribute at least $1,000 a month to this Board. They could do it without giving less to any other object; indeed, I believe such a step forward would mean larger gifts to all objects. While we give to Foreign Missions, let us pray for our missionaries.

Ordination of T. J. Hudson.

At the call of the church, Elders P. H. Fontaine, J. A. Beam, G. T. Watkins and H. T. Williams met at Bethel Hill, Person county, N. C., Tuesday, August 28, 1894, for the purpose of ordaining Bro. T. J. Hudson to the work of the gospel ministry. The presbytery organized by electing Elder P. H. Fontaine, Chairman, and Elder H. T. Williams, Secretary. Elders E. S. Pearce and J. T. Riddick were invited to sit with the presbytery.

After a thorough and very satisfactory examination, it was decided to ordain Bro. Hudson that afternoon.

Elder P. H. Fontaine preached the ordination from Rom. 1: 14; Elder G. T. Watkins delivered the charge; Elder H. T. Williams presented the Bible; Elder J. A. Beam offered the prayer; the presbytery extended the hand of fellowship, and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. T. J. Hudson.

"A Gifted Young North Carolinian."

Professor Collier Cobb, who has charge of the Geological school at the University of North Carolina, is a growing native North Carolinian. We have noted his geological work in our mountains. We learn that he has completed and presented to Prof. Shaler, the head of the Geological department at Harvard University, a statement of the results of his investigation, and he has pronounced it a valuable contribution to science, etc. Upon this indorsement he received the A. M. degree at Harvard this summer. Further, Prof. Shaler, who is president of the Geological Society of America, has nominated him for membership in that Society, the nomination being seconded by H. S. Williams, Prof. of Geology of Yale University. This is equivalent to election, which occurs after Christmas. This is a fine recognition of a gifted young North Carolinian. Prof. Cobb has accomplished much under great difficulties. He has worked his way up to graduation at college paying all expenses by his own outside labor. He is a Christian young man and God will bless and honor him.—Wilmington Messenger.

Vandemere, Bay Creek and Pamlico Churches.

VANDEMERE, N. C.

We began a protracted meeting at this church the second Sunday which closed the 21st of August, with eleven additions, and prospects of others following soon. Rev. J. D. Moore, Beaufort, N. C., did the preaching after the first two days, and did it well. It was simply a plain, earnest and logical presentation of the gospel. So lovingly and plainly did he speak the truth, that he captivated the people and put them to thinking.

The last day of the meeting, Bro. V. C. Holton, having been unanimously chosen to the deaconate, was set apart to his work. Bro. Moore preached the sermon and the writer delivered the charge. Bro. Holton is one of the most godly men I ever knew and is well qualified to discharge the duties of the deaconate.

BAY CREEK BAPTIST CHURCH.

The meeting began here the night of the 31st August, and closed the following Sunday, with six additions. Bro. Moore did the preaching until Friday when he had to leave for his home. It was with sincere regret that we parted with him, but we hope God will send him in our midst again in the near future.

The Baptist cause in Pamlico is quite promising now, but is being badly crippled because of the lack of workers.

Fraternally,

C. E. BURGESS.

The Orphanage Library.

The Orphanage Library is in the east end of the Lassiter Building. It is comfortably warmed, ventilated and carpeted. The books fill five double cases. Tracts and pamphlets are strewed in a bureau. The seats are all pleasant. It is really the most entertaining room at the Orphanage.

Any friends having spare volumes which would benefit the orphans are invited to make a donation. Visitors should always spend an hour in the Library.—Charity and Children.

Associations.

The Associations in the Baptist State Convention will meet this year at the times and places named in the list:

[illegible] September.

Caldwell—Thursday, Sept 6-8, with Knob Creek church, eleven miles east of Lenoir.

Yancey—Thursday, Sept 6-8, with Mt Pleasant church.

Stony Fork—Friday, Sept 7-8, with Yellow Hill church, two miles east of Thomas Bap, Wilkes county.

Ashe and Alleghany—Thursday, Sept 13-16, with Healing Springs ch, ten miles north of Jefferson.

King's Mountain—Thursday, Sept 20-23, with Shelby church.

Sandy Creek—Thursday, Sept 20-23, with [illegible] Creek church.

and I see no reason for shutting them out of the only schools where there is attention given to such things. In many of our female colleges there are admirably equipped departments for instruction in these callings, but so far as I know, there are no provisions made for them in any of our great male schools.

3. As an aid in exercising discipline. The girls need the restraining influence which the admission of boys into their schools would have. A crowd of girls gathered together in a college shut out from the opposite sex often become unmanageable. The presidents of these schools have had no little worry in their efforts to maintain discipline. I am sure that with the presence of young men these difficulties would vanish, and that the girls would at once become submissive and obedient to the laws of the institution.

4. It will save a great deal of expense. If we do not give the young men a chance at our female schools, it is only a question of time when every male college will have to add two or three new departments in order to meet the demands of the young men. Women are entering the law, the ministry, politics, medicine, and pushing men out of these professions. Now some one must take the place of the women in their sphere, and I see no one to do it but men, and we are bound to prepare them for these new relations by affording them ample opportunities for liberal culture along these lines. Our colleges have all they can do now to maintain the departments they have in operation. The only remedy is to let the men into the female colleges of the country where these departments are already provided. Let Judson, Blue Mountain, La Grange and all throw their doors open to boys, and save the denomination this great expense.

5. The spirit of the age demands it. Great changes are upon us. Many have come, and yet greater ones than we ever dreamed of are in sight. We are confronted, as these long headed brethren tell us, with a condition, and we must meet it. There are things in the air which force me to the very reluctant conclusion that the days of men are numbered. We had as well look the facts in the face and prepare to meet them. I have, up to this moment, been opposed to the doctrine of evolution, but I am a convert, and I expect to see women evolving into men and men dissolving into women. It is true in this age in a far different sense from the meaning of Douglas Jerrold when he said, "She who rocks the cradle rules the world." He meant that she was to do the rocking and the ruling both, but in this age she will do the ruling, and some one else the rocking. Let the men get their cradles ready, and be prepared for this new order of things.—Rev. Dr. G. W. Gardner, in Western Recorder.

Are You Happy?

The man or woman who is profitably employed is generally happy. If you are not happy it may be because you have not found your proper work. We earnestly urge all such persons to write to B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., and they can show you a work in which you can be happily and profitably employed.

Gone Off on a Tangent.

Dear Recorder:—I don't see how I am to remain silent much longer. I very much desire to throw whatever influence I may have on the side of right, prudence and wisdom. I claim nothing for this: it is my duty. I am not a born fighter. My family name indicates peace. I am by nature in harmony with the word. But how shall we hold our peace when good brethren all around us are constantly making public declaration of views and principles so much at variance with what seems to us a wise course of action. I began to hope that after more time for deliberation, we were making progress; but in the RECORDER of Aug. 15th, 1894, Bro. J. J. McLendon goes off at a tangent. These are his words:

"I have resolved to vote for no man for the Legislature who is not from principle opposed to State aid in higher education and the liquor traffic." (Some one headed this "A Good Resolution.")

Is Bro. McLendon altogether right? I hardly think so. What this brother resolves to do in reference to education and the liquor traffic, every voter in the State has a legal right to do in reference to his peculiar views upon these and other subjects. When Bro. McLendon reaches the polls, he would be confronted by voters who would say, "I will not vote for any man who opposes State aid to higher education, and I will not vote for any man who favors prohibition." Such a course cannot lead to the selection of the best and most competent men to legislate for us. Under such circumstances the worst men would often get control, and we would lose the benefits of good State government except in reference to our special hobby. There would be great temptation to demagogues and corrupt men to espouse whatever should be popular sentiment upon any one question. If their declarations were all right, Bro. McLendon and his associates would vote for them. They would turn down a good, honest, intelligent man, who agreed with them upon twenty-five other important points of State policy (but upon their special hobby his views were conservative), and vote for the man who opposed State aid to higher education and the liquor traffic, be his views upon other questions of State polity what they might.

I hope I do not reach a false conclusion. I think the declaration commits our brother to such a position: Brethren, if we succeed in finally overthrowing the liquor traffic, let us succeed because we deserve to succeed. Let it be success indeed, not success at the expense of everything else dear to us as a people. If we could succeed in having our people adopt an educational policy that is wise and beneficial to all, let us be prudent. Let us not destroy everything else to gain this one point. We are often in danger of emphasizing some special object in which all become interested to the exclusion of matters equally important.

Perhaps I have said enough. But our brother overlooks the fact that in this country of universal liberty and freedom, sovereignty rests with the individual voter. Each voter is a sovereign. He is not only responsible for what may be done about liquor or education, but for our whole system of government.

I have no right to say that I will give up every other consideration for the question of education or the question of the liquor traffic. My responsibility extends to every question of public policy, and I must conserve all and try to do what is right and best under the circumstances.

H. C. OLIVE.

APEX, Aug. 15, 1894.

[Brother McLendon ought to vote for whomsoever he thinks will best represent him; he feels that he will be best represented by a man who stands for taking away State aid and the annihilation of the liquor traffic. He thinks these two questions are of the greatest importance; and they are. There's the difference between him and Bro. Olive. We think with Bro. McLendon that a man who stands for these two principles is likely to represent us well enough, and is probably sound on other questions. Moreover, it is Bro. McLendon's and Bro. Olive's duty and every citizen's duty to vote for whomsoever each thinks will represent him; and it is folly to be biased or turned from one's course by the way some one else votes, or what other voters say. It is not how other people think they ought to be represented, but how we ourselves think.—EDITOR.]

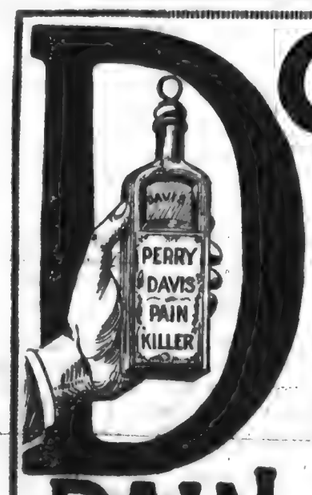
Among the Mountains of North Carolina.

The people of North Carolina may well be thankful for the great and good State in which they live. Among its most beautiful and health giving portions is where we now write—Cleveland Springs in the county of Cleveland. Being about 1,200 feet above the sea, with hills and mountains in every direction, excellent roads and purest water, one ought to enjoy himself and be happy. Shelby is only two miles away, where Dr. Hufham has renewed his youth, and we hope will be spared to do the best work of his successful life as a preacher of the gospel and a leader of the Baptist hosts of the Old North State. It was a pleasure to receive his warm greeting and to preach for him and his people; the latter recalling a sermon we preached to them some few years ago at the State Convention. Dr. Hufham is loved very dearly by his church.

Our esteemed brother, J. B. Wilkinson, and his most excellent wife are the host and hostess of Cleveland Springs, and we did well when we decided to come and bring our own better half to this famous resort, for no one could possibly receive more kindly attention than we have at the hands of these good Baptist people and also of their noble sons. In fact, the 150 guests who at times have been staying here can tell the same story of attention and kindness. South Carolina must claim the honor of giving the largest patronage to the place.

About a mile away, out in the woods, is a Baptist church in pastoral care of Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr. As special meetings were being held, we stole around to see how things went there. Who can forget the face of Bro. Dixon when he once looks upon it? That happy smile that plays upon it; those earnest eyes that tell of the intense soul that lives within. And how tender and kind the dear old man is! He not only takes your hand but lovingly holds on to it; and who could refuse to preach for him when he pleads with you to do it? But to see him conducting a revival is to watch a veteran of nearly eighty summers pleading with the unsaved, encouraging penitents, and praying with unction for the divine blessing. He works with perfect self possession, and has little or no excitement, but garners in many souls. We felt especially drawn to the dear brother because of our own loved father across the great ocean, who also was the father of three Baptist preachers, and is ripe for the Master's touch. As I looked upon Bro. Dixon I could not say which was the greater honor, to be the father of three such sons as he has, or to be the sons of such a father.

Bro. J. H. Mills came to bring Mrs. Williams of the Orphanage, who by much labor had brought sickness upon herself, necessitating perfect rest; and although Bro. Mills could not stay long, yet our better-half thought it would hardly do to have him here without taking a collection, and so an impromptu entertainment was quickly arranged, which passed off creditably to all concerned, and a nice little sum handed over to our large-hearted brother to cheer him on his way.



The BIBLICAL RECORDER finds its way regularly here as it does throughout the length and breadth of this State, the instructor in many a home, always loyal to the great tenets of the denomination it represents. I was much pleased with its brief but able editorial on Prof. Ely's teachings. It sounded the right note. Wealth must realize its obligations and responsibilities. The country will not be prosperous until the workingman can enjoy the fruit of his labor in his own home wherein some of the comforts of life are found. The remedy for our ills is not to be found in a restricted immigration, however desirable that may be, as at present our emigration is larger than our immigration; nor in the ultimate success of temperance, however great a blessing that would bring. The average working man in America is not a hard drinker. Capital and labor must some way be brought together as brothers, each necessary to the other; fewer hours of work; a compulsory board of arbitration in each State; fewer politicians and more statesmen, such as can see beyond their own State, like our own great Baptist statesman, Congressman Wilson; and above all, the teachings of Jesus applied to business by the working man as well as by the employer will surely bring about an era of prosperity.

"For Years,"
Says CARRIE E. STOCKWELL, of Chesterfield, N. H., "I was afflicted with an extremely severe pain in the lower part of the chest. The feeling was as if a ton weight was laid on a spot the size of my hand. During the attacks, the perspiration would stand in drops on my face, and it was agony for me to make sufficient effort even to whisper. They came suddenly, at any hour of the day or night, lasting from thirty minutes to half a day, leaving as suddenly; but, for several days after, I was quite prostrated and sore. Sometimes the attacks were almost daily, then less frequent. After about four years of this suffering, I was taken down with bilious typhoid fever, and when I began to recover, I had the worst attack of my old trouble I ever experienced. At the first of the fever, my mother gave me Ayer's Pills, my doctor recommending them as being better than anything he could prepare. I continued taking these Pills, and so great was the benefit derived that during nearly thirty years I have had but one attack of my former trouble, which yielded readily to the same remedy."

Letter from Sister F. S. Knight.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Only Mrs. Bostick, the little Bosticks, and I are here in Pingtu now. The Board's missionaries are all away. Dr. and Mrs. Randle (the English missionaries, who have been recently adopted by the F. M. Board of the S. B. C.) left here the first part of June for Hwanghien and Chefoo. I do not know when they expect to return, perhaps sometime in August. They were expecting to bring their children from Chefoo to spend a short vacation here in Pingtu. Brother and sister Sears, their baby, all their servants, cow and cow boy have been away for more than a week. They are up on the mountains, at a lonely temple about five miles north-east of here, trying to keep themselves cool and comfortable. Bro. Sears' hired helper (Mr. Li of Saling) is keeping house for them while they are away. Mrs. Sears writes that they are having a good time. In the meantime Mrs. Bostick and I are having a good time here studying and visiting among the people. We often take little Bertha May Bostick with us in her little green and red wagon, and she makes friends on all sides. She waves her little hands and often laughs aloud with delight as she rides along the street or over the hills into the country. Every one takes notice of her, from the hard toiling wheelbarrow man to the proud sedate old teacher.

Last Wednesday and Thursday (the 9th and 10th of the Chinese 6th moon) were busy days. I think I have told you that more country women come into the city on the 9th and 10th of the 6th moon than at any other time during the year. (Those are worship days at the principal city temple). On Wednesday I was with Mrs. Bostick and helped her receive and talk with the women. (She is living here in a large Chinese house which her husband rented last Winter). On the occasion mentioned above, she had everything moved out of her large hall except a few benches, chairs and tables. It was cool and pleasant in this large hall, and Bertha May was in one of her happiest moods—the women crowded in and many heard our message that day. On Thursday I thought perhaps it would be better that I receive in my own home, as many had been here on Wednesday and missed the interview which they had desired. So Mrs. Bostick gave as much time and strength as she could spare to those who visited her large hall, and I received all who came to my little Chinese guest room. Many went away saying: "What you have told us is good, and it is true, we will worship the heavenly Father." Some said: "We thank you, for we should never have heard these good words if you had not told us. How can common country people know anything." "We will tell others, one may tell ten, and ten may tell one hundred."

The Gospel Mission Workers are scattered in different places preaching and getting ready for permanent work. Mrs. Crawford and Bro. Bostick left here nearly four weeks ago. Houses have been rented in Tai-an city, more than two hundred miles from here. Mrs. Crawford was hoping to go on there for a while, at least. Mr. Bostick was hoping to visit other places. We do not know when he will return. I suppose he will not try to move his family before the fall.

I may remain here in Pingtu until next spring. I have my own home, repaired at my own expense, and God gives me good health and much work to do. I have hoped much for the Pingtu work. Its true interests are as dear to me as ever. My mission policy is the same that it has always been. I am going constantly among the people trying to teach them to know, honor, love and obey the true God.

This is my fifth summer in China. God has been very good. My health is excellent. May God bless his work in all lands.

Sincerely, F. S. KNIGHT.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is no quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. Literary.

Wilbur B. Ketcham, Publisher, New York, announces for early publication a volume of Thanksgiving Sermons and Outline Addresses. Edited by William E. Ketcham, D. D.

Dr. J. M. Rice has written for the September Forum an instructive article on the school-excursion taken by teachers and pupils of the Anderson (Ind.) public schools to historic places in Virginia—the first excursion of the kind, with a definite educational purpose, ever taken in the United States. Dr. Rice explains in detail the educational value of it.

The Road to Wealth Leads Through the South, being Solid Facts from Settlers along the Line. By E. C. Robertson. Neave Building, Cincinnati, Ohio. Price, 25 cents.

This title sounds like an immigration agency slogan, but the contents are full of sincere facts that even the South needs to "study up on." In short chapters and subheads, tersely written, well conceived and just in statement, it is a good book.

The Sixth Annual Report of the American Baptist Education Society is a valuable document, containing as it does not only the proceedings of the Society and the report of the Board, but also the very able addresses of Messrs. Hatt, Thomson and Dr. Hoyt on the Public Schools and Sectarianism, and those of Pres. Andrews, Drs. Wood and Harris on Denominational Schools. Besides these, there is a list by States of 205 Baptist institutions of learning, a chronological list by decades showing the great educational activity of the denomination in recent years; also, statistical tables of the principal institutions. The Society has done a good work in publishing these addresses and these facts about our educational work.

The Preacher's Magazine, for September, contains variety and excellence of contents. The first sermon, with a novel title, "Clouds That Hide Christ," by the Right Rev. A. W. Thorold, D. D., is very good. The excellent discourses of Rev. Mark Guy Pearse which have formed a distinctive feature of this magazine are continued, and this brings us another entitled, "Where Thou Dwellest," which is full of apt teachings. A layman's sermon, by Mr. John C. Havemeyer, widely known as a devoted layman, on the theme, "Seen and Unseen," is attractive and profitable. "The Teacher and His Class," a valuable series by distinguished clergymen, is continued. The present article is by Rev. H. S. B. Yates, who writes upon "The Teacher at Work." The Homiletics are of much fullness and force. "God's Favors," by Rev. F. N. Trotter, and "A Tentmaker's Metaphor," by the Rev. Charles Cross, are among the articles. A new and what is to be an exceedingly telling attraction hereafter is a series of "Outlines of Prayer Meeting Talks," by the late Dr. Charles F. Deems, LL D. Published monthly at 15 cents a copy, or $1.50 a year. Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 2 Cooper Union, N. Y.

The Ills of the South. Charles H. Otken, LL. D.; G. P. Putnam & Sons, New York.

Such mention as we may make here of this work cannot do it justice. We shall make extracts from it and editorial comment at an early day. To know the ills of the South is to have gained a desirable vantage ground; and this work not only discusses them but proves its tenets, and directs one to solid ground. The credit system, the labor problem, the question of money and resources in many relations, the enumeration of products and other statistics, the Negro problem, past and future, are all ably discussed. This book is a part of the sociological literature of our section; and so far as we know, its field is at the present time unoccupied. That the South has devoted itself to history and politics to the exclusion of discussion of its ills—which make its problems—is very patent; and it is fortunate that this work is calculated to direct attention to that phase of our life that has been so greatly neglected.

Editor Bok's Talks to Young Men are a most excellent feature of the Ladies' Home Journal for September, a monthly magazine that is of inestimably more value in every home and in home-making than its subscription price (The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia), $1.00 per year.

Readers of the Homiletic Review for September will find much that is helpful and suggestive. Prof. Theodore W. Hunt of Princeton opens the Review Section with a forcible presentation of "The Mental Demands of the Ministry," showing that there is no profession that can compare with it in the requisitions made upon the intellectual faculty and function. Dr. C. B. Hulbert of Adams Mills, Ohio, emphasises the "Importance of Declaring all the Counsel of God," and of shunning a one sided presentation of truth. Prof. Wilkinson gives his third, and final, contribution on "The Imprecatory Psalms," and Dr. Ward answers briefly, yet comprehensively, the question, "Who are the Hittites?" "The Scope of Education under Mahommedan Patronage" is the title of a paper in the department of Sociology and Comparative Religion, by Rev. B. F. Kidder, Ph D., who is making a study of social topics in the East especially for the Review. A comprehensive and scientific presention of the subject "Panics and Hard Times" is contributed by F. S. Hayden, D.D., of Jacksonville, Ill., and is well worth the price of the entire Review. Published monthly by Funk & Wagnalls Company, 30 Lafayette Place, New York. Price, $5.00 per year.

A History of the Baptists in New England. By Henry S. Burrage, D. D. 12m, 318 pp. Price, $1 25. Philadelphia: American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chestnut Street.

We have not wanted for histories of the Baptists. The story of their struggles and successes has been often told, and at each retelling some phase of it has gained a new significance. We have Backus and Benedict and Cramp, and still more recently Armitage and Vedder, each having its own attractiveness and sphere of use, and each appealing still for an increased constituency. But there seems to be room for still another work, a work at once more extensive and more minute in so far as our own country is concerned. Hence the American Baptist Publication Society projected a series of what may be called District Histories, in which in the several volumes special attention should be paid to the section immediately considered. The first of this series is this volume on New England, in which amid much that is old there is also much that is new. Dr. Burrage has done his work with marked industry and good taste and has put the denomination under renewed obligation by placing within its reach a volume that no one, desiring the latest information respecting the denomination, can afford to be without. The volume is furnished with a good index, and in style of type and binding, etc., it is in no wise behind the work its publishers have of late been sending out. It speaks well in itself and it promises well for its successors in the series.

Consider others and forget self.

Korean Manners.

[As China and Japan are now at war over the possession of Korea, we judge the following about the customs of that country will be interesting:]

The girl in Korea is not thought worth educating. She is welcome to such knowledge of the native script, the Umun, as she may be able to pick up from her mother.

Before he has attained the age of six, the boy is put into The Thousand Character or A, B, C book. Some never get through their alphabet. The First Reader is called "The Smaller Learning," and the first part of this book is devoted to the duties of children to their parents and elders.

It is good manners, in Korea at least, for the girl to get up first in the morning, sweep the room, roll up the bed—(a mattress spread on the floor,)—and then begin the preparation for breakfast, which is not served until ten o'clock.

It is proper for the boy to rise early enough to go round to his father's apartment and greet him with "Have you had peace in your sleep?" The boy is expected to busy himself around the front of the house, putting the parlor (which, by the way, belongs to the male part of the family), in order, sweep the yard or see that it is swept, and then go to his studies. He goes to school before breakfast.

Children stand in the presence of parents and superiors, with eyes cast down, hands folded reverently, and for the rest they are supposed "to be seen and not heard," unless spoken to. Great care must be exercised in addressing superiors. The omission of a single syllable may, like the omission of r change a friend to a fiend. More Korean hearts are broken by using "impolite forms of speech" than in any other way I know of. This book, "The Smaller Learning," informs us that girls should use gentle and subdued tones in answering those older and those above them. Why this is limited to them I do not know.

When anything is handed a child he receives it with both hands. He does not say "thanks" or "thank you," but "I shall enjoy eating this," or "I shall make good use of what you have given me."

Insa hao, "making the bow," is a part of every child's training. It is the greeting in the morning, and farewell at night. I had a servant who thought he could not begin his day's work until he had made his morning bow to me. Then there are the salutations at New Year when everybody calls on his friends. The highest officials in Seoul hasten to the Royal Palace to present their congratulations to His Majesty; the second rank calls on the first, and so on down to the children, who do a large part of the calling on the first day of the year. The calling lasts up to the fifth day.

When the boy puts up his hair in a top-knot and in that way announces his engagement to be married, when he is married, and when death comes to his house, all the accompanying formalities, Korean children are taught with great care.

As a natural result, the children are well behaved. A more orderly school than the one I taught for five years while in Korea I never saw. In some respects, therefore, our children can learn from those who do not have the benefit of a Christian civilization.

North Carolina Baptist S. S. Chautauqua.

The second annual session of the North Carolina Baptist Sunday school Chautauqua met at Mt. Vernon Springs on Tuesday, Aug. 28th. It opened with praise service led by Prof. J. H. Ruebush of Dayton, Va.

Dr. C. A. Rominger of Reidsville conducted devotional exercises, and was followed with an address of welcome by Rev. O. T. Edwards of Mt. Vernon Springs.

The President responded, and also outlined the work of the meeting, reviewing the origin and purpose of the first meeting which met here last year.

Rev. A. M. Simms of Raleigh made a few remarks, expressing his pleasure at being present, and his regret at being called away by a telegram just received.

Rev. Dr. T. E Skinner closed the meeting with prayer.

At night a song service was given for thirty minutes.

At 8:30 p. m. Rev. M. A. Adams of Reidsville preached to a large congregation from the incident in Mark, fifth chapter, of the raising the daughter of Jairus by the Lord Jesus Christ.

After a praise service of fifteen minutes Wednesday morning, Rev. Walter M. Gilmore, recently from Louisville, Ky., read the Scriptures, Rev. W. H. H. Lawhon and Bro. T. M. Tucker offered prayer.

The lesson for Sunday, Sept. 9:h, "Jesus and Nicodemus" illustrative of a teacher's meeting was taught by Dr. C. A. Rominger of Reidsville.

An address by Rev. O. L. Stringfield on "The Holy Spirit's Help in Preparation and Teaching of the Lesson" was full of strong suggestions.

Sister T. M. Tucker read an able paper on "The Essentials of Teaching," which was so enjoyed that it was requested for publication.

With the house full of people, the song service began at three o'clock and lasted for thirty minutes.

Bro. B. W. Hatcher taught the lesson for Sept. 16th, "Jesus at Jacob's Well," illustrating how to teach a class unprepared.

The Sunday school in its organization and management was next considered in open conference. Remarks were made by brethren Jenkins of Bertie county, Coleman of Warren county, S. R. Street of Roxboro, W. D. Douglas of Carthage, J. H. Mills of Baptist Orphanage and others.

Rev. L. G. Broughton of Roanoke, Va., gave a lecture at night which he entitled "Chow-Chow," which was rich in humor, abundant in eloquent flights and strong in denouncing wrong and upholding the right.

The "big days" of the Chautauqua were Thursday and Friday. There were four or five hundred people on the outside of the large meeting house who could not be seated on the inside. Friday was designated on the programme as "Children's Day" and everybody wants to see and hear when the little ones are singing and reciting.

After the usual song and prayer service of a half an hour, Bro. W. H. Dodd of Raleigh gave illustrations in primary class teaching, using the lesson for October 7th, "Jesus at Nazareth," with black boards, chart, signs and symbol, he told us how to interest the little ones. Thirty years' experience in this work gave him a wealth of knowledge that was valuable to the Chautauqua, and richly was it enjoyed.

This was followed by the most attractive feature of all the session so far. Mrs. B. W. Hatcher of Siler City with a class of some sixteen girls and boys, members of the Sunbeams Society of the Baptist church of that place, gave an hour's entertainment.

At 2:30 p. m. Bro. D. F. Wilkie and singing class of Bear Creek church gave a service of song that was much enjoyed.

"The Draught of Fishes, or the Call of the First Disciples," the lesson for Oct. 14, was given inductively, showing the value of that system over the old style.

"The Duty of our Sunday schools to the Orphanage at Thomasville," was the next topic for discussion, and ten-minute addresses were made by Bro. W. C. Douglas of Carthage, Dr. N. B. Cobb, Bro. J. H. Mills and Rev. B. Cade.

Quite a number voluntarily gave contributions to Bro. Mills, the Orphanage Superintendent.

At 8 p. m Prof. Ruebush led a most delightful concert, and at 8:30 o'clock, Bro. John T. Pullen of Raleigh gave an address on "Personal Work." Being himself the embodiment of his subject, he was heard with peculiar pleasure, and many were the encomiums of praise given to him.

Saturday, at 9:30 a. m. the Chautauqua assembled for the election of officers and the transaction of business. The following were chosen: President, N. B. Broughton; Vice-President, Dr. C. A. Rominger; Secretary and Treasurer, J. C. Birdsong.

Executive Committee—Dr. C. A. Rominger, E. W. Timberlake, J. M. Broughton, W. H. Dodd, B. W. Hatcher and T. H. Street.

To the Executive committee was left the time and place for holding the next session of the Chautauqua.

Messrs. M. A. Allen, W. C. Douglas and D. P. C. Jenkins were appointed as a committee to secure the holding of Sunday-school institutes throughout the State during the next year.

On Sunday, the Chautauqua Sunday-school was held much to the edification of all who attended.

At 11 a. m. Rev. M. A. Adams of Reidsville preached.

To the Superintendents of Sunday-schools.

Dear Brethren:—The Home Mission Board is exceedingly anxious to interest the children and youth of our Southern churches in its work. A work which is of very great importance, as having to do with the evangelization of our own people. For this purpose the Boards of the Convention have fixed upon the 30th of September as "Missionary Day for the children. The Sunday school Board has been requested by the Home and Foreign Boards to take charge of this service, and all the arrangements for that day will be under their direction. We do earnestly beg that every Superintendent and worker in our Sunday-schools will heartily join with it in making known the facts of mission work of our Convention to those under their care, and induce them to make liberal contributions to it. We cannot overrate the importance of deepening and broadening the sympathies of all our young people with the purpose of God to give the gospel to every creature. Let us sow in the fresh and fertle soil of these young hearts the love of mission work which will grow and bear abundant fruit when we, asleep in Jesus, are awaiting the resurrection of the just.

The Christianizing of our American people is of the highest importance because they are among the few people that must be relied upon to give the gospel to every creature. If all Africa were to be converted to Christ, their two hundred millions would add very little to the strength of the Christian forces that must conquer the world for Christ. They are so wanting in intelligence, wealth and enterprise that nobody would expect them to send missionaries to other lands. But if the seventy millions of America were all regenerated and thoroughly consecrated to the work of Christ, with their intelligence, their high civilzation, their wealth and spirit of enterprise, they could and soon would send the Word of Life to the ends of the earth. It is in the work of winning these for Christ, along with that of seeking to evangelize the Indians, the Negroes and the Cubans that we want the children interested. In this work we want them to take a part.

Programs, cards, &c., will be furnished free on application to the Baptist Sunday-school Board, Nashville, Tenn.

Yours truly, I. T. TICHENOR,
Cor. Sec. H. M. Board.

Meetings and Incidents.

Dear Recorder:—Bro. Baldwin, the pastor of Bear Creek church, preached to an immense congregation at that place on the first Sunday, and continued the meeting till the next Thursday. The writer went to his assistance Tuesday morning. Three await baptism—one of them formerly an Episcopalian, and one a Methodist.

After filling my appointment at Farmington on the next Saturday and Sunday, I went Sunday evening to Clemonsville and preached for the pastor, Bro. J. B. Newton, till Friday evening. The congregations were very large and the interest good. Eleven were baptized and two restored. Bro. Newton is much beloved by the congregation, and all regret that his removal to Aulander severs the pastoral connection. The church will call his successor soon.

From Clemonsville I went to my church at Eaton's Saturday. Packed houses on Sunday and until the next Sunday listened attentively to the writer and Bro. S. J. Beeker of Jerusalem, who came to my assistance on the evening of the first Sunday of the meeting. The church was revived, wanderers reclaimed, and a number comforted. One was restored to fellowship and eleven baptized last Sunday. Dr. John Mitchell came to the neighborhood Saturday night and preached a most excellent sermon on Sunday morning. The church is in good condition and is keeping its work well up.

Little Spurgeon White, aged twelve years and eight months, a most promising and pious child who had been baptized about two years, died of diphtheria during the meeting and was interred in the church cemetery at the close of one of our services. He preached a sermon before his death. He was very anxious about his young associates and requested all to meet him in heaven. Doubtless his death led some to Christ who may become preachers of the blessed gospel that Spurgeon loved so well and which he desired so much to live to preach. The providences of the Lord are mysterious yet always right. His will be done! May He comfort the bereaved family and community. All loved Spurgeon very dearly and mourn for him sincerely yet resignedly.

Bro. Beeker preached some very good sermons. He is an excellent worker and a pious, consecrated brother. He expects to return to the college.

Bro. Joe Rich, a young brother of Farmington, of exceptional talent and piety, who feels the Divine call to preach, will go to the College next week. He will make his mark if the Lord spares him.

Some of my children will teach at Fork Academy and some at other points. I will superintend the school at Fork church, but this will, in no way, interfere with my pastoral duties.

I hope to hold a meeting at Farmington from the second Sunday in September, and here and at Jerusalem in the near future.

WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,300 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one half of the language) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,300 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

enables you to begin to enjoy the use of the Dictionary at once, paying only a small sum down. Write to us and learn how favorable are the terms upon which it is sold. Best canvassers wanted in every county in North Carolina. Address

The Science of Medicine.

GREAT ADVANCES MADE IN THE LAST FEW YEARS.

THE STORY OF A MAN THAT HAS LATELY BEEN CURED OF THAT TERRIBLE DISEASE, LOCOMOTOR ATAXIA.

(From the Philadelphia Record.)

Very little is heard by the general public of the great discoveries in medicine, and the countless scores of lives that are saved by the advancing knowledge of medical science. Diseases, which a few years ago baffled the most eminent physicians and were believed to be absolutely incurable, succumb to-day as readily as the most trifling ailment. No one, perhaps, has better cause to appreciate this than Richard A. Willian of Bustleton, Pa. Mr. Willian is a retired calico print manufacturer, and before his health began to trouble him he carried on an extensive business, both in Bustleton and Holmesburg. He is fifty-three years of age, has traveled widely, and is a man of more than ordinary education and intelligence. A reporter who visited him found him strolling leisurely through the grounds surrounding his pleasant home. Mr. Willian was at first decidedly averse to the unwelcome publicity which he felt would follow the story of his case in the newspapers. Realizing, however, that it might be the means of bringing relief to others who were suffering as he had suffered he finally consented.

"If it had not been for one of the recent discoveries of medical science, I believe I would be lying helpless in bed instead of enjoying this stroll," he began. "My troubles really date back to several severe falls I received when a young man, but I suffered no great inconvenience until 1888. My first sensation was great difficulty in walking. As this feeling grew more intense I finally called in a well-known physician of Holmesburg, who immediately told me that I had locomotor ataxia, and placed me under active treatment. Instead of getting better I seemed to grow worse, and I was scarcely able to get around. A year after I became his patient he told me that he would have to give me up. He gave me to understand that I must resign myself to a condition of utter helplessness until death came to my relief. At last I got so that I could not walk at all; my limbs went back on me entirely, and I was just able to sit up. I then called in Dr. Bull, then in Philadelphia, and now a resident of Chicago. He recommended sun-baths, and I had a sun-parlor erected for the purpose, but my trouble did not yield to such treatment, and finally I abandoned it. In April last, I received a letter from a Mr. Grantier, a friend of mine in Elmira, N. Y., telling me how a new medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills was performing astonishing cures in the severest nerve diseases, and advising me to give them a trial. Not knowing the scientific nature of Dr. Williams' remedy, and believing that it was an ordinary medicine, I was at first inclined not to bother with it. But I reflected that in my miserable condition it could do me no harm at least, and I sent to the drug store and purchased one box. After the third box I began to feel some benefit. My whole system seemed better. I kept taking the pills, and one day to my great joy I discovered that I could walk a little. From that time on my recovery has been rapid. Now, after using Pink Pills for five months, from a condition of utter helplessness I am able to walk one mile every day without inconvenience. I take my one mile spin around the house every day. I haven't walked that distance before for three years. I find that I can ascend the hilly road which leads to our house with ease. I noticed a general improvement in my health from week to week, and my feet no longer feel as though they were weighed down with lead. I ascribe this wonderful change solely to Pink Pills. My mother is very enthusiastic over the pills, and thinks Dr. Williams ought to have his great discovery proclaimed from the housetops."

An analysis of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills shows that they contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female, and all diseases resulting from vitiated humors in the blood. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ont.

Ordination of Rev. B. K. Mason.

At Fork church, Aug. 26th, 1894, a presbytery, consisting of Elders S. F. Conrad, J. F. Redwine and J. B. Newton, met and ordained Rev. B. K. Mason to the full work of the ministry, after a careful and satisfactory examination.

Rev. S. F. Conrad preached the sermon from Col. 4: 17. Rev. J. B. Newton led in prayer, and Rev. J. F. Redwine delivered the charge and presented the Bible. Benediction by Rev. B. K. Mason.

Advertising sneaks have been sending out the statement that the cotton-buyers will not accept cotton baled in "sugar bags," etc., at the usual prices. This is absolutely false, and is a scheme of the dying jute trust to deceive the farmers again. The New York Cotton Exchange says cotton baled in "sugar bagging," as it is called, is good delivery. Don't buy jute bagging.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Hoke Secrest has served out a penitentiary sentence in South Carolina, and will be tried in this State now for wife-murder.

Republican convention at Raleigh last week resolved to support Populist ticket. ——T. C. Milliken was nominated for Congress from the 4th district.——Miss Corinne Harrison, one of the States' talented educators, died at Chapel Hill. Maj. J. B. Neathery, prominent publisher and citizen, died at Raleigh, Aug. 29th.——There are 177 mills in the State, thirty-four counties having one or more.——A score of men were indicted and fined at Winston for gambling; the Sentinel is to be commended for giving their names to the public.——A woman, who was a Miss Brady, whose marriage name is Glasscock, and who was reared near Statesville, brings charges against the venerable Senator Stewart of Colorado. Her husband is suing her for divorce on these charges. The infamous story of the woman appears to be a fabrication, and in our opinion she is bidding for notoriety.——Cotton receipts at Raleigh for the year ending Sept, 1st were 30,494.——A street railway car filled with people got beyond control on a grade in Asheville; several bones broken but no one killed. ——Geo. Crawford, colored, drowned while bathing in Neuse river.——An addition 205 feet long 50 feet wide is to be built to the Cabarrus cotton mills.——All but three of the fire companies of the State association at Winston last week.——The North Carolina road Improvement Association meets at Charlotte 12th and 13th.——A banking company has been organized at Burlington.

General News.

—Thirty seven men were killed by fire in a mine at Franklin, Washington, recently.

The Treasury gold reserve is increasing. A spirit of hopefulness pervades financial institutions generally.

G. L. McCahan was elected General Grand High Priest of the Grand Chapter of Royal-Arch Masons at the recent meeting at Topeka, Kan.

The notorious Breckenridge is said to be losing hold in Kentucky; and it is thought now that he will be defeated despite that the opposition is divided.

A strike by mill operatives in Massachusetts, involving about 12,000 employees, was in progress all last week. Lack of business forced the mills to reduce wages.

A grand Encampment of Knights of Pythias was held last week at Washington City. There were 100,000 in attendance, and the President reviewed the parade.

It is stated that a cyclone along the Russian coarst duplicated our Sea Island catastrophe last week: it swept entire villages into the sea, and one thousand people perished.

It is stated that Eli Whitney, grandson of the illustrious inventor of the cotton gin—which was invented 101 years ago—has announced that he has invented a cotton picker.

There are no new developments in the war between China and Japan. Peace is not promising. Japan is said to have the best of the war thus far, though it is evident that victory will bring neither as much as either has lost since hostilities began.

Police commissioners are engaged in trying police captains of New York City. Many revelations are being made and several officers will be dismissed. The Lexow committee will resume its wholesome work of purifying New York's politics this fall.

Agnostic Bob Ingersoll has been writing a series of articles for the press proving that from his point of view, i. e., atheistic, suicide is logical and justifiable. Whether the articles have anything to do with the unusual number of recent suicides is a question; but it is a fact that the number of the latter of late has been unprecented.

Texas stands in danger of losing its cotton crop. The boll-worm is doing much damage. Drouth in the central and western States has reduced the output of corn one-third. North Carolina, Virginia and South Carolina have the best crops in years. New cotton was reported at Raleigh and Wilmington week before last. The Raleigh bale brought 6¼ cents per pound.

The Commission appointed by the President to investigate the late strike has been in session two weeks. Mr. Pullman, President Debs and others have been on the witness stand. The strikers have been justified, as Mr. Pullman convicted himself out of his own mouth of oppression. His ideal town, Pullman, is shown up to have been a money-making investment, in which there was nothing ideal for those whom Pullman compelled to dwell in it.

MARRIED.

HUGHES—BLACKMAN—On August 23d, 1894, at Haw River, by Rev. John C. Hocutt, Mr. B. N. Hughes and Miss Eula Blackman.

BARCLIFT—FEREBEE—On August 28th, at Elizabeth City, N. C., by Rev. Calvin S. Blackwell, Mr. Samuel S. Barclift of Elizabeth City and Miss Mollie J. Ferebee of Norfolk, Virginia.

WOODRUFF—STALLINGS—On Monday, August 27th, at 7 a. m., in the Baptist church at Mocksville, Mr. Truman N. Woodruff of Surry county, N. C., and Miss Kate E. Stallings, daughter of Dr. J. N. Stallings, the father of the bride officiating.

DIED.

MADRY—Laura Madry, a pious woman and useful member of Mt. Sinai church, died Aug. 16th, 1894. She leaves a husband, two children, and a large number of friends to mourn her loss. J. B. FEREBEE.

HARMAN—Mrs. Harman, wife of Rev. G. W. Harman, departed this life at Ramseur, August 26th, 1894, in the full triumph of the gospel faith. She leaves a father, husband and nine children to mourn for her.

Loving husband, do not weep,
Your wife is not dead, but gone to sleep.

MANLY FORRESTER.

CARTER—On August 17th, 1894, in Concord, N. C., J. J. Carter quietly passed away at the age of seventy. He was a faithful member of the Baptist church in Concord for several years, and a worker in the Sunday-school, until prevented from attending by disease. He was ready to go, and for several months quietly awaited the call.

PASTOR.

STOWE—On August 18th, 1894, Ruann Stowe, known in Concord as Auntie Stowe, passed to her reward at the age of seventy-seven. For many years she was all the Baptist that was in Concord. Long she prayed for a minister of her faith to be sent to Concord, and finally rejoiced in the answer to her prayers when Rev. G. P. Bostick, now in China, began the work here. Many of the brethren remember the old lady confined to her chair unable to walk a step. In the words of Job she said, "I know that my Redeemer liveth." PASTOR.

WALKER—At home in Belfield some days ago died one of North Carolina's most honored and efficient teachers, Miss Addie J. Walker. She was born and reared in Belfield, Va. At the early age of seventeen she graduated with high honors. Some years ago she came to North Carolina, and for three successive years was principal of one of our academies. She leaves many friends to mourn their loss, but none mourn it more than I who went to school to her for two years. I hope to meet her in a land that is fairer than day.

G. W. WHITE.

MITCHELL—The home of brother John Mitchell, who lives two and a half miles from Windsor, N. C., was, on the 20th of August, a scene of sadness.

On the same day the messenger of death made two visitations to that home and called away to their home on high two lovely little girls. At 11:30 a. m. little Myrtle Rice Mitchell, six months and twenty days old, passed away under the fell stroke of a congestive chill. She was a beautiful child and remarkably precocious, commonly doing things very much in advance of her age.

And on the same day, at 7 p. m., the same relentless disease removed from the scenes of earth the elder sister, Susan E. Mitchell, two years, ten months and five days old. The burial services were very impressive. The two little bodies were buried in the same coffin. The casket was made not in the coffin shape, but with sides straight, wide enough to lay them side by side; it was beautifully designed and tastefully finished, and when they were placed therein they looked not unlike two children laid in a crib for a night's sleep. Theirs is a long sleep, but they are "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,

From which none ever wake to weep."

With appropriate ceremonies these little ones were buried in the family graveyard. The hearts of Bro. John Mitchell and Sister Maggie Mitchell, the father and mother, are filled with grief. This is a heavy burden and a sore trial, and one that needs the grace of God to enable them to bear it. May our Heavenly Father cause his grace to abound to them in their affliction. J. B. B.

OF
The American Baptist Publication Society.

Arranged by the most eminent scholars in the Baptist denomination North, South, East, and West, in the interests of Baptists.

The Society desires to call attention to the mechanical excellence of its publications. All things else being equal, publications that are attractive and develop the artistic sense of the scholar are the ones which eventually accomplish the most good. If the printing is first-class and the pictures good the scholars are more likely to preserve and use the periodical. The Publication Society has always tried to obtain the best results in the issuing of their publications, and no expense is spared in the mechanical work of its periodicals and books, while providing the best also for the subject matter. Compare our periodicals with others.

IS THE
Convention Series of Sunday School Helps.
Fine Exegetical Work,
Strong Denominational Lessons,
Distinct Missionary Features
Make this Series exactly suit our Southern schools.

And They Are Realizing It

Rev. E. C Dargan, D. D., (in the Teacher); Rev. E. J. Forrester, D. D., (in the Advanced Quarterly); Rev. S. Boykin, D. D., (in the Intermediate and Primary Quarterlies), will furnish the comments on the lessons for the fourth quarter; while a number of our best men will furnish articles for the TEACHER.

Every Teacher should read the articles on the life of Christ, which began in the TEACHER in July and will run twelve months. Prof. A. T. Robertson, of the Seminary, is doing fine work on these.

Kind Words, beginning with August, contains in its missionary department, once a month, an outline program for children's bands. Let LEADERS OF BANDS note this fact. And in October the third page will contain a Bible Reading Department. Look for it.

A Sermon in Rhyme.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him—yes, and let him know
That you love him e'er life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend, till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it—do not let the singer
Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it—do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone,
Why should not your brother share
The strength of two or three in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling,
Falling from a brother's eyes,
Share them—and thus by the sharing
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh is rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it—'tis the wise man's saying,
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand.
Say so—speak out brave and truly
Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go;
Leave them; trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So until life's happy end,
You shall never lack a friend.

Sunshine Factory.

"O, dear! it always does rain when I want to go anywhere," cried little Jennie Moore. "It's too bad! Now I've got to stay in-doors all day, and I know I shall have a wretched day."

"Perhaps so," said Uncle Jack; "but you need not have a bad day unless you choose."

"How can I help it? I wanted to go to the park and hear the band, and take Fido and play on the grass and have a good time, and pull wild flowers, and eat sandwiches under the trees; and now there isn't going to be any sunshine at all, and I'll have to just stand here and see it rain, and see the water run off the ducks' backs."

"Well, let's make a little sunshine," said Uncle Jack.

"Make sunshine!" said Jennie; "why, how you do talk!" and she smiled through her tears. "You haven't got a sunshine factory, have you?"

"Well, I'm going to start one right off, if you'll be my partner," replied Uncle Jack "Now, let me give you three rules for making sunshine: First, don't think of what might have been if the day had been better; second, see how many pleasant things there are left to enjoy; and, third, do all you can to make other people happy."

"Well, I'll try the last thing first," and she went to work to amuse her little brother Willie, who was crying. By the time she had him riding a chair and laughing, she was laughing too.

"Well," said Uncle Jack, "I see you are a good sunshine-maker, for you've got all you or Willie can hold now. But let's try what we can do with the second rule."

"But I haven't anything to enjoy, 'cause all my dolls are old, and my picture books all torn, and—"

"Hold," said Uncle Jack, "here's a newspaper; now, let's get some fun out of it."

"Fun out of a newspaper! Why, how you talk!" replied Jennie with much surprise.

But Uncle Jack showed her how to make a mask by cutting holes in the paper, and how to cut a whole family out of paper dolls, and how to make pretty things for Willie out of paper. Then he got out a tea tray and showed her how to roll a marble round it.

And so Jennie found many pleasant amusements; and when bedtime came she kissed Uncle Jack, and said with a bright and cheerful smile: "Good night, dear Uncle Jack."

"Good night, dear little sunshine-maker," said Uncle Jack.

And as Jennie slept that night she dreamed that Uncle Jack had built a great house, and put a sign over the door which read:

SUNSHINE FACTORY.

Uncle Jack and little Jennie.

Fred and his Cousins.

Fred is a city boy. He never was in the country until last year. He spent the summer vacation at his Grandma Stone's farmhouse. The great out-of doors was all new and very strange to him. He asked many queer questions. His country cousins thought many of them were foolish questions. He asked if the birch trees by the spring shed their skin every year, if a musk rat could climb as high as a squirrel; and he really did believe that cows gave skim milk and that beans grew underground.

"A city boy does not know much," his cousins said to one another, when Fred was not there to hear; but grandma would say, "Wait and see."

Grandma wanted some skullcap herb one day. Skullcap tea she must have for a very sick neighbor. She sent the children into the meadows and woods to search for it. None of them knew the herb or where it grew. "A little blue flower with peaked green leaf," was all that grandma could tell them of the herb.

Jack came home with a big bunch of lobelia; Lucy with water weeds, Jean with gentian flowers, the twins with an armful of snake grass; but Fred came with his hands full of skullcap herb.

"I found it down in the south swamp, grandma," he said. "I had read of it in my botany, and I knew it the minute I saw it."

"He does know something," the cousins whispered; and grandma said: "I told you to wait and see."

One evening grandma took a lighted lamp and went into the shed-chamber for another cheese hoop. Jack and Jane and Fred went with her. She stepped on a loose board. It tipped, and the lamp flew from grandma's hand. The oil spilled and caught fire, and in a moment that end of the shed chamber was all ablaze. Grandma screamed for water, and grandpa and the boys ran for it to dash over the flames; but Fred shouted, "Don't, don't, don't!"

He caught a shovel from the floor, scooped it into a barrel of meal, and threw shovelful after shovelful of the damp stuff upon the flames. The fire was all out when the boys came puffing up stairs with pails of water.

"Don't! Don't throw water on oil flames, for it spreads the fire," Fred said. "Our teacher told us about it. Dash on flour, meal, salt, earth, dressing, wool clothing, rugs, but never water."

"Fred saved our house this time, and no mistake," grandpa said, looking at the scorched floor and wall in the open chamber. "The timbers and boards are as dry as tinder, and hung with everything that would easily catch fire. Water would have spread the flames and burned the house."

"City boys do know a whole lot," Jack whispered to Jean, sliding down the shed-chamber stairs.—Our Little Men and Women.

Peter, the "Mint Bird"

If you have a silver dollar of 1836, 1838 or 1839, or one of the first nickel cents coined in 1856, you will find upon it the true portrait of an American eagle that was for many years a familiar sight in the streets of Philadelphia. "Peter," one of the finest eagles ever captured alive, was the pet of the Philadelphia mint, and was generally known as the "mint bird." Not only did he have free access to every part of the mint, going without hindrance into the treasure vaults where even the Treasurer of the United States would not go alone, but he used his own pleasure in going about the city, flying over the houses, sometimes perching upon lamp posts in the streets. Everybody knew him and admired him, and even the street boys treated him with respect. The government provided his daily fare, and he was as much a part of the mint establishment as the superintendent or chief coiner. He was so kindly treated that he had no fear of any body or anything, and he might be in the mint yet if he had not sat down to rest upon one of the great fly-wheels. The wheel started without warning, and Peter was caught in the machinery. One of his wings was broken, and he died a few days later. The superintendent had his body beautifully mounted, with the wings spread to their fullest extent; and to this day Peter stands in a glass case in the mint's cabinet, where you may see him whenever you go there. An exact portrait of him as he stands in the case was put upon the coins named.—Harper's Young People.

Mothers

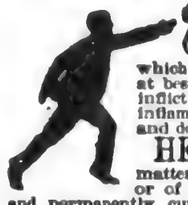
"One good mother is worth a hundred schoolmasters," said George Herbert. Men are what their mothers make them. But if the mothers are peevish and irritable, through irregularities, "female weakness," and kindred ailments, they find no pleasure, no beauty in the care of their babes. All effort is torture. Let all such, who feel weighed to the earth with "weaknesses" peculiar to their sex, try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. They will find the little ones a delight instead of a torment.

To those about to become mothers it is a priceless boon. It lessens the pains and perils of childbirth, shortens labor and promotes the secretion of an abundance of nourishment for the child.

Increased Call for Farms.

It is a fact that the "hard times" experienced in town and city have had the effect to turn an increased measure of attention to the farm and the advantages it affords for a home. Within a limited circle of observation in this central part of the State a considerable number of farms have been recently purchased by parties from the cities out of employment, and therefore out of the opportunity to earn their daily bread. If we must have periodical hard times there is then a measure of good resulting from such a condition of the country's industries, in that people in the always crowded cities are led to look out to the country where there is always room, and are let to see that the farm always furnishes employment to the owner and his family, and liberally supplies the home with the comforts and necessities of life. There may not be so much money handled from their labor on the farm, but in many cases that labor judiciously expended on the land will bring more for the outlay in other and necessary forms than the money earnings in the city can purchase. This drift, then, from the city to better and happier homes on the farms should be encouraged. There never was, and probably never will be, a better time to make the change than now. Farms, wherever found for sale, are surprisingly low in value. There is room for all who may wish to come, and labor in plenty for all in want of work.—Maine Farmer.

Silos and Silage.



Though the preservation of green forage in pits has been in vogue for many years in Europe, ensiling has been practiced in America for scarcely a score of years. A silo is any practically air tight receptacle for the preservation of fodder, which is usually cut fine and packed into wooden bins, boxes or earth pits.

Silos are especially valuable in rainy climates where the moisture is apt to spoil the fodder and hay before it is dried, or after it is stacked in the field. In silage the stalks and coarse stems are also made palatable. In each of the States where ensiling is practiced, the experiment stations have published bulletins concerning the building of the silo, the preparation of the silage, and the best method of feeding it to stock. The Wisconsin station at Madison has issued an especially useful publication on the building of silos. The New York station at Geneva describes the filling of the silo.

One of the most useful books published on this subject is "Silos, Ensiling and Silage," a practical treatise by Prof. Manly Miles of Michigan. It costs fifty cents. Other valuable books are: "The Silo and Silage" by Prof. A. J. Cook, price twenty-five cents. "A Manual of Cattle Feeding," by Prof. H. P. Armsby, price $1 75. "Grasses and Forage Plants," by Chas. L Flint, price $2.00. Phare's "Farmer's Book of Southern Grasses," price fifty cents. Orange Judd Company of 52 and 54 Lafayette Place, New York, will send any of these books, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

Tilos are now generally built of lumber, as stone or brick are costly. Field corn, with both ears and fodder, is the crop most used. Cowpeas, sorghum and red clover are also ensiled. The forage is cut into very small pieces by a machine, and spread evenly in the silo. The mass is covered closely with dry hay and straw, and sometimes tarredpaper is added. The silage is shoveled out in the winter for feeding. The best ration combines a small amount of hay and grain with an abundance of silage.—Selected.

FOR BEAUTY

For comfort, for improvement of the complexion, use only Poozoni's Powder; there is nothing equal to it.

IN paint the best is the cheapest.—Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

Strictly Pure White Lead

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long. Look out for the brands of White Lead offered you; any of the following are sure:

"Atlantic" New York. "Jewett" New York.

"John T. Lewis & Bros." Philadelphia.

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

WHEN the Pope of Rome states that a thing has fallen into a sad condition, honest folks are likely to remove themselves as far from it as possible; the Pope has stomached with a straight face so many things which honest folks could never abide. Opinions, however, depend largely upon one's point of view; and when the Pope wrote to a recent Catholic Congress that "religion and society have fallen into a sad condition," we were incited to think on the matter rather doubtfully; and it was with no great difficulty that the reason of his unhappy language was revealed.

Pope Leo XIII has been a sanguine ruler; and the many letters that he has sent from the Vatican to his legions of subjects have seldom failed to reflect a confident hope, that, one who has seen his picture cannot but feel, lives within his scintillant eyes. He has been an able and popular humbug, and a high-priced one withal. And therein his former hopefulness is accounted for. But Pope Leo XIII no longer views 'religion and society' from the position of a successful man. His dominion is limited, and becoming more so; his power in that which is left him is diminishing, and there is prospect of ultimate dissolution. The gospel is being preached in Spain, Brazil and Italy, and where the gospel is preached popery will not flourish; the human race—all of it—exhibits in an unusual degree, as enlightenment is diffused, a tendency to cast off all that retards civil or religious liberty; and the acute Pope Leo XIII cannot but see that oligarchy is doomed. No wonder, then, that he sees sad conditions, he is so sad.

Leo is not a weak pope. He has been a decided stay to Rome's decline; and it is scarcely probable that there will be another so able as he in many years, but even he has had to make grievous concessions to enlightenment.

UPON receiving a partial list of certain educational institutions in our State not long ago a gentleman wrote, "You surely have an abundance of academies;" and himself being well acquainted with the educational facilities of many States his words are authoritative. Of all things not essential to life and religion we would rather have an 'abundance of academies;' and we are proud to say that there are more of these institutions in our State than ever before; that their number is increasing; that their principals are better qualified for their positions, and that the institutions are better sustained than ever before. We are speaking of the institutions that fill the gap between primary schools and colleges.

It may be made quite evident that there is reason for gratification at the number and increase of academies. They are affected by neither State nor denomination, except in some deplorable instances that can and will be rectified; they are independent of the State, and are in most cases presided over by men who were educated at voluntarily-supported institutions, and in whom there is, therefore, religious conviction, and at the same time a degree of independence of spirit that is desirable. And their principals are also more than mere instruments; they must have executive ability, they must be able to establish and maintain a prestige. It is a great deal to be able to be independent, to work well and safely with no other engineer than one's self.

An academy is a necessity in every locality of importance; for though one may command success without collegiate training, it is with great difficulty that one becomes of great value to the world without the advantage of academic training, which, therefore, should be in reach of as many as possible.

An academy may, of course, go beyond itself and become a farce. Like other good things, its field is unique; and so long as it occupies it, all is well. They should, it seems to us, endeavor to reach that large class of girls and boys who usually stop with the little they have acquired at the free school; and then to encourage as many of these as possible to seek their way to college. But they should not be chiefly concerned with preparing students for college, for, come what may, a majority of them cannot go further than the academy, and even if they could, there is a branch of academic instruction of which every one should have the advantage and which cannot be secured in colleges or public schools: it is business training. Colleges train students to follow lines of thought; Latin and Greek are mental dumb-bells. Academies have the opportunity of making students practical; and if they are not made practical, the ways of the world will be all the harder to them, no matter what their occupation. Business methods are learned in every day life slowly and at great cost. Moreover, one whose business talents have been developed will command position, when one who has a finished literary education is forced to rest on his oars.

IT IS very fortunate that this is election year. In fact, we were never more impressed with the wisdom of the law making congressional elections necessary every two years; and we could wish that Senators were elected every four years by popular vote. Long terms make public servants forgetful, independent, yea, arrogant. But the prospect of having to account to an exacting constituency prevents many sins; and the ease of the legislature elected, six-year Senators accounts for as many.

Matters lagged in Congress, especially in the Senate, all the long session, but as conventions began to be held, as the war horses sniffed the smoke of battle, the tariff and everything was disposed of, and, it is said, no Congressman could be found in Washington a day later. They are now in the fields, working as they, in their congressional ease, had almost forgotten how to work; and it does one's heart good to know that these men do have to return to struggling, if it is only once in two years. The commercial interests of the country could not incite to unusal efforts, but the prospect of returning to the people with empty hands, the prospect of returning to private life and six hundred or less a year, hastened matters mightily; and when self interest doesn't move office holders, their political epitaph had as well be written.

Does it not seem a shame that men who are elected to make laws should be so clamorous to hold their positions that they stop law-making in order to keep them? Does it not seem reasonable that a good, able and worthy man, who has done his duty, would keep his seat without months of electioneering? Would appearances not be more creditable if every man would do his duty and be content to rise or fall by it, content not to boast and proclaim and dispense patronage and spend money and cajole. And, by the way, the good and faithful usually wait for the master to call them "good and faithful," and for him to call them back to work.

THE 'metropolitan atmosphere' of certain papers in our State was lately mentioned as a compliment by one who immediately began to denounce the metropolitan papers as the vilest of the vile; and it was doubtless received as a compliment. We would rather try to do without the metropolitan atmosphere for a little while, at least; we are not quite metropolitan ourselves, and really there is such a thing as going beyond one's self and losing both breath and character, if not life. We don't see what could be done with a metropolitan atmosphere anyway, reeking as it is with filth and crime and flying germs of both. We don't see why a little city or a small State that is tolerably clean and pure—just tolerably—should feel praised when it is said to have become somewhat metropolitan. We would greatly prefer to have it said that we were simple and original, and that we took good care of our own business. And, surely, if we must mimic, let us mimic something worthy. Anything that can imagine filth or conceive of crime can counterfeit metropolitan atmosphere. But the small must follow the great, according to present time customs; and if a great daily paper is repulsive with column after column of scandal and vice, if it suppresses the pure and proclaims the rotten, if it lies and buys and sells lies, and destroys the pure in order to sell extra papers to morbid readers, then small papers sedulously emulate them in order to attain that degree of filthiness essential to the existence of metropolitan atmosphere.

We long for the time when small things will be content to be gracefully and ornately small, when villages will not mimic towns, when towns will not overdose themselves with metropolitan atmosphere; when men will be content to be their honest, worthy selves, when ingenuous originality is more desired than disgraceful emulation.

TWO BRETHREN—preacher and layman—were arguing the question of pastoral vacation; and the chief point for the negative was boldly stated by the latter: "the devil never takes a vacation." Whereupon the pastor meekly said that although he had the good fortune of a college education he had never been told that pastors were expected to emulate the devil in any particular. There is no logic in such a reply, yet, in most cases, it will answer all the purpose of logic, and is often more effective. Ridicule and coarse wit are effective weapons in disputes, but they are unworthy. Indeed in many debates we have witnessed it was the "debater" who ridiculed his opponent most successfully that received the plaudits. There ought to be a change. Facts and logic should be allowed their proper weight. The puns and irrelevant and ridiculous means which are often resorted to in "debates," are evidences of a weak cause.

Speaking of pastoral vacations, we are reminded that a new arrangement has been devised for filling great and popular pulpits in summer-time, when their respective occupants are lounging about Europe or the worldly resorts of America. A progressive series of exchanges has been effected, whereby the preacher who has the pleasure—that's about what many of them are after—of occupying this popular pulpit one Sunday is transferred to another the next, and so on through the season. One man may make the entire circuit with one sermon; and he may go by such easy stages and have such a conglomeration of hearers that the experience is quite a vacation in itself, not to mention the joys of being able to say that one has occupied the pulpit of this or that renowned preacher. Very agreeable it is, indeed; but such preaching has nothing to do with the coming of the kingdom. There is too much of the world, the flesh and the devil in it.

Christian Independence and Denominational Unity.

BY REV RUFUS FORD

Baptists have been true to one fundamental doctrine of our church polity, viz: church independence. As they have seen the power which the Pope in Rome exercised over all Catholic congregations, they have rejoiced that no "holy father," living so far off, controlled and guided them. As they have seen bishops "saying to one go and he goeth, and to another come, and he cometh," they have thanked the great Head of the Church that no man among them was clothed in such authority as thus to lord it over God's heritage. As they have recently seen the church trials of Briggs and others dragging their weary lengths from one church court to another, they have rejoiced in local church government. Each local Baptist church is independent of every other organization, be it human—as the State, or divine—as another local church of the same faith and order. This fundamental principle of our church polity, so precious within itself, has been made doubly sacred to us by its history—our fathers purchased it, or rather, bought it back from our persecutors at a price, even the price of blood. George Bancroft, the great American historian, says: "Freedom of conscience was from the first a trophy of the Baptists. . . . . Their history is written in blood."

But independence is qualified by interdependence. Each church may ask advice of other churches, as Antioch did of Jerusalem. Not only may one local church ask advice of another, but one must receive a member from another by letter, call a pastor who has been ordained by another, &c. There must be this sort of fraternal fellowship among the churches.

And now if church independence requires fraternal fellowship, as we all admit, then it also requires Christian co-operation. When we have fellowship of spirit we must have unity of work.

Our Associations and Convention were organized in order to bring about more denominational unity. Our strength, as a denomination, is not in our numbers, but our unity. Our great need just now is to unify our forces. Not that we have any discord of a serious nature among us, but we need unity of action. What could we do if we had it? How easy for us to support every object of the Convention! What can we hope to do as a denomination when we have no unity of purpose and concert of action? What have the Primitive Baptists, as a denomination, ever accomplished? As a denomination they have never united and built and sustained an orphanage, a college, &c. They have had church independence, but no denominational unity for the accomplishment of some great enterprise. And what has been accomplished by us as a denomination is because of our unity. Our church independence has been and is held as firmly by Missionary Baptists as by our anti-missionary brethren, but along with our church independence we have held the other idea of denominational unity.

The American colonies gained their independence by unity. When the representative men signed the Declaration of Independence Ben Franklin facetiously said, "Gentlemen, we must all hang together or we shall all hang separately." And now while there are no British authorities to hang our churches one by one we ought to be impelled by the glory of our common Lord to stand united in every denominational work. Church independence has run to seed when a church is so independent that it will not work in harmony with an Association. Every object of the Convention should be fostered by each church in the State. Some of the churches can do very little, but a presentation of these various forms of our Christian work will, if it brings no immediate financial support, tend to increase denominational unity.

A Parable.

BY REV. W. B. WILLIAMS.

I had just finished reading a paper upon the "Secularization of State Education," when a friend inquired if I had any objection to the State's monopoly of education except that it must omit all religious instruction? The tone in which the question was asked, and the manner of the questioner, implied that this was but a trifling objection, and that it would be very foolish not to adopt a system that had so many good points on account of such a trifling omission.

It reminds me of a conversation I had not long since with my friend Brown, who has just returned from northern Africa, where he has spent several months in preliminary survey for a projected railroad from the Cape of Good Hope to the Mediterranean; and he is very enthusiastic over the country, and as I was an old friend, he told me confidentially that there was a large tract of land about six hundred miles south of the Mediterranean that could be bought very cheap, and that the money I could get for my few acres here would enable me to buy as many square miles there, and put on all needed improvements, and urged me to sell my home and invest there; and that my estate would rival in extent that of the early Dons of Mexico.

I told him I had always supposed that the land there was so poor that one could not even raise white beans on it. He said that that was a mistake; that no better land lay out of doors than that was. All it needed was irrigation, and it would produce as good crops as could be raised anywhere. He said that it was much easier to put in crops there than here; that the soil was so mellow grain could easily be sown without plowing; that the labor of cultivation was much easier there than here, as there were no weeds at all, and then as there was no winter, as soon as one crop was off we could put in another.

"But," I said, "where is a man to get water for irrigation?" Oh, yes, he replied, water is important, of course, but then there is such a thing as having too much of it; that we had several great lakes here and could not even give the water away; that sometimes it rained so that the wheat grew in the shock, but that no such catastrophe had been known there for 3,000 years. Then he said there was another great gain there, as the winters were so mild that cattle did not need any sheds, and that it was not necessary to work all summer to raise feed for them during the winter months.

"But," I said, "how about water?" Oh, yes, he said, water was important, but for drink it was not so good as milk, for milk was both food and drink, and then he reminded me of a fact that I had forgotten, that the old Roman ladies thought milk far preferable for bathing, as it left the flesh so much more soft and smooth. He said he did not think I realized what a saving resulted from the mildness of the climate, that no fuel at all was needed save for cooking, and then as no rain fell, it was not necessary to have such expensive roofs as we have here; that a flat roof was far better than a steep one, as it furnished a quiet retreat for prayer, and also for family gatherings in the cool of the day and early evenings, and it was not necessary to lath and plaster the buildings to keep them warm.

"But, how about the water for the cattle?" He said he thought I did not realize how much could be saved in many ways on account of the mildness of the climate, and spoke of the piles of blankets and comforters that every family here was compelled to buy for winter nights, and that very light and inexpensive clothing was needed to make one comfortable; that many of the people were able to dispense with clothing altogether and did not seem to suffer in consequence, and he said that the savings in these items alone would enable us in a short time to fill our house with works of art.

"But," I said, "where are we to get water, for you have admitted that there was none either salt or fresh within hundreds of miles?"

He seemed annoyed that I should lay so much stress upon such a trifle, and said that if I must have it, there was plenty in the Nile, and that it could be brought in leather bags on the backs of camels, and went on to say that he was sorry that I could not appreciate the excellencies of the country; that there was a market close at hand for all I could raise; that Europe was crowded with people many of whom were on the verge of starvation, and that this land was much nearer to them and the market than America was.

Indeed, whenever Brown touches on this subject he becomes as eloquent as a life insurance agent or a sewing machine man; there seems no end to the good things he has to say about that country, and I cannot deny that it possesses many advantages, but the lack of water makes me hesitate about selling my home here and investing there.

I see Brown thinks I am an "old fogy," and he almost loses patience with me. While he admits, in a general way, that water is of the utmost importance, I have been unable to find out what plan he has to secure what is absolutely needed. I do not know whether he proposes to irrigate the land with milk or to bring water from the Nile on the backs of camels; nor do I understand how he proposes to furnish drink for the cattle. I have thought perhaps he would have me skim the milk and save the cream for the family, and accustom the cattle to drink the skimmed milk, and the question arises, how long this process of feeding them skimmed milk and taking cream from them can go on.

Now as to the wisdom of selling my little farm and investing my all in that land, I hesitate. So when my friends extol the system of secular education, which is the only kind the State can give, and would have me rely wholly upon a system adown which there trickles not the slightest rill of the water of life, I may be an old fogy, but I hesitate to embark my all in the scheme.

A Faultfinder Among His Brethren.—No. 5.

BY REV. JNO. T. ALBRITTON.

In this last paper I must study brevity and compactness; for there are two or three brethren whose exploits I desire to chronicle, and then I must turn my thoughts to other matters.

BROTHER GIRDLE.

This brother was gifted in searching for hidden meanings and explaining unexplainable things. No more pleasing work could engage his mind and heart and tongue than that of enlightening his brethren upon the mysteries of Revelation and the visions of Daniel, Ezekiel and Isaiah. He could come as near telling who Cain's wife was, or what was the gender of Job's emaciated turkey, as any preacher I ever heard. Given a few missing data, I verily believe he could have distanced all competitors in telling whether the one was a blonde or brunette, or the other was afflicted with cholera or scarcity of food.

My good opinion of his finding out qualities was formed from what I saw and heard on a certain occasion. Bro. Girdle had been profoundly discoursing to his delighted people upon the leathern girdle of John the Baptist, when things came to a sudden halt and silence by his propounding the startling question:—

"Brethren, can you tell me why John the Baptist wore a leathern girdle about his loins? I pause for a reply."

There was no reply, but rather a shaking of heads, which meant, being interpreted, "Well now, that's a whopper, isn't it?"

"If you can't tell, I will," said Bro. Girdle, after a long pause. "John the Baptist wore a leathern girdle about his loins, because he had to do a great deal of baptizing, and needed the girdle to strengthen his back."

A great wave of satisfaction rolled over his audience, as the preacher poured forth this flood of light upon the all-absorbing question he had propounded. But I must say a word for

BROTHER BEAR.

He was another expository preacher who went beyond the average in the science of Hermeneutics. He was an unlettered man, having never cultivated even a slight acquaintance with the English alphabet. He ignored, rather despised such human helps as ordinary mortals gladly avail themselves of, and relied upon the spirit and the inspiration of the occasion. Indeed, he found his way into the ministry by an easy route, being one of the chosen few that "heard a voice from the sky."

Bro. Bear, of course, had to call to his aid some brother who could read, whenever he wished the Scriptures to be read in the public assembly.

The reading brother selected for the occasion the 22d chapter of Genesis, and as he read, Bro. Bear listened for some topic or text that he could use as a foundation for his discourse. When the reader reached the 23rd verse that speaks of Nahor's eight sons by Milcah. Bro. Bear's restless spirit found a place to light upon right in the bosom of that verse. The assistant (accidentally, I presume,) transposed a word or two of the passage so as to make it read, "these eight did Milcah bear." As the words fell upon Bro. Bear's ears, they made this sentence: "These eight did milk a bear." As he couldn't read by sight, he had to do his reading by sound, or phonetically; and it seems to me that this is a splendid illustration of the great advantages of phonetic spelling. The spelling-brother would do well to make a note of this for future reference.

As any other exegete would have done, Bro. Bear, in his exordium, made such explanatory remarks as would clear away the difficulties with which the subject was encumbered. He went on this wise: "My beloved brethren, it may strain your faith a little to be told in Holy Writ that it took eight strong men to milk one little bear, when you know that, in our times, one little, weakly woman can milk a great big cow by herself. But you must bear in mind that the bears of those times were probably much larger than our bears, and the men of Nahor must have been a great deal smaller and sorrier than our men. For you know it wouldn't take the half of eight of our men to milk the biggest bear that was ever whelped."

I didn't hear the sermon; and, therefore, I cannot speak positively as to its merits. The above sample, however, justifies me in saying that it was probably a very interesting discourse. Indeed, I have never seen Bro. Bear. Possibly, he was a kinsman of John Bear of Post Oak Circuit.

Evidently, Bro. Bear is smart in clearing away difficulties; but I have thought [illegible]

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1894.

Rev. C. T. BAILEY, Editor and Proprietor.
J. C. CADDELL, Agent and Correspondent.

Watch and pray and work for Education.

What are you doing about it?—your Association, we mean. It is concerned with many interests of the Lord, interests that you, being a servant of the Lord, should have at heart. Pray for it now, and when it meets be there the first day and stay through the last—your prayers and your presence. The Lord's work, of first importance always, is, if possible, more so now than ever before.

The "Proceedings of the Toronto B. Y. P. U. A. Meeting" convict it out of its own mouth. Our reprint from the Christian Index is substantiated thoroughly by the convention's minutes. Yells, applause, laughter, women-speaking, boasting and rank enthusiasm unchecked, unguided, running wild,—these were features.

Teach the children; but be careful what you teach them. "Just anything to 'enthuse' them" will never do.

Earnest prayer is very likely to produce earnest, telling work. Christians cannot pray too much. All the world needs prayer—needs to pray. If you will look it up you will find that the men whose lives have been handed down to us by the grace of God were men who prayed often and earnestly. Pray for God's guidance and the presence of his Spirit, not only in the church, but everywhere, all the time; and if you do not wish to pray thus, it is a sign that there's something wrong, and that you should pray all the more.

Baptist growth is always a subject of surpassing interest to us. It is a great evidence of the presence of God; it is a testimony to Baptist faith, zeal and methods; and it incites and encourages. Miracles have been wrought through Baptist churches—miracles as directly from heaven as any ever were; and miracles are evidence of God's power. The figures partly express it.

Our Home Field says that white Baptists of the South in 1883 had 18,513 churches, 8,433 ordained ministers, 55,488 baptisms for the year, membership 948,184. See what great things the Lord has done for us by contrasting the figures for 1883, ten years later:

Churches	17,846	gain	3,833
Ministers	9,650	"	2,218
Baptisms for year	93,843	"	38,374
Membership	1,363,351	"	415,167

Let us work and pray that the Lord may give even greater increases.

But says one, "numbers don't show anything, it's quality that is to be desired." True, indeed, but if there had not been good timber in those numbers for 1883, the figures for 1893 would have been far less.

There is enough reason for courage, for faith, for results.

There is a card in this paper from President Winston of the State University. It is written ostensibly to correct an impression conveyed in an editorial in last week's Recorder; but the Doctor does not fail to take advantage of this opportunity to make love to "the brethren;" which, however, will not be successful,—not if we have a correct conception of "the brethren's" opinion of fawners and flatterers.

As to the impressions corrected, Dr. Winston tries to interpret language that has been interpreted, that his own actions have interpreted many times and unmistakably, long since. Dr. T. E. Skinner is ready to say that the remark in question was not interpreted by him as Dr. Winston would have it—that Dr. Winston's tone and manner did not warrant such an interpretation, and Rev. W. R. Gwaltney substantiates Dr. Skinner: we haven't heard from Dr. Hufham. The truth is, Doctor Winston wishes to take a back track; he would be as innocent as possible for a little while; and to this end he assumes the role of an interpreter of plain English and plainer actions. Dr. Skinner and Rev. Mr. Gwaltney, be it known, are not famous for putting incorrect constructions on unmistakable remarks and actions.

Doctor Winston says also, among many other things, that we would notice if we had time and space, that he has never persuaded students to leave Wake Forest and come to the University. He doesn't say that he never tried. Rev. W. R. Gwaltney, in whom every one has the utmost confidence, says Dr. Winston has persuaded students, who would have gone to Wake Forest, to go to the University; and, moreover, students have left Wake Forest, at his invitation, and gone to the University with a view to entering. Finally brethren esteem the veracity of actions above that of words.

"A WORK OF GRAVE CONSEQUENCE."

A pastor who has labored long and well in the Vineyard was writing a few days ago of several successful protracted meetings, and, apparently having completed his letter, he added, "Now a work of grave responsibility remains to pastor and churches—to train and help develop these young members." These words are eminently pertinent and opportune; and it occurred to us that it would be better to make them the subject of extended remarks than to crowd them in at the latter end of a short note.

As reports of good revivals have come in week after week, it has seemed to us that it has been years since pastors and churches were so active and conversions so numerous. The progress is not confined; it is marked wherever there is work in the Lord's name. In some localities numbers have been great, but manifestations of the great power of the Holy Spirit have appeared in every direction.

It is not unnatural that, when reading these reports, we were at times inclined to ask how many would become real Christians, how many would attain that Christlikeness that all church-members should attain. It is the sower and the seed and the master and the talents over again. A brother told us not to rely upon any who were not baptized; another said we had better wait until they all got into church; but neither of these are criterions. They are evidences and helps, but they do not make. The question really was, how many had been regenerated and whether they would be properly led—trained and developed. And the question with the pastor and the church is, how can they be properly led, trained and developed.

It would seem a simple thing to shepherd young converts, or new ones, rather. It is probable that they are ardent in their new faith; and are willing to work. But it is a fact that a pastor has more difficulty in keeping new converts in the paths of the Lord than he has at any other period of their lives. It is, as a writer said, like the rifle ball: a long and straight and unyielding barrel is necessary to make it go straight. If the barrel is short the aim must be more precise. With new converts one should begin right, and hold them aright. In their ardor they may desire to follow after this or that society, thinking that being young, the church is not their proper sphere. The pastor should not dally with any who have such an idea; they should be set straight; they should be told that the church is the place for them, and they should be made to feel as much in place in church work as the senior deacon.

On the other hand, new converts may have zeal without great knowledge, may be willing but backward, or at a loss for something to do; and, we regret to say, there are others to be contended with who seem to think that they have done quite enough by going down into the waters and partaking of the Lord's Supper. It is evident that the pastor of a congregation to which accessions have been made needs the inspiring strength of God and the gentleness of Jesus and the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit. Thus the following words that were written immediately after those quoted, "May the love of Christ constrain and the Holy Spirit lead us to discharge faithfully our respective duties under God," were equally pertinent.

We have seen pastors change their attitude, affect an air of great seriousness, and declare "I'm going to talk plainly with you now," as if they never had done such a thing before. Imagine a preacher talking other than plainly to his hearers, imagine a shepherd keeping his sheep in doubt or in indecision! And yet, failure to talk plainly has helped many a young convert to slip easily back into things worldly, failure to talk plainly has stinted many a promising spiritual growth. There is work—personal, active, tangible work—for all to do, whether they be young or old; there are duties that are unmistakable, when once made known; there are evils every one should be kept out of. Talk plainly; in the name of God do not talk at all if not plainly; but plainly never did mean unkindly. In fact, it is charity to talk plainly. Tell the wandering that they are wandering, and point them to the only, the straight and narrow way; tell the inactive that they are undutiful, and show the path of duty; tell the persistently evil that they are of the world, and tell them what that means—eternal woe. Talk plainly, and no reasonable person will think you unkind; talk plainly at any cost to the new converts who need advice and warning and reprovals, and who will not comprehend your words unless they are plain.

If a pastor will not relinquish his efforts for the spiritual activity of new converts, he will find that revivals are almost unnecessary. The shepherd's first care is his flock, and if it is well guarded there need be no fears for the progress of Christ's cause.

ADVANCE AT WAKE FOREST.

It will refresh any one who has known or who is attached to Wake Forest College, to look in upon it now.

The same good people are there, and professors and students are as kind and congenial as ever; but there is also a quickening among them all, a real vim which is perceptible in the very atmosphere, that bespeaks a determination to lift the College forward. Wake Forest knows it must do more and larger work; and since it has become apparent that the Baptists in North Carolina appreciate the value of its work and are interested in its every struggle, there is a sense of assurance among those who have it in charge that has not been so marked as at present for a long time. Wake Forest deserves the sympathy of Baptists and all others who would maintain Christian education.

The opening last week was the best since 1890. Under the circumstances, it was beyond reasonable expectation, and is therefore very hopeful. There are now 180 students there, an unprecedented proportion of whom are new students, which is testimony to the vigorous work done this "vacation." The young men are more active than usual, the professors are more enthusiastic, and the residents in better spirits than in years.

AN ADDITION TO THE FACULTY.

It was stated in these columns in June that the College needed a professor to assist in the department of Modern Languages, in order that Prof. Sledd might devote himself solely to the Chair of English, to which he had been elected, and which, conducted on the elaborate plan that he has arranged, s certainly not less than one man can properly direct. This need was temporarily relieved last Saturday by the Executive Committee of the Trustees, who chose Prof. J. H. Gorrell, a graduate of 1889 with the Master's degree from Washington and Lee University, Va., who has since received the distinction of the Doctor's degree from Johns Hopkins University—most thorough of American institutions of its kind, and one in which the South especially takes pride. At the latter institution Prof. Gorrell pursued English, Germanics and History; and his degree thesis, "Indirect Discourse in Anglo-Saxon," which will appear in the American Journal of Philology, received unusual commendation from Prof. B. L. Gildersleve—a most critical editor and a philologist whose reputation is international.

Prof. Gorrell is a son of Bro. B. H. Gorrell of Lexington, Va., a useful member of the Baptist church. He has had two years' experience as assistant in Washington and Lee University; and a reputation for ability, energy and Christian character, in class room and out, precedes him to North Carolina.

Of further forward steps, viz., the elevation of the law course to count in degree work, the engagement of Prof. Gulley's services for more time; the inauguration of entrance examinations that elevate the standard, and the granting of a leave of absence to Pres't Taylor for desirable purposes, we will write in our next issue.

MISSIONARY C. C. NEWTON DEAD.

The many who sorrowed a few days ago to hear that Sister C. C. Newton had died in the Lord's service in Africa, will be grievously shocked to learn that Bro. Newton has followed her to the rest that remaineth to the people of God.

The sad news of Bro. Newton's death reached us last Saturday. He died on his mission field, West Africa, several weeks ago, of typhoid fever. All that a dutiful daughter and resident physicians could do was done, but it was God's will that Bro. Newton should rest from his labors and follow his companion to the other shore.

The deaths of these two self-sacrificing servants is peculiarly touching; and yet the manner of their deaths cannot but be more comforting to those left behind for a little while than were possible otherwise. Dead in God's glorious service, their lives active professions of faith, their labors declarations of the Holy Spirit's presence; it is not meet to mourn the death of such Christians.

May God comfort those that are left; may his promises sustain the bereaved children; and may others be raised up to execute the missions of these blessed servants.

"UNDERHAND METHODS."

We thought we knew enough of State-aid's underhand methods when we wrote about it sometime ago. We thought, too, that after that the men whose actions were exposed would be more careful; we did not hope that they would cease their efforts, and we know that it is very difficult for them to do anything openly and squarely. And yet we never suspected anything quite equal to that which came to our notice from an authoritative and absolutely trustworthy source last week.

The President of the State "Normal and Industrial" School, C. D. McIver, LL. D., sends out examinations to the county superintendents of public instruction to be submitted to applicants for privileges at that institution. Of course many of the applicants are turned down, but Dr. McIver loses no opportunity to impress these and the successful ones favorably to State aid to his institution. There may be nothing wrong in this, if he will impress them legitimately, without deceit. We have facts, however, which show that he has been dealing out falsehoods, in evidence of which we submit the following, which is question number ten sent out to county superintendents to be answered by applicants for State "Normal and Industrial" privileges:

"10. The annual appropriation to the State Normal and Industrial school is $12,500. By the Constitution all the poll tax goes to the lower public schools and the poor. The $12,500 is raised by a tax on the property of the State, which amounts to $260,000,000. How much would a man who is assessed for $1,000 pay to the support of the Normal and Industrial school?"

The first sentence is half a truth, which is usually about as great a lie as can be told successfully. In the Recorder of August 1st it was stated that the last Legislature appropriated to the State "Normal and Industrial" school $43,000 (including loan of $9,000, which means gift,) for the two years following. The annual appropriation to the State "Normal and Industrial" is nearer $20,000 than $12,500; and Prest. McIver knew it when he wrote that example.

In the second sentence the impression is conveyed that the public schools are already provided for, and that the money now used by the "Normal and Industrial" and all the other institutions in the State could not be given to the lower public schools. Try to connect that sentence with the example, and it is very evident that it is put there solely for argument; and it is worthless as an argument unless the gullible applicant reaches the conclusions named.

Finally the poor girls who wearied their brains over the "problem" (?) were asked to find out how small would be the tax upon a man, in hope, we suppose, that they would not have sense or honor enough to know that the smallness of a tax can never make it one whit the more just.

All this, too, by a man who claims to have been prompted to the work of education by noblest impulses, by a man who has oversight over four hundred young women of North Carolina. He has defied the civil law persistently; how long shall we forbear to resent his disrepect of the moral law.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

THREE FORKS ASSOCIATION.

At twelve o'clock Monday, a preacher, two newspaper men and a college professor are in their places behind a pair of good horses, with the hack-springs well wrapped with rope to prevent, I suppose, the annual break-down which has never failed to occur for the past four years. You will always be richly paid for the jolts and jerks you get in crossing the Blue Ridge over the worst sort of a mountain road. There is no fruit of any sort to be seen this year in the mountains, but watermelons, chesnuts, chinquepins and cabbages are everywhere in their usual abundance and perfection. At sundown our horses' heads are at the foot of the mountains, and it is either stay with Bro. Hall or go over on the other side. We chose the former, and we are not yet through thanking him for the shelter and comforts of what he considers a very humble home, but which to us was equal to the most costly palace. It is another case of a good honest man who supposes he can do but little to help anybody, and yet who opens his doors and does what he can, and then finds that that he himself is the only one who is not entirely satisfied with what he has done. Chanticleer had hardly given out his first warnings of the gray streaks in the east, when our college professor began to get his machinery in readiness for the day before us. By six o'clock our party was seated at a table where chicken, roasting ear, ham, coffee, the finest mountain milk and butter, and the proverbial sourwood honey were before us in abundance. I am compelled to note that as the time the brethren remained increased, this "abundance" decreased.

A heavy fog cut off much of the beautiful scenery which would otherwise have greatly pleased us all and especially those who had not seen this part of the State.

At twelve o'clock we are in sight of the church, and while we were "yet afar off," we heard Bro. Durham, who we supposed was on his way from the French Broad, preaching the introductory sermon.

In the evening the letters were read. Most of the churches, about forty I think, were represented.

Bro. J. F. Spainhour of Boone was elected Moderator, and Bro. J. Younce, the old Clerk, was re elected.

I have seen a far larger attendance than was present at this meeting. I was especially struck with the extreme scarcity of ladies: there were hardly enough present the first day to "set the tables." To a widower (for we had one with us), this was an exceedingly gloomy situation.

Some new churches were reported, and the letters showed the usual amount of work in the churches.

The discussions were good; there was no disturbance or contention over mission methods. Those churches which have decided to follow other than the regular plan of doing Foreign Mission work are doing so without discussing it in the Association.

There is more interest shown in this county on the subject of higher education than anywhere I have yet seen. Bro. Spainhour has discussed it at various points in the county, and most of the more intelligent have read on the subject. In the counties west of Greensboro it is safe to say that ninety per cent of the people are opposed to the present policy of the State furnishing higher education.

Many are asking why Bro. Mills does not attend the Association. People in all parts of the State feel a special interest in the Orphanage, and are always glad to hear Bro. Mills talk on this subject.

I did well for the Recorder, getting a goodly number of new subscribers, and met a large number who for years have been taking the paper.

Bro. Sledd made a plain, practical speech for Wake Forest. A number of fine young men in this section ought to go to college and will do so if they have the proper attention and encouragement.

Thursday 12 o'clock we are again on the hot side of the Ridge, and early Friday morning Bro. Durham and myself are at the South Yadkin, while brethren Sledd and Peterson have gone to the Elkin.

SOUTH YADKIN ASSOCIATION.

This body is just twenty years old: it contains a number of good churches and some of the most progressive brethren in the State. They have made great progress in many directions. The Orphanage always finds warm support in this body. Some of the best students who have ever gone to Wake Forest have come from this Association.

Not until this year has there been any discussion or difference of opinion as to the methods of doing mission work. The great majority of the brethren are still agreed in this matter. Two or three churches have gone into the new method of doing mission work and also declined to co operate with the Association even on other lines of work. This is, however, what may reasonably be expected. As a rule, when a pastor goes into this plan of work, he is anxious to say "We are doing more for missions than ever before;" so he gives most of his energy to this particular work to the neglect of all the other objects of the Association.

Bro. J. D. Holman was again elected Moderator, and Bro. J. C. Turner, Clerk and Treasurer. Bro. S. J. Tatum has been Clerk for twenty years, and has been an exceptionally faithful and efficient officer.

The pledges of the churches for next year were as good or better than last year.

Rain has not been so abundant in this section as in other portions of the State. The crops are good and the brethren hopeful.

Dr. John Mitchell who spent some days at the Orphanage and visited several churches in this Association, was present to represent the Board of Education.

The subject of general education had its full share of the time and attention of the body. If our people will only exercise sufficient patience and let the people become informed on this matter, there is not a doubt as to how it will terminate. We have already done more than we could have reasonably hoped to have accomplished in twice the length of time the matter has been under discussion.

Dr. J. N. Stallings, who has recently located at Mocksville, is a valuable accession to the Association.

The next session of the Association will be held in Salisbury.

Maj. Clements is in feeble health, but has lost none of his interest in the success of all the objects of the Association.

The brethren were glad to see Bro. Cashwell, who for several years was located in the bounds of this Association. He went from here to Charlotte to preach for Brother Pritchard's people on Sunday. J. C. C.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Rev. D. Cale has changed his address from Woodland to Potecasi.

....One hundred and eighty students at Wake Forest. We cannot stop at this.

....All well at the Orphanage once more.—Charity and Children. Glad to hear it.

....Rev. J. W. Daugherty of Portsmouth accepts care of Fulton Baptist church, Richmond, Va.

....The Recorder till January 10th—nineteen weeks—on trial, fifty cents. Send us a name.

....Surely the God-given harvest season is the time when God's own fields should have our thoughts.

....Sister C. W. Scarborough will open a primary school at Murfreesboro. She deserves a good patronage.

....That "Parable" on our first page is full of meat; and it is so artfully told that any one can appreciate it.

....Elder C. W. Scarborough aided Pastor Hoggard in a fruitful series of meetings at Meherrin church last week.

....We have received an admirable map of the United States from Senator Ransom, for which he will please accept thanks.

....All that the people need is the facts and the independence to act. We are engaged in giving them the former, may God give them the latter in a time when strength of conviction is so sorely needed.

....Rev. A. A. Butler has returned to Mt. Olive after a helpful vacation spent at Durham.

....Rev. W. B. Morton held a good meeting at Lilesville last week. He has returned to Louisburg.

....Rev. M. W. Gordon has resigned care of Camden, S. C., Baptist church, to take effect November 1st.

....Rev. C. G. Wells, graduate of Wake Forest and Fellow of Chicago University, is teaching at Warsaw.

....We are grateful to Bro. W. B. Waff of Reynoldson for a club of ten new subscribers sent last week.

....Six persons have been baptized as a result of a meeting at Roquist Chapel, Caswell county, by Elder B. Cale.

....Revs. L. M. Curtis and Samuel Sanders of Murfreesboro are in a meeting with the former's charge at Aulander.

....We were glad to have a visit from Dr. John Mitchell last week. He seems hopeful of the Board of Education.

....Rev. J. K. Howell is engaged in a meeting at Rocky Mount, and is aided by Elders Geo. Duke and J. W. Powell.

....Stand by your convictions. If you believe in Christian and Popular education, do not keep it to yourself; talk will tell.

....Rev. A. G. MacManaway preached for the Second Baptist church, Richmond, the 2d inst. He has returned to his Arkansas work.

....Prof. M. O. Carpenter, we are glad to say, has reason to be greatly encouraged with the opening of Reynoldson Academy last week.

....The First Baptist church of Raleigh is sending a ministerial student to Wake Forest, Bro. N. J. Mosely. This is very commendable.

....Good Brother Stradley of Oxford, as strong a Baptist as lives, and as safe to count on as ever a man was, sends us three new subscriptions.

....Rev. G. M. Webb writes that he thinks all the Baptist churches in Cleveland county have had good meetings and large ingatherings.

....Rev. P. H. Pernell of Virginia, who had been visiting relatives in Franklin and Wake counties, made a pleasant visit to our office last week.

....Rev. A. A. Newhall, formerly of Southern Pines, has changed his residence from Woburn, Mass., to Leland University, New Orleans, La.

....Raleigh Baptists are growing in zeal and strength. Another mission chapel has been erected, this one being near the Caraleigh Mills property.

....Seven persons were lately added to our membership at Norwood, the occasion being a meeting in which Rev. J. Q. Adams aided Pastor Wilhoit.

....Elder J. H. Hutchinson reports having baptized twenty-one converts at Bethlehem church, Wake county, the 9th inst.; seven were restored.

....Keep the four-months fifty-cents offer of the RECORDER before your people while it lasts. Many of the brethren have been doing good work with it.

....Rev. J. M. Harris has been conducting a protracted meeting at Sardis, says the Lenoir Topic, and twenty converts were baptized by him the 3d inst.

....The Indiana Baptist has started on its fourteenth volume. Since Bro. Dobbs took charge of it its columns have been very interesting to us. Good wishes.

....It will pay you to read the few remarks on "Church Troublers" in this issue. They are written by a brother whose experience lends his word authority.

....A meeting at Faulks, in the vicinity of Monroe, says the Journal, in which Rev. J. L. Bennett did the preaching, resulted in seventeen additions to the church.

....Rev. W. R. Gwaltney has returned to Wake Forest much improved in health after a short vacation spent in western counties in meetings and making speeches.

....Rev. S. W. Hall writes that Baptist interests at Thomasville are moving on well. He regrets that he cannot return to Wake Forest this year to complete his course.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter baptized seven candidates at Inwood church, Wake county, last Sunday. He will aid Bro. Horton at Four Oaks, Johnson county, this week.

....Rev. D. J. Clark of Clarkton reports having held a meeting at Shiloh church, Elder C. E. Beard pastor, in which there were twenty baptisms and several restorations.

....The brethren at Spring Hope are struggling to pay a debt on their church. They deserve help. If you are interested, send to Brother G. W. Bunn, Spring Hope, N. C.

....There have been twenty accessions to our church at Mt. Vernon, near Rutherfordton, resulting from a meeting conducted by Pastor Gower with the assistance of Brother Harrell.

....Rev. W. S. Ballard had the assistance of Elders G. J. Dowell of Durham and R. B. Peele of Wilmington in special meetings at Dawson's church, near Scotland Neck, last week.

....Rev. J. F. Woodfin, pastor, was aided in a meeting at Sycamore church, Henderson county, lately, by Rev. T. C. Holtsclaw, in which there were twenty-five additions to the church.

....The announcement of position wanted by a young man in this paper is commended to our readers. The applicant is worthy of the confidence and esteem of the public, and is a capable teacher.

....Rev. J. M. White of Apex baptized fourteen converts at his church near Chapel Hill recently. We are grateful to him for a new subscriber, and for assurances of further efforts.

....Newton Theological Seminary, near Boston, is building a new library at a cost of $40,000.——The American Tract Society is erecting a twenty-two story building in New York City.

....We are glad to state that Cedar Rock Academy, in Franklin county, Rev. W. A. Smith principal, has opened as excellently as was expected. About seventy students were enrolled last week.

....Rev. D. J. Harris of Yanceyville baptized eight converts into the fellowship of Trinity church. Four others await baptism. This will make twenty additions as the result of a late meeting.

....Rev. J. E. Smith changes his address from Stem to Creedmore. Bro. Smith has baptized sixty-eight persons recently, forty-eight of them into the membership of Tally Ho and twenty at Pleasant Grove.

....Elder Q. C. Davis writes that the Baptist cause in his field, Cumberland, Md., progresses quietly and steadily. Bro. Davis and his brother have been visiting their old home in the eastern part of our State lately.

....Elder J. W. Davis, who has many acquaintances in our State, writes that his work in Thomas county, Ga., has lately been invigorated by several revivals. He and his wife will visit North Carolina next November.

....Rev. C. V. Brooks, who will shortly enter our Seminary, baptized eight persons at Jonesboro the 2d inst., says the Progress, which latter, by the way, has been doing valiant work for Christian and popular education.

....Prof. W. A. Montgomery, Jr., son of Bro. W. A. Montgomery, Esq., of Raleigh, has accepted a position in the city schools of Eufaula, Alabama, for which place he left Raleigh last week. Our good wishes follow him.

....Rev. F. H. Martin, the beloved Lumberton pastor, has been much improved by his stay in Virginia, and has returned to his work. His church showed wisdom and love by making desirable improvements in his absence.

....Rev. E. C. Bobbitt has resigned care of his churches in Carteret county to take effect in September, after several months successful work. Bro. Bobbitt has not yet determined upon his plans, but is trusting in the Lord's guidance.

....Rev. J. A. Beam says prospects for a good school at Bethel Hill are fine. The new building is not quite complete, but he hopes to teach in it this year. He has been having good special meetings, of which accounts will appear later.

....Rev. C. J. Thompson and Rev. J. I. Kendrick, both Wake Forest men, recently held a meeting at Hardinsville, Ky., in which there were many conversions. Bro. Thomson is now pastor of the Second Baptist church, Lynchburg, Va.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins, evangelist, has been conducting a meeting at Nester, which is continued this week by Elder J. N. Stallings, Bro. Jenkins having gone to Teachey to hold a meeting. Bro. Jenkinks will hold a meeting at Fayetteville soon.

....Rev. J. A. McKaughan writes from Rockford, 7th inst.: "I am just out of a glorious meeting at White Plains. The Lord blessed our labors greatly, and as a result we had about twenty five conversions and eighteen additions to the church."

....It is a pleasure to note that Bro. Wm. Simpson of Raleigh has been honored with the presidency of the American Pharmaceutical Association; and it is more fortunate because he is a Christian gentleman and honorable citizen as well as a most trusted pharmacist.

....It is a matter of general gratification that all our institutions have opened as well as can be expected under the present conditions. Letters from brethren Brewer of Chowan Baptist Female Institute, Hobgood of Oxford Female Seminary and from Wake Forest last week made us rejoice.

....Rev. Geo. A. Sowell, who graduated from Wake Forest some years ago, writes hopefully of his work at Clayton, N. J. He has baptized twice since accepting the pastorate in June, and is now in the midst of a good revival. There had been about thirteen accessions before the meeting began.

....The Gastonia Gazette reports thirteen members added to our church at Belmont in a meeting in which Revs. M. P. Matheny and J. J. Payseur preached. Bro. Matheny has been holding services at Tnaugh, and the meeting having resulted in nine baptisms, a church will shortly be organized there.

....From "Religious Humbuggery" on another page we learn that the faith-curist impostors have at last reached our State. Surely they will not stay long, if there are as few fools loose as we think. When you see a faith-curist that is not more concerned with the collection than with either the present or the future state of the soul, put him down as a shining exception to the general run of his kind.

....Demagogues and pusillanimous newspaper correspondents continue to call us the aggressors in the educational contest. The testimony of college presidents in North Carolina proves that "the fight" was begun more than four years ago and had been waged by the State-aid institutions aggressively and persistently until the Methodist Conferences and the Baptist Convention repulsed them. The voluntarily supported colleges ask no more than to be let alone by the State; the free schools ask only to be given what the Constitution says shall be given them.

....Rev. J. M. Ballard of Iredell, who commenced work at Mitford, Rowan county, the first of the year, recently held a meeting at Lype school-house, near Mooresville, with much success. Eleven have been baptized, and four others await the ordinance. This is a very destitute section, and Bro. Ballard deserves sympathy in his labors.

....That examination question method of inculcating error and perverting youth is very worthy of a "leading educator," isn't it? And it was just too cute. Every one will condemn Dr. McIver for this, whether friendly to the "Industrial and Normal" or not; yet those who know say such methods, deceit and trickery, are characteristic of State aid.

....Rev. A. M. Simms has completed a year's service at the Raleigh Tabernacle, as we noted with pleasure sometime ago, and here are some figures that go to show that he is the right man in the right place. There were 44 additions to the church by baptism in the year, 56 by letter, and 4 restored; $2,909 30 were expended for various purposes. The pastorate is in good and active condition.

....It is generally regretted that Prof. J. C. Maske of Wake Forest College is sick in bed with malarial fever. Prof. Maske came to the College from Rockingham when he was too unwell to travel, and while his present condition is not dangerous, it distresses his friends, and is a hindrance to the general work at the College. We join his many friends in hopes that his usual strength will be quickly restored.

....Our A. T. Robertson, who teaches at the Seminary, locked horns with President Harper of the Chicago University last week in the Examiner; and from our point of view, having the Bible on his side, he put the Chicago celebrity in an untenable position. We are grateful to Bro. Robertson for making the matter clear,—something that had remained to be done all these weeks.

....Prof. F. P. Hobgood writes encouragingly Sept. 5th: "Past expectations of a largely increased patronage are realized. There are present on this the second day of the session as many boarding students as were present at any time last session; and the prospect is that when those who are engaged come, our number will be more than fifty per cent. larger than that of last year."

... We regret exceedingly that in our condensed account of the Sunday-school Chautauqua mention was not made of one who contributed as much as any one person could to the interest and enjoyment of the meeting, Bro. H. H. Horne of Clayton. He made two talks and explained the Inductive method of lesson teaching, and in each instance his efforts were remarkably successful. We trust that Bro. Horne will pardon our oversight.

....The death last week of Dr. James C. Welling, retired President of Columbian University, removes from our ranks a scholarly Christian gentleman to whom the denomination is much indebted. Dr. Welling had reached quite an advanced age, and had well used the talents the Lord placed in his keeping. His successor will probably be selected the last of this month. And of course the probable action revives the rumors of co operation with Chicago University under Prest. Harper.

....Rev. J. H. Lamberth has returned to his charge at Greenville after two months' vacation spent in preaching and visiting about the State. The following is clipped from the Roxboro Courier the 5th inst.: "Rev. J. H. Lamberth spent a few days in town this week. He was on his way home from his appointment at Ephesus where on last Sunday he baptized two and received into the church twenty seven members. He is doing a great work at Ephesus."

....Rev. T. B. Hill, who is a member of the Junior Class at Wake Forest this year, came in to see us last week and reported having been greatly blessed of the Lord in his labors this summer. In the several meetings that he held or helped in there were about sixty-five professions of conversions, and nearly as many renewals of faith. Bro. Hill preaches at Peace Chapel, Poplar Creek and Middleburg, keeping up his college work the while. His late special work at Middleburg was blessed with thirty professions.

Ministers' Relief Board.

The last week's RECORDER says the Ministers' Relief Board has received a little over two hundred dollars for the current year, while the Baptists of North Carolina claim to have over one hundred thousand white members.

If the preachers are good men, they ought to be liberally helped in their old age. If not good, they ought not to be allowed to preach. I think of this matter often, and it makes me think sometimes of Mr. McD. of Flemington who came here in "carpet bag" days. When his bill for taxes was handed him, he looked painfully solemn. The bystanders knew he was a profane swearer. They asked him why he did not swear. He replied he had no "curs words" adequate to express his feelings.

I don't feel good enough to belong to a church, but think the old preachers and their dependent families should be helped. Oh! let the church members be living epistles, and manifest in their lives what they profess, and then it will be an honor to belong to a church. D. L. GORE

A Mistake.

Dear Recorder:—Sometime ago I wrote an article concerning the work at Green's X Roads. Since that time I find another article by Bro. Bristoe of Coleraine, N. C., stating some of my article was misleading. Bro. Bristoe did not understand me. He thought I meant the pledges for last year were unpaid. I didn't mean them; I meant the ones for this year. G. W. WHITE.

Notes From Greensboro.

is not dead. It will be organized with four or five churches. This will be as good a start as the old Philadelphia Association had. Certain unkind and untrue criticisms have enkindled some prejudice against this movement, yet I believe it will develop into a strong Association in a few years. One church decided not to come by one vote. I have reason to believe that if the vote was taken over again the church would come.

We have received a number of letters concerning it and only two have expressed opposition. The most of the brethren expressed themselves favorably and other churches will come into the new organization next year. After the meeting of the Sandy Creek Association a time for the organization will be appointed.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL CHAUTAUQUA.

This is a great institution for our Sunday-schools. The meeting was an inspiration to all present. I have never attended a more helpful meeting at any time. Those who did not attend missed the greatest meeting held in the State for a long time. It was a disappointment to some of us to find the RECORDER not represented. There were about 1,500 people present on Friday. Surely the RECORDER man could have done much among the people. The singing was very good, the speaking good, the spirit good. This plant is destined to grow into a large tree and furnish a refreshing place for the Sunday-schools of the State. Every Sunday school in the State should be represented next year.

LOCAL NEWS

The work in Greensboro moves slowly. The night crowds are always large. Last Sunday night there were six hundred people out. We noticed in the congregation Dr. Samuel M. Smith, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Columbia, S. C. The gas works broke down and most of the churches closed. We borrowed lamps and held service. Greensboro church does not close for anything, and the people honor their loyalty to the church services by regular attendance. The additions to the church have not been frequent of late. God will give the results in his own good time. We are not discouraged in the work.

Our Y. P. B. U. promises much for the church. It is under the control of the church and for the spiritual and educational development of the young and not for money raising. CHAS A. G. THOMAS

Rock Spring--Amis Chapel.

From the fourth Sabbath in July, the meeting at Rock Spring was continued four days. The pastor had no ministerial aid. Congregations were large and attentive to the preaching. Five professed faith, and five have been baptized.

From the first Sabbath in August, the meeting at Amis Chapel was continued five days. Bro. John W. Downey, a young member of this church, preached once, and Bro. James Gordon of Virginia once. All the other preaching was done by the pastor. It was a precious meeting, a revival in the true sense of the word. Christians were greatly helped. There are but few unconverted people in this congregation. Five professed faith. Four have peen baptized, and one restored.

I have held meetings with each of my four churches. In all there were about sixty professions, and fifty three additions to the churches.

I spent a month in hard study preparing special sermons for these meetings, and then a month in the meetings. These two months of hard work I have had instead of a vacation. J. A. STRADLEY.

The Work at Parrott's School-house.

Dear Recorder:—As only a partial report has been given of our work at Parrott's School-house, near Kinston, a few more words may be of interest to some of your readers.

Less than two years ago I commenced preaching at this place. My regular appointment is in the afternoon the third Sabbath in each month. I now preach in a neat edifice, admired by many. This building is a monument to the liberality of the Kinston Baptist church.

One liberal brother donated one acre of ground and furnished all the lumber at his own expense. A sister of his likewise gave one acre of land, besides sixty dollars and two pulpit chairs. The church voted and promptly paid one hundred dollars. The Ladies Aid Society of the Kinston church gave fifty dollars. This Society is doing a noble work. Their zeal knows no limit; they know no such word as fail. Many besides the above contributed liberally towards erecting the New Hope house of worship.

We intended to dedicate the house on the first Sabbath of this month. We failed to meet on account of heavy rains and high-water. We had, however, a good congregation on Tuesday, and began a meeting which lasted seven days. Congregations were large every day. The house was dedicated on Sunday during the meeting. The house was crowded, and many went away for want of space. The result of the meeting was the addition of sixteen to the Kinston church. This makes, with previous additions, thirty-five since I commenced preaching at this place. The work grows in interest and importance. This interest will develop into a church at no distant day. The Baptist cause in this county is steadily growing. There is room yet for other workers.

Let me say one thing more, and then I will stop. The church has granted me next month for a vacation. Any pastor is fortunate to have such a kind church and efficient co-operation. Wife and self will spend our vacation among relatives and friends in South Carolina. A. L. STOUCH.

Church Troubles.

"We have a right to expect all persons who profess Christianity to live in peace with all other religions. Religion is love, and love will prompt every one to 'Keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace.'

Thousands have lived through long lives, and have never caused any trouble in their neighborhood or their church. It is the sacred duty of every Christian thus to live. All trouble in our hearts among our neighbors in our churches is the result of wrong doing.

Drunkenness and dancing are [illegible] most fruitful sources of trouble [illegible]. It is a rare thing to find a church [illegible] not had frequent and serious troubles arising from these evils. Who is responsible for these troubles? If drinking and drunkenness are right, if they are helpful to piety, to Christianity, to the best interests of the church, then those who preach and talk against them are the troublers. But if these things are wrong, if they damage Christian life, and bring trouble and injury to churches, then those who practice these evils, and those who sanction them, become the troublers of the churches.

If dancing is right; if it promotes morality, piety, Christian usefulness; if it makes churches better, then those who preach, write, and talk against it become church troublers. But if dancing is wrong, if it is essentially worldly in its nature, if it endangers morality, if it chills piety, if it destroys Christian usefulness and happiness, if it brings reproach on the cause of Christ, then those church-members who dance, and those who sanction it, are the troublers of churches.

It is easy to see how church-members, and churches who have little or no piety, can indulge in and tolerate these evils; but it is difficult to see how a real Christian, or a church composed of Christians, can countenance such evils. God pity the church-member who can find pleasure in these grossly worldly things, and thus misses all the real sweet pleasure that comes from a consistent Christian life."

The above article I most heartily endorse.

Bertie Union Meeting.

The next session of the Bertie Union Meeting convenes with the church at Pleasant Grove, at which meeting Elder Cree is appointed to preach the introductory, Elder Speight, alternate; Elder Saunders the missionary sermon, Elder Scarboro alternate.

First practical subject: More frequent preaching; what are the advantages and how attained? Bro. C. W. Mitchell to open the discussion.

Second: What should be done with church members who rarely attend church, never contribute anything, and grumble at everything the church does? Elder Green to open the discussion.

Third: The relation of the Sunday-school to the church, and whose duty is it to attend the Sunday-school? Bro. Benjamin Gay to open the discussion.

Fourth: How shall we enlist and develop young members of the church in active church work? Elder Cree to open the discussion. A. J. CONN, Sec B. U M.

he had a Bible that was both self reading and self-explaining, it might help him a little, perhaps, if he would follow it.

Now, I must be careful in writing about the next brother; for they do say he is wonderfully smart and something of a critic. I am not personally acquainted with him. The first time I ever heard him, I believe he was preaching in Georgia; for it was from a Georgia newspaper that I learned what I know of him. He has very few relatives in North Carolina, but the Furskins family is quite numerous in other parts of the world. I give the reader his full name, title, and all, thus:

REV. SOLOMON FURSKINS.

Bro. Furskins was said to be very smart—smarter than Oliver Goldsmith's learned schoolmaster, whose "—— words of learned length and thundering sound

Amazed the gazing rustics ranged around;
And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
That one small head could carry all he knew."

Bro. Furskins was an aspiring young man, whom the older brethren delighted to put forward in the general meetings of the brotherhood. So, at a certain missionary meeting, Bro. Furskins was put up to preach the missionary sermon, which he did very satisfactorily to himself. His theme was "The Necessity of Means to the Accomplishment of Ends." I can give only a small portion of the sermon, but this much will suffice to show the great ability of Bro. Furskins. Said he: "Our Saviour recognized this great principle in his works of mercy while he was in the world In opening the blind man's eyes, he used clay and spittle, and in his first miracle at Cana of Galilee, he converted the water into wine by putting two or three furskins into each water pot! Now, I ask, what chemist would have ever thought of doing that?" said Bro. Furskins, with his face all radiant with triumph and glory.

They say it was a good sermon, errors excepted and pardoned, but Bro. Graybeard, an older minister and a man of plain speech, called Bro. Furskins' attention to what seemed to him a serious defect in the discourse, and it is thought that he came near to hurting Bro. Furskins' feelings, besides.

Bro. Graybeard did it in this way. He said, after they had returned together to their home:

"Brother Furskins, where did you get those furskins you spoke of to day in your sermon?"

"Where? Why, from the New Testament, of course. Where else do you suppose they could have been found?" replied Bro. Furskins indignantly.

"You must be mistaken, Bro. Furskins. They cannot be found in the New Testament," rejoined Bro Graybeard.

"No," said Bro. Furskins, "it's no mistake. It's a matter of history." So saying, he took up the New Testament and read John, 2nd chapter and 6th and 7th verses, "And there were set there six water-pots of stone, after the manner of purifying of the Jews, containing two or three furskins (so he read it) apiece. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with water. And they filled them up to the brim."

"There now! What more proof do you want?" asked Bro. Furskins in triumph.

"You didn't read it correctly. Read again, and when you get to furskins, spell it out slowly," said Bro. Graybeard.

Bro. Furskins reduced his speed and spelled his way cautiously, and lo! he found his cherished "furskins" were transformed into "f-i-r-k-i-n-s." Right there, it is thought, his feelings were somewhat hurt, for they say he turned away as if he might be sick.

I said Bro. Furskins was a critic. Some years after the delivery of that notable missionary sermon, it was the privilege of Bro. Furskins and Bro. Graybeard to hear a young man of fine talent and promise preach an excellent unctuous sermon far above ordinary. At least, so thought Bro. Graybeard, who turned to Bro. Furskins to ascertain what he thought of the sermon and the young preacher.

Bro. Furskins, the critic, replied, "Yes, Bro. Graybeard, he is a man of decided promise, and I see but one thing in his way, the 'big-head.' By the way, Bro. Graybeard, do you know of any remedy for that dreadful disease?"

Bro. Graybeard very kindly and promptly gave the desired information by telling him, "I have heard of many things good for the big-head, but the best remedy known to the world is a poultice made of furskins!"

It was a centre shot, and they say it nearly killed poor Bro. Furskins.

It may be that both these brethren are dead now; but, if living, they might render good service to the present generation,—the one, in furnishing a few furskins of the right sort, and the other, in giving the recipe for making the poultice after the most approved style. We can't tell how soon the big-head may appear among us, and the remedy should be ready.

Mt. Olive, N. C.

Good Meetings.

We are glad to have this to say of our brother, neighbor and friend, Rev. J. H. Hutchinson, who is so humble, unassuming and consecrated to his work as pastor and minister, and whose life at home and elsewhere is in accord with his preaching, so much so that God blesses his labors, under the circumstances, above any that we know of, he entering upon the work late in life without previous preparation therefor.

Bro. Hutchinson has just completed his labors in a series of protracted meetings of one week's continuance at each of his four country churches. At three of these churches there were between seventy and seventy-five converts each, and forty converts at the other church.

Other places are awaiting his services. May the Lord more abundantly bless his labors is the prayer of his friends, the Lord's servants, and subscribers to the RECORDER.

Facts and Figures.

I am just home from Associations in the western part of the State and find the following letter:

"WOOTEN'S, N. C., Aug. 20, 1894.

REV. C. DURHAM, Raleigh, N. C.

My Dear Sir:—The figures given in the RECORDER of Aug. 1st, showing the amount of money appropriated by the State to higher education, are no doubt correct in toto; and while in conversation with a very prominent Baptist minister on yesterday (Sunday), I referred to them as authority, whereupon he (the minister) positively asserted that they were untrue, and that the statement was entirely unreliable. I positively asserted that I knew, or fully believed, the statement to be true, and told him that I would write you and ask you to either verify the statement or correct any error that might possibly exist. I presume that your statement was taken from the State record, as I feel sure that no false statement would find any room under your signature or in the RECORDER.

Trusting that you may not deem these lines out of place, I am

Yours most respectfully,
DON MCRACKAN."

The following are the facts given in the RECORDER of August 1st, and referred to in the letter above:

"The General Assembly of North Carolina meets biennially; each Legislature is responsible for all the funds drawn from the public treasury for higher education during the two years immediately following. I give, therefore, the full amounts drawn from the State treasury in 1893 and 1894 for these various schools:

FOR THE UNIVERSITY AT CHAPEL HILL.

1893,	Regular	$20,000
1894,	"	20,000
1893,	Special	10,000
1894,	"	10,000
	Total	$60,000

GREENSBORO NORMAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL.

1893,	Regular	$12,500
1894,	"	12,500
1893,	Special	4,500
1894,	"	4 500
1893,	Loan	9,000
	Total	$43,000
From Peabody Fund (not the State), 1894		3.000

THE A. & M. COLLEGE.

1893,	Regular	$10 000
1894,	"	10 000
	Total	$20 000

THE A. & M. COLLEGE (COLORED).

1893,	Regular	$2 500
1894,	"	2 500
	Total	$5,000

SIX NORMAL SCHOOLS (COLORED)

1893,	Regular	$8 000
1894	"	8,000
	Total	$16,000

THE CULLOWHEE HIGH SCHOOL (NORMAL DEPARTMENT).

1893,	Regular	$1,500
1894,	"	1,500
	Total	$3,000

CROATAN INDIAN NORMAL SCHOOL.

1893,	Regular	$ 500
1894,	"	500
	Total	$1,000

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

(The limit—Laws of 1891, Chapter 417, Sec. 4)

1893,	Regular	$10,000*
1894,	"	10,000*
	Grand total	$168,000.

All this money, had the last Legislature so ordered, might have gone into the common schools of the State. This would have given North Carolina during 1893-94, paying the average salary to teachers, more than two thousand three months public schools, into which might have been gathered, counting fifty to each school, over one hundred thousand children. There are ninety-six counties. Giving ten townships to each county, this money would have added two three months public schools in each township in every county in the State."

The above figures are absolutely correct. They are taken from the Acts of the Legislature, and "no very prominent Baptist minister," or any other man who has any regard for truth will, I suppose, now claim that they are not correct. If they do, please let me know, and I will give from the Acts of the Legislature, chapter and section, for each and every figure given above.

Organize Against the Saloon.

The State Temperance Association has provided for the organization of auxiliary associations in counties, townships and corporations. Let any person or persons interested in this work call a public meeting of temperance and prohibition people, secure some one to deliver an address, and organize by electing a president, secretary and treasurer and an executive committee. Authorize the officers to call meetings, provide for addresses and the distribution of literature on the subject, and whatever may increase the sentiment for temperance and secure the suppression of the liquor traffic in your county or corporation. Report your organization to the corresponding secretary of the State Association.

The object of this organization is not to antagonize any temperance organization, nor is any member expected to sever his connection with any political party. But do all you can to secure temperance men as candidates in any party, and to secure the enactment of good temperance laws, and their rigid enforcement.

The Legislature will be asked to enact a law similar to the Mississippi law. Do all you can to secure the passage of this law. Organize at once everywhere.

Meeting at Ramseur.

Dear Recorder:—On Saturday night before the second Sunday in this month Rev. J. M. Hilliard, our pastor, began a meeting of days. On Monday Rev. C. A. G. Thomas of Greensboro came down to help our pastor in his work. And it was with great pleasure that this scribe sat and heard that man of God preach the gospel of Christ, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and we believe that there were about twenty persons that were converted for the few days that the good work went on.

From the time Bro. Thomas came to Ramseur, until he left, he preached twice a day a good sermon, but on Thursday night, the close of the meeting, he preached one of the finest sermons it ever has been my privilege to hear. The church was greatly revived, and hence the good work under God goes on. We do hope that Bro. Thomas will come to Ramseur again in the near future and do some more of his good preaching.

I am glad to say that our new church house at Ramseur is near completion.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA

M. Hammerly, a well-known business man of Hillsboro, Va., sends this testimony to the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla: "Several years ago, I hurt my leg, the injury leaving a sore which led to erysipelas. My sufferings were extreme, my leg, from the knee to the ankle, being a solid sore, which began to extend to other parts of the body. After trying various remedies, I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and, before I had finished the first bottle, I experienced great relief; the second bottle effected a complete cure."

Religious Humbuggery.

It seems to a reflecting mind that the old adage, "A hurt child dreads the fire," is true. It seems equally true that people who have been again and again fooled by peddlers, book-agents, and a host of other agents would be on their guard against frauds. A good man was once so fooled and wearied by peddlers, that he declared he would never buy another article from one, and that one should never stay in his house. After a while a sharp fellow came along who told what seemed to be such a true story of who he was, and what he was doing, that the good man took him in, and gave him a splendid night's entertainment, and next morning gave him five dollars for a pair of spectacles, which the peddler boastfully said afterwards only cost him twelve and a half cents.

But religious humbuggery is getting to be about as common now as any other kind; and notwithstanding Christ has faithfully warned the people against "false Christs and false prophets (Mark 13: 22, 23), still thousands of people allow themselves to be deceived and led astray.

Recently there came to a certain community two strangers, a man and a woman. They claim to be from a certain Northern State. They claim to be husband and wife. They both claim to have been called of God to preach the gospel; and that the Lord had sent them to that particular community to preach. Now as to their claim of being from a certain State, and being husband and wife, these claims may be true. But we do have a right to question the woman's claim of being called of God to preach. Is there a single instance in the Bible, where God, or Christ, or the prophets, or the priests of the Old Testament, or the apostles, or the churches of the New Testament ever appointed a woman to be a public religious teacher? If so, let the case be pointed out. Christ, in beginning the gospel dispensation, called and appointed twelve men as preachers of the gospel. Not a woman was appointed. This is unaccountably strange if Christ intended women to preach. When Judas lost his office as a preacher by his sin, and one was to be chosen by the apostles to fill his place, why did they not choose Mary, that good woman, who was "last at the cross and first at the sepulcher," or some other of the noble women of that day? Under Divine guidance they knew that men only were to do such work.

The fact that neither Christ nor the apostles appointed a woman to preach, ought to forever settle the question. But Paul, inspired of God, makes the matter doubly sure. He positively forbids women preaching. In 1 Cor. 14: 34, 35, he says, "Let your women keep silence in the churches; for it is not permitted unto them to speak; for it is a shame for women to speak in the church." He says again in 1 Tim. 2: 11, 12, "Let the women learn in silence with all subjection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp authority over the man, but to be in silence." If, then, there is any authority in Scripture example, or in direct Scripture teaching, then all women preaching is nothing but religious humbuggery.

But the husband of the woman above referred to claims also to be preaching under a Divine call; and yet he declares to the people that he has reached sinless perfection—that he has not sinned in five years. Let us see what John says of such a preacher, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." 1 John 1: 8. In James 3: 2, "In many things we all offend." In Psalm 14: 3, God says, "There is none that doeth good, no, not one." Paul declares that sin dwelt in him, and this made him cry out, "O wretched man that I am! who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Read carefully all that Paul says of himself in Rom. 7: 15—25, and then tell me if a person who claims "sinless perfection" is not a religious fraud.

But still further, this sinless preacher affirms that he can cure all diseases by faith, and that there is no more need of medicines or doctors. He tells of many wonderful cures he has wrought. I give in substance one. He said, "I met a little girl who was covered all over with dreadful sores. I asked her if she wanted to be healed. She said she did. I asked her if she would pray to Jesus to heal her. She said she would. I also prayed in faith that night that she might be healed. On the next morning she was perfectly well. Not a mark of a sore was left on her body."

Can anybody with common sense believe such stuff as this? Certainly they cannot unless they believe this man to be Divine, or else specially commissioned of God to work miracles.

If he can do these marvelous things, he ought to have staid in his own State where the people must almost worship him, until he had cured all the diseased ones. Why did he not perform a miracle at Virgilina, Va., to show his power? This would have been more convincing than simply to tell what he had done.

These sinless preachers did not forget to take a collection each day of their meeting.

I believe in a preached gospel by men called of God. I believe it is the duty of all Christians to strive day by day to subdue the sins and imperfections that lurk in their natures and to be as near like Christ as they can. I believe in prayer and faith as blessed agencies furnished us by God for our good. But I do not believe in the unscriptural and unreasonable extremes into which the sinless preachers run. CORRESPONDENT.

Church and State.

A prominent Pedobaptist layman recently remarked, "The more I learn of Baptist polity the more I admire them." He recognised their pre-eminence as advocates of religious liberty, their unswerving devotion to freedom of conscience, and their unfailing opposition to anything that smacks of a union between Church and State.

The matter of State aid in higher education is receiving considerable attention now, but the fire is barely kindled. President Taylor in his unanswered and unanswerable argument on this subject, has called us back to consider first principles. We, "careful about many things," had overlooked them. Unwittingly, we were pushing along.

Baptists—so it is written down—are opposed to Church and State union. The State needs the conservative power and influence of the churches. All that the churches ask of the State is to see that they are protected in the lawful pursuit of life and liberty.

In this country and now, other religious bodies vie with us, or have vied with us, in demanding this and nothing more. It remains to be seen how they will stand to their colors in the battle that is brewing.

The English (Episcopal) church for centuries has been supported by taxes wrung from the people of all denominations. The mutterings of the people there, like distant thunder, foretell the coming storm, when they will refuse longer to be taxed for the benefit of the clergy of the Episcopal or any other church. Yet in North Carolina we unthinkingly have submitted quietly to this same unjust principle of taxation for the benefit of preachers as a class. The preachers have not asked it: they had no right to ask it. They have modestly accepted the love-token. I mean this: the State University for years has given free tuition to preachers and preachers' sons. To do this, requires money. This money is received from the State whose Legislature makes annual appropriations for this purpose. These appropriations are made possible by levying taxes on the people of the State.

The writer is a minister of the gospel and a zealous advocate of ministerial education. But, in common with thousands of others, he protests against this violation of our fundamental law. True, it is not for the support of the ministry of any one denomination. It is for the benefit of the preachers of all denominations. In this it is just a little more liberal than the English custom. The principle is the same. The man who would rob you of five cents is no better in principle than he who would rob you of five dollars.

The Baptists, Methodists, Presbyterians, Quakers and Christians have each their church colleges where they provide by voluntary contributions for the education of their ministers. Let the Episcopalians do the same. State support for preachers, young or old, is wrong in principle and wholly unnecessary. Let the next Legislature see to it that our people, already burdened with debt, shall not be further burdened by taxation for the benefit of any class of preachers or what not, except those who are utterly unable to care for themselves, the insane, &c. Oklahoma Territory.

Dear Recorder:—Will you allow me to give your readers a short sketch of the religious condition of Oklahoma Territory, looked at from a Baptist standpoint. I want to mention, especially, this new part of the Territory known as the Cherokee Strip.

On entering the Territory you are strangely impressed with the newness of things—new cottages, new fences, new ploughed fields, and those who were acquainted with the previous condition of things, are impressed with the conspicuous absence of the Red Men, and the Texas cattle. The Cherokee Strip is sixty miles wide and two hundred miles in length. It was opened for settlement the 16th day of last September, and now has a population of 150,000. There are some ten or twelve good towns in the Strip, but Perry is by far the largest, and most enterprising.

In all this vast Territory above mentioned, there are but seven organized Baptist churches, with only two church houses, and one of these a small, cheap building. We have at Perry a population of 8,000, and a Baptist church with sixty members, of as good people as there are in the town. We have built a $2,000 church house, and have paid $1,700 of the money, but where the other $300 is to come from, we know not.

Five different denominations are building at same time, and the people are building homes, &c., and we can't get any more outside help, and now in the name of my Master, I come to the brethren of my native State and ask you to help us finish paying for the first Baptist church house in the Cherokee Strip. With no crops, no homes, &c., our citizens have done well. Now please help us in this last hard pull, and may God bless you.

Tigers in Korea.

The appearance of Chinese soldiers on the soil of the Hermit Land fills the hearts of the Koreans with terror. Next to fear of these neighbors, tigers are most dreaded by these people, who ask for nothing better than to be let alone, and for strangers to kindly keep out of their country. As the traveler approaches a Korean village he will notice a strange absence of trees, meaning that tigers have been troublesome in that region, making it necessary to cut the timber down to keep them away, for they are shy as well as sly, and prefer the shelter of a forest for their prowling.

A tiger will harmlessly purr and sleep, and sleep and purr all the day long, but when he comes out of hiding for his nightly visits he is capable of doing much damage, for the Koreans sleep during warm weather with the doors of their houses wide open, so a man as well as a baby could be easily carried off by his tiger-majesty, no one knowing the difference until morning when the devoured member of the family is missed.—Over Sea and Land.

Traveling in Korea

In this country traveling costs much money. I have the testimony of no less experienced traveler than Mrs. Isabella Bird Bishop on this point. She says "that of all the countries which she has visited, living and traveling in Korea is by far the most expensive." One cannot go unattended. I must be accompanied by my Kenison, also by a Bible woman. We must be hidden away as much as possible, therefore two sedan chairs are required. This necessitates six coolies for the carrying of them. Then there is the inevitable pony with his load of books, blankets, and other necessary things. These altogether make quite a retinue, but I do not know how to dispense with a single one of these people or with any part of the load. If we did not carry blankets we should be obliged to go without them. We are obliged to carry also some food. We eat all the native food we can, but I am sure no foreigner could long keep in health without occasionally being reinforced by something more palatable and more satisfactory.

My recent trip occupied only eight days, but it cost something over twenty gold dollars. I feel that we ought, in view of all the encouragements with which I met, make several such trips during the year.—Mrs. M. F. Scranton, in Heathen Woman's Friend.

War Over.

I wish to say that the war terminated favorably to our cause. The Catholics, and priests especially, were in hearty sympathy with insurgents, and their leaders had made themselves champions of the priest party. Custodio de Mello and Saldanhe da Gama were both the priests' tools, the latter being a monarchist and the former an avowed defender of priest rule. So you can see we are happy in this new victory, which secures us continued freedom. Also, we are happy in the recent election of President and Vice-President of the Republic. The President-elect, Prudente de Moraes, is quite a friend to evangelical missions, as he has often spoken at evangelical school celebrations in S. Paulo. The Vice-President-elect is a Bahian, a personal friend of mine, and an avowed enemy to Romanish antiquities—superstition, ignorance, etc., and a great reformer, having been the first republican governor of Bahia State.

So you see we will not only be likely to have a sound government in future, but one of progress and friendliness to gospel work. The Lord reigns.—Z. C. T., Bahia, Brazil

A cross-eyed President of the Foreign Office in Seoul was a while ago superseded by a man whose eyes were in a similar condition.

An American inquired, "Why are Foreign Office Presidents always cross-eyed?" "Oh," said the Korean, "it is quite necessary that they should be able to look in two directions in order that they may watch both China and Russia at the same time."

If you are ashamed of your religion, it is a good sign that you have not the right kind.—Selected.

A Card from President Winston.

The last RECORDER says editorially: "Remember that President Winston has said, 'If my policy destroys Wake Forest, it is not my lookout.'"

I have never made this remark, nor have I ever for a moment entertained such feelings toward Wake Forest College as would make such a remark at all possible. Did I not rejoice in the prosperity of Wake Forest as a citizen, an educator, and a man who loves human progress, I would feel for it both affection and reverence because my dear father, to whom I owe my education, my literary tastes and my desire to do good in the world, received at that institution his literary training. For me to desire to destroy Wake Forest College is absolutely as impossible as for me to destroy the Baptist Orphanage or to murder Bro. Mills.

About a year and a half ago, realizing that certain persons were engaged in stirring up bad feeling among the Baptists against the University, I sought an interview in Raleigh with Rev. Dr. Skinner, Rev. Dr. Hufham and Rev. Mr. Gwaltney at the residence of Dr. Skinner, in order to ascertain whether there really existed any ground for complaint. They conferred with me very kindly and patiently; and, at my request, stated the various grievances and complaints which seemed worthy of consideration. They asked me questions freely in regard to our requisites for admission, our curriculum of studies, the scholarships, the custom of the institution in regard to taking notes for tuition, the various fees, the church connections of the professors, the plan of canvassing for students, &c. Every complaint that they mentioned seemed due to misapprehension or to ignorance of the facts. I felt that I satisfactorily explained every misunderstanding. Having disposed of the various complaints and charges in detail, one of them remarked, "Your policy is destroying our college." I endeavored to show them that their fears were groundless, that the college had a mission to perform which could be performed by no other agency, that it supplied a demand which insured its existence, and that no power on earth could destroy it so long as it remained true to its duty. The reply was "Well, it is being destroyed; it is going down, and its destruction is only a question of time." I answered, "You know more about that than I do, but I do not believe it. I do not believe that anybody can destroy it except the Baptists themselves. Of this I am sure, if it is destroyed, my policy will not be responsible." I suppose that the last remark is the basis of the report about my saying "If my policy destroys it, I am not responsible." The remark attributed to me means that I am either desirous of or indifferent to the destruction of the college. The remark that I made means that the college in my opinion cannot be destroyed, but certainly that it cannot and will not be destroyed by any policy of mine. During the same interview I remarked that I rejoiced as a North Carolinian in the power, the progress and the usefulness of the college, and I said, "If I could turn over my hand and secure it a million of dollars, I would do it most gladly." The whole spirit and tenor of my conversation was friendly to the college. If the gentlemen present misunderstood my remark, they should have resented it there, for certainly such a remark would have been most unworthy of any man engaged in training the character and intellect of the young.

I believe that Wake Forest is essential to North Carolina, and I thank the Baptist people who have created this great instrumentality for good. I rejoice in having the good will and respect of the Baptist people. It was a great pleasure to me to be present in their State Convention in Goldsboro and at the Association in Fair Bluff, where I was kindly greeted, and to both which places I had been most kindly invited by Baptist preachers. I am glad to serve the Baptist people and to help them educate their children. They help support the University, and they are entitled to its benefits precisely like other citizens. In my opinion the University is as essential to their development and it may be made as useful to them as Wake Forest. They have urgent need of both institutions, for the mission of the two is not identical.

I have never persuaded students to leave Wake Forest and come to the University. Indeed, so far as I know, there was only one student last year in the University who had been to Wake Forest. This does not include the schools of law and medicine. I believe that the institutions will prosper together and I rejoice to read of the splendid opening there to day.

The same editorial also says "— — the fight was made severer until a meeting was held at Raleigh to try to adjust matters; — — efforts for adjustment met with ridicule, petitions for existence were sneered at."

Besides the conference just mentioned, I had a long conference with Col. J. M. Heck, which was very pleasant and friendly. He thought the chief trouble was with our curriculum of studies, and earnestly urged that I agree to some compromise elevating our work beyond competition with Wake Forest, saying he would guarantee that his people would favor an appropriation of one hundred thousand dollars annually. I told him that such expenditure of money would be most extravagant, and that I would never consent to direct a University supported by the people of North Carolina and so arranged as to exclude from its benefits every poor boy in the State.

I had conferences also with Dr. C. E. Taylor and with Dr. J. B. Shearer, and we three together discussed the matter before the joint committee on education of the last Legislature. I was anxious to know what compromise or adjustment would be proposed, and was willing to accede to any reasonable proposition. It finally came in the shape of a legislative bill proposing to "elevate the University" by establishing first its Freshman Class; then its Sophomore Class; then its Junior Class; finally its Senior Class!! (See House Journal of last Legislature, "Bill to elevate University to apex," &c.)

There are people who never laugh and seldom smile; but if a laugh is ever justifiable, the Apex Bill furnished the occasion.

Very respectfully,
GEO T. WINSTON

From South Carolina.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The Lord is blessing his people throughout this section. Most all the churches have been greatly blessed. In recent meetings many souls have come out on the Lord's side. Your scribe has seen the seal of the Spirit upon his labors. At Beaverdam all were made to feel that God was among his people. A few sinners claimed the blessing. At Mount Pleasant (my home church) the Lord was in the meeting from the very beginning. The church had taken the precaution to tone up its members on church discipline, and as a result we did not have to work a week to get the meeting started. The Spirit of the Lord was there from the very first. While there were only ten for baptism, yet all agreed that it was one of the best meetings that has been held at Mount Pleasant for many years.

I am persuaded that if the churches of Christ would only use and practice a more thorough discipline in the churches, that all of our meetings would be more spiritual, and God would give us many more souls. God bless you in all things.

Yours truly, G. S DAUGHERTY.

From Texas

Dear Recorder:—I want to say to your readers that the Lord has graciously blessed us with an outpouring of his Spirit, and a number of souls were blessed: among these were some old men. Seventy one made a profession of religion, some of whom have joined the church, and are going to work for Jesus.

My dear brother, Rev. E. F. McNeill, says he is carrying on a good meeting at Shady Grove. He is a good worker. He is taking your paper and is well pleased with it.

Yours truly, J. H. MCNEILL

North Carolina Brethren Abroad

Rev. A. C. Dixon has been helping at the celebrated Northfield (Mass) meeting held annually for the benefit of evangelists preachers by Mr. Moody.

Rev. W. C. Tyree, of the First Baptist church of Durham, N. C., is on a visit to his old friends in Virginia. If he visits all of them, his vacation will have to be indefinitely extended. They are almost innumerable.—The Baptist (Baltimore)

Dr. Thomas Hume, professor of English and Literature in the University of North Carolina, delivered his address on "Shakespearan Side Lights on Old English Life," at Rawley Springs, August 17th, before a large and cultured audience. The address was much enjoyed and appreciated. The speaker handled the subject in a masterly manner. The discourse is the ripe result of years of careful study and deep thought. Dr. Hume is spending his vacation in Harrisonburg, and has preached there and at neighboring points during the summer.—Religious Herald

A recent visit to Roanoke has given us an opportunity to ascertain what Rev. Dr. Broughton is doing there as pastor of Calvary Baptist church. He is, possibly, the best known man in the city. Crowds flock to hear him, and often hundreds are unable to find standing room. Dr. Broughton is an eloquent and captivating preacher; and he is more than that. He is a pains aking business man, and knows how to manage men and to empty their pockets, when it is necessary to do that. Before 1894 gives place to 1895 he will have his new house finished and paid for!—Ibid

Rev. Jasper Howell, who has for the past year been the efficient pastor of the Baptist church, preached his last sermon last Sunday night, and left yesterday for Wake Forest College, where he contemplates completing his education. We trust success and happiness may ever attend his pathway. Mr. Howell took for his theme, "the multitudes thronging to Christ;" Mark 1: 45; "They came to him from every quarter." Before going to college he will spend a few days with his parents at Lenoir, N. C. He is a young man, but a good preacher. We bespeak for him a brilliant future.—Jonesboro (Tenn) Herald and Tribune.

The Baptist house of worship at High Point has just been repaired at an expense of $800. The interior is a gem of beauty. The prettiest room I know of. The walls are beautifully papered; the windows of stained glass; the new pews hard oil finish in the natural wood. The house is lighted with electricity, and is usually full of people at Sunday services. Bro. R. W. Weaver is pastor. He also teaches in Greensboro graded school. He has done a very fine work at this place.—Rev. C. A. G. Thomas, in Atlantic Baptist.

Mars Hill Church.

Dear Recorder:—On the third Sunday in last July we commenced a meeting of days with the church at Mars Hill in Bertie county, N C, and continued until the fourth Sunday in said month. Elder B. Craig, pastor of the church at Ahoskie, did the preaching for us, and did it excellently. He is a young man full of zeal and enthusiasm, and is doing a noble work for the Master. He is so true and magnanimous, to be with him is to love him. On the last day of the meeting I had the pleasure of baptising twelve happy souls into the fellowship of the church. One was restored to the fellowship of the church. Indeed we had a very precious meeting. God's people were made to rejoice anew in the love of Jesus.

This is my eighth year as pastor of this church, and a kinder, more appreciative people it will be hard to find. I went among this people comparatively a stranger, and they are as true and generous as any pastor could desire: indeed they have been kinder, and better to me than I have deserved. The brethren and sisters at Mars Hill will ever be dear to me, and I shall ever love them for their generosity of heart and nobility of soul. This people have not only been true and kind to their pastor, but they have developed most wonderfully in their mission work. W. P. JORDAN.

The pharmacists in recent session at Asheville resolved to boycott manufacturers who furnish physicians with their manufactured products for use in dispensing prescriptions. This action touches up such doctors as fill their own prescriptions and dispense drugs from their own offices.

WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?
THE STANDARD DICTIONARY
OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.
Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,300 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE
appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED
when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one half of the language) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary
you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court
and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary
in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

At Home After Vacation.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have just reached home from a month's vacation which my church kindly granted me. During this time I had the pleasure of aiding Brother Beam in a delightful meeting at Mt. Zion church, and also assisted the pastor in a meeting at Hunting Creek church in Virginia. I was baptized at this church when eleven years old, and had not been there before, except once, in twenty years. My father was for many years pastor of this church, and as I stood in the pulpit where he so often preached, many sacred associations and memories filled my heart. The last two weeks of the month I spent in Asheville and at Tate Spring, Tenn.

My rest and recreation was very beneficial, and I came home quite well and strong, ready as I hope for harder and better work.

But my vacation was saddened by the loss of two of the best and most useful members of our church who died while I was absent—Sister Robert Holloway and Col. W. A. Albright. Sister Holloway was sick for some weeks and suffered very much, but bore it with great patience and beautiful submission. She had many rare and lovely traits of character and was one of the most conscientious and pious women I ever knew. She was one of the active and useful members in the church, and I feel her loss the more keenly, she, in addition to this, being a very dear personal friend. We feel, however, that our loss is her gain for she was ripe for heaven and had lived to win a bright crown.

Bro. Albright was sick but a short time, and his death was a surprise and a great shock to all. The whole town seems to feel his loss and has shown its grief in many ways. The business houses were all closed when his funeral took place. He was superintendent of our Sunday-school and one of our most fasthful and efficient deacons. The Sunday-school had memorial services yesterday morning, and many paid loving and tearful tributes to his memory. The church has sustained an irreparable loss in his death, and his pastor feels he has lost one of his truest friends and wisest counselors and greatest helpers. He was so widely known, I shall write you a fuller account of the life and work of this noble and useful man.

We can only hope and pray that God may sanctify to the good of this church and his cause their great losses which we have sustained. We feel that as a church we are greatly afflicted.

Hastily but fraternally yours,
W. C. TYREE.

State Fair Notes.

The Raleigh papers have published several columns of extracts from letters from prominent people all over the State, who have announced their intention of making exhibits at the State Fair. In addition to these, large numbers of letters are being received from all sections of North Carolina in which it is asserted that the attendance will be very large from all sections.

The committee of prominent educators, appointed by the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, will meet in Raleigh on September the 8th, to perfect arrangements for Educational Day, which will be Tuesday of Fair week.

It is to be regretted that Gen. J. B. Gordon will not be able to deliver his address on Soldiers' Day, which will be Wednesday; but a great feature of interest to all old soldiers will be the Cycloramas of the Battle of Gettysburg.

The City of Raleigh is taking hold of the Fair with zeal and vigor never before known, and it will be ready to greet the great concourse of people which will attend the Fair.

Pee Dee Association.

The Pee Dee Association will meet with the Wadesboro Baptist church, Thursday, October 25th, 1894.

Introductory sermon by Rev. Mr. Tuttle. Missionary sermon by Rev. M. L Kesler.

By order of the Executive Committee.
E. A. COVINGTON, Chairman.

State News.

Two desperate thieves entered the residence of Dr. J. M. Worth of Ashboro the 3rd inst., and stole about $400 in cash and $100,000 in bonds. They have been captured and the property recovered.

It was stated in the secular press that the State University opened last week with 448 students, including summer students, law students and all; Trinity, 140. Davidson opens on the 13th inst. Reports from Guilford and Elon are indefinite. "Better than last year," say all.

A flouring-mill will be built at Raleigh, a cotton-mill at Gaffney.——Crop reports continue encouraging.——Dwelling at Norwood destroyed by fire on the 4th.——E. B. Cox, farmer, Craven county, died on the 2d.——Northerners are said to be preparing to establish a colony in Onslow county.

General News.

There have been two deaths from yellow fever in the quarantine hospital at Baltimore.

Eleven members of the city council of New Orleans, including its president, have been indicted for corruption in office.

Terrible forest fires wrought incalculable injury in the Northwest last week. The drouth had rendered thousands of acres dry and easily combustible, and the fires, once started, destroyed forests, crops, a town (other towns injured), and burned more than six hundred beings to death. The entire extent of the injury cannot be appreciated.

MARRIED.

RISHER—GRIFFIN—On Aug. 15th, 1894, at the residence of the bride's father, in Nash county, N. C., by Rev. M. R. Pernell, Mr. A. D. Risher, of Dravosburgh, Alle county, Pa., and Miss Tolie Griffin of Argo, N. C.

DIED.

COOK—Died at his home near Apex, of typhoid fever, Bro. Gaston Cook, who was forty-four years old on Aug. 29th, 1894. Amid bitter tears of grief we buried him in his church-yard at Salem, Wake county. His wife and daughter lie stricken with fever at home. The whole family, so largely dependent upon his management, are bereaved indeed. He was a kind husband, father, son and brother, and a zealous worker in his church. Indeed, whatever his hands found to do he did it with all his might. As his pastor I feel sorely bereaved. God bless the stricken ones. J. M. WHITE.

LEWIS—On Thursday, Aug. 13th, at 8 p. m., Sister Lewis, wife of Wm. R. Lewis, died at her home in Wilmington, of erysipelas, and was carried to Southport on the 14th, where her funeral was preached in the Baptist church, after which her remains were borne to the Southport cemetery and there laid to rest to await the sounding of the trumpet which shall bid her sleeping dust arise. Sister Lewis had been a member of the Southport Baptist church for years. She was about thirty-eight years old, and leaves a husband and seven children to mourn their loss, which is her eternal gain. We tender our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband and children, and we do pray God that the entire family may be united on that eternal day in the better world on high.

"A few more storms shall beat,
On this wild rocky shore,
And we shall be where tempest cease
And surges swell no more.
A few more struggles here,
A few more partings o'er,
A few more toils, a few more tears,
And we shall weep no more."

To the bereaved husband and children I would say labor not for the meats which shall perish, but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven. J. H. HILDRETH.

CHANDLER—Miss Lizzie G. Chandler was born April 27th, 1868, and died August 25th, 1894, aged twenty-six years. Lizzie was a noble Christian woman. In early womanhood she resolved to obtain an education. She entered the Oxford Female Seminary, and zealously continued her studies until she was prepared to teach. Her father not being able to meet all her school expenses, she taught school and paid the remainder herself.

One day she said, "Ma, I think everybody ought to try to do some good while they live. I have determined to do all I can to help you and pa raise and educate the younger children." To this noble work she gave her short but earnest life. She taught school so constantly as to break down her health.

Lizzie loved her Bible. On a blank leaf I found written with her own hand:

"Holy Bible, book divine, Precious treasure, thou art mine."

She loved her church and Sabbath-school. She was a useful Sabbath-school teacher.

Rest, Lizzie, sweetly rest in thy new bright heavenly home.

Miss Alice Maud Chandler was born June 15th, 1872, and died August 22d, 1894, in her twenty-second year.

Maud and Lizzie, two dear sisters, loved each other on earth, and one only preceded the other three days to heaven. Perhaps Nature never bestowed on any one person more of grace and loveliness than was seen in Maud. And these natural charms were sweetened and beautified by the grace of God. It can truly be said that Maud loved everybody and everybody loved Maud.

She had been in feeble health for more than a year. But though feeble, she was always doing something to help and make some one else happy. She seemed to realize that death was near. With her own hands she prepared her clothing for her burial, and divided among her relatives and friends such articles as she had which she thought they would appreciate. She said: "I have not been as good as I ought to have been. If I could live longer I would try to be better. Ma, if in my long sickness I have said an unkind word to you, I beg you to forgive me. I love you, ma, and I love everybody." She became happy and rejoiced. In her last conscious moment she looked into her pa's face, and smiled as sweetly as a prattling babe. With this smile upon her face she sank into the stillness of death.

And now these two dear sisters lie side by side in the cemetery at Amis Chapel Church, Granville county, N. C. PASTOR.

Tributes of Respect.

The following is a tribute to the memory of Bro. W. A. Albright, late superintendent of the First Baptist Sunday-school, Durham, N. C.:—

He is dead! A good man has fallen. Truly he was one of Nature's noblemen. We shall see his kind and familiar face no more among us. How we miss him in his accustomed place this morning! For the past three years he has been our loving, faithful, and efficient superintendent. Who has known him but to love him? Dead! such a man cannot die. He is immortal. Death and the grave had no terrors for him. He simply wrapped the drapery of his couch about him and lay down to pleasant dreams. True, the grave will hold his body for awhile; but death had no sting for him and the grave no victory.

What shall we say of him? Servant of God well done! He has fought a good fight. He has finished his work and conquered the last foe. Sweet rest, and home at last!

His good deeds can never die, and the influence of that beautiful and noble Christian life will live on through coming ages to bless the world. Does any one doubt the reality of the Christian religion? Look at his life. Hear the dying man's last testimony of God's goodness as he exclaims with his last breath, "Bless the Lord, O my soul! and all that is within me bless his holy name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits; who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction, who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies, who satisfieth thy mouth with good things as that thy youth is renewed like the eagles."

May his noble and unselfish life inspire us to do our duty and to live in such a way that we too shall be ready and waiting when the summons shall come for us.

While we deeply feel our loss, we realize that it is gain to him, and we bow submissively to the will of him who doeth all things well. We tender our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, and pray that the Father whom he so faithfully served may comfort and sustain them in this sad bereavement and through all the trials of life.

OF
The American Baptist Publication Society.

Arranged by the most eminent scholars in the Baptist denomination North, South, East, and West, in the interests of Baptists.

The Society desires to call attention to the mechanical excellence of its publications. All things else being equal, publications that are attractive and develop the artistic sense of the scholar are the ones which eventually accomplish the most good. If the printing is first-class and the pictures good the scholars are more likely to preserve and use the periodicals. The Publication Society has always tried to obtain the best results in the issuing of their publications, and no expense is spared in the mechanical work of its periodicals and books, while providing the best also for the subject matter. Compare our periodicals with others.

Rev. E. C Dargan, D. D., (in the Teacher); Rev. E. J. Forrester, L. D., (in the Advanced Quarterly); Rev. S. Boykin, D. D., (in the Intermediate and Primary Quarterlies), will furnish the comments on the lessons for the fourth quarter; while a number of our best men will furnish articles for the TEACHER.

Every Teacher should read the articles on the life of Christ, which began in the TEACHER in July and will run twelve months. Prof. A. T. Robertson, of the Seminary, is doing fine work on these.

Kind Words, beginning with August, contains in its missionary department, once a month, an outline program for children's bands. Let LEADERS OF BANDS note this fact. And in October the third page will contain a Bible Reading Department. Look for it.

Resignation.

There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there!
There is no fireside, howso'er defended,
But has one vacant chair!

The air is full of farewells to the dying,
And mournings for the dead;
The heart of Rachel for her children crying
Will not be comforted!

Let us be be patient! These severe afflictions
Not from the ground arise,
But sometimes celestial benedictions
Assume this dark disguise.

We see but dimly through the mists and vapors
Amid these earthly damps,
What seems to us but sad funereal tapers
May be heaven's distant lamps.

There is no death! What seems so is transition:
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian,
Whose portal we call death.

And though at times impetuous with emotion
And anguish long suppressed,
The swelling heart heaves moaning like the ocean,
That cannot be at rest.

We will be a patient, and assuage the feeling
We may not wholly stay;
By silence sanctifying, not concealing
The grief that must have way.

"About My Father's Business."

This is what Christ loved better than anything else in the world—his Father's business, the will of his Father in heaven, the work which God hath given him to do. When he had grown to be a man he said this was his meat and drink. And he loved it when he was only a child. Can other children follow his example? Is there any way in which you can be about your Father's business? Has God given you work to do? And can you be useful in the world? Jesus was about his Father's business in the temple; do you think he left it off when he got down to Nazareth again? To be sure not; he was always about it one way or the other. Said a little girl to her mother, with an anxious countenance: "Mother, I wish—but I am afraid you will think it silly."

"What is it you wish, my dear? If I know, I can tell whether it is wise or not."

"Well, mother, I wish I was an angel in heaven."

"What makes you say so, my child?"

"It was what my teacher said yesterday about the verse I learned, 'Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven,' and I thought it must be so pleasant to be always doing God's will, serving him, and never leaving off for ever."

The mother told her child that there were many ways in which God might be served every day on earth, and that little girls might do his will as well as angels. She said that children could do it by being obedient to their parents, attentive to their lessons, diligent in work, and gentle and good-humored in play, recollecting that God sees them always, and will give them his Holy Spirit to help them to do all they can to please him.

Remember this, my dear boys and girls! You may be about your Father's business without going into the temple or waiting till you get to heaven. At home and at school, in the workshop or on the playground, you may serve God. Only keep in mind that it is God's will that you should be good, happy, and wise, and try to be so always; then all you do will be your Father's business.—Children's Friend.

Courage is resistance to fear, mastery of fear—not absence of fear. Except a creature be part coward it is not a compliment to say it is brave; it is merely a loose misapplication of the word. Consider the flea!—incomparably the bravest of all the creatures of God, if ignorance of fear were courage. Whether you are asleep or awake he will attack you, caring nothing for the fact that in bulk and strength you are to him as are the massed armies of the earth to a sucking child; he lives both day and night and all days and nights in the very lap of peril and the immediate presence of death, and yet is no more afraid than is the man who walks the streets of a city that was threatened by an earthquake ten centuries before. When we speak of Clive, Nelson, and Putnam as men who "didn't know what fear was," we ought always to add the flea—and put him at the head of the procession.—Mark Twain

"Beware the pine tree's withered branch, Beware the awful avalanche"!

was the peasant's warning to the aspiring Alpine youth. Dangers greater than these lurk in the pathway of the young man or young woman of the present as they journey up the rugged hillside of Time. But they may all be met and overcome by a judicious and timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the celebrated cure for colds, coughs, catarrh, and consumption. Better than hypophosphites or cod liver oil; unrivalled and unapproachable in all diseases arising from a scrofulous or enfeebled condition of the system.

The "Discovery" is guaranteed to cure in all cases of diseases for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be refunded.

Hernia or Rupture, permanently cured or no pay. For treatise, testimonials and numerous references, address World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

The scorners, however much they may assume to be men of understanding, turn away from this invitation of grace; but while they contemn the poor who accept it, they will find themselves passed by in the eternal banquet of mercy.—Dr. Stier.

Dollars for Self and Cents for Christ.

"Yes, I always give for missions and everything else," said Phil. "I give something every Sunday; don't you?"

"Why, no. I give five or ten cents when I think I can spare it; when I have a good deal of money and don't want it for anything," said Tom.

"I give whatever papa or mamma gives me for it," said James.

"O, I always give my own money!" said Phil. "I don't think it's giving at all unless you do that."

"Yours is the best way, I'm sure," said Tom soberly. "They say it's the regular giving that counts."

"And then, of course, what you give is just so much out of what you'd like to spend on yourself."

"Yes," said Phil, feeling very self-denying and virtuous.

"I'm going to try to do your way," said Tom. "And I'm going to keep an account and see what it will amount to."

The three boys were on their way home from Sunday school, where they had heard from a missionary some very interesting accounts of his work. Many of them went away with the solemn feeling that they should, in some sense, be held answerable if they did not strive to hold out a helping hand to those in such sore need. For the present it was plain that missionary interest was at its height, and little societies were formed among Sunday-school children, they believing it would be pleasanter to put their gifts together than to offer them separately.

Several boys came to Phil's house on the next afternoon to talk it over, and Phil brought his account-book to put down their names as the first members of their society, with a preamble in which occurred many high-sounding words setting forth their resolves and intentions.—Kind Words.

The Persistence of the Tramp.

It is the fashion of "labor" orators to affirm that tramps are rapidly increasing in number under prevailing industrial conditions, and even such a writer as Henry George has estimated them at "millions" in this country alone. Of course, no proof of the tremendous multiplication is offered, for there is none to be had. I doubt if there are so many tramps in proportion to our population as there were fifty years ago, and my doubt is founded on the notorious facts that the working man's wages have more than doubled in that time, and the cost of almost everything that the working man has to buy has been reduced nearly one-half. In other words, an hour's labor will buy, and actually does buy, three times as much as it would buy fifty years ago.

In regard to "tramps," only one thing is new—that is the name. The very same genus was known to my mother, but she called them "codgers;" the very same genus was known to my grandmother, but she called them "shacks." What my great-grandmother called them I do not know, but I doubt not that the professional rounders were as common then as now. There were no "tramps" then, because the name was not invented till our armies were disbanded.

There were no "dudes" then, either, but there have been dandies, swells, fops, beaux and exquisites scattered plentifully down the centuries. Names change; the thing persists.—North American Review.

A Plea for the Birds

"There's a stain of blood on every bonnet
That has a dead bird stretched upon it."

Will there be a song bird left in the country another year? Look at the milliners' openings, and answer the question for yourselves. The slaughter of the song birds is something appalling. They are killed, not by the hundred, nor by the thousand, but by the million. Millions of skins are sold every year by the millinery trade.

While feeding its young, each bird will destroy hundreds of insects every day; and all through the summer they are busily at work feeding upon the grubs and worms that devour the grain and fruit and foliage of trees. When famine comes upon the land, it will be no "mysterious dispensation of God." It will be the result of this fearful sacrifice of bird life.

Every woman with a woman's heart in her breast should take a firm stand in this matter. She should say, "I will not wear the plumage; I blush to think I have ever done so." It may be too late already to save ourselves from the consequences of our sin, but at least we can leave such a supply of breasts and dead birds on hand that the few live birds remaining next season will not have to be murdered to satisfy the bloodthirsty demand of this cruel fashion.—The Living Church.

Ayer's Hair Vigor tones up the weak hair-roots, stimulates the vessels and tissues which supply the hair with nutrition, strengthens the hair itself, and adds the oil which keeps the shafts soft, lustrous, and silky. The most popular and valuable toilet preparation in the world.

Tennis.

Tennis is a very ancient game, and was in vogue among the Romans in the days of Augustus, who was a fine player. It was a favorite game of the gravest and most distinguished citizens. Plutarch says that Cato, on the day when he lost his election to the dignity of consul, went to the tennis court, although it was customary to pass the day of defeat in mourning. Pliny the Younger gives an account of his delight in the game two thousand years ago. It was so fashionable then that few country houses were without a tennis court, and public ones were numerous in the city. It was not played with a racquet, but with the hand, which was covered with a gauntlet; and the rules of the game were different from those of to day.—Ex.

Table Manners.

The use of knife, fork, spoon and fingers undergoes considerable modification from time to time, and singularly enough, as it would seem, more articles are allowed to be handled at table than formerly for many years. Among these we may name bread, olives, cheese, radishes, celery, asparagus, berries served with the stems, and most fruits, while it is no violation of polite usage to take lubes of sugar with the fingers. Generally, however, what is considered the proper usage will be indicated by the hostess in the utensils supplied with the various articles, and when none are furnished it may be accepted as an indication that the fingers are expected to do duty. The knife is to be used only for cutting, spreading butter, and the like; the spoon conveys to the mouth fluids and semi fluids only—everything else is relevated to the fork.—Good Housekeeping.

Let Your Light Shine.

"Father," said a little girl, "why does everybody speak so much of poor E's goodness? We never heard of her doing anything remarkable."

"My child," asked her father, "what is the lamp doing?"

"Nothing, father."

"You are right, my child; it is not doing anything. Nevertheless, it is lighting up the whole room. 'Let your light so shine before men,' said One, 'that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.'"

Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up.—John Ruskin.

A BAD TEMPER

—generally accompanies a torpid liver and indigestion. An in-door life often brings on this condition; there follows anæmia, or lack of blood, frequently another worse effect—that of Dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the restorative tonic and liver invigorator which will positively cure just such cases.

Mrs. F. A. Orr.

Mrs. F. A. Orr, of Corbett, Baltimore Co., Md., writes: "Physicians pronounced my case acute Indigestion. If it had not been for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Pellets I firmly believe I would have been in my grave, for nothing did me any good until I began taking them. The 'Discovery' also cured my child of night-sweats and a weak stomach, which followed an attack of Pneumonia. We cannot praise your medicines too highly." Sold by all medicine dealers.

WE WHO live where forests are more of a hindrance, apparently, than an advantage, do not appreciate their value as the people of the North and Northwest do.

The vast forest fires of the past few weeks in which towns and villages and nearly eight hundred people were destroyed, so vast, indeed, that the heavens were overcast with smoke, and the blasting sun shone on our Western coast as through a film, have aroused multitudes to the rescue of the forests. And it is recommended that the United States army be put on guard in times of drouth to prevent extensive spread of these fires, not so much for the protection of human life as for the preservation of the forests, the destruction of which would occasion incalculable expense and destroy a great industry in the Northern and Northwestern States. Moreover, forests exert climatic influences, affect rainfall, and therefore, are immediate instrumentalities in agriculture. We have reason to thank God for our pines and oaks and cypresses; and if we take due care of them the time will come when they will be the chief value of land.

IT IS said that the longer the late Congress was before the public the more manifest became the incapacity of its members; but there is one of them who stands above all his fellows and who demonstrated his title to this position within the last year—Wm. L. Wilson. He is not great, but he is honest; he is not a statesman, but he is sincere; he is not brilliant, but he is a student; and if he is ambitious, his ambition is subservient to his principles; and though his efforts for tariff reform were vain, it cannot be said that any man's efforts have been more deserving of success. In a whirlpool of corruption into which many a man was swept, Mr. Wilson withstood all temptation and all force. When the trust could afford to pay him $100,000 to "fix" their bill in the committee, it dared not make an effort, preferring to wait until the bill should reach the Senate. The most conspicuous man in the extra session and the regular session, in the position of positions to be vilified, he stands before the public to-day with as pure a record as he had when a college professor; and in extensive reading we have not seen a derogatory insinuation.

This man is a Christian, who takes time to attend church and teach Sunday-school even when millions of people are affected by his actions. What a testimony, what an example is Wm. L. Wilson!

ARGUMENTS or petitions should not be necessary to persuade the county commissioners of North Carolina to arrange so that every political party concerned may have such oversight of elections as will insure their fairness. Is does not insinuate anything, but a determination to have popular expression of opinion at the ballot, to insure equal supervision of elections, and it may insinuate the intensest unpatriotism to do otherwise.

When citizens are not certain that the ballot insures popular expression of opinion, then are sown the first seeds of insurrection. When they are certain that the popular will is expressed they have no reason to resort to any other means of promoting public action; and, therefore, it is desirable that no ground for suspicion of unfairness be allowed. To make the people certain of the power of the ballot, make them sure that their votes are counted.

THERE seems to be some doubt as to whether the tariff act should be tolerated longer than a majority of honest low tariff Senators is secured. There are people everywhere who never forget the maxim, "let well enough alone," and in their opinion any tolerable condition is "well enough." There are conservative fools, even if the majority of the tribe is not conservative. And there are other people who have a horror of change. The bird in hand is sufficient for them even when there is a bush full of caged birds that may be reached with a little exertion. These people are good brakes when they have influence, but it is history that they never have had long-lived influence. There are other people in the United States who would be happy to have a law passed or an understanding reached to the effect that no further tariff legislation shall be essayed for one or one hundred years: they are the protected manufacturers, the sugar trust, the miners and the railways that move the products of the mines; and the fact that this class does desire to "let well enough alone" is sufficient proof of the corruptness of the present law, is sufficient reason for incessant work for "great and immediate change."

The people of this land have spoken for 'tariff for revenue only' with a voice not less powerful than that which repudiated slave-holding; that these people are still in favor of tariff for revenue is indubitable; that they are distrustful of the means they chose is very certain, but that is no reason why that means should not yet endeavor to requite the faith that was placed in it. If no other "chance" is given now, on the ground that the chance of chances has been neglected, the principle will command another chance some day, and if not for the late means, for some other; for the principle of tariff for revenue is not a temporary one.

There is some effort to prove which tariff act Prest. Havemeyer of the Sugar Trust prefers. We imagine that that austere potentate is losing no flesh worrying about the difference; for either is worth several millions of dollars to his concern.

The fact that the price of sugar is greater now than it was argues against the late act; and while we have no inclination to defend it, it is necessary to explain that the McKinley tariff paid the Sugar Trust tribute in millions of "bounty," which came from the public pocket, but which went to the Trust so indirectly that the people actually thought that sugar was very cheap; while, on the other hand, the present act enables the Trust to raise the price of sugar by protecting it from foreign competition. In both cases the public pays the tribute; and it is not of much moment in which it pays most. The fact is sufficient.

THE novel addition to the tariff of a tax on playing cards is worthy of mention. The amount is two cents on each pack, and it is collected as the cigarette tax is. It is rather disheartening to know that the government expects to collect about a million dollars from fools who play cards in the next year or two. The thought would be ridiculous were it not shameful evidence of the enormous number of people who throw away time and pay for the privilege of doing it.

WE HAVE seen a statement in a contemporary that one of the educators who has been engaged in holding teachers' institutes received one hundred dollars for holding an institute one week.

This is a mistake that should not be allowed to be widely circulated. Superintendent of Public Instruction J. C. Scarborough informs us that the teachers are not paid anything for holding institutes, but, on the other hand, have to pay their own travelling expenses! One of them has worked ten weeks this summer and spent quite a sum in his work, another eight weeks, and the other—well, he is said to have been sick of a fever; but he has been able to write an article or two for the papers (which indeed could have been the product of a fevered brain) and has also sent out some queer examinations.

WE HAVE received the annual marked copy of a Northern religious paper with the usual defamations of the South. It has become a custom with these publications to add to their subscription lists by stale and florid symposiums on lynching, by men who are known to be ignorant of what they make high speeches about. The symposiums, however, are good reading to the morbid public, and the publishers reap a harvest of pennies and praise. The South, meanwhile, keeps its even tenor, and, perhaps, does a good service by keeping the North from going entirely crazy over horse-racing, high society, stock-gambling, dancing women and baseball.

A THOUGHTFUL writer says in a recent magazine that among many influences which still threaten the "self respect of the ministry," "a pernicious system of indiscriminate aid in seminaries, a tradition of sentimentalism in the profession and an increasing attraction to other careers," are most pronounced.

It is indeed a truth that indiscriminate anything is dangerous; and in aiding young men who profess to be called to the ministry, no exception should be made. A man came in to see us last week, introducing himself as a preacher from a Northern State. He looked well enough; his voice sounded of the truth; his demeanor was compatible. Yet a look in the 'Year Book' didn't reveal his name, and we began to be more suspicious. On being pressed, he told us that, while in the great goodness of his heart he was accustomed to take men at their word until they were proved otherwise, he could show us some testimonials. He had them from good men; but that did not prevent him from finally confessing that he was not licensed, nor even a church-member!

Suppose we had been so "considerate" as not to suspect him because he seemed to be a good and humble brother! It does seem cruel to suspect a man; but, you may count upon it, it is not cruel if the man's conscience sustains him.

It is a miracle if the institutions that offer inducements to would-be preacher's are not imposed upon; it is marvelous if the voice of selfishness is not sometimes masked as the voice of God.

Sermon by Rev. M. V. McDuffie.*

Text—2 Cor. 6: 13—"Be ye also enlarged."

A crisis in the history of the Corinthian church had recently been experienced. It was precipitated by a letter written by the Apostle Paul, urging the exercise of church discipline in the case of a noted offender against the ethics of Christianity. The letter had the desired effect so far as the exercise of discipline was concerned, but was most unhappy in its effects so far as Paul and his future work were concerned. For impurity was a very common sin at Corinth and the incestuous person excluded had many friends and sympathizers. They made war on the Apostle and contracted their own hearts and the hearts of others. Before the Apostle could say what he desired, and what needed to be further said in the same direction, he had to assure them that his heart was big in its affection for them and his mouth open to do them service. He said, "O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged. Ye are not straitened in us, but ye are straitened in your own bowels. Now for a recompense in this (I speak as unto my children,) be ye also enlarged."

It is easy to see from this historic setting, that the text has reference to the enlargement of the nobler life within the Corinthians, the life of love and confidence, of innocence and purity, and of appreciation for the good, the true and the beautiful. It seems appropriate to me, as we come into our larger church, to speak of the enlargement of ourselves in the higher life. I shall ask you to notice

1. The possibilities of the better life within every believer;
2. The demands upon the believer for the enlargement of this life;
3. The means to be employed and the methods of its development.

It is almost universally admitted that as a race we are capable of evolution or development. He is only a pessimist who thinks that the race in the beginning sprung from the hand of God like Minerva from the head of Jupiter, full grown, and has ever since been deteriorating. Scientists and others see progress stamped upon the very physiognomy of the successive generations of men, and written everywhere in their history. Human life is indeed, as Pliny declares, like a river which, though small in the beginning, becomes broader and broader, and becomes broadest at the point of its entrance into the sea.

The spiritual life within the believer, which distinguishes him from the unbeliever, and is the result of the new birth of which Jesus spake to Nichodemus, saying, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again, he cannot see (the kingdom of God," in its normal exercise is not unlike the natural life just described, but like it grows, developes, and enlarges until the believer, once but a babe in Christ, has the stature of a man in Jesus. The Master himself has said, "The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becomes a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof." And another has said: "The path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." There is therefore hope for every child of God. It is possible to grow in grace and improve in conduct and character. To this end God has ordained the services of his house, the work of life and certain inspired agencies and instrumentalities. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ."

This enlargement of our life is not only possible but necessary. It is necessary both to our happiness and usefulness. Writing to the Galatians, the Apostle recognized the fact that they had some high and praiseworthy aspirations, though they were not realising the fulfilment of their aspirations. He attributed the failure to their carnality and said, "This I say then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other: so that ye cannot do the things that ye would."

"Every man is born with aspiration. It does not develop in every man: neither do half the buds in the trees blossom; but they are there. And there is aspiration in every man, whether you suspect it or not, and though it may not blossom. Aspiration means tendrils, twining, or anything else by which one climbs upward." They may be very tender and weak at first, but they will, if encouraged, or, even if not interfered with, grow, enlarge and hold on in the right place like as an anchor holds the ship in the midst of the sea. But better than an anchor, the soul's aspirations, like the tendrils of a vine, make possible a climbing up, up, up, and still higher up, until the mission of life is fulfilled and destiny is reached. Every man owes it to himself to cultivate these tender aspirations of the soul for a better and nobler life. That it may be so, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit."

Divinely ordained relationships and environments also demand that ye be enlarged. Study the lives of the apostles and prophets. Read even the history of the Redeemer and see that a lack of moral and spiritual development in church members themselves impedes the progress of the Word of God and larger work of the Holy Spirit. The inspired writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews in the fifth chapter, writing to the Hebrew Christians, says: "We have many things to say, and hard to be uttered, seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God: and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat." In order to appreciate gospel truth, especially these deeper things of the Spirit, and stronger doctrines of the revelation of God in Jesus Christ, one must have some moral and spiritual development. "To be carnally minded is death." "The carnal mind understandeth not the things of the Spirit, for they are spiritually discerned." The Hebrew Christians had made no progress in the divine life since they were born into Christ's kingdom. They had still to be fed upon the simplest truths and promises, because not morally, intellectually or spiritually equal to the grasp and digestion of the stronger doctrines here compared to "strong meat." "For," says the writer, "every one that useth milk is unskilful in the word of righteousness; for he is a babe. But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil. Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on unto perfection: not laying again the foundation of repentance of dead works, and of faith toward God, of the doctrine of baptisms, and of laying on of hands, of resurrection of the dead, of eternal life. And this will we do if God permit." Jesus had, as it were, his hands tied before the time came for him to be led to Pilate's judgment hall and to Calvary. He had his hands tied in his own country, so that he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief. Unbelief in the people, I speak it reverently, ties the hands of God himself, so that he cannot, without changing his entire plan of redemption, bless the people as he desires to. The conditions with the church itself are often unfavorable and often hinder the work of God and demand most serious and faithful attention. Divinely sent messengers and divinely-ordained relationships are often disturbed in this age of the world as in the days of the prophets and apostles. And in order that we may be in harmony with our divinely-ordained relationships and environments, we should endeavor to come up ourselves to the higher standard of life and duty and not say one to another "I am holier than thou." Let us see to it that we are in a condition of mind and heart to be "fellow-helpers to the truth" and not "fellow-hinderers," for there are, as the Apostle declares, many adversaries, and we are made a "spectacle unto men and angels." Our environments to-day call for enlargement of our hearts, enlargement of the life of sympathy, confidence and love. This splendid house of worship, so well adapted for successful work and so centrally and advantageously located, demands that we be a larger people. More is expected of us now than when we lived in an humbler home. "To whom much is given, of them shall much be required."

Because Dives lived in such splendid comfort and luxury, the poor about his gate ought to have been cared for. He ought to have been generous in his treatment of his servants and of his poor neighbors and of strangers. The church that has the finest building and the best location in the town ought to be the finest people also anywhere to be found. Ignorance and coarseness in a palace is unseemly. Better worship God in an old barn by the light of a tallow-candle or a lamp unless you are going to cultivate high thoughts and fine feelings and noble aspirations. In order to be in harmony with the place, we shall need to lay aside all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of God, lest he say to us as he said to others in past ages, "Hear ye the word of the Lord, ye rulers of Sodom: give ear unto the law of our God, ye people of Gomorrah. To what purpose is the multitude of your sacrifices unto me? saith the Lord: I am full of the burnt offerings of rams and the fat of fed beasts; I delight not in the blood of bullocks, or of lambs, or of he goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hands, to tread my courts? Bring no more vain oblations; incense is an abomination unto me; the new moons and Sabbaths, the calling of assemblies, I cannot away with. It is iniquity, even the solemn meeting. Your new moons and your appointed feasts my soul hateth: they are a trouble unto me; I am weary to bear them. And when ye spread forth your hands, I will hide mine eyes from you; yea, when ye make many prayers, I will not hear: your hands are full of blood. Wash ye, make you clean; put away the evil of your doings from before mine eyes; cease to do evil; learn to do well; seek judgment, relieve the oppressed, judge the fatherless, plead for the widow. Come, now, and let us reason together."

We need to walk carefully, prayerfully, and above all live righteously, having a conscience void of offence in the sight of God and men. With the return of each Lord's day, as we begin preparations for the public worship of your God, let us ask the question and find the answer of the Psalmist: "Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully. He shall receive the blessing from the Lord, and righteousness from the God of his salvation. This is the generation of them that seek him, that seek thy face, O Jacob. Selah."

Our environments this day to me are most impressive. As I look up at these beautiful moral windows which we have built in honor of our saintly dead, I seem to hear the Apostle say, "Ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the firstborn, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, and to the blood of sprinkling, that speaketh better things than that of Abel." Yes, I seem to feel that the spirits of the saintly Devan and the honored A. T. Stout are hovering over over me, saying, "Be thou a faithful minister of Jesus Christ." "Fight the good fight of faith"; "Lay hold on eternal life"; "Endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ"; "Speak to the church and congregation and bid them move forward in nobler ways of life in Christian faith and charity." And as I listen, they cease speaking to me and speak to my brethren in the Lord. And I hear them say:

"Ye servants of the Lord,
Each in his office wait;
With joy obey his heavenly Word,
And watch before his gate.

Let all your lamps be bright,
And trim the gospel flame;
Gird up your loins as in his sight,
For awful is his name.

Watch, 'tis your Lord's command,
And while we speak he's near;
Mark every signal of his hand,
And ready all appear."

And then with rapture of soul and glowing face, they turn to each other and sing:

"O happy servant he,
In such a posture found!
He shall his Lord with rapture see,
And be with honor crowned."

"Be ye also enlarged." Consider for a moment the means to be used and the methods employed by us in securing this enlargement of the better life within us. First of all, humble yourselves under the mighty hand of God and be clothed with humility. "When men are cast down, then thou shalt say, there is lifting up; and he shall save the humble person"; "He forgetteth not the cry of the humble"; "Thus saith the high and lofty one that inhabiteth eternity, whose name is Holy, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite spirit, to revive the spirit of the humble and to revive the heart of the contrite"; "The Lord resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." Jesus, who is the author of life and salvation, took a little child and placed him in the midst of his hearers and said, "Verily, I say unto you, except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven." If we, then, are ever to be enlarged, we must with meekness receive the engrafted Word of God, which is able to make one wise unto salvation. Humility is the first step toward the attainment of true knowledge; it is likewise essential to development therein.

And along with this submission to God in humility of spirit, there must be a cleansing of ourselves from wickedness of life. "Lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset you." When the husbandman desires to secure a larger life for his trees and vines, he reduces them by pruning. He takes away whatever is unfavorable to the health or growth of the tree or vine. He cuts off the dead branches, and the tree or vine for a time seems very small. There is but little left. But in a short while the tree or vine begins to grow and is enlarged. It must be so with individual men as they seek the development of the higher life within their own little vineyard. "If thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for

IT IS for an everlasting encouragement to the downcast, the struggling and the lowly that the Master was a carpenter's son, who came out of despised Nazareth.

YOUR Association is about to meet. Pray the Lord to prepare you for it, to prepare you to further its objects. And do not forget that State Missions is especially in need of your prayerful sympathy.

IT SHOULD be proclaimed from the housetops that faith doesn't mean lazy waiting upon the Lord to do all things, that piety is not of itself long-faced, that humbleness is not self-disparagement, that plainness is not unkindness, that neither letters nor lip service is religion, and that only life is.

SURELY it is uncalled for, yet it seems advisable to say that the writer of the remarks on our first page is not a member of any political party, has never read the platform of any political party, and has never attended a meeting of any political party. The remarks are set forth to inform candidly and carefully.

When a religious paper's influence is wielded for a political party, it is time for it to go out of business; and it is a surety that the RECORDER will never do more or less than speak the truth "not as pleasing men, but God, which trieth our hearts."

YOU ARE probably not acquainted with the new kind of churches with a loud-roaring name that are affecting all denominations in the great cities, where enterprising and versatile and inventive men are daily trying to persuade the world that new things under the sun are easy matters. Their name is "Institutional," which means possessed of many things of this world, not, it is claimed, of that other from which came the possessions of "Legion."

Institutional churches have been known to have gymnasiums, play grounds, colleges, circulating libraries, reading-rooms, orphan asylums, restaurants, and several other attachments. Of course they do not appear to be churches except at certain hours on Sundays; and we doubt not that the churches themselves often become confused,—top-heavy, so to speak.

The human race sometimes excels itself in disregarding "the eternal fitness." These appendages are good things—in their places; but it is our firm opinion that God never purposed that they should be hitched on to his churches. And there is no reason why they should be. If a church can confer these boons upon humanity, let it do it; but let them never be made parts of a church; never let it be said of a Baptist church that it is more or less than a church of Christ. The word institutional is entirely out of place in speaking of a New Testament church.

EXCHANGES indicate that Baptists of the South are awaking to their educational interests; and, if it be true that "Education is Revelation" and that Revelation is essential to growth, they cannot be aroused too quickly.

Virginia brethren are having a sad time talking about one another and disputing a deal over the condition of their beloved Richmond College. One dilates upon one cause, and another sets forth another, when it should have been known all the while that the University of Virginia and State-aid is the trouble. And there is sufficient reason; for who would not prefer free tuition at an institution of general fame to paying the usual amount at one not so famous, not so well equipped? Richmond College cannot flourish, nay, can barely live, so long as the brethren are compelled to pay taxes for the support of institutions that compete with it. The brethren are alright, and the College is alright, but external conditions are all wrong. And there's not much use praying or fussing about it until those who work and pray for it are not compelled to destroy their own structure by enabling State-aided schools to sap its life blood.

In South Carolina the brethren are interested in a general way in their schools as they haven't been in years; and down in Georgia Dr. Gambrell is making matters lively, and Mercer is threatened with ruin in the shape of co-education.

In this State there is more interest than one would have thought possible some months ago. Not to mention here the activity against State-aid and for Christian and Popular Education, or the growing zeal for the higher education of our girls, there is reason for joy in the live condition of the high schools and academies manned by Baptists; and, it may be news to some, there are more of these schools in the hands of Baptists than ever before. They are, indeed, precious instrumentalities, and the brethren should be encouraged to keep them.

LACK OF UNITY AMONG BAPTISTS.

'Christian Union,' object of divine prayer, topic of centuries of discussion, has become a by-word. From a human point of view it is manifestly impossible in a day of sectarian envy, prejudice and strength of principle. The fact that it is impossible for these reasons, however, is the more reason why sectarian unity should be real and living. And, doubtless, envy and prejudice, as well as the more wholesome strength of principle, are forces in sectarian unity, though not at all sufficient; for it is past and present history that no sect has attained that degree of unity which should exist in bodies of human beings whose religious doctrines and aims are identical. And, indeed, if 'Christian union' has become a by-word, sectarian unity, so patently unattained, is a reproach. Surely the sects must attain to unity within themselves before they can unite as a whole, except in name; and in event of the latter the reproach would be the greater.

Without attempting to say in which of the sects lack of unity is most extensive, we may seek reasons of that lack and the remedy therefor, as it relates to Regular Missionary Baptists. It is advisable to say here that there is no peculiar lack among them, nor is the lack greater than in any other sect. There may be less reason for it because their doctrines are scriptural.

The distinct independence, the unique individuality of Baptist churches is a glorious feature of New Testament doctrine incorporated into Baptist church life. We acknowledge no creed—save the inspired Word; no master save a Christian conscience: there is no greater freedom, no nobler independence; but the possession of these gifts imposes a responsibility, than which there is nothing more sacred,—the unappreciation of which promotes lack of unity. Freedom must be used in service; independence without Divine guidance is as void as that of a comet. It is a maxim that the greater one's freedom the weightier is one's responsibility. He who had the most talents had most to be accounted for. Thus it is apparent that, if unity of action is most conducive to the furtherance of our religious convictions, which is indubitable, denominational unity of effort is a duty from which no church member has immunity.

There is truly interdependence as well as independence of Baptist churches. It is plain that co-operation of congruous forces is most powerful, and, in fact, in a time when all things are combined, is expedient and wise. There should be, first, co-operation of the individual Baptists; second, of the churches which they compose; third, of the world; and, indeed, if the first two be attained, the third, which means preaching of the gospel to every creature and making the world Baptist, is an inevitable consequence. Concentration of small forces makes general mobilization possible.

No Baptist can overlook his own or his brother's right to pursue the dictates of a Christian conscience; but, it seems to us, that if Baptists are Baptists, their consciences directed by the same Master, there can be no divergence of opinion between enough of them or of such serious import as to cause lack of unity. Either of two diverse means devised in the consciences of Christians will be too good to quibble about, if the latter seek a common end. And thus it is true that much lack of unity that is attributed to independence is due to prejudice and envy, which are altogether unchristian. Ignorance and misapprehension of what conscience dictates are other causes of independence without interdependence that may be remedied only by spread of knowledge by written and spoken word.

An utterly independent citizen, who is active in his independence, is said to be an anarchist; an utterly independent citizen, who is inactive, is merely a dormant force; the citizen who expresses his opinion for the common weal, but who conforms to the legitimate action of the majority of his fellows, is a good citizen. There are churches and church-members who have attained such utter independence that they are as anarchists, so violently destructive are they. These, however, are not many. The class that is composed of churches and church-members that are independent but utterly inactive, is larger and more troublesome. It is opportune to say that lack of unity in sects bound with creed and law is evidence that the individuality of our churches is not the cause of the utter independence of some of them or the dormancy of others. And, finally, the class that is composed of those who lend their advice for general good, who express their opinion as individuals, but who also conform to the general opinion for the common good, that class is doing the greatest work for God.

The remedies may be briefly stated. Some must be brought to realize the responsibility that accompanies freedom; others must be enlightened, and it is a great fact that information is a demand of the times; others must be taught that co-operation is most potent; and others must be aroused from indifference. These last are most important, because this number is alarmingly great. It is a class that must be renovated. There are church-members by the thousand who neither worship nor serve the Lord save by going to church Sundays; there are tens of thousands who give a little money, but do not work. They are engrossed with worldly affairs to such an extent that the Kingdom of Heaven, which should be their earliest and most frequent concern, is only their last. They need the preaching of the gospel; they need faith, spirituality, zeal, and finally, unity. The number of them that need these qualities is mighty; but every one of them should be told what their duty is, and if they fail of it knowingly, there is but one course: strip them of the name to which they are a reproach; let them not be called Christians, else that term itself will become a by-word and a reproach.

PROF. J. C. MASKE DEAD.

As the forms are being prepared for the press, the sorrowful and unexpected news comes that Prof. Maske, the valued assistant in the Schools of Latin and Greek at Wake Forest, died Monday morning, the 17th inst. Extended notice will follow.

"THE world's masters," said a scholar the other day, "have been men who were possessed"—mad with zeal. Great things are not achieved except that they who struggle for them have great faith and zeal even unto foolishness. A reasoning man stops before paramount obstacles; "one possessed" doesn't know how to stop, cannot stop. The one must see victory before he gains it, the other cares only to think that he is right, leaving the rest to God.

Seemingly overwhelming obstacles at first confront every effort towards decided betterment. The reasoning man thinks it folly to make further effort; the possessed one becomes in the popular view a "crank," and pushes on against all odds; and he or his successors finally win. Luther was one of God's ablest fools. From a human point of view he undertook hopeless, and, therefore, useless and wasteful tasks time and again; but he never faltered for long, and he moved the world at last.

Mark him who strives as one possessed; he will be heard from.

"WE HAVE got to fight the battle for religious liberty over again," one may well exclaim after reading the article by Dr. John Manning of Chapel Hill in this paper.

Dr. Manning's effort is to prove that there is an established religion in our State; and there is nothing that true Baptists condemn so heartily as an established religion, for they know that establishment of religion is unchristian and unholy, and not only this, but also inimical to their cherished blood-won freedom of conscience.

We were aware that there were people in the State who desired to have their religion established, we knew they were enjoying a species of establishment, but we scarce expect them to proclaim establishment quite yet, though, indeed, there is no accounting for presumption.

But, what if Dr. Manning should by some supernatural means prove to the conviction of us all that a religion is established in North Carolina? Would that alter the case? Our duty then would be to fight for disestablishment, and if the State University were an institution of the established religion, to fight it with all the zeal of our ancestors.

Dr. Manning will have some difficulty persuading us that there is a genuine establishment of religion in this State, except in spots; but if he does, then so much the worse for the cause which he set out to defend.

We hesitated to publish Dr. Manning's unhappy allusions to Dr. Taylor; but on consideration it seemed best to publish his communication verbatim. Our readers may be assured that Dr. Taylor will hardly be injured by them.

DO NOT BE LED FROM THE QUESTION. There is an effort to make it appear that a constitutional change and a vote by the people is necessary to abolition of State-aid to higher education. This is not true; the next Legislature will do the work if you vote for the right man.

There is another effort to prove that taxes for higher education are too small to bother about, which is a reflection upon the public's sense of justice; there is another effort, apparent in this paper, to lead us into discussion of religious establishment, toleration, etc.; there is another effort to smother the question by saying "party success" demands it. Beware of these efforts. Bring your men back to the question. Read "How Far Should a State Educate," and if they do not discuss this, if they make no effort to answer it, if they persist in talking of side issues and compromises, know that they are insulting demagogues.

Hold to fundamental principles.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

CALDWELL ASSOCIATION.

This Association met with King's Creek church ten miles from Lenoir, N. C. Bro. J. V. M'Call, who for several years has been sheriff of his county, was elected Moderator, and Bro. A. E. Nelson, the former Clerk, was re elected.

All the churches in the Association were represented, and some new churches were admitted to the body.

The church building was small, and the sessions of the Association were held in the grove. The shade moved often; then the sun was hot, the seats were hard and altogether too low for comfort. The brethren stuck to them, however, with wonderful patience and resignation. The neighborhood in which the Association met was an exceptionally good one, the people were quite orderly and listened to all the exercises with much interest.

A large number of messengers from other Associations were present. Candidates were out in full force, and made themselves most agreeable to the brethren.

We missed Dr. Durham very much in the different discussions which came before the body. The people in this section were very anxious to hear him speak on general education. The subject was spoken to by brethren Matheny and J. F. Spainhour of Boone, and others; and, so far as I could learn, every one present was opposed to the present policy of the State concerning higher education.

The report on Temperance was discussed at length. A non denominational, non-political, non-partisan temperance society is to be formed in this county soon. Of course, it will amount to nothing. Our churches are making progress in the cause of temperance, and it is to be regretted when they go into any such entangling alliances as this organization promises to be.

Home Missions was represented by Bro. Matheny. No pledges were taken, so I cannot say as to the prospect of th's work for the coming year.

Very little was pledged for State Missions, though we hope churches which did not pledge will do something for this department of work.

Most that is given in this Association for Foreign Missions is given to the new mission method, and the churches here as most others which follow this plan do very little for any other department of work.

Bro. Mills reached the Association on Friday and spoke on the Orphanage on Saturday and received a good collection.

Bro. Isaac Oxford, eighty-seven years old, is still hale and unusually active for a man of his age.

Bro. Tilley, the oldest Baptist preacher in the State, attends all the meetings of this Association. He has two little girls, aged eleven and thirteen, and he is seventy-five years older than the elder of these two daughters.

The next session of the Association will be held with the church at Lower Creek, and the time has been changed from September to October. J. C. C.

....The Roanoke Union will meet with the Rocky Mount church on Thursday night, Sept. 27th. We hope to have a full meeting and a good one.—J. K. Howell.

....Dr. Chas. H. Parkhurst has returned to New York; and he comes back from a vacation spent in Europe fully strengthened for his fight against "modern Babylon."

....Rev. L. R. Pruitt has been holding a good series of meetings in his Charlotte church. There have been about twenty professions, and he is greatly encouraged.

....Bro. H. P. Haynes, Esq., of Clyde, Haywood county, is dead. He was three score and ten years of age, and they had been lived so that he weilded good influence.

....Work and pray for temperance. The Christian people of North Carolina have a matchless opportunity to crush liquor-selling, and it will be their shame if it is not crushed.

....It is a source of much personal gratification to us that Judge James D. McIver, whose prostration we noted some time since, is able to resume his position on the Bench this week.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter reports having baptized ten converts at Mt. Vernon, Wake county, last Sunday. He is now aiding Elder O. C. Horton in a meeting in Johnson county.

....It is record now that Rum runs Romanism. Satolli denounced liquor-sellers manfully, but the latter have defied him and are not turned from their course. Rum is Rome's king.

....Rev. W. P. Hines has resigned the pastorate of West View church, Richmond. ——Rev. J. W. Mitchell has accepted the care of South Street church, Portsmouth.—Atlantic Baptist.

....The RECORDER has arranged to publish some of the essays and discussions at the late Chautauqua. From all reports our readers must have judged that they are of unusual excellence.

...."What Did Peter Mean" is the title of a tract now circulating. We are of the opinion that Peter meant what he was inspired to say, and that it is all plain enough in the New Testament.

....Dr. G. W. Sanderlin of Washington City has been supplying the pulpit of the First Baptist church of that city. He is now spending a few days at the Virginia White Sulphur Springs.

....New subscriptions are still coming in encouragingly. We know there are hundreds who will take the RECORDER on the present trial offer if the matter is presented to them in the proper way.

....In Bro. Stringfield's absence Bro. Jas. T. Pullen is working vigorously for the Lord in the meeting at the Fayetteville Street church. He is trying to reach the worst classes, and we hope he may.

....There is a tribute in this paper to Rev. J. C. Wilson of blessed memory. He was in life an incarnation of Christian simplicity and sincerity, and to the day of his death worked for the Lord. God be praised for such lives.

...."As the Lord has prospered,"—that's all that is asked of us. Think about it these harvest days. State, Home and Foreign Mission are needy even now when the poorest among us may share God's spiritual and earthly stores.

....Nine persons have been added by baptism to the Vernon Hill (Buncombe county) membership, Rev. G. W. Mays, pastor. Twenty additions were made to the church at Shaw's Creek, Henderson county, of which Bro. Gray is pastor.

...."Is there any harm in dancing" is the subject of another tract. The inspired Word of God answers that, too. Foolish questions are common. While people may read tracts, they should not do so to the neglect of the Bible. "To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." Isa. 8: 20.

....Rev. J. W. Burchett and Bro. T. B. Campbell of Wilkes county made a pleasant visit to our office last week. Bro. Burchett is pastor at Edgewood and his flock is growing. There have been ten or twelve additions lately. By the way, Bro. Campbell informed us that the church there needed financial help on its new building, and we hope some of our readers will help them.

....Along with the best workers in his church, says the Weekly, Rev. M. A. Adams of Reidsville has been doing especial work about three miles from Reidsville. The Lord was there, and twenty-three persons promised to follow him.

....Bro. W. C. Finch informs us that pastor G. W. May of Turkey Branch church was lately assisted in a series of services by Elders J. W. Sledge and A. G. Wilcox, in which the church was greatly revived and there were many penitents.

....Rev. J. V. Devenny of Wake Forest writes: "It was my pleasure on Sunday the 9th inst. to baptize five persons—four ladies and one man—into the fellowship of Corinth church, Tar River Association in the presence of a good congregation."

....The homeless wanderer—the Southern Baptist Convention—will not some one bid it welcome? Shall it be told in the land that we have raised us a "white elephant"? Washington, Richmond, Asheville, Augusta, Waco, wherefore this palpable silence?

....Prof. Collier Cobb of the State University has our thanks for an interesting fragment, "A Hymn to Apollon," reprinted from the N. C. University Magazine, and set to music. The enterprise exhibited by the Magazine is very creditable to Bro. Cobb.

....Rev. B. K. Mason has baptized three persons who have become members of Union Hill church since he became pastor of it a few weeks ago. Bro. Mason is succeeding well in his work, both as preacher and teacher. He has a good high school at Advance.

....Rev. C. E. Gower reports having held meetings in five counties this summer. Twenty five persons have been baptized and thirty-one welcomed into his churches since Sept. 1st. Bro. Gower says "the Lord is very near and precious to him in this time of work and bereavement."

....There are more girls and boys and young women and young men in North Carolina educational institutions than have ever been. This means a better North Carolina; broader, loftier, godlier. Education is revelation. We may rejoice and take courage. Agitation advertises and induces.

....State aid, with the assistance of the Governor and others, begs the question with an apologetic statement, three columns in length, given out for publication in last Sunday's papers. Of course it will be widely circulated. Something of its history and nature will appear in our next issue. State-aid must come to the question.

....Surely the establishment of the Baptist Female University is the Lord's work, or it would not receive such hearty sympathy from his people. The last doubt has been removed. The good Lord will establish it, and we are rejoicing in the privilege of being used in the work.—O. L. Stringfield.

....The success of Rev. M. V. McDuffie, whose sermon appears in this paper, is a gratification to his many North Carolina acquaintances. His church gave him a month's vacation in August, which he spent along the Jersey coast. He has lately had a call to Trenton, N. J., which he will probably decline.

....Rev. E. J. Harrell, a Wake Forest student from the Eastern part of the State, passed through Raleigh recently returning to College from a trip in Western counties, where he spent six weeks aiding Rev. J. C. Sorrels in revival meetings, in which they witnessed one hundred and fifty professions; and more than a hundred have given their names for church membership.

....Dr. Taylor of Wake Forest came in to see Raleigh brethren last week. He stated that more than 190 students had been enrolled, and that he knew of a dozen old students who would return. In numbers Wake Forest is now where it was last January. Dr. Taylor expressed himself as highly pleased with the new acquisition to the faculty, Prof. Gorrell.

....Rev. C. E. Gower came in to see us last week. He had come from his home at Lincolnton to the burial of his mother, who died in Wake county the 11th inst., her funeral being preached by Rev. A. M. Simms of Raleigh in the presence of a large congregation at Mt. Moriah church. We extend warmest sympathy to Bro. Gower and others of the family in their affliction.

....Rev. B. W. Spilman, who is now at his old home, Weldon, informs us that a protracted meeting begins there in the Baptist church the 24th. Rev. C. A. Jenkens will assist Pastor Harman. Bro. Spilman writes: "We have had two accessions to our church lately, one a young lady, the other a prominent young merchant. About $1,000 is soon to be spent remodelling our church."

....In the present animated discussion of the relation of the State to education, a timely aid may be found in a pamphlet lately published by Dr. C. E. Taylor, of North Carolina, on "How far should a State undertake to educate?" Dr. Taylor argues strongly for the leaving of higher education to private enterprise, and the reasons he presents are cogent and convincing. —Examiner (New York).

....Dr. Taylor's letter in this paper is sufficient witness to the forward movement at Wake Forest, of which we promised to write in this issue. One decisive advance remains to be commended. Sure enough entrance examinations are held there now. Any old student would have been startled to hear Prof. Sledd remark the other day that of the seventy-two young men who desired to enter certain classes in his department of English Language and Literature (more attention is directed upon the latter than ever before), only twenty two failed to make the requisite mark! They will be taught those first principles that are minus quantities in so many college graduates' stock of knowledge.

....Rev. J. W. Rose's labors in the employ of the Newbern church, we learn from the Journal, have been abundantly blessed. When he commenced his labors in his present capacity twenty-one months ago, there was not a Baptist church at any place he is serving. Now there are three churches; and the new field's activity is denoted in the statement that it has raised $140. Another church will be organized soon.

....One would infer from Dr. Winston's letter in last RECORDER, that Dr. Taylor was, in part at least, the author of the "Apex bill" introduced in the Legislature two years ago. No one knows better than Dr. Winston that this is not correct. Dr. Taylor's position, stated in a letter to the Trustees of the University, published at the time, and also to the joint committee of the Legislature, was that mutual concessions should be made. Dr. Shearer was the author of the Apex bill.

....Dr. J. H. Gorrell, lately chosen to the department of Modern Languages at Wake Forest College, passed through Raleigh on his way thither the 11th inst. Bro. Gorrell appears scarcely twenty-one, though it is barely possible that one who has achieved the high degrees that he has is less than twenty-six years old. He has the appearance of a scholar, deliberate but unaffected in his manner; and there is a brightness in his eye that denotes determination, energy and straightforwardness.

....It should be understood that we are making our present special rate for the RECORDER only on trial. We believe that ninety per cent. of those who read it four months will decide not to do without it; otherwise the special offer will not be of advantage to us. It will do good anyway to reach as many people as possible in this critical year; so whether there is probability of their becoming permanent subscribers or not, send us all the new names you can for the subscribers' sake,—the money later, if not convenient now.

... Full account of the action of the joint committees appointed by the Southern Baptist Convention and the Northern Baptists relative to co operating in work among colored people and Indians in the United States, which met last week at Fortress Monroe, will appear in our next issue. Hon. J. L. Howard was chairman, and O. F. Gregory and N. E Wood secretaries. The committees agreed to recommend co-operation. No boundaries of either organization's work were established. The meeting was harmonious and fairly successful.

...."We consent," writes Bro. J. J. Taylor of Brazil in another column; and by this time Bro. Samuel J. Porter and wife, who left for Brazil last July a year ago are near to their native land, much to the joy of their friends, despite that the early return is due to Sister Porter's ill health. Sister Porter's return was advised by two competent physicians, and it was necessary that Bro. Porter accompany her. In a private note Bro. Porter says "it is our firm intention to return to Brazil just as soon as Mrs. Porter's health will permit." They will be welcomed back home, and many will be the prayers for Sister Porter's recovery and restoration to the work.

....Rev. J. O. Alderman writes from Concord: "I am busy now. The first Sunday I baptized for Bro. Crabtree at Cold Water; the second Sunday I baptized in my church here in Concord; and next (the third) Sunday I go to baptize some converts at China Grove, and to preach the week following. In the meantime I have a large class of children at work learning to sing meeting me at 9:30 a. m. Sundays. Also I am preaching a series of sermons on "What Baptists Believe" at my morning services. My people seem to appreciate these sermons, for they have been giving me large congregations to hear them. On last Sunday morning I preached the second of the series to a crowded house, although the evangelist, Mr. Schoolfield, was conducting a crowded service at the same time in the Methodist church. We expect Dr. Pritchard to preach a week for us in October, and are looking for great things."

....It is a pleasure to see that Prof. Sledd, of Wake Forest, will require his English classes to write up legends, traditions and historical incidents of North Carolina. It is an excellent idea. We do not know to just what extent North Carolina history is taught in our schools and colleges, or to what extent a North Carolina spirit is inculcated in the pupils and students, but it is to be feared that this is neglected to some extent for what are considered more important, but but which are, in fact, far less important, studies. If we do not take care of our own history it is certain that no one will take care of it for us, and there is no way of fixing it in the minds of those who are hereafter to become the State so sure as by teaching it to the children and to the young men and women in the schools and colleges. In this way we may create that which the State so much needs: a distinctive North Carolina sentiment. It would pe a good igea if the Legislature should make a law requiring that the public schools should be opened every morning with the singing of 'Carolina.'"—Charlotte Observer.

Hol For the Southern Bap. Theo. Seminary.

Dear Recorder:—Will you please announce in your columns to those expecting to come to the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, owing to special reasons, no general arrangement can be made with the railroads for students coming this way? Most of the students, however, can either themselves, or through friends, get ministerial rates from their homes to Louisville, as nearly all of the roads are accustomed to sell tickets to ministers at special rates. When the time comes for such students to return to their homes, we can no doubt make special arrangements for the return trip, as we have been able to heretofore. This is the best that can be done this year.

Very truly, E. H. KNAFOOT.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 13, 1894.

"Consentimos" (We Consent).

Such was the message that was flashed over the wire some two hours ago. Thus myself and wife as members of the Rio Janeiro Mission gave our consent for Bro. Samuel J. Porter and wife to withdraw and return home. He and Bro. Bagby both had written me for this formal response. How indescribably sad for a young man, who has studied for years to prepare himself for a work, to be obliged to turn his back and retrace his steps, just as he is beginning to get a little proficiency in the desired occupation! A year ago Bro. and Sister Porter came to the Mission all full of hope and courage, vigorous in the consciousness of beginning in the glorious work of preaching salvation to the lost in a truly heathen land. They brought fresh courage to tired workers, and reinstilled new animation to drooping spirits. With a will unexcelled Bro. Porter dived into the language, and so far mastered it that he was preaching in about six months. The verdict of all who came in contact with him was, that he would soon be a worker of the first class. Less than one year ago, Sister Porter who had never been sick, took a severe cold that settled on her lungs, and it left its effects, whose ravages bring sorrow to the heart of all friends here and at home, and above all to that of Bro. Porter himself, so devoted to his work. Let all his friends pray that what he so much desires shall be accomplished. How can Brazilian Missions prosper while so few workers are permitted to remain on the field?

Yours for the sake of the Lord of the harvest, J. J. TAYLOR.

Rio Janeiro, Brazil, Aug. 14.

Wake Forest Letter.

One hundred and ninety one students have registered up to date. Of these, an unusually large number are new men. We know definitely of enough students, old and new, yet to arrive, to carry the numbers up to two hundred. We are well ahead of last year's registration, but are still far behind the registration of corresponding date in '91-'92, before the sudden drop in our numbers. Had the danger signal not been raised when it was, there would probably not be a hundred students here now. Temporarily, the College has been to some extent saved in its patronage by the protests which its friends have felt compelled to make.

The quality of the students is no less gratifying than their number. My colleagues tell me that they are better prepared than usual. It is an inspiring sight every morning to look into the faces of so many earnest-hearted young men when they are gathered in the chapel for the religious services of the day. Not a few of these have already proved their ability. Very many of them will be heard from in the coming years.

Professor Maske was taken sick in Richmond county, but came to the College, hoping that he would be able to meet his classes at the opening of the session. In this he was disappointed. His work is, for the time being, carried by his colleagues. The last reports from his bedside are rather more hopeful.

It was a great pleasure, last Tuesday, to welcome among us Prof. J. H. Gorrell, who, after taking the B. A. and M. A. degrees at Washington and Lee University, received his Ph. D. degree at Johns Hopkins University last June. He is a valuable acquisition to the College. He is one of the foremost scholars of his age in the South, is a devout Christian, and has had experience as an instructor in College classes.

A limited amount of work in the School of Law is now allowed as an "elective" study for the B. A. and M. A. degrees. This plan, introduced into Columbia Univ., New York, several years ago, has been found to work admirably. There is no reason why this much of the Law course should not receive as much recognition as a culture study as some other studies which have long had place among the electives. The study of Blackstone's Commentaries and the Principles of Evidence, under competent instruction, cannot but be helpful to any educated gentleman, whatever may be his calling in life. It ought to be well understood, however, that students offering for degrees will be encouraged to pursue this study only in their last years of College residence, and that this change will not let down in the slightest degree the high standard of graduation. Recitations in Law will count three hours a week out of a total of sixty five hours a week (during four years) required for the B. A. and eighty hours a week (during five years) for the M. A. degree. This arrangement has met the cordial approval of all the lawyers with whom I have conferred and is likely to be very popular when it is generally understood.

Prof. Gulley, who has charge of the Law Department, will also teach the classes in Political Economy and Constitutional Government. We are fortunate in being able to secure the services of such a man.

The water-works are now nearly completed. That they were not done before the session opened was due entirely to the failure of the plumber who had taken the contract to come up to time.

The thoughts of the people of the State are now turned toward educational questions to a more general extent, probably, than ever before. Let us all see to it that the widespread discussions shall be helpful and not harmful to any educational interest. I shall be greatly disappointed if the outcome shall not be the greatest educational revival that the State has ever known. Are there not indications that it has already begun?

There ought to be discussion. But why should it not be courteous and, as far as possible, impersonal? No good whatever can come from personalities. Much harm may come from indulgence in them. Some writers in secular papers and some speakers have felt themselves called upon to throw mud at the writer of some papers which made a plea for the voluntary system. None of it he hopes, will be likely to stick. He certainly is not going to throw any back. Let us try to keep our tempers, and, in defending Christian Education, let us not forget to show a Christian spirit.

Southern Baptist Convention.

WHERE WILL IT HOLD ITS NEXT SESSION?

This question, it will be remembered, is to be determined by the three Boards of the Convention. All invitations from any church or city must be sent to the Sunday-school Board at Nashville, and should be in hand by the first of October. It would be well if such applications should state definitely what accomodations and advantages can be offered for the entertainment of the body. Brethren contemplating sending invitations will please do so promptly.

A Correction.

In the article headed "Church Troubles," published in the RECORDER of Sept. 12th, the types made the sentence at the beginning to read thus: "We have a right to expect all persons who profess Christianity to live in peace with all other religions." Instead of "religions" it should read "persons." The Christian is the opposer of other religions, and cannot live in peace with all men.

JNO. S. HARDAWAY.

Judge R. W. Winston.

A just judge. What higher tribute could be paid to a man? Judge Winston has been presiding over the Superior Court of this county for a week, and this is what all the people say of him—that he is a just judge. There is a divinity which hedges them about—the men who sit upon the rights of the people. The Observer gives its compliments to his honor. He has held the scales of justice evenly, like him who wears the white flower of a blameless life.—Charlotte Observer.

Mr. T. C. Harris of Raleigh announces in this paper that he is prepared to do map, plan, scenery and commercial engraving. Bro. Stringfield had the cut of the Baptist Female University done through him and our readers know it was well done. A good engraving establishment is needed in our State, and now that newspaper illustrations are becoming so popular, there is a field for it. Write to Mr. Harris.

We call attention to the advertisement of the Southern Building and Loan Association (Raleigh Branch). The Southern is sixty-six months old, and is the largest Association in America as well as the oldest in the South. We would advise those of our patrons wanting to save some of their earnings (and the only way to save is to make a beginning), to call on C. C. McDonald, Secretary and Treasurer of Raleigh Branch, and take five or more shares. You will never regret it. No better or safer investment is to be had.

thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee; for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell." We understand by this that we must not hesitate to make any sacrifice in order to be right with God. We must hold on to any sin no matter how dear it be to us. If it be to us as the right hand or the right eye, it must be put away if we would be in favor with God. The pruning process is necessary many times during life. "Wherefore, laying aside all malice and all guile, and hypocrisies, and envies, and all evil speakings, as new born babes desire the pure milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby. If so be ye have tasted that the Lord is good." "And unto your faith add virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity." The Christian life is an active life. We must not only cease to do evil, but learn also to do well. Think right thoughts, and have a settled purpose and a high aim in life. "For as a man thinketh, so is he." "The mind is the standard of the man." A man is no bigger than his purposes, and these may be too low and even beneath our dignity as intellectual creatures and high destiny as immortal beings. Pursuits you know which are perfectly proper in creatures destitute of reason may be very culpable in those who not only have reason but are capable of enjoyments above the range of reason itself. A man should have noble aims and high ideals ever before him, even though his high ideals often mock him, and never praise or flatter him. They will help to develop and ennoble him. We want bigger hearts, bowels of compassion, big plans of missions and benevolence, large faith and bright hopes. Said Wolsey to Cromwell:

"Let all the ends thou aimest at be thy country's,
Thy God's and truth's; then if thou fall'st, O Cromwell,
Thou fallest a blessed martyr.
* * * * *
To thine ownself be true. And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man."

Fill life with good deeds and noble purposes, for "we live in deeds, not years, in thoughts, not breaths, in feelings, not in figures on a dial. We should count time by heart-throbs. He most lives who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

"So live that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach the grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

A Vacation in North Carolina.

Dear Recorder:—I am just home from a month's trip to North Carolina and Virginia, the homes of my wife and myself previous to our marriage. Starting from Chattanooga, our first stop was in the city of Bristol, Tenn. and Virginia, where I was pastor of the First church from 1885 to 1891. The church here ranks among the strongest in the State. Rev. G. S. Williams is the efficient pastor. On an eminence overlooking the entire city is located the "Southwest Virginia Female Institute." The building is decidedly the best known to the writer in the South. These Bristol Baptists deserve great praise for the liberal part they have taken in this great enterprise.

From this point we went direct to Mt. Airy, the home of our earlier life, and still the home of our aged father and mother, the former eighty-nine, and the latter eighty-eight years old. It was our privilege to baptize our father into the fellowship of the Mt. Airy Baptist church before we left. He had been a professor for sixty years. Alas! how many of the Lord's children are asleep outside of any organized church.

While here we had the pleasure of meeting Rev. Rufus Ford of Newbern, N. C., who was supply for the church during the month of August. The days we spent together will never be forgotten.

From Mt. Airy we start to Martinsville, Va., by way of the "Pinacle," a beautiful little town just at the base of the famous Pilot mountain. Twelve years ago, we came from our home at Cascade, Va., and dedicated the Baptist church at this place. As there was a protracted meeting in progress conducted by our younger brother, C. C. Haymore, in which he had the assistance of Rev. J. H. Lamberth, whom we had known other years, we stopped over and spent a day and night. We have heard little if any better preaching than Bro. Lamberth did. God bless him: he is capable of doing great good. Our stay over for twenty-four hours at the Pinacle will be remembered as one of the bright places sojourned at in our earthly pilgrimage. The friends we made here from Wake Forest College will ever remain fresh in our memory. We hope to meet them again.

But we must go, and directly we are in Martinsville, the greatest tobacco town in the world for its size. We begin to feel at home, as in this county we were married and lived for seventeen years. After a little while we are off for the old country home. After a few days we feel as if we had only been away for a short while and were really back home.

The Pine Ridge Association is about to meet in its eighth anniversary—almost in sight. What an opportunity to see the people, as these were present from two to three thousand each day. This is the old home and church of the Taylor family, made famous as a family of preachers. The father, Rev. D. G. Taylor, and four sons and son-in-law are preachers. The father and the youngest of the sons have gone to their reward. Rev. J. Lee, the oldest, is pastor of the old home church.

What an opportunity this Association afforded us to meet old friends! This was a great meeting, and doubtless will never be forgotten. Of what was said and done we could say much, but we must close by stating we are back in Chattanooga looking after the affairs of the Central church. Our old friend and co laborer, C. G. Jones of the First church, is away on his vacation, and we cannot restrain a feeling of loneliness.

R. D. HAYMORE.

Literary.

Sermons in Song is particularly well adapted for use in evangelistic services, its title indicating the nature of the hymns the book contains. It is edited by Grant C. Tullar and Isaac H. Meredith. (Chicago, Ill., Meyer & Bro.

The September number of the Arena, the most aggressive of magazines of political and social nature, contains an admirable article by Associate Justice Walter Clark of North Carolina on the election of Senators and the President by direct vote. We hope to review it later.

Honey Out of the Rock and Little Branches are two new song books. The former is compiled by W. S. Nickle and George J. Meyer, and contains a good selection of hymns and tunes, both and old, for use in gospel meetings and other religious services. The latter book is specially adapted for use in the primary department of the Sunday-school. (Chicago, Ill., Meyer & Bro.

The current Century Magazine comes with a wealth of illustrations and contributions, among which latter is some unpublished correspondence of E A. Poe, two entertaining and instructive papers pertaining to education, "School Excursions in Germany," by Dr. J. M. Rice, and "Playgrounds for City Schools." The fiction is by Mrs. Burton Harrison, Marion Crawford, George A. Hibbard, F. Hopkinson Smith and Miss Anna Fuller. "Open Letters" and "Topics of the Time" are always interesting.

Scribner's Magazine—that typical exponent of one of the greatest publishing firms in the world—comes to our table for the current month well laden with choice contents that cannot but be of pleasure and profit to the reader. The frontispiece, "An Unlucky Meeting," is fine. "Bar Harbor" is just such an excellent sketch as is characteristic of Mr. Marion Crawford. "A Third Shelf of Old Books" possesses unique attraction; "The People of the Cities" is another instalment of the "American type" series; the verse is good; the illustrations are up to the usual high standard.

As a monthly magazine for young folks, St. Nicholas fills its avocation. In the September number there are stories and sketches and articles of scientific and general nature, and some amusing verse,—good illustrations throughout. (The Century Company, New York), $3.00 a year.

Carmina for the Sunday school. Compiled and edited by Rev. L. W. Mudge, D. D., and Rev. H. B. Turner. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York.

As a general hymnal worthy of and suited to the occasions of Sunday-school life, this work is, so far as we are acquainted, without an equal. It possesses good and convenient shape, is well and neatly bound, and is excellently printed. The music accompanies the songs, all of which are of high order of merit.

Semple's History of the Rise and Progress of the Baptists in Virginia; by Rev. G. W. Beale. Richmond, Va., Pitt & Dickinson, publishers. Price, $1 50.

In Semple's History, Virginia has long had what North Carolina greatly needs—a chronicle of her Baptist rise and progress, a monument to Baptist piety and zeal, which might serve as conservator of other generations. In Beale's revision of Semple's noble work, Virginia has a model State Baptist history, a model that we hope will ere long inspire one of our several capable brethren.

It doesn't require an artist to make Virginia Baptist history interesting; it is interesting "in the rough," as Semple and Beale have preserved it; and to both the curious and the student it will prove very instructive.

Brethren Pitt and Dickinson and Beale and Virginia Baptists—at home and abroad—have our congratulations.

Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we, are either gray-headed, white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"

"In 1868, my affianced was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day. Our Mississippi Letter.

Throughout our State there is the finest prospect for good crops that we have had for several years. Indeed several entire and partial failures had brought agricultural and financial prospects down to the very lowest point. No tobacco is grown in the State and the staple crops are corn and cotton, though more than ever before planters are diversifying crops and are growing everything possible for home consumption. In consequence of this prospect for good harvests, the people generally are full of hope and are in good spirits. This hopefulness was apparent in our recent excellent Convention in the little city of Winona, at which a large crowd gathered notwithstanding the prevalence of the great "strike" at the time. Since that time a revival spirit has characterized almost all of the churches. There are nine hundred or more churches in the State, and it is safe to say that during the past three months four fifths of them have held special revival services. Many of these have been meetings of unusual interest and power, and numbers have "put on Christ in baptism," many wanderers have been restored and members have been greatly refreshed and revived. Methodist and Baptists have been specially active in these revival efforts: the former have made a great deal more noise about what has been accomplished by their "church," the latter have made less fuss and have not so widely trumpeted their zeal, but have secured more solid and possibly larger numerical results.

Among the rural Methodist organizations principally the "holiness" people have been unusually active. In a few localities where they have secured a footing they have been rampant in their endeavor to create a wild excitement; and they have persuaded many to seek and profess to obtain the "second blessing" of perfect holiness. These meetings have been conducted principally by men and women who have left home and home ties and are wandering over the State delivering harangues to the people wherever they can find hearers. In some cases their meetings have been "confusion confounded," sometimes sixty shouting at the top of their voices at one time. Their victims are chiefly among the ignorant and fanatical of the Methodists, but they have secured some of a similar character from the Baptists. The leaders are woefully ignorant of the Bible except such passages as speak of "holiness," "perfection," etc, which are gathered together in their periodicals.

Is not this a "wind of doctrine," a delusions of the Devil, to lead astray the unstable and unwary?

PERSONAL MENTION.

We have recently lost a good man by removal from our State. Dr. J. H. Boyett, the able and genial Vicksburg pastor, has resigned his charge and goes to Georgetown, Ky. He was succeeding finely in his field, having gained such a hold upon the people of the "Hill City" that they paid him a larger salary than they had ever paid before, and larger perhaps than any other Baptist pastor in the State received. He will live in Georgetown and engage in evangelistic work for which he has peculiar gifts and in which he has been peculiarly successful.

Dr. Z. T. Leawell, the able President of Worthington Female Institute, Carrollton, has resigned the presidency of the Institute and is now ready for other work. He has been called to the pastorate of the Clinton church, but his decision has not yet been announced. It is hoped that he will accept this pastorate, for although it is one of peculiar importance and difficulty his friends feel that he is peculiarly qualified for filling it. Dr. Leawell has for some weeks been publishing in the Record a series of interesting historical papers, called "Sixteen Years Among Mississippi Baptists."

Rev. V. H. Nelson has been elected by the trustees to succeed D. Leawell in the presidency of Worthington Institute. Bro. Nelson is a man of energy and ability, wielding a fine influence throughout the fertile Yazoo and Mississippi Delta which is directly tributary to this school. The trustees, while regretting to lose Dr. Leawell, feel themselves quite fortunate in securing so excellent and able a successor. The prospects of the school seem bright. Will give you other items of interest later. CALAMUS.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is no quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free.

SUBJECT FOR SEPTEMBER: BRAZIL.

"Proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Missionaries, 15; native assistants, 11; stations, 32; churches, 11; membership, 519; baptisms, 159. Contributions, $1,230.

STUDY TOPICS.—The future of Brazil among the world's great nations. The recent attempted revolution. Nominal religious freedom. Great need of missionary reinforcement. Bright outlook as in all Romish countries where the thoughtful are repudiating Catholicism.

The Need of the Nations.

What is the one great need of the nations? Doubtless the gospel; but the gospel as Christ, its founder, preached it, not by words only, but by works only. "If ye believe not my words, believe the works," said he.

In reading the life of the Son of God, as set forth in the Gospels, one is impressed with the fact of the Saviour's care for the whole being of man, body and soul. He was anointed to "preach the gospel to the poor," but also to "give sight to the blind," etc., and true to his divine character and commission, "he went about doing good;" the result being that "great multitudes followed him," and "he healed them all." He also sent out eighty-two men, and each and all of them were to "heal the sick" and "preach the gospel." He told his hearers of the "place" he was going to prepare for their future enjoyment; but he also pointed to the lilies, the sparrows, and the very hairs of their heads, to illustrate his Father's care for their perishing bodies in the here and now, and asked, "Are ye not much better than they?"

What a lesson, too, was and is conveyed in the case of the Good Samaritan, the priest and Levite, and the wounded man who "fell among thieves"! The priest and Levite so occupied with the spiritual needs of men as to "pass by on the other side" the wounded man! Strange to say, although he told the story of the Good Samaritan, and bade those not possessed of miraculous power to do as he did by using what they had, the Church of Christ has largely lost sight of that fact.

And yet the lesson has been before the church repeatedly, as in the experience of Dr. John Thomas, Dr. Carey's predecessor and co-worker in India, Dr. Peter Parker in China, Dr. David Livingston in Africa, as well as many more.

It is a matter for encouragement, however, that to-day the church is opening her eyes to these things, and that, instead of only forty medical missionaries the world over forty years ago, there are now some four hundred, eighty of whom are women.

And yet it may well be asked concerning them, "What are these among so many?" The working force is not more than three hundred and fifty among one thousand millions or more—an average of one to three millions—whereas in the United States there are over one hundred and twenty thousand physicians to sixty-five millions, or one to every five or six hundred.

We have our almshouses, hospitals, and lunatic asylums, but such places are not to be found in heathendom. In all China up to the present time not a single lunatic asylum exists, even as a Christian beneficence. Chained as dogs to a kennel, buried alive, or tortured is the lot of lunatics there. But some may ask, "What need is there for medical missionaries; have the heathen no doctors of their own?" Indeed they have doctors of a kind. The dark places of the earth," though, are still "the habitations of cruelty," and of such cruelty as may scarcely be mentioned, much less appear in print. Think of the amputation of a limb by means of a chopper, and the stump thrust into boiling pitch to stop the bleeding, and that all without ether or chloroform! Yet this is being done in Arabia. Think of a child's hand being cut off her body to make a broth for a dying parent! Yet this is done in Korea. Think of women, after maternity, being literally roasted for days before a fire until, as one lady missionary in Siam testified, "this woman's body looks like roasted pork." Think, again, of the witch doctor in Africa, who does not attempt to cure disease, but only to find out who caused it, and then tortures that one in a variety of ways, —by slow roasting for forty hours; by being cut in pieces while yet alive and fed to fishes; or "staked out" on the ground near ferocious animals or ants, who eat the flesh off the body, but not too quickly, life generally lasting for forty-eight hours! Yes, they have doctors indeed—doctors with a vengeance! So thousands, yes, millions, perish year by year. Think of the poor creatures in China rubbing images of mules or other animals into holes, as they seek in vain to get relief from their pains by applying the affected part of the body to the corresponding part of the animal in the market place.

Think of a so-called "doctor" in India rubbing the ends of the broken bones in a poor girl's leg daily to effect a cure! Of a man in North Africa, suffering from rheumatism, having a hole burned through his foot with red-hot irons "to let the disease out!"

Does it not make one shudder to hear of these things? If so, what must it be to suffer and bear them? And thousands upon thousands are sending up their cries to heaven for relief for their pains.

Space will not permit further dilation upon this aspect of the subject; enough may have been said, however, to show even persons of only juvenile years and intelligence that the man or woman who can go to these people with the knowledge and relief afforded in Christian lands by scientific medicine can and will exert a power and occupy a place that nothing short of the miraculous could give them; indeed, the practice of surgery and medicine is to them miraculous. To give a person sight who has been blind for twenty years or more, to put a patient to sleep, remove a tumor of thirty or more pounds in weight, or a diseased and rotting limb, certainly is to work miracles in their sight.

No wonder that where the missionary who only went with "the Word," even though it be the Word of God, could not get an entrance among the people, and would be driven out, the man who went with healing for the poor suffering body was welcomed by all, and his message also received.

How can they do it? is a question that has often occurred to the mind of the writer concerning those who go out to these lands and find themselves surrounded by scores or hundreds of poor suffering ones to whom they can afford no relief as they clamor for it. True, they can tell them of that "land beyond," where "there shall be no more pain"—blessed truth to us!—but what to those people? They know nothing, they care nothing about a future state; they do care about the present one, and they may well ask those who tell them of the future, "Why not give some of that promised relief here and now?" This the Saviour did.

How can they tell these people of the Saviour who went about "healing all manner of diseases," and yet do nothing to relieve their pains? Surely they must omit references to such experiences in the Saviour's life, and not tell of the care of the Heavenly Father, who feeds the birds and clothes the lilies. To be in the midst of such suffering and be unable to relieve it must surely be the most excruciating torture to the heart of a truly Christian man or woman, while to go among such sufferers, dry their tears, cure their diseases, relieve their pains, and save their lives is a luxury angels would like to enjoy.

How can they do it? Well, many of them cannot stay long at it. They return back home to get the knowledge and means to give relief, as many known to the writer have done, and then they gladly go back again to their fields of labor. Not only so, but think of the missionaries themselves, hundreds of miles from a doctor, wives and children with them. How much of time and money has been sacrificed and valuable lives lost cannot here be told. The trading companies of Africa, or India, or China see to it that their employees are medically provided for, and the Chinese government pays large salaries to physicians to care for only four or five of their European or American agents stationed at a port. Shall the children of the world be more pitiful, as well as more wise, than the children of light?

How can they do it? may also be asked concerning those who turn a deaf ear to the calls made upon them to "help the helpless." How can they live in luxury, adorned with diamonds, and hoarding their wealth, and know of this terrible suffering and need, and neither give nor do anything to stop it, and yet call themselves Christians, followers of him "who, though he was rich"—how rich!—"yet for our sakes became poor!" How will they meet him by and by and hear the welcome "Come ye blessed. I was sick, and ye visited me!" "Will they hear those words?" may well be asked.

In view of the facts herein stated, it is evident that many thousands of lives have been lost, in addition to all the suffering endured, that might have been saved by the use of such means as we have in our possession. The question arises, "Who is responsible? and of what crime are they guilty?"

There are many who will ask and argue as to the future fate and state of the heathen who will not lift a finger to alter and ameliorate their present terrible suffering. What a mockery! Let us leave the future with him who has said, "Go, preach the gospel to every creature;" but meantime let us preach, and teach, and heal even as he and his disciples did; so shall we really "follow him," and become "fishers of men."

Is it not passing strange that, in view of these facts, teachings, and truths, that in all "this round world" there does not yet exist a medical missionary college where young men and women can be fully trained and educated? It is hoped, however, that this will not long continue; some are hoping, working, giving, and praying to this end; and surely he who has touched such hearts so to do will also touch other hearts who may give of their wealth to this end.

We have our many theological seminaries and various other schools for Christians of different denominations, and yet not one medical missionary college for all of them. Will you not help by your prayers, and ask, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" and "whatsoever he saith unto you, do it."—Geo. D. Dowkontt, M. D., in Missionary Review.

From John Manning, LL. D., of Chapel Hill.

Editor Recorder:—In your issue of the 5th inst., appears the following:

"K. G. Averitt has replied through the Progressive Farmer to Dr. Taylor's articles on State aid. So has Dr. Manning in the Observer.—Charity and Children.

You mean these children have had something to say on the subject. We are sure neither of them has attempted to refute or answer any argument in Dr. Taylor's entire article. Mr. Averitt made a puerile 'plea for higher education,' holding that Dr. Taylor didn't wish the University to be endowed; Dr. Manning overlooked the fact that Dr. Taylor's argument on the question of the State and religion is based on the Constitution, not on what Dr. Taylor as a Christian gentleman would have taught in every institution."

My article in the News and Observer, to which you allude in the above, was based entirely upon our Constitution and laws. I did not quote the articles of the Constitution, but I stated that our Constitution and laws contained certain provisions. Does any one controvert it?

Art. 1, Sec. 26, of our Constitution is the article on religious liberty: "All men have a natural and inalienable right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences, and no human authority should in any case whatever control or interfere with the right of conscience."

Sec. 27 of the same Article reads: "The people have a right to the privileges of education, and it is the duty of the State to guard and maintain that right."

So you see, religious liberty and State education go hand in hand in the Declaration of Rights. The State must not interfere with the one, and must maintain the other.

Art. 2, Sec. 24: "Each member of the General Assembly, before taking his seat, shall take an oath," &c., to support the Constitution, &c.

Art. 3, Sec. 4: "The Governor must take oath," &c.

Art. 6, Sec. 2: No man can vote until he registers; no one can register unless he takes an oath.

Sec. 4: Every officer, before entering upon the duties of his office, must take an oath, which oath closes with the words "so help me, God." This applies to all State and county officers.

Sec. 5: "The following classes of persons shall be disqualified for office. First, all persons who shall deny the being of Almighty God," &c.

Art. 1, Sec. 1: "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall be encouraged."

What religion is here referred to, Buddhist, Mahommedan, or Christian? Certainly Christian. What schools? Certainly the Public, for this is the Article establishing the Public schools, the University, &c.

Art. 11, Sec. 7: "Beneficent provision for the poor, the unfortunate and orphan, being one of the first duties of a civilized and Christian State, the General Assembly shall," &c.

By these several sections of the Constitution, not only is Almighty God recognized and his aid invoked, but no one who denies his being is qualified to be elected to any office, and the Constitution declares the State to "be a civilized and Christian State."

How, then, can it be an invasion of religious liberty, under our Constitution, to teach the being of Almighty God, and man's relation to him, which is religion, or to teach Christianity in the Public schools? And can the Public schools be colorless as to religion?

This colorless religion argument not only drives the Bible and Christianity from the Public schools, but all chaplains from the army, the navy, the penitentiary, poor-house, and from all asylums and all reformatories maintained at the public expense.

I am not concerned with what Dr. Taylor as a Christian gentleman would have taught in every institution, but I am concerned to prevent the assassination of our Public schools, from the University down to the common schools, by excluding the Bible and Christianity from them, under the pretense that teaching them violates the great principle of religious liberty as declared in our Constitution.

The descendants of the sturdy Baptists who helped to frame our ship of State must be greatly shocked to learn that their ancestors had done their work so poorly.

I am concerned, greatly concerned, that the good name and fame of North Carolina shall not be imperilled by this untimely attack on her Public schools and on her ancient University. This campaign against higher education is without a parallel in the history of Protestant civilization, is against public morals, and, if successful, fatal to the growth and material development of the State.

Our Constitution, instead of prohibiting, enjoins the teaching of the being of Almighty God and of Christianity in our Public schools. There can be, therefore, no conflict between them and "what Dr. Taylor as a Christian gentleman would have taught in every institution." The good Doctor, therefore, may rest in peace. Thus far I have quoted only from the Constitution.

The statutes avoid all contracts made on the "Lord's day, commonly called Sunday," in a man's ordinary calling, requires all jurors to take an oath, and disqualify any person from being a witness who does not believe in the existence of Almighty God, and in a state of rewards and punishments. The State has no right to control religious opinion or belief—a man may believe or disbelieve what he pleases, but the State does control conduct, and compels all to obey the laws.

It tolerates all religious belief. It does not surrender its distinctive Christian character.

It can make no laws to aid any particular denomination or creed, but it announces its belief in the being of Almighty God and in our Lord Jesus Christ, by requiring every voter, juror and witness to invoke His aid, and declares that no one who denies His being can be eligible to office, and commands every one to a decent observance of the Lord's day.

Dr. Taylor's paternal argument is as completely at variance with our Constitution and laws as this "colorless religion argument," but I cannot consider it now, as this paper is already too long.

The Constitution cannot be amended except as provided in Art. 13, Secs. 1 and 2, and can any sane man expect to get a two thirds vote of each House of the General Assembly to call a Convention, or a three fifths vote of each House to amend the provisions I have quoted.

If Dr. Taylor is to be judged by his pamphlet, I fear that he has not been with us long enough either to understand the conservative, religious character of our people, or to be proud of our traditions, or to love our Constitution.

In conclusion: Is it not a little remarkable that for one hundred years, no such argument against our Public schools has been suggested, and that it has been left to the Rev. Dr. Taylor, President of Wake Forest College, to make it professedly in the interest of the non-Christian classes of our citizens, who are making no complaint themselves, and who are heartily supporting all of our Public schools, and particularly the University.

The Doctor calls loudly for some Jew or Turk to test the question in the courts, but he will have to look elsewhere for his plaintiff. Yours, &c., JOHN MANNING.

Chapel Hill, Sept. 10, 1894.

Roxobel Church

Dear Recorder:—We had a very precious meeting here last week, and had a time of refreshing from the Lord's presence.

We met in gracious weather, and though brethren had their fodder to pull, yet most of them contrived to do that in the morning, and attend our meeting evening and night—"diligent in business, serving the Lord."

Through the labors of our Ladies' Aid Society, we had a pleasant church to meet in. We have remodelled the interior, have a chancel with stately columns and lofty arch painted in marble, have made anew the benches, and painted the church outside and in, and now we have a comely and comfortable place of worship, an amiable tabernacle. The ladies had just laid down the carpets and put matting in the aisles. The latter is not so much a luxury as a necessity. I have heard of a country minister in Scotland who, when visiting at the farm house of one of his parisioners one night, was asked by the farmer's wife if he would read and pray with the family and farm-hands before supper or after. He said he would just go on with the exercises, and if she would go into the kitchen and be getting ready, he would know when to stop by the skirling of the frying pan. That is something like the manner in which many of the brethren know when to worship in the church. When they meet under the big oak on Sunday morning, they have much to say to each other. It is true we have a good bell to announce that service is about to begin, but somehow they have got so used to the bell, it doesn't impress them, and then there is always just another word to say on the crops or the "silver question." But when they hear the "skirling" of the first hymn, then they form procession, and up the aisle they march, in Indian file and heavy tread, the oldest brethren heading straight for the "amen corner," and you can imagine it is disturbing to the worship. The broadest limits and even plain speaking couldn't suffice to work a change, so the ladies thought the best way to take the wind out of their sails was to put down thick matting in the aisles.

Our dear Bro. Saunders of Murfreesboro was with us and preached the gospel faithfully and powerfully. Our young Timothy, "my own son," also came in from a meeting at Rolesville before the end, and was right helpful in our meeting. It was a happy meeting and the Lord was present with us—"not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

It was bright sunshine last Sunday morning, the banks of the brook lined with trees and eager spectators, and under skies of azure beauty I baptized thirteen. One was restored, and about half a dozen others professed, some of whom, at least, will be baptized. Faithfully yours,

ARCHIBALD CREE.

Roxobel, Aug. 31, 1894.

A lot of English fanatics are reported to have come to America to investigate the charges of the Wells woman of cruel treatment of the negro at the South. They came persuaded that the women had told the truth; but it will make little difference at what conclusion they come to. We do not want fanatics and lunatics among our citizens.

The record for a mile in harness was lowered to two minutes, one and a half seconds last week at Terre Haute, Ind., by Robert J, pacer. The trotting record for one mile is two minutes, four seconds; and is held by four horses. The trans Atlantic record has been broken several times lately. It is now held, going and coming, by the Lucania, whose time was five days, eight hours and twenty-five minutes.

FEEDING THE BABY.

Much is written at the present day about the care and feeding of infants by people whose only capability for dealing with the subject is a fertile brain, and whose only aim is to appear in print; every mother knows how unsatisfactory and fallacious such advice is when she attempts to follow it. How to feed the baby is the greatest problem met with in the happy state of motherhood, and upon its solution depends the health, the happiness and the life of the child. If the mother is able to nurse her child, the question of feeding is practically settled; if she is not, she should be guided by those who have had successful experience in feeding babies and not allow herself to experiment with different foods. There are scores of artificial foods offered for sale, but the best is none too good for the baby. Eminent authorities who have thoroughly investigated the subject of infant feeding, and scientists who have analysed infant foods, unite in pronouncing Mellin's Food to be the only perfect substitute for mother's milk. It is palatable, nourishing and strengthening; the weakest stomach will retain and digest it, and the puniest child will thrive upon it beyond the mother's fondest expectations.

For convalescents, consumptives, dyspeptics and the aged, Mellin's Food is also of incalculable value. It is a food, not a medicine, and the system receives the nourishment it demands for its daily needs. For those severely ill Mellin's Food will sustain the failing strength and promote a speedy recovery when convalescence has been established.

WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,200 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one half of the language) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

A CHALLENGE!

A Grand Showing Made by the Southern.

HERE ARE SOME FACTS FOR BUSINESS MEN TO READ.

One member of the "Southern"—Raleigh Branch—has paid $750 in monthly installments, and can to-morrow, if he wants to, withdraw $906.25—a clear profit of $156.25. Show me any other association that can beat this.

Another member who had paid $312 and wanted his money, got it and $67.65 more than he paid in. I sold this stock right here in Raleigh—didn't even have to withdraw it—and the party who bought it made $75.00 in clean cash as to maturity. He promptly said, "give me ten more shares," and started again; and he is one of the best business men and owns property up into the thousands. Sensible man—none like the Southern.

ARE YOU MORTGAGED?

Have you been paying interest for several years and still owe the same? Don't you want to pay off your mortgage and not miss the payments? I will let you have the money and give you seven years time and only charge you 6 per cent. interest. Call on C. C. McDonald.

Did you know that it is a fact and can't be contridicted that when you borrow money from some B. & L. Associations you agree to pay monthly until stock matures and in this way will pay between two and three hundred dollars more than you will pay if you call on C. C. McDonald, who will give you a definite contract. You know exactly to a cent what you may expect to pay and you make so many payments and no more.

LISTEN.

Another party wanted $300 a few days ago. I placed his stock, which is drawing 10 per cent. interest, as security and got him $200 for ninety days, at only 8 per cent., which is a net profit of 2 per cent. to him, even during loan. I challenge any association which can do as well as the Southern to deny these facts.

Now, did you ever own any stock in other Building and Loan Associations and try to dispose of it and get left, and take less than you paid in? If so, I simply mention these facts to show you, as a sensible man, that it is to your interest to be in the "Southern." I can show you some stock which has been running three years and on which $12.50 has been paid in and on which the Building and Loan offers $111,68. Isn't that liberal? Suppose this same stock was in the Southern of Knoxville, what would it be worth in cash to-day? $143.02—$18.52 more than was paid in. None to equal the Southern.

NO BETTER—NONE AS GOOD.

The best and safest investment that can possibly be made. I will leave it to your good sense. Call and see for yourself. I will show you over 100 of Raleigh's best citizens who have subscribed to Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars worth of the Southern's stock. I will show you an investment of one of Raleigh's best financiers and one of her wealthiest citizens, who has $1,000 of paid up stock. "Planked down the cash" at one time, and considers it one of his best and safest investments. I will show you 50 shares of stock taken by another of Raleigh's best citizens, one who you will acknowledge knows how to invest and where to place it. He pays $30 per month and in seven years will have $5,000, and will only have paid $2,540. "Are you in it?" If not, and "don't want to get left," call and take five, ten or twenty shares. Sold 90 shares to three men since July. "They will have it," don't even have to look them up. You never hear, or ever will, of anyone giving up the Southern for any other association, but I can give you some "eye openers" of those who have come out of others and taken stock in the Southern

The Southern does not loan on its stock, but if you want any money you can get every cent you have paid in and interest besides. Recollect you never loose anything in the Southern. You can draw out in six months if you want to, and if you want to re-enter you are not charged one cent additional; after paying one addmission, you go in free afterwards. You can withdraw at 10 per cent. interest additional to your monthly payments after stock is twenty four months old. Show me a better or safer investment and I will recommend it. Believing the Southern to be the best means of your saving something and paying you a handsomer profit (75c. per week will carry five shares, and in seven years you have $500) than any other investment, I cheerfully recommend it to the citizens of Raleigh as safe, sure and secure. Three million, five hundred thousand and six hundred dollars deposited as security for its stockholders. What more can you ask? Where can you find as much? Call on C. C. McDonald and get some of the Southern literature which fully explains, so that a child can understand. No wild cat attachments. No evasion of facts. Issues a statement every six months showing to a cent how much your shares have earned, how many shares sold, how much has been paid in on each share, how long in force, &c.

For about forty years she had been a servant of the Lord, true and faithful. Her remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground at her old home near Milton, Caswell county. A good woman has gone to her reward.

J. R. JONES.

Milton, N. C., Sept. 10, 1894.

SMITH—On Monday night, August 27th, 1894, near Jersey Baptist church, in Davidson county, N. C., Charles Smith quietly and peacefully fell asleep in Jesus, at the advanced age of nearly eighty-five years. He was a member of Holloway's Baptist church nearly fifty years, and for many years a deacon in that church. For the last ten or twelve years his membership was at Jersey. He was a church member from 1833 to 1894, sixty-one years. Uncle Charlie, as we younger brethren were accustomed to call our dear old brother, was in many respects a model church member, always present, when able, and attentive to his duties, a gentle husband, a kind father, a good neighbor, and a devout Christian gentleman. Bro. Smith lost his sight two or three years before his death; his general health also gave way, and for months he was a great sufferer, yet he bore his afflictions with Christian fortitude, never at any time uttering a word of complaint, but often expressed himself as ready and waiting to go at the Lord's will. He left two sons and three daughters and several grandchildren and a large circle of friends to mourn their loss.

Miss Bettie, his youngest daughter, was his constant attendant and patient, faithful nurse.

After a funeral sermon by the writer, Aug. 29th, his body was quietly laid to rest beside his wife, who had gone before some eighteen years. Peace to his ashes as he shall sleep in the Jersey churchyard till the morning of the resurrection.

THOS. CARRICK.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased our kind, loving Heavenly Father in his inscrutable wisdom to remove from our midst by death our esteemed and much loved brother, Augustus H. Stephenson, and called him as we believe and trust to a home of rest in the bright mansions above prepared by the dear Saviour he so much loved to honor in his long Christian life; therefore Resolved 1. That we, the Robert's Chapel Sunday-school, of which he was an honored member and faithful teacher, bow in meek and humble submission to this dispensation of divine wisdom and goodness, and say thy will be done.

Resolved 2. That while we deeply mourn this loss to us, and shall miss him in the church as teacher, friend and neighbor, still we weep not as if he had died without hope.

Resolved 3. That we extend to his bereaved family our Christian sympathy in this hour of great trial and grief to them.

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday-school, a copy sent to the family of the deceased, and also a copy be sent to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and the Patron and Gleaner for publication.

D. N. STEPHENSON,
STARKEY BRITTON,
MISS MOLLIE BOONE,
MRS. SUSIE STEPHENSON,
J. G. JOYNER,
Committee.

WHEREAS, God in his wisdom has seen fit to remove from time and labor to his reward our beloved pastor, John C. Wilson, who died July 1st, 1894, we, the members of Mt. Pisgah church, Chatham county, N. C., who have been under his pastoral care for twenty-four years, deem it proper to pay this tribute of our esteem to his memory.

Resolved 1. That by his death we have lost an able and faithful minister, a brother of rare goodness and humility, who had in deed and in truth the Spirit of Christ while following his example and serving his cause as a minister for forty-five years, combining as he did an untiring perseverance with a Christian manhood.

2. That as a minister he was firm and bold in defense of our Baptist faith, yet courteous and dignified toward all, exhibiting a character so genial, so earnest, so sympathetic, that he commended his life to all and endeared himself to the most humble as well as to the cultured.

3. That though a man plain of speech and purpose, and quiet and domestic tastes, and having a deep sense of the responsibility he was under to preach the Word, to use the talents entrusted to him, he has accomplished a work which eternity alone will reveal, a work for which he labored and prayed through early disadvantages and discouragements till he grew to the full stature of a man in Christ, wielding a power for good which his early efforts could not promise, for some jeered at him, saying he had never been called, but had answered another's call; but he grew by labor and became one among the most useful country pastors of our denomination, beloved and honored by the learned and the unlearned for his piety, his masterly control of his tongue, his energy and solid worth.

4. That we regard his life and labors as an exemplification of the power of Christian growth, consecration and faithfulness. Verily he served his generation with full purpose of heart, and his works do follow him. May we follow his example.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved family, one be furnished the BIBLICAL RECORDER with request for publication, and one spread on our records.

Arranged by the most eminent scholars in the Baptist denomination North, South, East, and West, in the interests of Baptists.

The Society desires to call attention to the mechanical excellence of its publications. All things else being equal, publications that are attractive and develop the artistic sense of the scholar are the ones which eventually accomplish the most good. If the printing is first-class and the pictures good the scholars are more likely to preserve and use the periodicals. The Publication Society has always tried to obtain the best results in the issuing of their publications, and no expense is spared in the mechanical work of its periodicals and books, while providing the best also for the subject matter. Compare our periodicals with others.

STILL GROWING IN EXCELLENCE, IN INFLUENCE, IN FAVOR,

IS THE

Convention Series of Sunday School Helps.

Fine Exegetical Work,
Strong Denominational Lessons,
Distinct Missionary Features

Make this Series exactly suit our Southern schools.

And They Are Realizing It.

Rev. E. C Dargan, D. D., (in the Teacher); Rev. E. J. Forrester, D. D., (in the Advanced Quarterly); Rev. S. Boykin, D. D., (in the Intermediate and Primary Quarterlies), will furnish the comments on the lessons for the fourth quarter; while a number of our best men will furnish articles for the TEACHER.

Every Teacher should read the articles on the life of Christ, which began in the TEACHER in July and will run twelve months. Prof. A. T. Robertson, of the Seminary, is doing fine work on these.

Kind Words, beginning with August, contains in its missionary department, once a month, an outline program for children's bands. Let LEADERS OF BANDS note this fact. And in October the third page will contain a Bible Reading Department. Look for it.

The Home Circle.

He Chose This Path For Thee.

He chose this path for thee,
No feeble chance, nor hard, relentless fate.
But love, His love hath placed thy footsteps here;
He knew the way was rough and desolate,
Knew how thy heart would often sink with fear;
Yet tenderly He whispers, "Child, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee,
Though well He knew sharp thorns would tear thy feet,
Knew how the branches would obstruct the way,
Knew all the hidden dangers that thou wouldst meet,
Knew how thy faith would falter day by day;
And still the whisper echoed, "Yes, I see
This path is best for thee."

He chose this path for thee,
And well He knew that thou must tread alone!
O'er rocky steeps and where dark rivers flow,
His loving arm will bear thee all the days;
A few steps more and thou thyself shalt see
This path is best for thee.

"Simple Jamie."

On the outskirts of one of the suburbs of Glasgow, Scotland, there is a little settlement of houses, to which an old man called "Simple Jamie," is an oft-time visitor.

He is the last of his family, and his parents' friends welcome to their homes and care this old simple-minded man whenever he chooses to claim from them food and shelter. For some weeks he had been expected on his semi-annual visit to his birthplace, when at nightfall, he at last appeared at the door of one of the most comfortable of his many homes.

"You are welcome, Jamie boy. Come in," they exclaimed, as the old man remained standing in the doorway, evidently uncertain what to do.

"Is he here, has he been here?" he eagerly asked.

"Who, Jamie, who?" they as anxiously inquired.

"Why the Lord o' us all, dinna ye ken?"

"He, O yes, he has been here," they replied. "Everything has gone well with us; the crops were good; we have made ourselves more comfortable, we have had no sickness, nor had trials; and are having good times."

"But have ye 'ad na trials, na sorrows?" he anxiously continued, "for if na I canna bide where the Lord's na been sa lang; I'll sup wi ye and then go on, until I find him. If ye have na sorrows ye have na been close biding wi the Lord. Can I find him nearabout in ony home o' trials?"

"Yes," they told him, a brother's home had known much of sorrow; sickness, death, and financial losses had been his. So thither the old man directly went, and carried the true prophet's blessing, as he helped these burdened ones to find the Master's spiritual presence in their earthly crosses.

"It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to go to the house of feasting," are mysterious, divine words, from which the human heart shrinks, because it cannot change the conditions, and ofttimes will not say, "Thy will be done." Sorrow ought to be keys of helpfulness and sympathy, with which we are unlocking the complications and needs of other lives; but practically few of us are strong and brave enough in our sorrows to feel safe in going to the house of mourning with an acceptable message, as did this Scotch Jamie. There is no Christian duty more sadly neglected than this of being trustfully cheerful, even happy, in sorrow.

This is no paradox. The Lord's pax vobiscum can come to one as surely on the verge of a torrent as by a singing brooklet. We make our peace by a steadfast gaze into the character and life of the Crucified, who discerns the appointed "need-be" of every trial, and who has himself promised to abide with us even unto the end.

"What have I done to deserve all this!" is an exclamation of torture often heard in the house of mourning; as if it were so much sin! You are not in bitter trial, my friend, because the Father has come to you with a burden of sorrow as an exact reward for your many transgressions. You have given yourself and yours to Him, and now are no longer your own, and He is only doing as seemeth eternally, endlessly good for you. Your poor heart is flesh and blood, and so human! when it is bruised! But sometime you will see that in the bitterest earth-trial you might have said: "He doeth all things well, I cannot see, but I believingly trust and wait."

"Prepare thou me for what thou art preparing for me," was a petition which Frances Ridley Havergal early learned to offer; and if we, too, could breathe this prayer as the waves and billows of human sorrows o'er us roll, how much more of consistent service could we offer our Lord as we come forth from our bereavements.

Broken and emptied vessels
For the Master's use made meet.

Cannot we sufferers take God's message to us in the sweet, childmindedness of simple, but believing Jamie, and from it glorify anew this religion of ours by a closer biding with the Lord in all our sorrows!"—Marian Charles, in Interior.

H. Heineman, Milwaukee, writes: "One box Japanese Pile Cure has cured me of a case of twenty-eight years' standing, after being treated by New York's best physicians. Sold by Jno. Y. MacRae, druggist, Raleigh, N. C."

"I gave you many a blessing
Which you did not understand,
For I wrapped a shadow round them,
As I placed them in your hand."

When the scalp is atrophied, or shiny-bald, no preparation will restore the hair; in all other cases, Hall's Hair Renewer will start a growth.

Keep the Shoes Dry.

Keeping the feet dry is of quite as much importance in summer as in winter, though many persons do not seem to realize this.

In the heavy dews of morning and evening the shoes get damp and suffer seriously, even though the health does not. It is worth while, the New York Ledger well says, to keep a strict lookout as to the coverings of little feet. When they come off at night it is well to have an old stocking full of dry oats or beans to put into the shoes; then tie a string around the stocking just at the ankle, and set the shoes away for the night. The grain will not only draw out all the moisture from the leather, but will keep the shoes in shape without allowing them to shrink.

Rubber-boots for men and boys may be filled with beans or oats and dried out when all other means may have failed. There is nothing more uncomfortable than to put on damp and soggy shoe leather, and with forethought and precaution it is entirely unnecessary.

Facts of Heredity.

"I have drunk whisky every day for thirty five years," remarked a gentleman of sixty, proudly, "and I don't see but I have as good a constitution as the average man of my age; I never was drunk in my life."

He was telling the truth, but to learn the whole truth you would have to study his children. The oldest, a young lady, had perfect health; the second, a young man, was of a remarkable nervous and excitable temperament, as different from his phlegmatic father as possible; the third, a young lady of seventeen, was epileptic and always had very poor health. Did the father's whisky-drinking have anything to do with these facts? The instance may be duplicated in almost every community. Think over the families of your acquaintance in which the father has long been a moderate drinker, and observe the facts as to the health of the children. The superintendent of a hospital for children at Berne, Switzerland, has found by observation, that only forty-five per cent. of those whose parents use intoxicating liquors habitually had good constitutions, while eighty-two per cent. of the children of temperate parents had sound bodies. Of the children of inebriates only six per cent. were healthy.—The Quarterly Journal of Inebriety

The Annoying Freckle.

Freckles are apt to be the torment of young people, and especially of very fair blondes with red or reddish hair, writes Ella Rodman Church. Applications of all manner of blistering remedies are constantly recommended and used, such active poisons as corrosive sublimate and acetate of lead figuring largely in them; and the object to be obtained is nothing less than the removal of the outer skin, freckles and all. Half an ounce each of Cologne water, brandy, lemon juice and alum, boiled together, produces the same result, more slowly and less painfully; but when the skin forms again, and is exposed to the same influences, the freckles reappear. Tan is even worse than freckles, as this is a dark layer over the entire surface, whereas the former do leave glimpses of a fair skin. Where it is permanently established, a covering of linen or chamois, cut to fit the face and neck, wet with cold water, if used nightly, will gradually wear away the tan.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Home Dressmaking.

It is a matter of wonderment that more women do not seriously turn their attention to making their own dresses, and learn how to set their sleeves in properly, and sew their collars so that they will not draw at the nape of the neck, or cut their skirts so that they will hang evenly. Women will study the intricacies of a crochet pattern, and sew together innumerable bits of cloth, but just how to lay a pattern on to cloth and cut it out to the best advantage looks problematic. There is scarcely anything in which women can save so much money as in making their own dresses. It may be said that the faults of amateur dress-making are many, but, on the other hand, it takes a great deal of money to get skilled work, and it is beyond many women to obtain this. They can learn to do as well as the average village dressmaker and save their money.—Mrs. A. E Whittaker, in Our Grange Homes.

A Laughable Mistake

Two ladies entered a book store recently and the younger asked the clerk for a book called "Favorite Prescription." The puzzled attendant was unable to comply with her request and she left the store disappointed. Inquiry elicited the fact that she had overheard a conversation between two literary ladies in which "Favorite Prescription" was mentioned with extravagant praise, and had jumped to the conclusion that it was a book. She now knows that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a sovereign cure for the ills and "weaknesses" peculiar to women, for she has been cured by its use.

It is the only medicine of its class, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee that it will cure in all cases of disease for which it is recommended, or money paid for it will be promptly refunded.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure permanently constipation, sick headache, biliousness, indigestion and kindred ailments.

Those that do the word of God heartily will do it speedily; while we delay, time is lost, and the heart hardened.—Henry.

Every man has a weak side. Every wise man knows where it is, and will be sure to keep a double guard there.—Mason.

More Than We Mean.

There is a story of a minister who plead so earnestly for foreign missions that, when he asked for those who would volunteer to enter upon the work, his own daughter came forward promptly and offered herself. Taken by surprise, the father said, "O daughter, I did not mean you!" This only illustrates the fact that, in the fervor of exhortation, we may say more than we mean. At such a time, we do not say too much, but mean too little.—Exchange.

If we bend not to the world's work heart and hand and brain,
We have lived our lives in vain.—Sel.

I think Christianity has suffered more from those who have misunderstood it, than from those who have opposed it.—Henry Drummond.

"Our yet unfinished story
Is tending all to this;
To God the greatest glory,
To us the greatest bliss.
Our plans may be disjointed,
But we may calmly rest;
What God has once appointed
Is better than our best."

THE NORTH CAROLINA STATE FAIR.

North Carolinians know too little of North Carolina as regards two far reaching aspects—her honorable history and her large capabilities; and they cannot know too much of either. Our State has suffered for want of self-confidence—a quality that is born only of self inspection. Schools are now removing ignorance of her history; and that of her capabilities must be removed by exhibitions of her resources, her blessings, her power,—exhibitions not local and individual, but in impressive aggregate, where all may see and rejoice and take courage. How this can be achieved better than in a State Fair, we cannot imagine.

The North Carolina State Fair is a practical means of making us acquainted with our State; and this year it has been planned upon proportions that deserve the co-operation of every North Carolinian. If proper appreciation of it is shown, every citizen of North Carolina will reap benefits. The day will come when others have procured our resources, in our ignorance, when others shall show the worth of our State to the world, if we do not. It will come, but without credit to us, if we take no action while we may. If North Carolinians will co-operate in using the opportunity that the Fair offers, if they will show their local pride for their State's sake and bring together the best that they can produce, where representative persons from a distance and from all parts of the State will see the splendid variety and wealth of display, it will be a long time before "hard times" come again. What an incentive to higher achievements such a sight would be! There are also minor inducements that should incite extensive exhibitions, which may be mentioned in passing. There are premiums and awards for products of the soil and the handiwork of man, woman and child. Pride in one's achievements, pride in one's county, are incentives to exhibit and to attend, even if there are others more patriotic and nobler.

A newspaper man will tell you that North Carolina is yet learning the A. B. C. of advertising. And he will tell you that slowness to appreciate the import of this art accounts for the fact that the State has a difficult time getting along with better resources than those of most States. We do not know our worth; and the world has been so busy regarding the boasts of others that it has not had time to investigate comparatively silent regions. Advertisements have the eye of the world. And good Fairs are nothing if not advertisements. They will make us and the world conscious of North Carolina's possessions, which the few, who have been able to go from place to place and see, say North Carolina has,—of the produce of every variety, stock of most useful quality, forests, waters, manufactures, mines, precious metals and stones, etc. We know but little of them, and, of course, the world knows less. Advertising by exhibition—that palpable method that always persuades—is the remedy. Other methods may bring results; but exhibition always does.

Fairs are essential to human progress. An inspired writer of old said that much going to and fro "increaseth knowledge." In those days that was the only way, for books and papers were not to be had. The Greeks were most advanced because they lived on the sea-coast and thus came in contact with other nations, visiting, buying and selling. The Greeks had fairs, too. Profiting by experience is what moves the world. That's why there is nothing new, though there are many old things that experience of men now dead has taught men living to make over again so thoroughly that they seem new. Without contact and comparisons—which, indeed, are most frequently furnished by fairs—the race would not advance perceptibly in a century; for without contact and comparison the experience of others is not impressed. Enterprising men from other States pay for the opportunity of showing their improvements at the Fair. North Carolinians are offered premiums, are induced by pride, pleasure and practical advantage; how can they hesitate?

The State Fair is not alone for North Carolinians. Representative men from a distance will be there. Our sister States will know if we do ourselves justice; if we make such a fair as we should for our own sake and for Pride's and Progress' sake, admiration will not be confined to any one State.

There are, also, social and intellectual features. "Soldiers' Day" should bring the veterans and their admirers together once more. The soldiers cannot have many more "days." What a privilege it will be if they can be gathered together at Raleigh, where the monument to them has been begun, to see a magnificent display of the State for which they fought! The Fair is devoted largely to agriculture, just as the State is. The farmers, in whom the world is taking more interest than ever, are especially favored. They will have opportunity of seeing and comparing their products and stock with that of the best and most progressive farms. And Education Day is calculated to awaken a more thorough interest in the free schools. It would be inestimably valuable if the State could be aroused to the importance of placing schools where all can enjoy them. The breath of the school children is the life of the nation. There will also be a Good Roads Conference Fair week. The Fair and Good Roads are co ordinates of prime importance in progress.

Let the East and the West be gathered together in pride and in honest rivalry and mutual interest. Let it not be said after the next State Fair that North Carolinians have never exhibited their best for themselves and the world to see. And the State will have taken such a step forward as will surprise even those who have travelled over it and seen, as few have seen, her vast stores of wealth.

AN ESTEEMED religious contemporary of Ohio has been informed that the Governor of North Carolina became vexed because of criticisms upon "the many lynchings which have taken place in his State," and called a special session of the Legislature to devise means for the suppression of this practice. Our contemporary was altogether misinformed, though, be it said, it commended the misinformation. It is beyond our comprehension that the truth becomes so perverted when it gets a little way from home. We think sometimes it is dealt harshly with by strangers. In this instance, however, the untruth is stated by a paper that is truthful—the Journal and Messenger. The truth is that there have not been more than three or four lynchings in our State in two years; and that Governor Carr has not thought of calling an extra session of the Legislature. He did say to all States that the law ought to be executed with more dispatch, and that is wise; and he did say something deprecatory of the fanatics of England, which he had as well not said.

Our contemporary will please make the correction in justice to a State that is patriotic but not emotional, peaceful but not boastful, resourceful but not proud.

IF NATIONAL deficits are evidences, this is not a day of statesmen-financiers. When Carlisle accepted the Treasury Portfolio he was the most popular cabinet officer and a prominent candidate for the presidency. He had been the ablest of his colleagues in the Senate. But bond issues, deficit, complications and associations have laid him low as an aspirant for presidential honors. He is yet able, but, his friends say, unfortunate since he left the Senate.

Carlisle's woes are not peculiar, however. Merrie England's treasury, under the guidance of Sir Wm. Harcourt, is confronted with a deficit of $35,000,000; that of France is about $30,000,000; and Italy struggles against one of $50,000,000. They will all have to undergo the vituperation consequent upon raising taxes; and all the treasurers will be "laid low" as Carlisle has been. It is a sad day for treasuries of governments as well as private affairs of similar nature.

The question of expense is becoming very serious with the European governments, which are sapping the life of their subjects to support armies and thrones and sporting kings, and, on the other hand, of the United States with its thousands of parasites and leeches in the shape of pensioners and government officials.

ALTHOUGH the fact that a monopoly reaps the chief benefit of the sugar provisions of the tariff act is grievous, the authoritative statement that the Louisiana farmers have left the Democratic party in disgust is almost sufficient to reconcile one to the bill. The dominant party had not only refractory and probably mercenary Senators to contend against, but also the threats and the treachery of the voters of Louisiana. Compromise is shameful, but only compromise is possible at times; compromise is more desirable than absolute surrender. The move of the Louisiana sugar growers assures us that the new bill is more after our notion and less according to that of the Trust, the producers and the protectionist, than we had thought.

The idea that Louisiana or any State would have its own products or wares protected and those of other States exposed to competition betrays a disgusting childish selfishness and want of sense of equity. The great body of the people have said that protection is robbery. There has seldom been such agreement upon a single question. But they should not make exception of their personal interests, if they do not desire to be convicted, out of their own mouths, of that robbery.

THERE is an affliction that is called "big-head;" there is another, with which it is often complicated, called the "simples." The entire race is exposed, at one time or another, to this complication—the big-headed simples; the college youth and street urchin, the statesman and beggar, the preacher and reprobate, all have to resist this fell affliction. The "big head" has been known to convert a capable man into a dunce, and it is worthy to be added that the man's friends usually aggravated the affliction. The "simples" is invariably accompanied with the big-head, whether the one afflicted have friends or not. The kindness in making a simple big-headed is apparent; and it is to be supposed that the big-headed become simple in kindness to the race—as a relief and a warning.

Prohibition in Mississippi.

BY REV. L. S. FOSTER.

For some years there has been a steady growth of prohibition sentiment among the people of our commonwealth. The first vigorous protest against the rampant saloons and their train of evils under the license laws of the State was made by Dr. J. R. Gambrell, in about the year 1880. He was then, and for some years subsequent, editor of the Baptist Record. About that time, possibly earlier, he published several ringing editorials in the Record on "The Matchless Evil." The people were led to think seriously of the whiskey evil, and a sentiment in favor of the suppression of the traffic began to grow. Previously nothing had been seriously thought of except a "regulation" of the traffic. The Democratic party gained supremacy in the State in 1875, and at this period had been in power about five years.

The friends of prohibition presented a memorial to the Legislature of 1880 to pass a law allowing the people the privilege of voting on the question of "sale" or "no sale" by counties. The license law allowed counter petitions to be filed against application for license in supervisor's districts and incorporated towns and cities. And in this way a few towns and many districts prevented license. The memorial referred to was scarcely noticed by the Legislature.

Two years later, in 1884, there had been still further growth of the prohibition sentiment. The Legislature was again memorialized. The matter could not be entirely ignored. For the first time in its history the Legislature appointed a "committee on temperance." The question of local option by counties came before the body in some way and was overwhelmingly defeated; one member of the Senate declaring that "the people of Mississippi shall never vote on this question if I can prevent it."

Each year from 1882 a State prohibition convention was held in the city of Jackson. The first of these meetings attended by your correspondent was in July, 1883. It was composed of about thirty men and two ladies from different parts of the State. There were fifty saloons in Jackson in a population of five thousand. The next year there was an enthusiastic meeting of about one hundred and fifty or two hundred. Sentiment had grown by the agitation and there were only thirty saloons in Jackson.

A prohibition paper, "The Sword and Shield," was published in Winona and then in Clinton. It was the "Argus" until moved to Clinton. In Clinton it was edited by Rev. J. H. Gambrell, a brother of Dr. Gambrell, and by R. D. Gambrell, son of the Doctor, (R. D. Gambrell was foully assassinated in Jackson in 1887 by leaders of the whiskey men.)

Sentiment continued to grow in favor of prohibition. Each convention became more enthusiastic. In 1885 the convention, in its platform, demanded a law allowing a vote on the "sale" by counties. In 1883 the few prohibitionists who met in Jackson were looked upon by its citizens as a sort of menagerie of wild beasts. In 1885 they were treated with the greatest respect and deference, and the number of saloons had been further diminished by growing sentiment to thirteen. In the State much territory had been covered by prohibition by special laws allowing county votes and in towns by vigorous use of the provisions of the license law. Several counties (two now occur to my mind) were in this way absolutely freed from the "sale."

The Legislature of 1886 passed a law allowing every county, upon a petition of one-tenth of the legal voters, to hold an election every two years on the question of "for" or "against" the sale, the majority vote to decide for the entire county for two years or until, after two years' expiration, another election should be petitioned for. When this law went into effect all prohibition territory was surrendered and must be regained under the new law.

Under this law, which has been in operation eight years, all of our eighty counties, except four or five, have been freed from the saloons. And in the remaining counties there are not more than ten places where intoxicants are sold. I may safely say there are at most not more than a dozen open saloons in the State. The law is generally well enforced—fully as well, if not better, enforced than the law against murder, arson or theft. Prohibition prohibits in Mississippi. The sheriff of our county (Tate) caught a two gallon blind-tiger jug at a picnic this summer. The owner of the "tiger" had to pay the sum of $14 for monkeying with the beast. Of course, there is some illicit selling; there are many jugs smuggled into our State; in some counties there is a considerable violation of the law. But ten open saloons and about a dozen or so of "blind tigers" is infinitely preferable to one thousand open saloons, such as we had ten years since. The people stand by the law and use its provisions. There is, however, a growing sentiment that we need State prohibition by statute law or constitutional amendment. We hope to have this at some time in the future.

Senatobia, Miss.

Dr. Winston's Card.

In the RECORDER of the 19th inst. Dr. Winston says:

"About a year and a half ago, realising that certain persons were engaged in stirring up bad feeling among the Baptists against the University, I sought an interview in Raleigh with Rev. Dr. Skinner, Rev. Dr. Hufham and Rev. Mr. Gwaltney at the residence of Dr. Skinner, in order to ascertain whether there really existed any ground of complaint."

We had been appointed by the Board of Trustees of Wake Forest College to consider question and report as to whether any adjustment between the University and the denominational colleges could be effected. And it was with us as a committee that Dr. Winston conferred. Dr. Taylor's report to the Board of Trustees led to the appointment of the committee. I shall not undertake to quote from this report as it may be published in the RECORDER within two or three weeks, and it is to be hoped that all the readers of the RECORDER will give it careful attention, as it will show the situation in which the College was placed, as it appeared to Dr. Taylor and also the Board. If any person or persons among the Baptists were engaged in stirring up bad feeling against the University, we had not heard of it. The report will show that there were feelings among the Baptists toward the University, but they were not bad feelings. They were such feelings as one would have towards another who with a two handed club was disabling him by every blow, and he looking around for any and every lawful means of defense—not desiring in the least to kill the other fellow, but feeling a little concern for his own life. I submit that a little effort to defend himself would not prove that he had bad feeling towards the one so violently set on his own glory as to forget the feelings and well being of others.

Now as to the conference referred to, after Dr. Winston made his statement, I said to him, "It seems to us that your policy will drive the denominational colleges to the wall." He replied, "I am not trying to break down the denominational colleges. I appreciate the work they have done and are doing, but if my policy breaks them down, I am not responsible for it. I am for the University. North Carolina has never had anything, and I am determined she shall have a University. I expect to have five hundred boys there soon, and soon thereafter I expect to see a thousand there."

I published this in the RECORDER of the 18th of April last, and added that this mania for numbers is bringing the State into such sharp competition with most important enterprises of many of her citizens, that many Baptists find it difficult to rejoice in the success which comes out of such a policy. Dr. Winston in referring to his conference with the committee, says: "If the gentlemen present misunderstood my remarks, they should have resented it there." I thought sufficient resentment was shown when Dr. Skinner said, "We shall have to fight your policy." Dr. Winston asked, "How fight it?" Dr. Skinner replied, "Before the Legislature." Then a little resentment was seen on the other side, when Dr. Winston said, "Gentlemen, if you do that, let me tell you how to frame your bill. There are five counties in the State in which there is not an academy; have it enacted that no boy from either of these counties shall ever enter the University of North Carolina." Dr. Skinner asked him if the impression is not being made on the minds of the young men all over the State that to hope for political preferment in North Carolina, one must attend the State University? He promptly replied, "Gentlemen, is it not so?" He then named five men who he said are Baptists, who had political honors conferred on them during the last campaign and said, "Gentlemen, I take it that these gentlemen would not be where they now are if they were not University men."

I remember nearly all that was said in the conference; for I have told it to more than one hundred different persons. I published this verbatim in your columns on the 18th of last April, and said then and say now that such means of competition are not only unfair, but they are beneath the dignity of a State University and unworthy of the State which owns and fosters it.

In November before the conference in December to which reference has been made, I met Dr. Winston at one of our Associations. I also met at the same Association a young man who told me that he expected to enter Wake Forest College the next fall or the next fall a year at farthest. He said he had had his heart set on taking a course at Wake Forest ever since he had been old enough to know anything about it. That night one of the ministers told me that President Winston had that afternoon made some offers to the young man to induce him to go to the University, and that he would be glad if I would see the young man again. I saw him and asked him what offer had been made him. He said he had tuition offered him and any other help that might be found necessary to carry him through if he came and got along with his work. Some months after this I saw President Winston and called his attention to this, and told him that we could not compete with the State in giving our boys a college education, and that if they were let alone to pursue a college course in their own denominational college while their characters are forming, then we would rejoice to see them all, if they could, taking a University course. Dr. Winston said that the young man told him that he was poor and had nothing. I replied that he told me the same, but notwithstanding his poverty, he had been set on coming to his own college and was teaching school to enable him to come. After debating the question in his own mind for awhile, he decided to come, and is now pursuing his studies here.

And I know of another Baptist boy who was at the University last year, and I suppose he is there now, and who would have been here but for the fact that a scholarship was given him, and yet his father is able to educate him in any college or university in any part of this whole country.

As I said last April, Baptists are in competition with themselves. They are struggling to sustain their own college and are taxed to sustain a State institution which is in the field as the competitor of the college doing all the work which the college is doing from the highest to the very lowest. Now with such a policy as is being run, putting us, a Christian denomination, into such competition with the State to whose constitution and laws we have ever been most loyal, I ask if it should be thought very strange that our feelings should be a little stirred when we clearly see interests as dear to us as life, jeopardied by the State? I told Dr. Winston last August a year ago that to resist his policy is the hope of our College—that we must fight, but that it would be a fight in the defensive. We are not mad, but are speaking forth the words of truth and soberness.

I have written all that I have written with the kindest feeling to all. No one can possibly regret more than I do anything which may have been said in the spirit of bitterness or unkindness by any writer on either side of the controversy.

W. R. GWALTNEY.

The Old Preacher's Diary.

I give only a few of the many gloomy days I spend here, waiting to be released of my burden:

Sept. 14.—Sweet thoughts cluster round memories past. Where are the dear brethren and sisters? I am here at Juniper Creek, where I used to preach. Things are not as they once were. Brother Smith and Sister Giles use always to be here to greet me, and pray for me while I tried to preach, and here are their children and their grandchildren. And how comfortably they are living! Good, nice, pleasant house to worship in; and what nice, beautiful farms they have, with everything necessary on them. Quite different what they used to be. We did make out to have a log-house to worship in, and the people lived in log-houses. Seems to me there was more religion and less style in those days, but perhaps I am wrong. They seem to be enjoying life so well. I wish I could see the faces once more of those dear old brethren and sisters. I am poor and feeble now. Expect these young people think I am a beggar. I am a beggar, but I won't be so long. I am soon going to my "mansion" which Jesus has promised me. I won't be a beggar then.

Dec. 10.—The bleak cold winds are blowing hard. I look out from my hired house, and wish the dear good brethren would remember us, and send the Ministers' Relief Board a good, liberal contribution, that they might make us an appropriation. Good Bro. Williams has certainly been good to us in not pushing us for the rent. God bless his soul. I wish I had a few dollars to pay him. He has been so kind to us. And the wood is about out. What will we do? Bro. Jones has been so kind to furnish us. I do hate so much to ask him to furnish us any more. Perhaps the good brethren of the State will remember us and send in a contribution, and then we won't have to weary those good brethren. I don't know what we will do for winter clothing. It is hard on a few brethren to do it all. I am old and decrepit, and can't work. What I could. I have spent all—time, strength and means—trying to build a foundation for my Master's cause on which others might build. I wish some of those good brethren, [illegible]

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

PRAY for the many new additions to Zion; and seek that God may give more. March onward and upward.

AN exchange does well to remind the world that there is the text, "God is a consuming fire," as well as "God is love." Flowery bed religion cannot stand.

REV. A. C. DIXON is quoted as saying, "it is well to believe in Christ; it is better, perhaps, to serve Christ; it is best to be a Christ." Of course he meant that it is best to follow Christ so closely that one's life may measure up to Christ's life of love and self-sacrifice. That is the keynote of personal work—Christ-likeness.

IT IS a reflection on an institution's worth and character to argue that abolition of State aid will destroy it. If the University, with its buildings and private funds, its prestige and alumni, cannot sustain itself independently, it is time for it to go the way of all other "infant industries" one hundred years old. If its alumni cannot endow it, we are sorry for them.

IF YOU have sent your boy or girl off to school this year, you have made a grievous oversight if you didn't send their church-letters with them. Away from home, a young man or woman cannot be shielded from temptation and strengthened by any influences so well as by active church relations. It may be difficult to depart from the old church, but in most instances of this kind it is best.

A BROTHER writes from New Jersey: "In the South you suffer from summer Christians; the North is afflicted with the winter species."

The distinction is well drawn. In the South Christians are a great deal more active in summer than in winter,—in fact winter lethargy makes many revivals necessary. In the North the activity is in the winter time. Dutiful, winter and summer, in good and bad weather, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord: that's the kind of Christian that the Lord loves to have in his fields.

WE HAVE not encountered anything more ludicrous than the effort of a writer in the Charlotte Observer to make the action of the New York Constitutional Convention, recommending that the State do not appropriate money to sectarian schools, argue against Dr. Taylor's principles.

The New York action is precisely in line with the struggle in North Carolina. We hold that the State cannot appropriate money to institutions that inculcate certain well-defined doctrines. New York is making it unconstitutional to appropriate money for such institutions, in order to save herself from Roman Catholicism.

The last thing Baptists can be made to submit is religious establishment, in State schools or out.

"PROHIBITION in Mississippi" In this paper is an account of the struggle of our brethren in that State to mitigate the liquor evil. They were successful; we can be. It requires determination, zeal, courage, faith. Bro. Foster, the writer of the article, was very active in the work. As editor, preacher and speaker in Mississippi in the last decade, his experience in that struggle against liquor is second to no man's.

Notice that it did not require a new party to bring about the result in Mississippi; it did require enlightened Christian public sentiment. Notice, too, that the present success—miraculous to us—is but a step. Bro. Foster says Mississippi will yet have a prohibiting State law,—when public sentiment will sustain it.

JUDGE ROBT. W. WINSTON, than whom we do not know an abler or better judge, has done the State a distinguished service in preparing his practical "Talks on Law." We are permitted to announce this week that this work, after thorough revision, indexing, etc., is ready for the public, having been published by brethren Edwards & Broughton. When the series of articles was running in our columns many were the commendations they received. The State press and many individuals attested their value; and many lawyers found the articles helpful. The "Talks" were designed for the general public, for those who have not the opportunity of studying the law, and for this reason they are plain and practical. Judge Winston deserves the gratitude of the State for his work; and it is meet to be said that his efforts have been purely philanthropic and voluntary.

THE SACRED AND SECULAR.

By common consent there is a not too well defined division of affairs in civilization into two classes, designated by the words secular and sacred. For instance, news of religious activity is called sacred news; news from the world in general, of business, politics, is called secular. The terms usually apply to objects and acts, not to human beings, yet, at times, the distinction is made between human beings.

Of late there has been much discussion as to the limits and the restrictions of the relations represented by these words. Whenever a representative of religion makes his religion prominent in trying to regenerate unto God corrupt secular affairs, the devil asserts himself and Religion is told to get where it belongs,—upon into pulpits and by bedsides of the dying and graves of the dead, the secular apostle says. These are, indeed, places where business and other worldly affairs are out of place; and they are never prominent in them. But this does not argue that Religion must be confined to them. No doubt Satan would have us think that the object of religion is to console and lament; but God gave his Son to teach us to remedy, as well as to console. The present contention between the sacred and secular is nothing less than the ancient struggle of righteousness against sin. It was said then that one cannot serve God and mammon. And though many are they who try to serve God and money—mammon disguised,—the truth is still a mighty truth. Mammon doubtless would have the race think that there are two worlds; and that in one it was meet to serve him, in the other to serve God. There are two worlds. In one God's children live and no others do; in the other, children of darkness live—rather keep dying. There are two worlds among men; but those who are subjects of one cannot serve the master of the other. A man cannot be a Christian to-day and a secular man to-morrow. But a Christian can go among men engrossed in secular affairs with the object of bringing them to God. A Christian should carry the kingdom of Christ everywhere.

Just at this time there is much expression of fear of danger that men, who are Christians, may become secular, may become so engaged contending against the secular world that they will be made children of darkness. There is no danger. Christians may have temptations to do evil, may sin, may fall, but if once converted they cannot become servants of mammon for long. The trouble is that there are men who pander to sensationalism who never were Christians. A preacher or worker who cares more for the size of his audiences or for the startling tone of his sentences than he does for the truth, is not a Christian. Yet a Christian preacher must do more than talk about the words and sentences in the Bible, if he would remedy. Telling how is very well, but actions are better. He must act in order to convert to God, not to catch the crowd and attain notoriety or fame.

The Christian religion is life. One who has been regenerated lives his religion; professions count for nothing when actions are persistent contradictory witnesses. The Christian religion inspires a love not only for God, but for men,—not only Christians, but all men. The cardinal occupation of Christians is glorifying God, saving souls, relieving distress, rescuing the oppressed, and comforting the burdened in Christ's name. How can a Christian man work except in mammon's "secular" world? A little may be done elsewhere; but the great work is among the heathen and the godless. And yet when a Christian starts about such work he is told to go where he belongs!

The right and the obligation of Christians to invade and convert mammon's secular world having been established, it is desirable to say something about methods. In what Christians do and in the doing there is held up to them the unmistakable Example—the life of Jesus Christ. In the Saviour's career, though, indeed, it was short, are embraced efforts and experience that, by fact and implication, have been and will ever be all sufficient explanations of difficulties and solutions of problems. What Christ did any man can do without sin; his methods are the methods to this day, right, wisest, and most expedient.

People speculate as to what Christ would do were he now on earth. He would do now as he did when at Jerusalem. He would point out the way, the truth and the life. He would comfort. He would relieve and remedy. He would do precisely what every Christian ought to be doing; and the fact that one has doubt about what he would do, is evidence that that one is wanting of clear conception of the obligations of Christianity. A Christian should know Christ too well to have to imagine what he would be doing. The real trouble is that Christians are not sufficiently alike Jesus Christ; and it is becoming a habit for people not to try to become Christ like, there have been so many Christians who have remained in churches without Christ likeness.

The duty of each Christian to day is to do what each Christian thinks Christ would be doing; and the method is determined by the same infallible Example.

REV. P. L. REID, D. D., DEAD.

The death of this eminent preacher, editor, and college president, occurred the 24th inst. at his home in Greensboro. His death was comparatively sudden, he having been sick with gastritis only a few days.

In the death of Dr. Reid the Methodist denomination in North Carolina loses a pillar and a leader that will with difficulty be replaced. He was an able preacher, successful editor, and at the time of his demise was manifesting decided qualities as an educator. He had the talent of leadership.

To his denomination, his family and friends, we tender sincere sympathy.

STATE-AID has never been argumentative. It has been offensively aggressive; it is apologetic now. If it is not overcome, it will become aggressive again. "Eternal vigilance" will keep it down.

THE late Prof. Maske, of Wake Forest College, was remarkable for the quiet way he confined himself to his own work. Glad to help, ready to accommodate, he was never forward; and we do not believe he ever intruded upon any one. He was reserved to a degree; and this disposition secured him warm friends. When we heard of his death we could not but remark that his unassuming nature was not calculated to elicit loud expressions of praise in life, but, having died, it seemed that he ought to have been told oftener of his good qualities. He never seemed to care for praise, and he never flattered any one. He was devoted to his duties.

As a teacher studious care marked all his work. The Greek and Latin exercises that passed his supervision without correction or suggestion were few and infrequent, if there were any at all. Having discovered an error, he had a system by which he expressed its relative importance; and there were, when necessary, interlinear suggestions and references to encourage and instruct the student. This precise thoroughness was characteristic of all his work. He was faithful in little things, and therefore, successful in great.

Prof. Maske was a Christian from his youth. Bro. Tuttle's tribute to his Christian life is not overdrawn. Lending his energy to the weaker church was but an exponent of his nature. In a short note Prest. Taylor writes: "Maske was a true man." More need not be said; he has entered the University on High.

....A most gracious meeting has been going on at the Fayetteville Street Baptist church for sometime. Six have been received for baptism, and as many more will probably be received this week. The meeting still continues with much interest.

....In the past thirty years 10,000,000 Roman Catholics have migrated to the United States. Yet, says an exchange, there are not near that many in the country now. Romanism is not flourishing as it did when people were not allowed to think.

....Persons coming up on the C. F. & Y. V. R. R. to the Eastern Association will be met at Tomahawk. Those coming down will be met at Garland. At the former in the forenoon at 8:35; at the latter in the afternoon at 6 o'clock.—Francis Herring.

....Making study of the law a part of a degree course is something new in the South. Under Prof. Gulley, who is able and experienced and zealous, Wake Forest should become a great agency in diffusing practical knowledge of the law.

....The statement made at the late Road Conference, of which a report appears in this paper, that one horse can pull as much along the good roads in Mecklenburg county as four formerly could, should set men to thinking seriously about this road question.

....Rev. J. R. Pace was in a good meeting at Parker's School-house last week. His mission work in Edgecombe county is encouraging. Bro. Pace has sent us seventeen new subscribers on our present offer, and he is not done yet. Bro. Pace sets a good example.

....It is not reasonable to think that if State-aid could possibly have answered Dr. Taylor's article it would have done so long since. Its efforts have been confined, however, to fixing conventions and trying to side-track the issue. Hold your men to the question.

....I was at the first session of the King's Mountain Association, and have attended almost every session since, but I have never been at any meeting of the body equal in interest to the one we are now holding.—Rev. Thos. Dixon, Sr., at the King's Mountain Association.

....Rev. W. G. King writes from Villa now that he held a meeting at Antioch church, Harnett county, in which the Holy Spirit was present to the conversion of sinners, upbuilding of the church's strength, and reclamation of backsliders. Ten have been baptized and others are hoped for.

....Among the young men who received license to practice law, last week, were brethren R. L. Burns and Z. V. Saunders of Moore county, John Fowler of Sampson, and S. C. Welch of Haywood, who attended Wake Forest College and were prepared for the law at the State University School of Law.

....Rev. J. T. Jenkins closed a good meeting in Duplin county the 16th. It was a meeting of several churches at one place, and from one thousand to fifteen hundred people attended regularly. More than one hundred persons promised to join a Baptist church as soon as possible. He was in a meeting at Autryville last week.

...."The Old Preacher's Diary,"—is it possible to conceive of a more pathetic object than an old and worn servant of God in his last years, in want, suffering from cold,—surely such a one should not write a diary, in charity to his brethren. Read Bro. MacDuffie's call; and let us see to it that those for whom he calls are not disappointed.

....Early numbers of the RECORDER will contain the following articles that were enjoyed greatly at the late Sunday-school Chautauqua: "Essentials of Good Teaching," by Sister F. P. Tucker, Reidsville; "The Ideal Superintendent," by Miss Laura Boner, Greensboro; "The Sunday-school a Remedy by Bro. H. H. Horne, Clayton.

....Nothing can be more ridiculous than to talk about bossism among Baptists. No man can ever attain to leadership among Baptists. The man who can come nearest this, however, is the man who will find out what Baptists want, and will then use the best means to give it to them.—Dr. J. D. Hufham at King's Mountain Association.

....Senator Voorhees of Indiana, chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate, has our profuse thanks for about twenty-five pounds of printed matter—the product of the late tariff contest. While the Senate was reducing things, we think it might have reduced the number of useless eight-day speeches and saved a lot in printing. Mr. Voorhees has our thanks, anyhow.

....Many pastors have mentioned our extraordinary offer of the RECORDER nineteen weeks for half a dollar to their people; many of them have been successful. Cannot every pastor say a word along this line at the first opportunity. More RECORDER readers means more intelligent workers. Now that money is easier, we expect to hear from old and new subscribers more frequently.

....After a persistent struggle to hide himself, Dr. R. T. Bryan has succeeded. We have been rejoicing that he was enjoying the seclusion that he so much needed. Now that he has been called to Richmond, he will be heard from again. He will leave for China in early October. How glad his heart will be, if North Carolina will awake from her apparent indifference to China's spiritual welfare.

....Prest. C. F. James, D. D., of Roanoke Female College, Danville, Va., writes: "We have good news from the old Roanoke Female College. Best opening the school has enjoyed for many years. Every dormitory is occupied and nearly full. There is room for only three more boarding pupils. Our new teachers from your State, Misses Lowndes and Rountree, are making a fine impression here."

....Bro. Jesse F. Taylor, who has lived near Raleigh many years, died last week at the age of sixty-nine years. He was a successful farmer, good to his neighbors, and considerate of all. He had for many years been a consistent member of the First Raleigh Baptist church; and the last year of his life through intense and protracted suffering, he bore up well and faithfully. We extend sincere sympathy to his family.

....Bro. Van Deventer writes that this has been a fruitful year in our Henderson work. Many have been added by baptism and letter. The 16th inst. his church had a "Missionary Day"—Bro. Van Deventer is a live missionary preacher—attended by a large audience. A good collection was taken. In the midst of the service prayer was offered for the recently orphaned young women working for the Lord in Africa. It was timely and touching.

....It was a pleasure to have Rev. O. L. Stringfield with us last Sunday. He presented in the morning the claims of the Baptist Female University, and preached at night. In his case, we have the right man in the right place. Goldsboro showed its interest in this great and imperative work by coming forward with a generous subscription, Judge W. R. Faircloth leading with a gift of $1,000.—C. A. Jenkens.

....Rev. L. M. Berry, so well known and beloved in North Carolina and Missouri, was converted at the age of twelve years and entered the ministry at nineteen.—Central Baptist. Bro. Berry and wife have lived to celebrate the golden wedding, and now reside at Booneville, Mo. Our contemporary gives North Carolina Baptists credit for being the first Baptist settlers in Missouri. That's only one of the good things they have done.

....Rev. J. E. Hocutt was ordained the 2d inst. at the call of Stanhope church. Elders W. C. Nowell and A. A. Pippin organized the presbytery, inviting deacons Thos. Westray and S. R. Pierce to sit with them. A thorough examination proved satisfactory, and Bro. Hocutt was set apart to the full work. Rev. W. C. Nowell delivered the charge and Elder Pippin offered prayer and presented the Bible. Bro. Hocutt pronounced the benediction.

....Wake Forest has two hundred students. That is enough.—Charity and Children. Will Bro. Mills please tell Dr. Taylor what to do about other Baptist boys, besides the two hundred, who want to come to Wake Forest? We have plenty of room, plenty of teachers, plenty of boarding houses, to accommodate three hundred boys, and do it better than they did the number there when Bro. Mills was a student. Why should we not have have them?

....Mr. R. Vernon Howell read a paper before the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, which will be published in its annual proceedings. It was solicited for publication in the Montreal Journal of Pharmacy, which was quite a compliment to him.—Rocky Mount Phœnix. Brother Howell is the son of Rev. J. K. Howell. He is a graduate of Wake Forest and holds a diploma from a Philadelphia pharmaceutical institution. This recognition of his ability is very gratifying to his friends.

....The Watchman—in our opinion second to no Baptist journal—came to our table last week bearing no semblance of its former imposing eight blanket page dignity. It is now a thirty-two page paper; and its pages are scarcely larger than those of a large dictionary. The Examiner, too, will adopt the magazine style, as it is called. Meanwhile, the Religious Herald continues to represent the old four-page blanket sheet style, which indeed is to be preferred to the extreme opposite—the thirty-two page weekly "magazine."

....Bro. H. C. Vedder of the Examiner—a brilliant, scholarly writer—has been called to the Chair of Church History in Crozer Theological Seminary, to succeed the lamented Dr. Jno. C. Long. Bro. Vedder has written "A Short History of the Baptists"—a book of indisputable worth—and "The Dawn of Christianity," of which a review lately appeared in these columns. A College Chair will enable him to do much better work than is possible to be done in a busy sanctum.

....Dr. J. K. Connelly preached two interesting sermons during the Association in Shelby. It was from this section that his regiment in the late war was made up. It is simply wonderful to see how these old soldiers love their old commander, each other and the cause they lost. This is only equalled now by the love and fidelity which many of these men, along with their old commander, are showing to another Captain, even the Captain of their salvation, in whose victory and rewards many of them will soon take part.

....No definite news from our brethren in China up to date. "No news is good news;" but we do wish they would write—just a postal, if the harvest is so plenteous that they cannot write at length. The Japanese are winning all the battles in the war. They killed, wounded or captured 16,000 celestials in one battle lately; they have also won a very important sea fight, sinking or disabling four Chinese battleships, and themselves suffering small loss. They are reported to be marching on Pekin, China's seat of government. A German missionary was mobbed and killed in China not long ago. This was not due to the war, but was one of those unfortunate events that officers and laws cannot prevent—not even in the United States.

....The following shows the wisdom of the late action of the Wake Forest Executive Committee. The policy of getting men whose competence is witnessed by degrees from eminent institutions is the policy that will put Wake Forest forward: "General Lee, of Washington and Lee University, gives him the highest commendations. The professors of Johns Hopkins University, where he took his Ph. D. degree in June, speak in the highest terms of his scholarship and character. Prof. Gorrell took the Bachelor's degree at Washington and Lee in 1888, and the Master's degree in 1890. In 1885 he was awarded the "University Scholarship in Greek." In 1887 he won the New Shakespeare Society prize. In 1888 he received the Young scholarship as the highest proficient in moral philosophy. In 1889 he received the Early English Society's prize and the medal (Robinson) of philosophy and literature. In 1890 he was awarded the Cincinnati oration and the Mapleson scholarship. His career at Johns Hopkins has been equally brilliant. Few men of his age in the South (or elsewhere) have made such a brilliant record." The College is to be congratulated on its acquisition, says the Baptist, Baltimore.

Religious Liberty or Toleration—Which?

"We think ourselves possessed, or at least we boast that we are so, of liberty of conscience on all subjects, * * yet how far are we from those exalted privileges in fact."—JOHN ADAMS TO THOMAS JEFFERSON, Jan. 23, 1825.

Prof. Manning's article is before me. For reply to his argument, I have but little time; for indulgence in personalities, I have no inclination. These may wound an opponent, and may pass for argument with the unthinking; but to the minds of the thoughtful, they will seldom carry conviction.

It is important that the point at issue should be clearly stated.

In certain articles published in the RECORDER, I took the position that no money raised by taxation could rightly be used for giving any religious instruction to which any taxpayer would object; that the education given by a State must be religiously colorless; that a Catholic and a Jew have as much right to object to Protestant Christianity being taught in his State University as Prof. Manning or I have to object to the teaching of Jewish or Papal doctrines. This position I believe to be a necessary corollary from Art. I, Sec. 26, of the Constitution. I understand this to guarantee, not toleration, but absolute religious liberty to all men of every faith and of no faith. All men, so far as their religious beliefs are concerned, are, as citizens, to be treated with undeviating equality.

Professor Manning traverses this position and says, "The State tolerates all religious beliefs, it does not surrender its distinctive Christian character." The State, then, as a State, has a distinctive Christian character which it does not surrender. That is, in some sense and in some degree, the Christian religion is established in North Carolina. Christianity receives such recognition in our Constitution and statutes as to make it a part of the law of the land.

If my critic means only to say that the overwhelming majority of our population are Christian in sentiment, and that our laws and institutions, like our language and modes of thought, are saturated with the spirit of Christianity, I will not differ with him. The kingdom of heaven is like leaven. The leaven has spread, as the Founder of our holy religion predicted. The thoughts of men have been moulded by the gospel. The result is what we call Christian civilization. But I do not believe that there is or that under our Constitutions there can be any organic relation between the kingdom of heaven and our State and National governments.

To sustain his position, he relies upon references in the Constitution and statutes to oaths, Atheists, "Religion and morality," and Sunday laws, and upon the mention of "Civilized and Christian State" in Con. XI, 7. He also refers to the custom of employing chaplains.

In the preparation of the articles which have elicited the rejoinder of Prof. Manning, I gave some special study to each of these matters, both in the Constitution and the Code. And, but for the length to which my discussion had grown, all these objections would have been anticipated in my plea for the Voluntary System in Higher Education.

I shall be very glad, when a little more time is at my disposal, to discuss in detail each of the points referred to. For the present, however, I am willing to rest my case on a general principle which, I think, embraces them all and covers the whole ground.

If it should become needful, I am willing to discuss in detail each of these points, but I prefer for the present to rest my argument on a general principle which covers the whole ground.

The Declaration of Rights is the basis of the Constitution. If any other Article in the Constitution is in seeming conflict with any Article of the Declaration, the former and not the latter must yield in efforts to interpret or reconcile. As every statute must be in harmony with the Constitution, so everything in the Constitution must be interpreted in harmony with the Declaration of Rights, which is fundamental in its nature.

The solid rock upon which I build my plea for Religious Liberty, rather than toleration, in North Carolina, is Dec. 26 of the Declaration of Rights. Read it: "All men have a natural and unalienable right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences, and no human authority should, in any case whatever, control or interfere with the rights of conscience."

Is it not contradiction of terms to say that the State "tolerates" the exercise of a "natural and unalienable right"? The right to tolerate implies the right to deny or take away. And can the State take away a natural right of man?

The framers of this Article seem to have exhausted the resources of language in their efforts to make strong, perspicuous, and universal the provisions of this guarantee of religious liberty.

The requirements in regard to oaths, atheists, Sunday, &c., and the reference to "Christian State" (which I believe to be used in a general and popular sense like the preceding word "civilized") cannot be so construed as to prove that the State in its organized capacity has a distinctive Christian character. This construction is necessarily excluded by the Bill of Rights.

The following paragraph, from the brief of an eminent lawyer, W. H. McKee, Esq., of Washington, seems to have direct application to the quotations made by Prof. Manning. It is from his exceedingly able argument before the House Committee on the District of Columbia in 1890: "Sunday laws, and the whole line of religious legislation which goes in the same category, are alien to the letter of American fundamental law and to the spirit of American institutions. They are a survival of the English Church Establishment, and should not have existed after the Declaration of Independence and the adoption of the Constitution any more than the laws governing the control of livings, and the maintenance of the Church of England. They have rightly no more place in our statutes than have laws for the regulation of the royal succession. But the legal and judicial indolence of Bar and Bench has permitted this alien brood an entrance into our statute-books through precedent and not through principle."

Which is the wiser course, to interpret principles by precedents, or precedents by principles? I stand for the latter course.

The following from a decision of Allen G. Thurman (a name which is not unfamiliar in North Carolina), when Justice of the Supreme Court of Ohio, is so much to the point that it might have been written for the express purpose of answering Prof. Manning: "It follows that neither Christianity, nor any other system of religion, is a part of the law of this State. We sometimes hear it said that all religions are tolerated in Ohio; but the expression is not strictly accurate. Much less is it accurate to say that one religion is a part of our law and all others only tolerated. It is not mere toleration that every individual has here in his belief or disbelief. He reposes, not upon the lenieney of the government, or the liberality of any class or sect of men, but upon his natural, indefeasible rights of conscience, which, in the language of the Constitution, are beyond the control or interference of any human authority."

In the Virginia Convention of 1776, Mr. Madison fought the idea of "toleration." The last section of the proposed Bill of Rights provided that "all men should enjoy the fullest toleration in the exercise of religion." Madison opposed it and offered as an amendment the words "all men are equally entitled to the free exercise of religion." He pointed out the distinction between the recognition of a natural and absolute right and the mere toleration of its exercise. He argued that toleration involved the power of jurisdiction. The amendment passed, and has remained unchanged to this day.

Strong efforts were made to introduce the name of Jesus Christ into the Bill for establishing religious freedom in Virginia. This was rejected by a great majority. Then it was that Jefferson expressed his gratification "that they meant to comprehend within the mantle of its protection the Jew and the Gentile, the Christian and the Mahometan, the Hindoo, and infidel of every denomination." This mention of "Mahometan" in one of my articles, by the way, must have suggested to my critic his reference to a "Turk." The language is Thomas Jefferson's, not mine. But I heartily endorse it.

In 1829, Col. R. M. Johnson of Kentucky presented in the U. S. Senate a report on Sunday Mails, which was adopted. It is a very able discussion of the question of the relations of our government to religion. The report says: "If the principle is once established that religion . . . shall be interwoven with our legislative acts, we must pursue it to its ultimatum. We shall, if consistent, provide for the erection of houses for worship," &c. "What other nations call religious toleration, we call religious rights. They are not exercised in virtue of governmental indulgence, but as rights, of which government cannot deprive any portion of citizens, however small: despotic power may invade these rights, but justice still confirms them."

The decisions of the Supreme Courts of Ohio, Wisconsin and California, in cases which have acquired national repute, after thoroughly discussing the question of "Christian State," were adverse to the position taken by Prof. Manning. The arguments advanced by Gov. Hoadley and Justice Stanly Matthews, in the cases celebre of the Cincinnati schools, seem to me to be unanswerable. I wish that the RECORDER would print these decisions, in whole or in part.

If, from what I have written on religious liberty, any one should be ready to conclude that, after having lived in North Carolina (the home also of my grandfather), twenty four years, I do not love our Constitution, I have only to say that, so far as I can judge, my opinions exactly coincide with those expressed by Judge Gaston. And no one will be likely to impugn the patriotism of the author of "The Old North State Forever." As to whether I could love a Constitution which only guaranteed toleration is another question.

Surely my critic did not mean to be taken seriously in his references to our sturdy Baptist ancestors. They were sturdy,—I like the word. Fines and imprisonment and scourgings and death were they sturdy enough to bear, in battling for the very principles for which I contend.

When, in the Constitutional Convention of 1835, the relations of the State to religion were under discussion, the venerable President, Nathaniel Macon, a Baptist in sentiment, descended from the chair and expressed opinions from which my views as to the right of a State to give religious instruction are necessary logical deductions.

On the desk before me lies a discussion of Religious Liberty (Raleigh, 1854) by Mark Bennett of Edgecombe. He says: "Roger Williams' simple theory of religious liberty would shame from the constitutional and legal enactments of North Carolina at least two of our long-standing statutes." I wish I had room to quote more from the forty-two pages written by this godly man who was no less a patriot because he believed in absolute religious liberty, not merely for Christians but for all others.

That the discussion of the support of higher education by a State is without a parallel can hardly be established. Recent discussions and results in Georgia and South Carolina have probably been overlooked. And I shall ask the editor of the RECORDER to publish portions, at least, of pamphlets published in other States some years ago, but which I had not seen till my own articles were written.

But suppose this discussion to be without parallel; would lack of precedent prove anything? Not to North Carolinians. They know too well the annals of their State and the history of their liberties. The men of Mecklenburg asked not whether their attitude of resistance had its parallel in history. Being careful only to know that they were right, they hesitated not, as pioneers, to enter untrodden paths.

CHAS. E. TAYLOR.

Wake Forest, N. C., Sept. 19, 1894.

Prof. J. C. Maske.

Prof. Maske was the son of James and Ellen Maske, was born Nov. 23d, 1862, and died Sept. 17th, 1894.

Thus time defines the life of one whose death is mourned as a great loss by all who knew him. It was not my privilege to have known him long, nor so well as many others; but to the extent of our acquaintance, I have known no young man who more thoroughly impressed me with the noble qualities of head and head.

The first of last November I came to Richmond county to assume the pastoral care of a group of churches, Pleasant Grove being one of them, and found that Prof. Maske was a member of this church. This ordinarily would not have been so, and a little investigation revealed to me dimly what I have since learned was the ruling principle of his life, loyalty to his convictions of truth and duty. Having professed faith in Christ when fourteen years old, he was baptized into fellowship with Meadow Branch church, Union county, by Rev. E. L. Davis, and gave such testimony to the genuineness of his Christian profession, as elicited from this man of God the following commendation: "Brethren, if this is not conversion, then I don't know what it is." Coming to Richmond county later on, the family settled in a community where there were few Baptist people, but little Baptist sentiment, and no Baptist church. Here he identified himself with others in the struggle to establish a Baptist church; and the present organization is mainly the fruit of their faith and toils. For the two fold privilege of fellowship with loved ones and further participation, he retained his membership with this church.

Not until two months ago had it been my privilege to meet Bro. Maske, but my relation to the family had brought us close together, so we met, not as strangers, but as friends and brethren in the Lord. After a brief sojourn at home, he went out on his canvass for the College; and having completed it, he came back to battle with the dread disease that terminated his life. Anxious to be at his post at the opening of the session, he bade adieu to the loved ones at home and returned to Wake Forest, hoping to improve. How sad the event! Yesterday his remains were brought home for interment. Friends from the College and others of the community met at the church, and after appropriate services, participated in by Rev. L. Johnson, and Profs. Carlyle and Sykes, loving hands laid away the mortal remains of the Christian scholar; and we turned from the habitation of the dead to speak words of comfort and cheer to the living. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

A Card from President McIver.

Editor of Recorder:—An editorial in the BIBLICAL RECORDER of Sept. 12th contains the following language:

"The President of the State 'Normal and Industrial' School, C. D. McIver, LL. D., sends out examinations to the county superintendents of public instruction to be submitted to applicants for privileges at that institution. Of course many of the applicants are turned down, but Dr. McIver loses no opportunity to impress these and the successful ones favorably to State aid to his institution. There may be nothing wrong in this, if he will impress them legitimately, without deceit. We have facts, however, which show that he has been dealing out falsehoods, in evidence of which we submit the following, which is question number ten sent out to county superintendents to be answered by applicants for State 'Normal and Industrial' privileges:

'10. The annual appropriation to the State Normal and Industrial School is $12,500. By the Constitution all the poll tax goes to the lower public schools and the poor. The $12,500 is raised by a tax on the property of the State, which amounts to $360,000,000. How much would a man who is assessed for $1,000 pay to the support of the Normal and Industrial School?'

The first sentence is half a truth, which is usually about as great a lie as can be told successfully. In the RECORDER of August 1st it was stated that the last Legislature appropriated to the State 'Normal and Industrial' School $48,000 (including loan of $9,000, which means gift,) for the two years following. The annual appropriation to the State 'Normal and Industrial' is nearer $20,000 than $12,500; and President McIver knew it when he wrote that example."

Being unwilling that your readers who trust the RECORDER for accurate information should suppose that I would willingly mislead them or others by stating that the "annual appropriation to the State Normal and Industrial School" was only $12,500, when, as is claimed by the RECORDER, "the annual appropriation is nearer $20,000 than $12,500," I wish to submit the following official statement from the State Treasurer in regard to the annual appropriation:

"STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
RALEIGH, Sept. 15, 1894.

C. D. McIver, President State Normal and Industrial School, Greensboro, N. C.

Dear Sir:—In answer to yours of this date, I have to say: The annual appropriation, i. e., the amount your institution will be entitled to draw from the State Treasury each year hereafter, as the law now stands, is twelve thousand five hundred ($12,500) dollars, (Section 8, Chapter 339, Laws 1891, and Section 1, Chapter 182, Laws of 1893. It may be proper to say, that your institution has received, for the special appropriation in the last named Act of Assembly, five hundred ($4,500) dollars for each of the years 1893 and 1894 to pay debts.

Very respectfully your obedient servant,
SAMUEL McD. TATE, State Treasurer."

I wish to say further that "an annual appropriation" is understood to mean an appropriation which continues from year to year without further legislation. The Normal and Industrial School was established by the General Assembly of 1891 with an annual appropriation of $10,000. The General Assembly of 1893 increased the annual appropriation to $12,500. At the same time a special appropriation of $4,500 for 1893 and for 1894 was made to pay off debts contracted for original equipment, furniture, heating apparatus, etc. This was not an annual appropriation, as can be seen by reference to the Act. (Laws 1893, Chapter 182.) Without further legislation the institution will receive in 1895 and each year thereafter $12,500, whereas, if your statement that the annual appropriation is nearer $20,000 were correct, it would receive nearer $20,000 in 1895 and each year following.

By reference to the same Act, it will be seen that the State Board of Education was directed to "invest" $9,000 of its four per cent. bonds in certain property adjoining the original property of the Normal and Industrial School. The institution pays from its revenue derived from fees four per cent. interest on this amount, so that the Board of Education receives just what it would have received from interest on the bonds, and the institution pays only half the interest it would be compelled to pay to private parties.

You include in your calculation, not only the annual appropriation of $12,500 for maintenance, which is perpetual unless repealed, but also the special appropriation for 1893 and for 1894 for equipment, and the investment of $9,000 on which interest is collected annually.

The statement that "the annual appropriation is $12,500" for the support of the Normal and Industrial School is true notwithstanding your criticism. Moreover, there was no intention to deceive or mislead by using this practical question in percentage and taxation, the correct answer to which is four and twenty-one twenty-sixths (4 21-26) cents.

CHAS. D. MCIVER.

[Read the qualifying term—"for the support"—in the preceding paragraph, and, then, read the first sentence in the examination question; and it will be seen that that sentence is "half a truth," etc. Treasurer Tate's letter and other of President McIver's supports will be discussed next week.—EDITOR.]

Several valued communications have been crowded out of this issue

CORRECTIONS.—In the communication from Hon. John Manning, LL. D., of Chapel Hill, in last RECORDER, the word "children" in line seven, should have been gentlemen; "Art. 1, Sec. 1" should have been Art. 9, Sec. 1; in line 16 from end, "Constitution" should have been Institutions.

Associations.

The Associations in the Baptist State Convention will meet this year at the times and places named in the list:

Bank, Rocky Ford, Damascus, and other of those old churches I used to preach to who have been so prosperous, would think of us old preachers and their families sometimes, and help us a little. Perhaps they will.

March 15.—I am truly glad God has a few people in this world who think of the past occasionally, as well as the present and future always. I like to see brethren all round. We poor old preachers can't live on sympathy. They all have much sympathy for us, or say they have, but forty pounds of it won't make a meal's victuals, nor one hundred yards of it won't make a single garment to wear. We have to eat and wear, if we can get it, just such as the good brethren eat and wear. But for passing friends and neighbors, I should have been in the ground. We have had to pass another hard winter. Wife has had pneumonia, I have had rheumatism, and it has been a hard pull through. Thinly clad, and little to eat, and sometimes no wood to burn, has brought it on. I hope I will have a pleasant time next winter. Hope God never will risk me on the cold charities of this unfriendly world any more to spend another winter. I am thankful that the Ministers' Relief Board has helped me some. I appreciate it so much. With the small amount I get from them, and a few errands of mercy from my neighbors, I will make out somehow till I die. I wish the brethren would think.

BRETHREN OF THE NORTH CAROLINA BAPTIST STATE CONVENTION:

Are we as a Christian brotherhood and lovers of free religious liberty, going to allow these things said and recorded of us, who are building on a foundation laid by these dear old brethren, our fathers and grandfathers in Israel! None of them remain on the Board but a short while. Out of the thirteen that have been received on the Board, six have died. Three remained beneficiaries about two years, and three only one year. Only two of their widows remain on the Board. These brethren who have died received only about $341 from us, and if we could call them back and ask them about the comforts derived from this small amount, comparatively speaking, it would surprise us, and would be far more joy than we anticipated. It cost us but little sacrifice, but it did them great good.

We have now nine beneficiaries on the Board, with their families. Three of these are widows with their children depending on them for their support. Brethren, put yourself in their places. Husband spent his life preaching the gospel to the world, and lies down in death with the responsibilities of children on wife's hands and heart. Some brother will say, what better are they to be left in such a condition, and why should we support them any more than other men's widows and children? Much in every way. Other men spent their lives mostly in pursuit of worldly gain, and if they were industrious, honest and economical, God permitted them to accumulate and lay by him in store, but the preacher must not do that. If he does, some one will say, better call some one else, he is getting rich. If he is a consecrated, God loving, and God-serving brother, he gives it all—time and means. He has a poor chance to accumulate. Many of them, no doubt, would have been far above want, had it not been for sacrifice and liberality to their Master's cause. The remaining six on the Board have been beneficiaries. One, one year; one, two years, and four, three years. They are all, so far as we can find out, worthy objects of our support.

There are, no doubt, others in the State who need help from this Board; and, for the information of any who may desire such information, either as to the workings of the Board, or to making application for help, please see the following brethren, who have kindly consented to represent the cause in their respective Associations:

Enterprise Church in Warren County.

Dear Recorder:—We commenced a meeting with the above-named church on the second Sunday in August last, which was continued seven days, with good attendance and much interest, resulting in fourteen additions—twelve by baptism and two by letter. We had no ministerial help, but valuable assistance by two lay brethren from other churches, who were with us most of the time. "Oh, give thanks unto the Lord; call upon his name; make known his deeds among the people." Ps. 105: 1.

Fraternally, L. C. Fleetwood.

Four Meetings.

Dear Recorder:—I give you herewith a report of four meetings.

I and Bro. H. C. Moore held a meeting at Oak Grove church, beginning on the fifth Sunday in July. We had a good meeting, lasting six days. Nine were baptized, three were received by letter, and two others await baptism. The meeting closed with over thirty penitents.

Next we went to Pleasant Valley. Bro. Moore was taken sick the second day, which left me to do the preaching. We had a good meeting. The church was much revived. Three were baptized and three were received by letter.

On the second Sunday in August I began a meeting with the church at Waxhaw. We had a gracious outpouring of the Spirit. I had no help except the brethren of the church. [You had an editorial sometime ago on lay preachers. If you could be at Waxhaw and hear the brethren preach, I think you could write more on the same topic.] I have many lay brethren here who can talk well, and they are ready to do whatsoever they are called on to do. Nine were baptized, three were received by letter, and one was restored.

My last meeting was held at Hermon: it only lasted three days. I was taken sick on Tuesday, and was worn down after preaching twice a day for successive twenty five days. We received six by letter, none for baptism.

To the Lord be all the praise.

From Peace Chapel.

Dear Recorder:—Not having seen anything from this place in your paper, I will write you a few lines concerning the work here.

Several years ago, Rev. M. R. Pernell came here and got permission to preach in a factory, and organized a church with only three members. He preached regularly once a month, and others joined. We have struggled on, and with the help of kind friends have erected a nice house of worship. We have put in a nice pulpit, and the house is well seated. We hope to have it nicely ceiled this fall, as God has blessed the most of us with good crops.

Our present pastor, Rev. T. B. Hill, assisted by Rev. R. T. White of Wake Forest, held a series of meetings here the last of July. It was a glorious time, and resulted in the conversion of nineteen souls. Fourteen were baptized, and some others will be soon. Among the number baptized was a blind man whose hair was white with the frosts of many winters, and his thirteen year old daughter.

Our pastor, one of Wake Forest's boys, has done a good work here. Since he took charge of the field, which was twelve months ago, twenty five have been added to the church, and it has been strengthened spiritually and financially. May God continue to bless his work and also bless the efforts that are being made at Wake Forest College, that she may send out many more like him to work in the vineyard of the Master.

"For years," says Capt. C. Mueller, "I have relied more upon Ayer's pills than anything else in the medicine chest, to regulate my bowels, and those of the ship's crew. These pills are not severe of action, but do their work thoroughly."

A Baptist Locality.

Dear Recorder:—I write you a short account of three protracted meetings within five miles of my house.

On every fourth Sunday, Bro. P. H. Fontaine preaches at Enon, which is only five miles due east. At the close of the meeting he baptized thirty-six. Bro. J. A. Beam preaches at my church, Mt. Zion, every first Sunday. Since our meeting he has baptized twenty-nine. Bro. J. E. Smith, pastor at Tally Ho, baptized forty-eight, making a total of 103, all within five miles of me. Others have given in and will be baptized next meeting.

The colored church at Berea baptized seventy-three Sunday, only two miles from me. That seems like I live in a Baptist community. I had the pleasure of attending only two of these meetings, Tally Ho and Mt. Zion, and I can truthfully say I never attended better meetings. To God be all the praise.

A Jubilee Celebration.

Fifty years is a long time—much more than the average lifetime. Men, therefore, naturally note such periods. Just now, Messrs. Perry Davis & Son, of Providence, R. I., the proprietors of Pain Killer, are celebrating the jubilee of that good old household remedy, and have doubled the capacity of their bottles, without increasing the price. This will of course make Pain-Killer more popular than ever. For fifty years it has been the family medicine chest in countless homes in every country on the globe. Once given a trial, it stays in any home, where, when anything happens, the bottle is reached for. When anything happens to you or yours, nine times out of ten you can cure it yourself with Pain Killer.

A Bright Lad,

Ten years of age, but who declines to give his name to the public, makes this authorized, confidential statement to us:

"When I was one year old, my mamma died of consumption. The doctor said that I, too, would soon die, and all our neighbors thought that even if I did not die, I would never be able to walk, because I was so weak and puny. A gathering formed and broke under my arm. I hurt my finger and it gathered and threw out pieces of bone. If I hurt myself so as to break the skin, it was sure to become a running sore. I had to take lots of medicine, but nothing has done me so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It has made me well and strong."—T. D. M., Norcatur, Kans.

Proceedings of the Good Roads Conference at Charlotte Sept. 12th and 13th.

About three hundred delegates, representing many counties of the State, were present when the State Good Roads Conference was called to order in Charlotte's city hall at 12:30 Wednesday, Sept. 12th. Dr. R. J. Brevard, mayor of Charlotte and President of the North Carolina Road Improvement Association, called the Conference to order, and welcomed it to Charlotte in a neat speech, which was eloquently responded to by Mr. Jas. C. Stevenson of Wilmington, and Mayor Patton of Asheville.

Dr. Brevard is President of the Conference, and Prof. J. A. Holmes is Secretary, Col. J. C. Tipton of Salisbury is Assistant Secretary. After the organization and announcement of the programme the Conference adjourned, re-assembling at 2:30 o'clock, and immediately adjourned to visit parts of the city and vicinity where road building and repairing are in progress, being transported on electric cars tendered by the city railway company. Charlotte leads in this work, and its inspection afforded much pleasure and profit to the delegates. In quarrying rock for macadamizing its streets, the city has opened up a hole large enough to contain the State capitol at Raleigh, and this quarry is right in the heart of the city. The steam drills, derricks, and great rock crusher are all worked by a 30 horse-power boiler. The delegates were also shown how the steam roller tears up a rough street and packs it down again smooth and even.

At 8 o'clock the Conference re convened, and Hon. S. B. Alexander, member of Congress from the Sixth District, and the father of the Mecklenburg road law, gave a history of the law and a synopsis of its provisions, explaining and emphasizing its adaptability to all parts of the State. He was followed by Capt. W. E. Ardrey, his colleague in securing the enactment of the Mecklenburg law, who read an interesting paper on "What have good roads done for the farmers of Mecklenburg county?" showing that the agricultural interests of the county have been immensely benefitted. One horse can haul as much as four formerly could, and many thousands of dollars worth of farm products were put on the market now that had no value before, the advantages of the city are extended to the country, and along the lines of the macadamized roads lands which a dozen years ago could not be sold for $15 per acre will now bring $75 to $150 per acre, but are not for sale at any price. S. H. Hilton gave a history of the working of convicts upon the Mecklenburg highways, and how the county had come by experience to build much better roads now and at much less cost than when they began. Mr. B. R. Butler, city engineer, read a valuable paper on the cost of macadamizing streets and highways in Charlotte, with some interesting facts relating to the machinery and technical description of the road. He showed how the cost of this work of improving the streets and sidewalks has been greatly reduced by having better machinery. Following these papers, Prof. Holmes gave a stereoptican exhibition of large pictures of the fine macadam roads to be found in all parts of Europe, and also of the bad roads in North Carolina. He also showed illustrations of the beautiful scenery and the resources of North Carolina, emphasizing the fact that we have a great country, but we can never develop it ourselves, nor can we attract the thrifty and intelligent people of other States and countries to aid us until we have the good roads such as these people have at their homes.

Thursday morning by eight o'clock the delegates assembled in front of the Central Hotel, where the citizens of Charlotte met them with carriages for a long drive over the country roads. The whole process of building the best modern roads was seen, and all kinds of machinery were at work grading the old country road; rolling the graded surface; the farmers hauling rock off their fields and cording it along the road; the spreading of coarser stones at bottom on the dirt road surface, and rolling them down; then putting on another layer of three inches of stone, and rolling this, and then two inches of fine crushed stone on top and rolling this. All along these macadam roads the houses and fences and the farms generally were in good condition, showing the influence of the roads. The only complaint that the delegates heard was that these roads were not being built fast enough. The wagons they met coming into town on these roads were hauling loads twice as large and more than would be seen elsewhere, and the conclusion arrived at was that the half had not been told about these Mecklenburg county roads.

At 11 o'clock the conference re-assembled at the city hall, and an important paper was read by Mr. W. C. McMackin, supervisor of roads in Wake county, on working public roads by county convicts. This paper awakened a considerable interest and discussion. Two other strong papers were presented by Rev. Dr. Jno. R. Brooks of Monroe, and Rev. Dr. Jno. A. Preston of Charlotte, on the importance of improving the public roads as a means of increasing church attendance in the country. They showed how this would improve very greatly the attendance at churches and Sunday-schools, would enable us to have better churches, and in every way aid the work of the church and the improvement of the home life of country people. Another important paper was presented by Prof. Alexander Graham of Charlotte, showing that our bad roads kept from 10 to 35 per cent of children away from school in winter time; made it necessary to have too many school districts; and often made it necessary to have schools in summer, and this again interfered with farm work.

Other valuable papers were the following:

1. The Importance to the Farmer of Better Roads, by Col. John Robinson, Commissioner of Agriculture.

2. Some Needed Improvements in the "Alternate Road Law," by T. K. Bruner, Secretary of the Board of Agriculture.

3. The Ways and Means of the Road Problem in North Carolina, by J. A. Holmes, State Geologist.

4. The Capitalist and Public Road Improvement, by Dr. McAden.

5. Better Public Roads will Stimulate Diversified Manufactures, by Maj. Schenck of Cleveland, and Mr. White of Alamance.

6. The Road Problem in Eastern North Carolina, by J. A. Holmes.

7. The Need of Engineering Supervision in the Improvement of Public Roads, by T. K. Foust.

8. A Cheap, Good Macadam Country Road, by Prof. Wm. Cain of the University.

9. The Turnpike Roads of Western Virginia, by Prof. J. W. Gore of the University.

A number of important resolutions were adopted looking to the pushing forward of this road improvement work in all parts of the State, urging all the counties to provide for the use of all their convicts on the public roads when sentenced for less than fifteen years, and looking to the employment of engineers to superintend the road improvement work.

The Conference adjourned to meet again in Raleigh during the State Fair in October.

Meetings.

Dear Recorder:—My meeting at Spring Hill, a mission point, was a success. Christians were made stronger and sinners to think. There were five converts. Bro. Blalock assisted me and did faithful work.

TILLERY.

This was the next point. I had the assistance of Bro. R. E. Peele. The meeting lasted a week. There were twelve converts. Seven were baptized at the close of the meeting. Bro. Peele preached the pure gospel and did it with power.

Tillery is a new church on the Scotland Neck and Greenville R. R. It was organized last spring and is making a fine beginning.

DAWSON'S.

We began the fourth Sunday in August. Bro. George J. Dowell came Monday and preached for me till Saturday. I had heard him preach before, but he preached better than I ever heard him. Bro. Peele was with me till the close.

Tuesday morning fourteen joined the church. Twelve have been baptized. God be praised for his goodness to us.

MULLIN'S CROSS ROADS.

This, like Spring Hill, is a mission point. Bro. Vann preached for me the first night, that I might have a night's rest.

The meeting lasted nearly a week. Bro. Peele preached the remainder of the time. I have baptized two young men into the fellowship of the Scotland Neck church. Others are expected to follow in baptism.

I want to hold two other meetings—one at Hobgood, the other at Crowel's, in the near future. This will close my three years' work.

I shall resign, and hope God may direct me to some field where I may be used for his glory. I pray that my successor may do better than I have done. I believe that God has blessed me in coming to this place, and in the work, for which I give him the glory.

I have a host of friends that I regret to leave, but I think it best. Bro. Noah Biggs has been kind to me, and I pray Heaven's benedictions upon him and also upon many others.

I expect to preach for Bro. Peele on the fourth and fifth Sundays, and at Burgaw the week before the fourth Sunday.

I love the RECORDER and look for it as I do for a dear friend. W. S. BALLARD.

Scotland Neck, N. C.

The work of Mr. Warszawiak among the Jews of New York City continues to deepen and spread. He believes with all his might that his countrymen are every whit as susceptible to gospel influences as any other class, and the results of his labors appear abundantly to justify his conclusion. He preaches to crowds, and he visits from house to house. Every day he devote three hours for private conference. This time is largely taken advantage of, many hundreds coming to see him. A home called the "Home for Persecuted Christian Jews and Enquirers," located at 65 Avenue D, has been of the greatest help to the work. In one year 3,000 meals were provided, while 625 beds were occupied.

Be pleasant in the performance of duties.

SUBJECT FOR SEPTEMBER: BRAZIL.

"Proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." Missionaries, 15; native assistants, 11; stations, 32; churches, 11; membership, 519; baptisms, 159. Contributions, $1,230.

STUDY TOPICS.—The future of Brazil among the world's great nations. The recent attempted revolution. Nominal religious freedom. Great need of missionary reinforcement. Bright outlook as in all Romish countries where the thoughtful are repudiating Catholicism.

One Afternoon in China.

I have just finished dinner and am going across Filial Piety Lane to my work. I hear a tremendous noise near by. Looking up I see a man beating a gong, an old lady with an immense iron chain about forty feet long, one end tied around her neck, the rest of it dragging behind her. The third member of the party is an old man carrying a yellow flag. A flock of men, women and children gather about them. They stop at each gateway for contributions, and the noise of the gong ceases. In a moment it begins again, the links of the long chain twist and wriggle in the dusty road, and the company moves on.

I ask the old man with the flag what it all means. He says, "The woman is fulfilling a vow." The money contributed is going to repair a heathen temple!

On the street an hour later.

Two loud angry voices! Yes, they are women's voices coming from the side of a public thoroughfare. Now I can see one of them from my cart-window. What a sight! Hair disheveled; clothes dirty and ragged; face torn and covered with blood; words too vile to utter pouring forth like a torrent and racking her whole frame.

Five minutes after.

What is this just ahead of my cart, lying so still in the dirty road? Oh! it is a beggar. A piece of gunny-sacking, black with filth, wraps a part of his body. He takes no notice that one of his shabby shoes has parted company with his grimy foot, nor that the busy insects are making a highway of his muddy face.

Yes, this is the place! "Jesus Hall!" I want to stop here. The chapel is in the front, the parsonage in the inner court. The young preacher used to be a student in the boys mission school and his wife is one of the W. F. M. S.'s. own bringing up! She is from the Peking Board School. Why, here is a real home, neat, inviting! A Christian wife and mother! A Christian man, too, who looks tenderly and proudly upon his wife and baby!

Of what are they talking; for what are they working? For the salvation of their own people.

Who that loves humanity can say, "Missionary work does not pay!"—Mrs. Charlotte M. Jewell, in Woman's Work for Woman.

Models of Politeness.

A missionary thus speaks of a congregation at a church service: "Japanese audiences are models of politeness. No one yawns, snaps his watch, shuffles his feet or goes out, even though the speaker is talking in an unknown tongue. Every eye is upon the speaker. When he begins to speak he is greeted by a polite obeisance from every one in the audience; and when he concludes, another low bow from every one in the room says silently, 'I thank you.' After the address another song, a prayer, and benediction, and then what? A grabbing of hats and canes and overcoats, and a 'break' for the door? Ah! no; the Japanese have not learned thus to close their worship. All drop into their seats again; for a full minute they sit with covered eyes and bowed heads, and then slowly and reverently pass out of church or break up into little groups."

How He Kept His Bible.

Some two years ago, when terrible rain storms occurred in Japan, making the rivers overflow, sweeping away houses and devastating the fields, there was a lad who was suddenly aroused to the sense of his peril and bethought himself of what he must do. He must be quick in order to save his life. Was there anything that he could carry away to a place of safety? His first thought was for his Bible. He seized a string, wound it around the precious book, and then tied it firmly to his neck, and so waded through the water up to his waist and reached a place of safety. He saved himself and his Bible, and that was all.

You believe in home missions, you say? Very well. There are 60,000 Chinese still in America, and only 10,000 of them in Sunday-school.

A King's Daughters' circle in San Francisco is composed of 8 Chinese women, 2 Japanese, 2 Syrians, and their 3 American teachers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

The Glendon & Gulf Railway is to be extended to Charlotte.

Genuine emeralds have lately been discovered in Mitchell county.

The number of white voters in our State is 184,544; colored, 69,940.

A new cotton-mill of four hundred looms is being built at Randleman.

The paper-mills at Lincolnton are to be re-opened by a Northerner.

Five capital offences are to be tried at the Wake Superior court, in session this week.

Mr. J. W. Walker has been elected President of the Piedmont Bank of Greensboro.

Cabarrus county is holding a fair this week. Gov. Carr and President McIver deliver addresses.

The Charlotte Observer says the Waldensian settlers in Burke county are in need. They are worthy.

A piece of beefsteak lodged in the throat of a two-years old child in Lenoir recently, choking it to death.

Rev T. K. Brown is suing Rev. J. J. Moffit for $10,000, for circulating stories that Brown killed his own wife.

The Republican nomination contest in the second congressional district has been decided in favor of Cheatham.

Rev. Jno. C. Kilgo, the new President of Trinity College, was inaugurated with imposing ceremonies on the 19th.

The Presbyterian parsonage at Elmwood, says the Charlotte Observer, was burned by an incendiary fire on the 18th.

Evangelist Gales is holding a union protracted meeting at High Point. Schoolfield has been holding meetings at Concord.

A Swede fell from the smoke-stack of a foreign vessel in the Wilmington harbor, a distance of 30 feet, with fatal results the 21st.

Plans for a light-house to cost about one hundred thousand dollars at Cape Hatteras, to be erected next spring, have been approved.

Crop prospects, as the harvest season becomes imminent, are not so roseate. Cotton will be more than the average, and corn very abundant.

The vacancies caused by the death of Dr. F. T. Fuller and the resignation of Dr. J. W. Cobb, of the N. C. Asylum for the Insane, will be filled the 27th.

The College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts at Raleigh is constantly growing and enlarging. It has more than two hundred students now, and is very popular.

Fifty five young men secured law-licenses from the Supreme Court last week. Thirty-two of them were prepared by Dr. John Manning at Chapel Hill; and the Court pronounced them well prepared.

It is reported that the business offices of W. Duke Sons and Co. branch of the American Tobacco Company, the Trust, will be removed to New York from Durham. Will that put them beyond the Trust law?

The fastest time ever made on a railroad in the South, was made on the S. A. L. last week. A special ran from Portsmouth to Raleigh, 180 miles, in three hours and a quarter, the last forty-four miles being made in forty minutes.

A State Association of Democratic clubs was organized at Raleigh last week. Senators Ransom and Jarvis, Ex-Lieutenant Gov. C. F. Black of Pa., ex Congressman Mansur of Mo., and Lawrence Gardiner of New York were the speakers. Small attendance.

Steps are being considered toward establishing a high school at Morganton in organic connection with Trinity College. Virginia Methodist proceed on this plan; and North Carolina Methodists have done well in converting "Old Trinity" into such an institution.

Near Newbern subscriptions are being taken to macadamize a puble highway. It is stated that Mecklenburg county has done all its good road work without going in debt. Mecklenburg has another great mission to execute, if this is true. Let it tell its secret to every county.

Congressional candidates Bower and Linney are manifesting a good deal of temper in their joint debate. They came to blows the other day; and on several occasions have used vile, ungentlemanly language. Think of men running for honorary office, and setting such an example! Shame!

General News.

President Nunez of Columbia, Central America, died the 18th inst.

Four men lost their lives in an awful fire in Washington City last week.

The Chicago Board of Education has decided to equip the city schools with bath-tubs.

A large number of female clerks have lately been dismissed from the United States Treasury department.

Ex-Premier Gladstone has declared that local option is not sufficient to drive liquor-selling from England.

It is stated that ninety-six persons were killed in a severe wind and rain storm in Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin the 21st.

The Odd Fellows were in general convocation at Chattanooga, Tenn., last week. Hon. J. H. Stebbins of New York was chosen Grand Sire.

The American Protective Association is growing. It clashes with Romanism now and then. The opposition of Rome to it makes it tolerable.

Ohio Democrats have endorsed Calvin Brice for re election. Mr. Brice is the "gentleman from New York" who bought his seat from Ohio.

Senator Jones of Nevada has joined the Populist party. Nevada cast but 10,000 votes last election. North Carolina cast 327,000. Each has two Senators!

Reports are encouraging to business, though the revival that was expected to follow the tariff legislation has not been as vigorous and spontaneous as was hoped.

Meetings Held by Bro. Webb.

I began a meeting at Shady Grove and Cherryville on Saturday before the first Sunday in August. I expected Dr. Hufham to help me, but he was not well and only preached one sermon.

I continued the meeting eleven days and nights, preaching in the day at Shady Grove and at night at Cherryville, without any help except Bro. Noah Moss, who did good service in the prayer-meetings and in praying. The services were well attended, and the meetings unusually good.

At the close of the meeting I baptized nineteen; received by letter two; restored three; total, twenty-four. Four were left to be baptized next Sunday.

This was the most remarkable meeting ever held in or around Cherryville. I shall hold a week's meeting at Cherryville in October. There were a good many others who professed conversion, but I don't count them.

I commenced another meeting at Bethlehem on Saturday before the third Sunday in August, which continued nine days. At the close I baptized thirteen; restored three; total, sixteen. This was a good meeting. Rev. R. L. Limreck did most of the preaching and did it well.

I went from Bethlehem to Mt. Zion, and continued a meeting there nine days. At the close I baptized twenty-three; restored three, making twenty-six. Rev. R. L Limreck aided me and did some good preaching.

All these meetings were unusually good. Baptized in all, 55; received by letter and restored, 12; total, 67. To God be all the praise.

G. M. WEBB.

A Letter from Jonesboro.

Dear Recorder:—Our little church has just had a six-days meeting conducted by Rev. J. T. Jenkins. The church has been greatly revived, and eight accessions was the result.

Rev. C. V. Brooks, who has been our pastor for over a year, tendered his resignation at our last meeting. We understand he anticipates attending the Theological Seminary at Louisville the coming fall and winter. Bro. Brooks was greatly liked by all denominations as well as by his own church, and it is with regret that we give him up. We are now without a pastor, and expect to extend a call to some one soon.

Our church and Sunday school has just sustained a heavy loss in the death of two of its best members. On July 26th the spirit of Miss Ida Brooks took its heavenly flight, followed on August 25th by the spirit of her sister, Miss Ella Brooks. Miss Ella was about twenty two years of age, and Mis Ida about eighteen. They were both noted for their zeal in the Master's work, both in and out of the church, and their places will be hard to fill. They were daughters of Bro. W. M. Brooks and sisters of Rev. C. V. Brooks. The family have the heart-felt sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement. Yours in Christ,

S. N. LILES.

Jonesboro, Sept. 1, 1894.

From Bro. C. J. Thompson.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have just arrived in my new field. Last Saturday was my first day with College Hill church as pastor. I was greeted with large audiences and a hearty reception by this people.

I think I shall have a willing pleasant people with whom to work. While I am just over the line out of my own State, I shall by no means lose interest in any of her works. Just before leaving Kentucky, I had two of our North Carolina young men with me in meetings—brethren Blanchard of East Durham, and Millard of the Seminary. At Clay Village, we were all much strengthened. There were eighteen additions to the church. At Evergreen, Bro. Millard surpassed himself. I know of no man of his age who equals him as a preacher. The RECORDER made its first visits to my new home to-day. Success to its every interest to do its mission of blessing to our people.

Fraternally, C. J. THOMPSON.

Lynchburg, Va., Sept. 6, 1894.

From Rev. O. T. Edwards.

I have had most excellent meetings with my churches—most gracious outpourings of the Holy Spirit.

I baptized fifteen at Bear Creek. Rev. E. A. Poe, now near Morganton but formerly of Chatham, preached with great power, clearness and simplicity, and the good Lord wonderfully blessed his efforts.

The Sunday-school "Chautauqua" was a complete success—large crowds, fine speaking, and the best music ever listened to here. Bro. Ruebush knows how to lead, and does it; and Bro. N. B. Broughton in Sunday-school work stands head. The Chautauqua has left a halo of sacred and spiritual work that will give energy and push to the Sunday-schools in this vicinity, and thus radiate throughout the State.

I am now teaching a day-school at this place. I have a respectably good school.

Fraternally, O. T. EDWARDS

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,300 pages. 5,000 Illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and analogy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 100,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one-half of the language) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

enables you to begin to enjoy the use of the Dictionary at once, paying only a small sum down. Write to us and learn how favorable are the terms upon which it is sold. Best canvassers wanted in every county in North Carolina. Address

From Plymouth, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—Next to mountains, seas and rivers are the most strongly marked features of the earth's surface. They have a history extending through centuries of time. Without the rivers the earth would be a universal waste. Rivers carry the tribute of a thousand hills to the plains. All the transports in the world could not enrich the lowlands with such abundance as one great river bears in its waters. Rivers direct the tide of emigration. We may turn to the rivers when we would read the fate and prosperity of empires. The great march of events in the world's history have been along the banks of mighty streams. Whoever would trace the course of events in the life of nations must often go the banks of the Nile, the Euphrates, the Indus, the Ganges, the Rhine, Danube, the Jordan, Tiber, the Rubicon, and last but not least, the rolling Roanoke.

Plymouth is nestled near the mouth of the last-named stream, and like the Plymouth of old, it has people possessing some excellent qualities. The beauty of its foliage, the fragrance of the flowers, and the kindness of its people make it delightful beyond description.

And just here I am reminded of the misrepresentation by our friend and Bro. Caddell in the RECORDER of May 30th, 1894. He said, "Think of it: a little town with scarcely five hundred people in its corporation running in full blast ten bar-rooms." Plymouth has just half that number of bar-rooms and has over two thousand people in its corporation. He said further that "the issue in the last town election was not whether they should sell whiskey, but whether the doors of the bar-rooms should remain open on Sunday." I am sure that Plymouth had no such issue in the town election mentioned. He said further: "On Monday morning about seven o'clock an explosion was heard which shook the earth for miles around. The doctors were sent for, and when they reached the spot where the accident had happened, found more than a dozen men, some dead, some with arms and legs broken, others with their eyes blown out, and others hopelessly mangled." Then he asks what was the cause of all this suffering and distress! "Nothing except the owners of a large saw-mill were the owners of some liquor saloons, and on Sunday the hands were allowed to drink whiskey, Monday morning found them unfit to run the machinery, and everything was blown to atoms." I am sure that no such explosion took place in or near Plymouth.

Now we freely forgive our dear Bro. Caddell for these misstatements, as we forgive those who trespass against us. We want to set Plymouth straight.

Plymouth is on a regular line of steamboats connecting with the Norfolk and Southern R. R. and the Atlantic Coast Line. Its streets are long and straight, never get muddy, and are overshadowed by wide-spreading elm trees.

The Baptist cause is progressing, and the prospects for the future are bright. The Ladies Aid Society, the B. Y. P. U. and the Missionary Society are getting along well. Bro. J. W. Bryan has a large attendance at the mission every Sunday evening, and the Lord is blessing the work. We are not ready to hang our harps on the willows like Israel of old and sit and weep over the desolations of Zion; but rather rejoice because of its successes. The cords are being lengthened and the stakes strengthened.

BLAKELY H. MATHEWS.

DIED.

BAXTER—Died on Sunday night, Sept. 2d, William H. Baxter, at Carolinias City, N. C. He had been a sufferer for about nine years, and confined to his bed all the time.

TEMPERANCE BAXTER.

COOK—Sister Mary Hannah Cook was born June 19th, 1853, and died August 4th, 1894, in her forty-first year.

Sister Cook and her husband, Bro. John A. Cook, soon after their marriage, professed faith and were baptized into the fellowship of Island Creek Baptist church, Vance county, N. C. Sister Cook was noted for her quiet, amiable disposition. She exhibited much of that meekness that beautifies a Christian life. Her aged father, Bro. R. A. Evans, says, "I never knew Mollie to say a bad word or do a wicked act." She leaves a husband and several children to mourn her loss, to imitate her example, and to meet her in heaven.

PASTOR.

BYNUM—Sister Sarah Bynum departed this life Sept. 9th, 1894, aged sixty-seven years. She was a member of Ballard's Bridge church, joining while young, and up to the date of her death continued her Christian work in her humble way. I never heard any one speak against her life. She was beloved by all who knew her. Good wife, mother, sister and neighbor. She suffered for two weeks from a fall. Being old and weak, she could not recover from the hurt, so she closed her eyes on the beautiful Sabbath morning of September 9th, and surrendered to death.

She leaves a husband, aged seventy-six years, four children, one brother, one sister, and a host of friends to mourn their loss. I pray God's blessings rest upon the aged husband and her children.

JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

CHURCHILL—Thomas J. Churchill departed this life July 2d, 1894, aged nineteen years. After plowing hard all day, just as supper was spread, the call by his dear widowed mother came. About that time she heard a noise and advanced to the porch where he had at that moment been smitten with paralysis. For five days and nights his sufferings were great. God then smiled and sent relief through death, and took his own to himself. Bro. Churchill was a member of Ballard's Bridge church. He loved the church, prayer-meeting and Sunday-school. He was a faithful and obedient son, a kind and affectionate brother.

The writer has served on many funeral occasions, but never saw more people nor more tears shed than on this occasion. Truly the mother has lost a good son, the church a pious member. We do thank God for his influence, which will never die. He leaves a mother, little brother, two sisters, and many friends to mourn their loss. God bless the widowed mother and her lonely home.

JOSIAH ELLIOTT.

STANCILL—Charlie Stancill was born near Selma, Johnston county, N. C., July 10th, 1867, and died at Advance, Davie county, N. C., August 10th, 1894.

The life of a student and teacher is rarely an eventful one, and the life of Charlie Stancill is no exception to the rule. Yet to me, who knew and loved him, his character remains as a sweet memory of by-gone days and as an incentive to pure living and high thinking.

Summoned to give an account of his stewardship at the early age of twenty-four, he has left behind him a stainless mantel and the record of a Christian life spent in the service of others. As his teacher and almost daily associate in and out of school for three years, it was my privilege to know his character and disposition as intimately as those of a brother. His sensibilities were as tender as those of a woman, and his heart as pure.

From his earliest school-days, spent under the tuition of Hon. J. O. Scarborough,—distinguished for character-building as well as for teaching,—he manifested a love of books which grew with his growing years. His choice of books was exceptionally good, and his reading was wide and varied. What he read became a part of his life and thought, and gave him a range of ideas and topics not often found in one of his years. Thus his training and natural aptitudes led him early in life to the choice of teaching as his life work. In this field he was eminently successful, receiving the homage of respect and love from those whose lives were touched to finer issues by the warmth of his affections, by the unselfishness of his character, and by the high ideals both of heart and head which guided and shaped his whole career.

Few men were more lovable than Charlie Stancill. Though meditative and reticent, his sympathies were quick and his emotions tender. As a son he was dutiful, as a brother affectionate, as a friend loyal.

He joined the Baptist church in Selma at the age of seventeen, and lived and died a consistent Christian, putting to unstinted use the talents given by the Master to his keeping.

The school which he and his sister were to teach in Augusta, Davie county, was on the eve of opening when he was stricken with typhoid fever. He had never been strong since his too close application at Bingham's School, and his system rapidly succumbed to disease. Lifting his hand and expressing his perfect resignation, he answered promptly and fearlessly the roll-call that summoned him to the feet of his Master.

Often have I heard him repeat the lines,

"There is a tide in the affairs of men
Which taken at the flood leads on to fortune."

The lines have a new and fuller meaning for him now, for the tide has borne him on its bosom into the presence of his God.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its meaning. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PERIODICALS OF The American Baptist Publication Society.

Arranged by the most eminent scholars in the Baptist denomination North, South, East, and West, in the interests of Baptists.

The Society desires to call attention to the mechanical excellence of its publications. All things else being equal, publications that are attractive and develop the artistic sense of the scholar are the ones which eventually accomplish the most good. If the printing is first-class and the pictures good the scholars are more likely to preserve and use the periodicals. The Publication Society has always tried to obtain the best results in the issuing of their publications, and no expense is spared in the mechanical work of its periodicals and books, while providing the best also for the subject matter. Compare our periodicals with others.

BELLS

The Home Circle.

I Remember, I Remember.

I remember; I remember
The house where I was born,
The little window where the sun
Came peeping in at morn;
He never came a wink too soon,
Nor brought too long a day;
But now I often wish the night
Had borne my breath away!

I remember, I remember
The roses red and white,
The violets and the lily-cups—
Those flowers made of light!
The lilacs where the robin built
And where my brother set
The laburnum on his birthday—
The tree is living yet.

I remember, I remember
Where I was used to swing,
And thought the air must rush as fresh
To swallows on the wing;
My spirit flew in feathers then
That is so heavy now,
And summer pools could hardly cool
The fever on my brow.

I remember, I remember
The fir trees dark and high;
I used to think their slender tops
Were close against the sky,
It was a childish ignorance,
But now 'tis little joy
To know I'm farther off from heaven
Than when I was a boy!

—Thomas Hood.

Mothers of Note.

"All that I am," said John Quincy Adams, "my mother made me."

In the biography of many of our great men we find marked mention made of a mother's influence in directing their genius or otherwise affecting their career.

Washington was only eleven years old when his father died, leaving the widowed mother with five children to educate and direct. She used daily to gather her flock around her and teach them the principles of religion and morality from a little manual in which she wrote all her maxims. This manual was preserved by Washington as one of his most precious treasures, and was often consulted by him in after life. It is said that the simple majesty of the moral greatness of Mary Washington called forth the following remark from certain foreign officers, on retiring from her presence: "It is not surprising that America should produce great men, since she can boast of such mothers."

In the biography of Oliver Cromwell we find frequent allusion made to the noble character of his mother. The following is an example: "A women possessed of the most glorious faculty of self help when other assistance failed her, and who preserved, in the gorgeous palace of Whitehall, the simple tastes that distinguished her in the old brewery at Huntington, whose only care, amidst all her splendor, was for the safety of her son in his dangerous eminence."

Watt, the great civil engineer, was greatly influenced by his mother, whom he described as a "brave, brave woman; none now to be seen like her."

Cuvier, the geologist, is another instance of a mother's influence. She learned Latin in order to assist him in his studies; she also laid the foundation of drawing and literature in his mind and so helped him in all his studies that he attributed the greater portion of his success to her efforts. De Maistre asserted that the noble character of his mother made all women venerable in his eyes. He described her as "an angel to whom God lent a body for a brief season." Samuel Johnson, even in time of his greatest difficulty, contributed largely out of his slender means to the comfort of his mother, who exercised remarkable influence over him. But the instances of notable mention of the influence of mothers are too numerous to cite.

As a rule, our first instructor, the mother, is our example. Nero's mother was a murderer, and Nero was a murderer on a gigantic scale. Byron's mother was vain, ill-tempered, and violent, and so was Byron. The child learns by simple imitation and without effort. The most important era of life is that of childhood, when the child begins to color and mold himself by companionship with others. Every new educator effects less than his predecessor. Thus it is, through this influence over the mind and the molding of the character in childhood, that mothers ultimately influence and direct the course of events of the world's history. —The Home.

The Heavy End of a Match.

"Mary," said Farmer Flint at the breakfast table as he asked for a second cup of coffee, "I've made a discovery."

"Well, Cyrus, you're about the last one I'd expect of such a thing, but what is it?"

"I have found that the heavy end of a match is its light end, responded Cyrus with a grin that would have adorned a skull.

Mary looked disgusted, but with an air of triumph quickly retorted, "I've got a discovery too, Cyrus. It was made by Dr. R. V. Pierce, and is called a 'Golden Medical Discovery.' It drives away blotches and pimples, purifies the blood, tones up the system and makes one feel brand new. Why, it cured Cousin Ben who had Consumption and was almost reduced to a skeleton. Before his wife began to use it she was a pale, sickly thing, but look at her; she's rosy-cheeked and healthy, and weighs 165 pounds. That, Cyrus is a discovery that's worth mentioning."

Young or middle aged men, suffering from premature decline of power, however induced, speedily and radically cured. Illustrated book securely sealed sent for ten cents in stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sincerity in Speech.

The telling of little "white lies" is a fault which is growing to sad proportions in these days of complex social obligation, and the all-consuming desire to appear other and better than we really are. People who would shrink from telling an out-and-out falsehood do not hesitate to convey a false impression which is equally misleading, and amounts in the end, to precisely the same as a barefaced lie. How many times in a day does the tongue of the weak-minded, conforming man or woman stammer, "Yes, yes!" to that to which they are conscious their interlocutor expects assent! "You know that poem of Clough's which begins so-and so?" And the obliging listener, too weak to confess that he has never read a word of Clough, answers nervously, "Yes," and the little white lie (why not black?) is told. Too late to call it back now. So the insincere man lets it go, and covers it up with others.

It is a growing and dangerous habit, this insincerity in speech. It gradually undermines the moral character; it leads to deliberate falsehood, to wilful deception, to the commission of small breaches of trust which may be concealed by falsehood; and, finally, if unchecked, it leads to the commission of graver crimes—the natural result of weakened moral fiber.

The true Christian must be absolutely sincere in word as well as in deed and intent. It is not safe, even for politeness' sake, to dally with these little white lies. Tell the truth, even though it makes you appear ungenerous, unsympathetic, or less well informed than your friend took for granted. You owe it to yourself, and you owe it to others, to be as frank and sincere as your words imply that you are. Do not say "yes" when you mean "no." Be honest in speech, if you hope to remain honest in heart. —Zion's Herald.

The Spider's Thread

In a lecture at Boston, Professor Wood dealt with the phenomena of spider life. In one tribe the female is one thousand three hundred times as large as the male. The spider's threads or fibers, one of these threads being estimated to be one millionth of a hair in thickness. Three kinds of thread are spun. One of great strength for the radiating or spoke lines of the web; the cross lines, or what a sailor might call the ratlines, are finer and are tenacious; that is, they have upon them little specks or globules of a very sticky gum. These specks are put on with even interspaces. They are set quite thickly along the line, and are what in the first instance catch and hold the legs or wings of the fly. Once caught in this fashion the prey is held secure by threads flung over it somewhat in the manner of a lasso. The third kind of silk is that which the spider throws out in a mass of flood, by which it suddenly envelops any prey of which it is somewhat afraid as for example a wasp. A scientific experiment once drew out from the body of a single spider three thousand four hundred and eighty yards of thread or spider silk—a length little short of two miles. Silk may be woven of spider's thread, and it is more glossy brilliant than that of the silkworm, being of a golden color. An enthusiastic entomologist is said to have secured enough for the weaving of a suit of clothes for Louis XIV.—Ex.

Helping.

The basket of blocks was on the ground, and three rather cross little faces looked down at it.

"It's too heavy for me," said Jimmy.

"Well, you are big as I am, 'cause we are twins," said Nellie.

"I won't carry it," said the little cousin, with a pout.

Mamma looked from her open window and saw the trouble.

"One day I saw a picture of three little birds," she said. "They wanted a long stick carried somewhere, but it was too large for any one of them to carry. What do you think they did?"

"We don't know," said the twins.

"They all took hold of it together," said mamma, "and then they could fly away with it."

The children laughed and looked at each other. Then they all took hold together of the basket and found it very easy to carry.

"The way to do all the hard things in this world," said mamma, "is for every one to help a little. No one can do them all; but every one can help."—Sunbeam.

Hope So.

A young lady, teaching her class in Sunday-school, found the lesson for a certain day embracing the Saviour's declaration, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me hath everlasting life." A lit the girl inquired:

"Is that true—is it surely true?"

"O yes," replied the teacher, "it is surely true, for Christ says so, and whatever he says is true."

"It must be very nice," said the child, "to have everlasting life, and to know that, whatever comes, you are saved—saved even now."

"Yes," answered the teacher, "it is a great blessing indeed."

"Then you are saved, are you not?" asked the interested scholar.

"I hope so," was the reply.

"Hope so!" said the child: "Why, I thought you told me just now it was sure enough!"

A Rare Accomplishment.

Truth-telling in its highest ranges is a very rare accomplishment, because it requires an uncorrupted judgment and a well-balanced mind, together with a good deal of courage and unselfishness. Many people cannot see a matter truly because, they are so full of vanities and prejudice and foolish fancies. Some cannot utter it truly because, having very vivid impressions, it seems to them necessary to convey those impressions to others by a deal of amplifying and exaggerating, and they take refuge in the excuse that no falsity is imparted since not all they say is believed. But the effect on the utterer's character is nevertheless evil. Principle has been called "a passion of truth;" and he who is destitute of this passion has need to look to it lest the ugly word "unprincipal" soon become connected with his name in the minds of the most discerning. —Zion's Herald.

For this is love's nobility,
Not to scatter bread and gold,
Goods and raiment bought and sold,
But to hold fast his simple sense
And speak the speech of innocence.

For he that feeds men serveth few;
He serves all who dares be true.

IT'S A MILLSTONE

About a young man's neck to be a sufferer from nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and the thousand and one derangements of mind and body that result from, unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance. Such habits result in loss of manly power, wreck the constitution and sometimes produce softening of the brain, epilepsy, paralysis, and even dread insanity.

To reach, re-claim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps, for postage. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

A MAN who contends for popular government will, if he be honest and unswerving, be approved by the people. The trouble in this day and time is that men often proclaim themselves tribunes of the people, when, in truth, they are demagogues. There are more men of this type on earth to-day than the earth can bear much longer. They are everywhere, serving parties, seeking office and making patriotic and self sacrificing speeches. The faithlessness of these men has taught the people a sad lesson; they have become distrustful of all candidates for office. And if this sentiment grows as it is growing, it will regenerate this government. It will initiate an era in which men will not dare seek office, in which people will rule parties, and, through them, the land. What a boon it would be, if there were a public sentiment that would discountenance any man who accepted political preferment by other means than the call of bodies of citizens! What a boon it would be if men would cease to put themselves forward and wait for their fellows to call them! The abominable reward system, the pitiable announcement methods and baser influence selling or exchanging are unworthy of the sanction of honorable men.

There are other men who stand for popular rights, but who are diverted or restrained from their principles. They mean well, but there is a power above them, a false god, whom they worship or fear, that tells them that this consummation is inexpedient, that that is not desirable yet awhile, and so time and again they are put off. These men, swerving from their principles in fear or blind worship, are tools of the others who profess to serve the people, but whose lives are wholly selfish.

There is, at least, one man in public life in North Carolina who is honest, and whom neither fear nor threats have swerved from his course. He announced once for all with what party he affiliated; but he bends the knee to none. By his unswerving adherence to principle he has won the applause and the confidence of three parties,—something unprecedented in our State history. This should be an incentive to others to be self-respectful always, whether political expediency demands otherwise or not.

A recent article by this man is, as others by him have been, a decided stroke for extension of popular power. The article argues for the election of United States Senators by vote of the people; and it clearly demonstrates that Senators may be chosen by one sixteenth of the popular vote under the present system, and that but few are choices of more than an eighth! These columns have contained an article on this subject so recently that further remarks are unnecessary.

In the same article it is contended for elimination of the veto power of the President, and the prevention of patronage-buying and selling. The veto is a piece of monarchy that even monarchy is outgrowing; the spoils system is on par with the habits of robbers; neither is consonant with our civilization.

A few years ago the author of an article containing such propositions as have been referred to would have been ostracised as a political heretic. Now, so vigorous is public sentiment regarding independent expression of opinion, instead of a heretic, he is more orthodox in the general opinion, without regard to party, than any man we know.

When each voter becomes strong enough to express his own will, wise enough to seek the achievement of that of the most, and patriotic enough to conform to it; the ideal government that is compassed in the slogan "of, by and for the people," will have been attained. And if so many citizens did not esteem advancement at the expense and by the deception of the people above the common weal, this consummation would not long be ideal.

Since the reference to Hon. Wm. L. Wilson, the inquiry, "Is not Wilson a statesman?" has come from more than one direction. Mr. Wilson ought to be a statesman, but he is not, at least, in our opinion. In fact there is no statesman in the proper sense of the word in the United States. There is none who measures up to Blaine's stature. There are loose stitches in the make-up of most of our public men; and a statesman is a very high type of the human species. Mr. Wilson is "the scholar in politics," a Christian in legislative halls. Likes of him will explode Ingall's unmanly comment, "the purification of politics is an iridescent dream."

ONE WHO had heard that students of a college in our State had determined to resume the use of caps and gowns, according to classes, would not be surprised to know that the same students have to hire men to play ball for them, and have to pay a good price to get them. The caps and gowns are evidences of effeminacy of mind and body, the hired ball players, of the latter only.

The people of North Carolina are not accustomed to give college students credit for a great deal of sense, since long, middle-parted hair, canes, colors, ribbons, and yells became their chief stock and store for public occasions; and we hope they will join in a general move to incarcerate the first idiot who appears in a gown. The wretched mass of conceit that desires to wear something to distinguish him from honest beings is as pitiable as he is senseless. It is hard to comprehend that a young man with a ray of enlightenment, not to mention those who have become college seniors, can become sufficiently stultified with conceit, sufficiently unappreciative of the dignity and the decency of common manhood to stand before his species in "cap and gown."

We are glad to remark that the tendency everywhere is toward simplicity and similarity of attire—for males; it is not given to us to speak of others. Preachers no longer seek "preachers' coats," and we believe the day is not distant when all sensible men will wear the honest and comfortable sack at weddings and funerals and in business, regardless of the decrees of "conventionality" and the dictates of cloth makers.

THE people who went to hear a political speech at Raleigh from an ex Lieutenant Governor of Pennsylvania the other day must have been sadly disappointed. After a few words it was clear that the "ex Governor" was there, not in the interest of party or public success, but to proclaim the virtues of the Nicaragua canal scheme! He made it plain as day that the canal would be proof against all possible evils; and that it only wanted the government to lend it influence with $100,000,000 in bonds! The "ex Governor," as he was advertised, would do well as a real estate agent, but as a Nicaragua canal boomer he is almost too sanguine. He promises too much; and, you know, promises are not going for a great deal in these parts of late.

The United States government will make a mistake that has lately been paralleled in France, when it lends its influence to any private affair for any purpose. We do not know enough about engineering to speak of the possibility of successful prosecution of the work; but we do know that it is none of our government's business so long as it is owned by a private stock company whose bonds are sadly in need of substantial bolstering. If the United States desires to cut the canal, let it buy the company out. There is prospect of nothing better than enormous corruption and persistent failure so long as a government supplies the money for private companies to squander. France and De Lesseps and desolate Panama cry out against Mr. Black, cry out so loudly, too, that none but those who will not hear can mistake its tone.

The audacity of the man, taking advantage of the occasion, and coming all the way from Pennsylvania for the purpose, is only equalled by the child-like gullibility of those who allowed the body to endorse the scheme.

TO THOSE who deceive themselves, despite Solomon's words, that money begets happiness, late occurrences in the families of the Goulds, Astors and Vanderbilts ought to be enlightening. The fact that occurrences in these families are made the subject of endless rumor and speculation is sufficient, though there were no evil in them. The Goulds are troubled with adventuresses, and one of them had to pay quite a sum to get rid of one not long ago; but their troubles do not compare with those of the wealthier Astor and Vanderbilt families, the peace of both of which has been threatened with a divorce suit and public scandal.

Clear conscience toward God and man is the only ground of happiness; and they are few who keep their consciences clear, but the number of the happy is not greater. There is desperate appearance of joy and hilarity about people who do not seem to have consciences; but they have, and they never know a happy moment. The man who sacrifices conscience for money or preferment, thinking the latter will secure that ease of mind which all men seek, will regret the transaction until it has been required.

How to Make the Prayer-Meeting a Success.

BY REV. C. A. JENKENS.

The hour of prayer is too often regarded by the pastor as a drudgery, and by the people as a necessary nuisance. Wednesday evening, as the shadows lengthen, both shepherd and flock, realizing that the melancholy night has come, the saddest of the week, take up the doleful refrain, "I was sorry when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." Hence, the service is suited rather to a funeral occasion than to the rapturous hour of communion with God.

Having been impressed with the utter failure of the usual methods of the week-night worship, I have given the matter some earnest thought, and have striven to lift this holy service from the dust of reproach and to render it a success and a joy, a feast of good things, a spiritual force. To fill the empty pews with joyful worshippers, to transmute the singing from a dirge into one of the 'songs of Zion,' to fill the prayers with sweetness and power, to make all the exercises inspiring and profitable, is a difficult, but not an impossible, task. That there are numerous obstacles, no one can deny; for the meeting is on a week night, in the midst of the community's bustle and business, when many find it necessary to remain at their usual posts, and not a few want only an excuse to absent themselves from the house of prayer. There is a way, however, to surmount all difficulties, given below, which is in successful weekly use, thus having the advantage of being a fact, not a theory.

THE REAL OFFICE OF THE PRAYER-MEETING.

Failure has often met the pastor just here—he has not appreciated the week service as a spiritual force in his work. He not infrequently gathers up a few scraps Wednesday evening, the odds and ends of half developed thoughts, or else attempts to feed the flock on the remnants left over from the Sunday sermon, thus going before the people with tasteless provinder and skimmed milk, whereas they should have strong meat and choice cream. So, when they ask for bread, he gives them a stone; and when he asks for a congregation, they give him their pews. Under such treatment, it is not strange that the meeting is sickly, sparsely attended, and a blot on the minister's work. To be a success, its true position must be realized, its due importance asserted. It is, most emphatically, the great engine turning all the spiritual machinery of the church, accelerating every movement, giving activity to every part, securing unity and symmetry in every department of pastoral work. It is the heart of the church, sending its warm life-giving blood to the remotest members of the spiritual body, until every limb is active and strong, and every cheek is flushed with the beauty of holiness. It is the nursery for the babes in Christ; it is the arsenal for the mighty men of valor; it is the heavenly fountain whence issue many noble graces; it is the house of God and the gate of heaven.

SPIRITUALITY.

Since spirituality is the essential condition of every true prayer-meeting, it cannot be cultivated with too great zeal. The pastor, charged by the Holy Spirit, must impart his spiritual fervor to others until they glow and burn with the holy fire that has been kindled by the breath of heaven on his own heart. Whatever method may be adopted, let it be strictly scriptural and intensely devotional. The prayer-meeting is no place for sensational schemes or transient novelties; nor should the hour be devoted to business or made the occasion to announce the wares of agents.

SOME IMPORTANT ITEMS.

Let the pastor lead—by all means lead, and only lead. The meeting is for the people, and a sermon or lecture, without variation, is an affront to them. There should not be too much singing, but just enough, and that of the right sort. Sometimes one hymn, a stanza here and a stanza there, will suffice for the hour. On the other hand, occasionally sing several hymns together. Let the rule be, to have no rule. Let all talks and remarks be brief, or postponed till the meeting adjourns. The wind of the loquacious brother should be exhausted by means of an air-pump, if necessary; it is better for him to be exhausted than the audience. Let the leader stand up most of the hour, if not all of it, as he may in this way better entrance his hearers. Open the meeting with a spirited stanza, a brief prayer, a short talk, or a lesson from Scripture. Be regularly irregular in the exercises, avoiding all ruts. Let the prayers be spiritual, pointed, practical. Encourage many to exercise this gift, enforcing the truth that long, dull prayers are intolerable. Never scold. When reproof for non-attendance is necessary, it would be wise to administer it from the pulpit, when the guilty parties would stand a chance of hearing it. Don't burden the Sunday services with notices of the meeting; make things lively, and the people will come. Fill the trough with salt, and the sheep will gather. But, remember, salt, not saltpetre.

VARIETY.

The week-night service is emphatically the people's meeting, which cannot reach the highest success unless they take a conspicuous part therein. The method must be elastic, yet permanent. Some new method may succeed finely for awhile, and may increase the attendance for a few weeks, because a startling novelty; but like a meteor, it soon passes away. A spasmodic interest may do more harm than good. Hoping to give relief to some puzzled pastor, I present below my own plan of conducting a prayer-meeting.

The people must bring their Bibles to every service. I give notice a week in advance what will be the order of exercises. For instance, I announce that the congregation will be expected to think during the week on the subject of Faith, and on Wednesday night to read a passage containing any one of the words faith, trust, belief, or any passage setting forth an example of faith. As each reads, usually many will take part. I comment on the passage. The readers select their own passages. Other subjects are treated similarly, as love, hope, the promises, &c. Some times the selections are read, sometimes recited and commented on. Again, I announce an experience meeting, requesting each participant to state his strongest Christian evidence, and to comment briefly on it, or else I make comments myself. Then, I may have a doctrinal meeting, giving the Scripture references to be read by different members of the congregation. The subject may be the Holy Spirit, the Divinity of Christ, Final Perseverance, the Trinity, Baptism, Communion, &c., &c. Then, I have a Question meeting. I call on the audience to write on a slip of paper any difficulty arising from their perusal of the Scriptures or in their Christian experience, and hand it to me. Sometimes I gather up questions in my pastoral visiting, and then announce the time at which they will be answered. At other times the meeting is thrown open for informal talks, and occasionally an inquiry meeting is held at the close of the hour.

At present, I am expounding the parables of our Lord. I have never hit upon anything that has proved so rich a vein. The exposition and illustration of these parables so far has awakened unusual interest among the people. I may take up the miracles after awhile; then, perhaps, the leading Bible characters.

Thus a pastor can always make the meeting fresh and profitable; and it is astonishing to behold the congregations, 'how they grow.'

Qualifications of an Ideal Superintendent.*

Let us see if we can answer the question, what is an an ideal superintendent?

First, in my opinion, the superintendent must possess three essential qualifications—piety, love and sympathy for the young, and tact in management.

His religion is seen in his every-day life, and his business is conducted upon the principle of the "Golden Rule." As superintendent he determines, by God's help, to do, to the best of his ability, the duties that pertain to that office, and never to forget to ask for the Holy Spirit's presence and help.

His love and sympathy for the scholars make them love him, and it is this bond of love that exists between superintendent and scholar, and also between superintendent and teacher, that in a great measure make a the successful school. As an officer he possesses, in a measure, at least, skill in governing, and he studies how to keep the machinery of the school moving along smoothly; perhaps it is only by a word of encouragement to this teacher, and a little advice to that one, but it is like the oil to the wheels, and is just what was needed. He is persistent in securing good order, does not let one or two failures discourage him, believes that "if at first you don't succeed, try, try again," and generally succeeds. He shows forbearance with the faults of teacher or scholar, knowing that the best way to overcome a fault is not to condemn, but in love and kindness to help them to see their mistakes.

He confers with the teachers as his cabinet, impresses upon them the importance of the work, and makes each one feel, his or her personal responsibility in all matters concerning the school. Here it is, that he finds out the true condition of each class, and plans for the better and more diligent work.

He maintains a teacher's meeting for the especial purpose of studying the lessons. Each teacher is expected to be present with lessons prepared, and he is himself the high example of conscientious preparation. He is a diligent Bible student, not only for his own advancement, but that he may be the better able to teach or review, and thus gain the respect in this particular of teacher and scholar. He is a progressive Christian, anxious to learn for himself and school, he is not satisfied with present attainments, or past success, but is constantly looking for better ways of doing the work, and to this end finds out all approved methods of school management, bringing them into use, if by so doing he can advance the interests of the cause he has at heart.

He is even-tempered and earnest, is the trusted friend of teacher and scholar, has no time or taste for worldly pleasures or amusements, does nothing for show, neither makes use of sensational devices to fill the school. He believes such methods are wrong, and would rather see that slow but steady growth which marks the permanent work.

He is not a great talker, for while talk is all right and important sometimes, yet action is better.

He never scolds or frets. If discipline is needed, it is done by private personal talks with the offender.

He sees that school and classes have the necessary equipments to do effective work, and is particular that the air, light and heat are the best to be obtained.

He begins, runs and closes on time, is the soul of punctuality, for in this particular it can be said "like superintendent, like school."

In fact, he superintends everything, and permits nothing to interfere with this supreme duty. He looks after classes, keeps them from interruption, finds out who are absent, and plans to have them looked up at once. He examines classes from time to time, to see how they are learning; reviews the school after every lesson, and conscientiously and faithfully conducts the school in such a manner as is befitting the Lord's day and the Lord's house.

He knows when teacher or scholar is sick or in trouble, and visits and comforts them.

He gives spare time socially to visit those who need it most—the poor, the friendless, the unruly.

He communicates with parents either by letter or personal work, and by this means secures their sympathy and reclaims many absent scholars. To do this he has what he calls his staff, composed of young Christians who assist him in visiting the homes of the absentees, bring them back and get new scholars, thereby accomplishing a two-fold object.

The interest of the school is advanced and the young Christians are helped to grow into useful workers in the Master's vineyard: in this he should be imitated by all who have the good of young Christians at heart; because the Devil is ever on the watch for idle hands, and too often he finds them unemployed for the reason they do not know how to take hold of the work, and as all can not be teachers, this is a good way to start them into Christian work.

The superintendent's aim is to have the best school, not only in numbers, but in the essential quality of spiritual work. To make Bible students of the scholars, to be the means of converting and bringing them into the church as early as possible, for the great end and aim of Sunday-school work is to lead the children to the Saviour while they are young, and make of them useful Christian workers.

These are some of the qualifications and duties of an ideal Sunday school superintendent; in and above them all is the earnest desire to serve the Master, to do with his might that which his hands find to do, remembering that life is not long, that "the night cometh in which no man can work." Let us never forget to pray for our superintendent, asking God to bless him in his work, and at the same time lend our presence, and help him to the best of our ability in the school.

Action of the Joint Committee.

The committee appointed by the Southern Baptist Convention and American Baptist Home Mission Society met and unanimously agreed upon the following: There were present from the S. B. C. committee Drs. T. T. Eaton, H. H. Harris, I. T. Tichenor, J. B. Gambrell, T. P. Bell and O. F. Gregory. The committee unanimously invited Prof. Noah K. Davis of Va. to sit with them and participate in the deliberation. The committee from the A. B. H. M. Soc. present were Hon. J. L. Howard, Conn.; Drs. H. L. Morehouse, J. L. Morgan, M. McVicker and A. S. Hobart, N. Y.; Drs. Jesse B. Thomas and Nathan E. Wood, Mass.; and Dr. E. H. Johnson, Penns.

The joint committee organized by the election of Hon. J. L. Howard as Chairman and O. F. Gregory and N. E. Wood as Sec'ts. The whole meeting was marked by Christian courtesy, unanimity of feeling, and an evident desire on the part of the brethren from both sections to get closer together in their work for Christ. The overture of the S. B. C. committee contained the following paragraphs:

"Resolved, That desiring to avoid discussion of past issues, or of matters on which it is known that the views of brethren North and South are widely divergent, we will in all sincerity address ourselves to the task of securing for the future such co-operation as may be found practicable without attempting at once to adjust all differences. The committee desire to state that in making this overture the S. B. C. is prompted not by any necessity of its own or that of its Home Mission Board, but believing that the time has come when it should enlarge its work among the colored people of the South, it entertains the hope that a proper co-operation with the Home Mission Society in its work already established, would contribute to the efficiency of both."

Copy of Resolution under which this committee was appointed, defining our duties:

"WHEREAS, In time past this Convention has made overtures to the Am. Home Mission similar to this without securing the desired results; and whereas, now there is reason to hope that an overture will prove more satisfactory, therefore

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 3, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

ON THE home stretch. What is to be done before the Convention—and there is a great deal—must be done quickly. Let us work and pray that we may end the year gloriously.

THE citizen who is misrepresented in this day and time has only himself to blame, if he is misrepresented by a law-maker for whom he voted. Christian citizens cannot be represented by whiskey men or opponents of Christian education or non-Christians.

"READ AND ACT," says Bro. Willingham in a general address to the pastors. It seems to us that one who reads, reads the Scriptures, cannot refuse to act; and it is characteristic of Bro. Willingham to accompany his deliverances with Scripture.

Let the pastors read the letter; let them read the brief statement in another column concerning our work, and let them act with a vim.

Readers are actors, the only actors, generally; let them act now and hereafter so as to arouse those who do not read. That's the great difficulty—to interest those who are now indifferent.

AMONG others there are two kinds of church policies pursued by Baptist churches. One is individual in all that the word implies—independent, bold, regardless; the other is altogether indifferent—lacking interest, will and independence. Neither is wholesome.

There is a mean that is golden. A proper adjustment of the centrifugal and centripetal forces ensures equilibrium. Without the one the other is frustrated. Unchecked, destruction results; balanced, the movement is perfect. Churches that are independent, and yet balanced by doctrine and spirit, cannot but realize that their duty is to work together for the common cause. That this is not realized by churches founded upon the same doctrines is testimony that they have unlike spirits—and that one of them should change.

THERE are many more Associations scheduled for the next several weeks than our usual representative can attend. We must have a representative at every one of them; we want a report of each of them.

Thus we have to ask the annual favor, that our brethren say or do what they can, wherever there is no especial representative. We have made arrangements with some of the brethren.

We will make it satisfactory to any one who takes new subscriptions or renewals for us; and we do not object to more than one worker at a meeting in which we have not engaged one.

If each brother or sister will make an effort to secure a new subscriber for the RECORDER under our present offer, or a club of renewals, and send them direct to us or hand them to our representative at the Association, we will be very grateful. And if the Association opens and no RECORDER man asserts himself, any reader of the paper will greatly oblige us by acting for him.

A little co-operation in this matter—a matter that deserves the sympathy of every North Carolina Baptist—will help tremendously.

PRESIDENT WINSTON is sending out a type written letter to editors, stating that so many false statements have been made about the University that he would like to have those eulogistic and far-fetched "facts about the University," lately gotten up by President Winston and revised for the signatures of Gov. Carr and others of the executive committee who had reputations to sustain, —requests the editors to publish these select "facts" in their papers. We do not know how many editors he sent his falsehood-charging letter and "facts" to; he never sent them to us, because, probably, he is aware that we know too many facts as are facts already.

If any false statements about the University have been published by us, it is President Winston's fault that they have not been corrected. Our columns are open to him; and we call upon him to correct in detail any false statements that have appeared in our columns or to forsake indiscriminate and unworthy generalities that reflect upon us. Until corrections are made we shall continue to believe that we have been dealing with the South the whole truth, and nothing but the truth,—and we shall keep

HINDERANCES TO CO-OPERATION.

The proceedings of the joint conference of representative Baptists from the North and South, an account of which appears in another column, are hardly of great import. In fact, we fear our readers will not see anything interesting, not to say arousing, in the report, which was sent out officially. Certainly, whatever else it may be, it is, in no sense, momentous.

The spirit of those who met, we are told, was laudable. Remarkable, indeed, is it not, that Christian men should manifest a laudable spirit? And many unite in prophesying good of it. Indeed we hope so. Surely the Lord will bless such efforts toward brotherliness.

The meeting's object was to make a move toward co operation between Northern and Southern Baptists in the uplifting of the negro race. That a mighty power is needed for such an exploit cannot be doubted; but if that power depends on the co operation of Northern and Southern Baptists—real co-operation—we fear the negroes will have to uplift themselves.

The trouble between Northern and Southern Baptists is not slavery. An exchange says it is time that that institution were forgotten. Had the exchange known what it was talking about the remark would not have been made. Slavery is never mentioned in a spirit of animosity now; and it is the last thing that Southern Baptists would call up to prevent co operation.

The trouble is not lack of motive to uplift the negro; for Southern Baptists have the same reasons that the North has from a Christian standpoint, and additional reasons worthy of consideration, which the North has not. We have got to get along with the negro. He is here; and in his present state he is not wholesome as a citizen. He has not sufficient appreciation of the duties of citizenship; he is often used for ill by ambition. His prejudices are still easily aroused. And the Southern Baptists realize these things as the North cannot; and they realize that the elevation of the negroes is the sole remedy. If the Christian spirit did not inspire us to seek the moral and religious elevation of the negro, the selfish spirit would.

Why then does not the South join with the North in the maintenance and establishment of institutions for the uplifting of this people? Northerners have taken decisive steps. They have established many institutions not less efficient than young white men enjoy. Surely if the South were disposed to aid in the education of the race, it seems that it ought to aid these institutions already established. But the fact is, it does not; and it has good reasons.

The South has a paramount duty to itself; and the South is too poor to divide its wealth. There is extensive illiteracy among our people; and it will require all we can afford to remove it. The free schools help; and the negroes get more out of them than the whites. They are inadequate for either. We have no great number of colleges, and those we have are not too well equipped, nor are they prepared, as they would be under more favorable conditions, to place education within every young man's grasp. Our high-schools are many, but they do not reach far enough. And until we have educational facilities for whites it is not to be expected that we will co-operate with anybody in the education of the negroes. We pay much taxes for them; but it will be more than a century before we commence giving them colleges; it will be forever before we give them that which we have not. And this brings us to our second reason.

The North has the wrong idea, in our opinion. It wishes to begin educating the negro at the top. It builds him seminaries and universities, when his children are half-clad and without books or paper in country schools a dozen weeks in the year. The North takes it that the negro is prepared to pursue the higher studies which he cannot comprehend, a smattering acquaintance with which produces ability to use a limited number of great inappropriate words and an ambition to seem profound. The little learning destroys many a good workman, and drives true conception of human life here and hereafter from his mind. The South sees these things wherever there are young negro men who have attended their colleges or seminaries or universities; and a labored, persistent effort to use great words, an air of conceit, and, withal, manifestations of a vague distrust of their words, is a general characteristic of these men. If, however, they had been given, slowly and thoroughly, a knowledge of reading, writing, arithmetic and geography, instead of abortive ideas of theology, psychology and moral philosophy, they would be able to do good work, and would not feel called upon to appear learned, nor would they mind hardening their hands like honest men.

The South feels—aye, suffers—these things; and the South is not going to co-operate in giving the negroes university educations, which will intensify their unwholesomeness. The South will instruct them in the word of God, will preach to them and hold institutes, in which they may be instructed; will pay tribute to the support of schools that will benefit them; but further than this it will not go. If this is co operation, very well.

DR. SKINNER'S WORK.

It has been our privilege to examine "Sermons, Addresses and Reminiscences, to which is appended Briefs, Sketches and Skeletons of Sermons," by Rev. Thomas E. Skinner, D. D. The book will be ready for delivery in a few days.

The name of Dr. Skinner, whose two score years in the ministry have been blessed of God to a remarkable degree, a name that stands for culture, thought and consecration, is sufficient guarantee of the sound worth of the book. From the presses of Edwards & Broughton, it is a testimony to the ability of the South to make handsome books.

There are twenty-nine remarkable revival sermons between the covers of the work—the rich fruitage of consecrated study. They are helpful and suggestive, yea, even now a decade since through them God brought many souls to salvation, they are convincing. These are the meat of the book, though there is much else of vital worth.

In Dr. Skinner's experience it was given him to preach the funeral sermons of subjects worthy of his best efforts; and the ten sermons incorporated in this work are valuable both from an historical and a spiritual standpoint. Dr. Skinner wisely insists that funeral sermons may be opportunely addressed to the unconverted living as well as devoted to the consolation of stricken believers.

Then there are miscellaneous addresses covering a wide range of subjects and thoroughly setting forth each; that on Denominational Strength and that on Sixty Years of Conventional Life are inestimably valuable.

We have not time to dwell upon the delightful reminiscences. They deal with the prominent figures and events of our history; and they are written in a charmingly frank and easy style that relieves the strain characteristic of books of sermons. We hope to refer to this part of the work later.

The remainder of the work is devoted to sixty sermon briefs, outlines, etc., that are designed to suggest and aid in sermon preparation.

Taken all in all the work is worthy of its author, yes, worthy of the Baptist churches of North Carolina, to which it is dedicated. Dr. Skinner has fittingly capped his three score and ten years with this service to his brethren, which will be an honor to him through the years to come.

We hope to speak of the contents of the book more specifically in another issue.

THE UNIVERSITY WAR.

Views of A North Carolina College President.

THE ANTI-APPROPRIATION PAMPHLET CONDEMNED.

MESSENGER BUREAU, }
RALEIGH, Sept. 21. }

President Winston of the State University yesterday received the following letter from the president of a North Carolina college:

"I congratulate you upon the increase in numbers at Chapel Hill this year. The anti-appropriation pamphlet, as I believe, is not only a fallacy in argument, but will prove so in fact. I have been tempted, for the first time in my life, to answer the paper in public print, but the University really needs no such feeble support as my pen could give. The State of North Carolina will maintain her University, which has not only been her pride but a fountain of intelligence and strength for 100 years."—Wilmington Messenger, Sept. 22.

That heading is a reproach to so intelligent a publication as the Wilmington Messenger. It fumes with prejudice and misrepresentation. But that's no matter.

Prest. Winston usually gets his letters at Chapel Hill. Yet, a day after a "college president" writes him one of presumably private nature, the correspondent of the Messenger is able to send it to Wilmington from Raleigh. Rather unaccountable, is it not? Rather unusual, too, it is, that there is "a North Carolina college president" who allows statements from him to be published anonymously. Who will wonder if the students of such a one become anonymous, shame-faced correspondents? And why is he ashamed of his name? Surely one who speaks truths should be proud to connect his name with them. Surely one who has discovered the fallacy in "How Far Should a State Educate?" stands alone; but such a one should not be ashamed to lend the weighty influence of his name to his utterances. Really, we would like to make this profound and far seeing college president's acquaintance. O, would that he would yield to temptation just once in his blessed, but unsung existence, and dispel the cloud of error that has enveloped tens of thousands not only in North Carolina, but beyond our borders, even from Georgia to Massachusetts. How noble of him to resist temptation! How unconscious is he of his great destiny! And to think that he resists because of humbleness! Alas! alas! that such a crime can be committed in humility's good name!

And he has a prophet's eye, too. When this humble, "feeble," unsung hero is dead if indeed he is not immortal,—North Carolina will realize all too late that another flower has wasted its fragrance on her desert air; and we hope our State University will devote an annual appropriation to building a monument to him in grateful acknowledgment of his kindness in resisting temptation, withholding his support and keeping his feebleness and his name to himself.

The public is more long suffering than we thought if it is not weary of State aid's 'bragging on the outside of the arena.'

PRESBYTERIANS are either a great deal wealthier or amazingly less stingy than other Christians. It is a certainty that they are not more numerous than Methodists or Baptists or some others. Yet the 1,056,164 Presbyterians in the United States contributed $15,900,926 last year.

We do not state it as an absolute truth, but we must say that we hear very little of enormous honeycombing societies between or within or above Presbyterian churches, or of splendid Presbyterian edifices; but we do hear of Presbyterian missions.

THE RECORDER desk is crowded with matter; but we shall not sacrifice our religious or news columns to anything. The people need information upon more than one subject; but they cannot study the problem of Christian and Popular Education too well.

We have printed two articles from Prest. Winston, one from Dr. Manning, and one from Prest. McIver. We have in hand a long article from Bro. H. O. Olive,—very much against, but as its author says, by no means an attempt to answer Prest. Taylor's articles. And Prof. Logan D. Howell of Goldsboro writes that he is finishing a reply to Prest. Taylor's articles. Others may be engaged in similar efforts.

We wish the advocates of State-aid—say the presidents of the institutions most concerned, or their faculties or trustees—would select or approve some one's argument against "How Far Should a State Educate?" in order that it may be answered once for all. Dr. Taylor answers Dr. Manning, but this is not sufficient; suppose he dispels Bro. Olive's fears, still that is not sufficient; suppose Prof. Howell himself is converted to voluntaryism in education, may not remaining advocates of State-aid disown him as their apostle?

The idle lawyers of the State can keep us busy several years setting up and knocking down "replies" and "answers," and correcting erratic impressions. But we shall be fair to ourselves and our readers as well as our opponents.

Let the advocates, friends and beneficiaries of State-aid gather themselves together; let them resume their pristine aggressiveness, let them rise above "pop gun" methods; let them stay in one place long enough for one to get his finger upon them.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

KING'S MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION.

For the first time in the history of this Association, it met with the church in Shelby. The weather was perfect, as was every arrangement for the comfort of every one who attended. The churches were all represented, while quite a large number of visitors and delegates from other Associations were present.

Among the visitors were Dr. J. L. M. Curry of Richmond, Va., Dr. J. K. Connally of Asheville, Drs. Chas. E. Taylor and John Mitchell of Wake Forest, Dr. C. Durham of Raleigh, and Rev. Mr. Ezell of South Carolina.

The assembly from the first looked more like a meeting of the Baptist State Convention than a district Association.

Maj. H. F. Schenck was again elected Moderator, and Bro. Lovelace, Clerk. These brethren have been the officers of the Association for a number of years, and no better evidence of their fitness for the positions could be given than the enthusiastic unanimity with which they were re elected.

Bro. Hufham is just as much at home in Shelby as he ever was in Scotland Neck. I never saw him look so well, and his heart was in every detail of the work.

The first hour after the organization was given to Bro. Mills to speak for the Orphanage. The brethren gave him a good collection, and sent him on his way rejoicing to another Association.

It was a real delight to many of the brethren to meet the President of Wake Forest, and hear him talk of the past history, present condition and future hopes and possibilities of an institution which is already well known and much loved in all this section.

Dr. Curry, in one of his best moods, gave the audience a sample of his fine powers as a speaker, while he emphasized some points made by Dr. Taylor.

It is not often that an audience receives a finer treat than the excellent speeches made by Drs. Taylor and Curry. And yet if this discussion had stopped here, great disappointment would have been felt by the entire Association. For the past six months a large number of people in this section have been reading about the part the State is taking in higher education, and it is this that is uppermost in the minds of a large number of the best citizens of this part of the State; and it was this they especially desired to hear. The report provided for this; and this feature of the subject was spoken to by Dr. C. Durham. Here on his "native heath" with a large and interesting audience and a subject which in itself is an inspiration, it is difficult to imagine a finer effort than that made by Dr. Durham. To this audience it will never need repeating, and indeed this is the case wherever the matter has been discussed. As soon as the people hear how this matter of giving what is practically free tuition to those who are abundantly able to pay their own tuition, they at once see the injustice of it and are ready to act on this conviction.

Dr. Curry's speech on general education was one of his best, and was greatly appreciated.

The Association went forward on State Missions and also on Ministerial Education, and to both of these objects gave a fine cash collection.

Foreign Missions has for years been rather the favorite interest of the Association, and while more will be done for other interests, no less will be given to this during next year.

NOTES.

Bro. Crawford Durham is anxious that Dr. Taylor should write an article, or a series of articles, if necessary, and in his sweet-spirited style define from a Bible standpoint woman's position in church-work.

What is the difference between a scholarship which does not represent any productive capital and outright free tuition? is a question we frequently hear asked.

Bro. G. M. Webb is again nicely situated in his old home, and seems to be happy in his work.

The introductory sermon by Bro. A. C. Irvin was highly creditable to the occasion, showing honest, careful preparation.

Rev. L. R. Pruitt, who was born in Cleveland, preached his first sermon in the county on Wednesday night preceding the Association. His old friends are justly proud of him and the work he is doing.

Rev. R. L. Limrick is a preacher of fine natural ability. He made a good speech on State Missions.

The committee on Hospitality was composed of excellent brethren, who did their whole duty. No meeting was ever better entertained than the Association held in Shelby.

....It was noted some weeks ago that Elder T. S. Wright had gone to Buffalo Springs, Va., for his health. He has been so much benefitted that he entered his field of labor the first of this month.

....Rev. Jno. E. M. Davenport, who graduated from Wake Forest last June, is now a student at Crozer Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa. The Seminary opened the 27th ult. with good prospects.

....Richmond College opened with 150 students. Wake Forest has 200. At the Richmond's Woman's College, says the Herald, there are more young women than ever before. Bro. Nelson deserves them.

....Bro. R. D. Carroll, writing from Vanceboro, Sept. 17th, says: "I am with Bro. J. W. Rose in a meeting at Vanceboro, Craven county. The congregations are good and the prospects bright for a good meeting."

....Prof. Robert L. Paschal is another Wake Forest man who is making his mark away from home. He has an excellent position in the city schools of Fort Worth, Texas, the coming inland town of that State.

....Elder M. L. Greene of Bethlehem sends us two new subscribers, for which he will please accept thanks. Good meetings have been held at all five of Bro. Greene's churches lately, and he is thanking the Lord for the condition of his work.

....Rev. W. M. Gilmore, a recent graduate of the Seminary, and a Wake Forest graduate as well, came in to see us last week. Bro. Gilmore is a worthy and capable preacher, and we hope he may see his way to remain in North Carolina.

....Bro. I. B. Ferebee writes that a meeting with Olivet church, in which Rev. Josiah Elliott preached, resulted in the addition of eighteen members to the church; and another meeting by Bro. Elliott at Woodville resulted in eighteen additions.

....We were glad to see Rev. I. T. Newton in Raleigh last week. Bro. Newton has been busy holding meetings of late. At his Apex charge there were four additions, at New Hope there were seven, and there were six at Wakefield. Others are expected.

....John T. Christian, D. D., has our thanks for a fifty-two page booklet entitled "Heathen and Infidel Testimonies to Jesus Christ." The author had to go considerably out of the way to get his testimonies, but he got them; and they make very readable matter.

....We do not think Bro. Mills answered our question, which was asked in all kindness last week; and now in the same good spirit we ask how he reconciles his opposition to the entire separation of Church and State to the fundamental principles of Baptist doctrine.

....The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary opened this week with large attendance. Brethren Millard, Kendrick, Sledge, Reddish, Hudson, Robertson and Reeves are some of the North Carolina boys there. May they keep up Wake Forest's proud record.

....The late storm drove Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., from his summer home, Cobb's Island, to the mainland. The island is out in the sea; and the waves ran so high that it was submerged in three feet of water, says Bro. Dixon. Too wet, even for an orthodox Baptist.

....Rev. H. W. Sledge, who graduated from Wake Forest at the late commencement, and who was ordained this summer, made a pleasant visit to our office last week. Bro. Sledge has been preaching and aiding in the work during the summer. He enters the Louisville Seminary this week.

....The news of the death of Sister Nannie V. Randolph, wife of Bro. R. R. Randolph, and daughter of Bro. R. B. Flora of Moyock, will sadden many loving hearts. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved father and husband. We learn also that Bro. Flora's cherished wife is very ill.

....We shall not urge our trial offer much longer. If pastors feel the need of the RECORDER among their people, let them work now, as many of them have worked. A four months' reader means probably a life time reader and an able worker. Tell your people at the first opportunity.

....Rev. P. S. C. Davis writes that he is succeeding fairly well on his field near Norfolk. He had held good meetings at all his churches, and there were one hundred professions of conversion during their progress. He prefers a country pastorate despite a late invitation to take charge of a town church.

....Rev. Dr. Lansing Burrows of Augusta, Ga., has been elected Assistant Secretary to our Home Board at Atlanta, to succeed Rev. F. C. McConnell. Dr. Burrows is energetic and powerful; and, if he accepts the position, will be a mine of strength for Home Missions and a worthy co-laborer with Dr. Tichenor.

....Sixty thousand dollars has been contributed to the sufferers in the late Minnesota forest fires. This is good work for a few weeks. What a flood of contributions would rush forth, if Christendom could realize the present condition and the pending doom of heathendom! Information brings realization.

....Rev. J. M. Bennett recently had the assistance of Bro. N. S. Jones of Salisbury in a meeting at Piny Baptist church, of which much good is expected. Bro. Bennett has resigned care of this church after a five years' pastorate, in which he has baptized 103 members into its fellowship; and he leaves it in good condition.

....Rev. Jas. C. Crumpler of South Carolina has been lending his strength to work across the line. He aided the brethren at Mt. Holly in a meeting in which the members were much revived and nine additions to the church were made. Rev. R. W. Harrell will serve this church another year; "he is a good gospel preacher," writes Brother Crumpler.

....Many pastors have mentioned our extraordinary offer of the RECORDER nineteen weeks for half a dollar to their people; many of them have been successful. Cannot every pastor say a word along this line at the first opportunity. More RECORDER readers means more intelligent workers. Now that money is easier, we expect to hear from old and new subscribers more frequently.

....The field vacated by Rev. C. W. Blanchard is one of the best country pastorates that we know of, except that it is rather too large for one man. Under Bro. Blanchard the churches have been quickened and interested to a remarkable degree. We have not been informed of Bro. Blanchard's intentions, but we know it is impossible for him to keep out of active work many days.

....Bro. M. A. Adams seems to be in a meeting all the time, and the Lord is always there too. Just now his Reidsville church is the scene of his labors, and about fifty persons have professed conversion. He has held meetings at two of his mission points lately with good results, and there is another arranged. Bro. Adams will write the RECORDER of the Lord's work in his field in the near future.

....A short note from Wake Forest is in keeping with the general tenor of good news from there of late: "200 boys registered. As fine a body of young men as you ever saw. Durham makes a good start and a fine impression in Physical Culture. Prof. Gorrell, we are glad to say, is sustaining the reputation that preceded him. Prest. Taylor spent last week in New York City on business for the College."

....It was only the other day that a brother remarked that Elder W. H. Wilson of Madison was one of the quietest and safest Christian workers; and now we learn twenty-six members have recently been added to Madison church as a result of meetings held by him in two school houses, in which he has been doing gratuitous mission work. A church will be organized and a house built here at an early date. Brethren Lane and Billings have aided Bro. Wilson in good meetings.

....Rev. C. M. Billings of Mount Cross, Va., began a meeting for Rev. George J. Dowell in the Second Baptist church, Durham, a few days ago, and as Bro. Dowell fell sick the burden of the work devolved upon him. Despite drawbacks the meeting was a success, Baptists of other churches taking interest; and about thirty conversions were professed. Bro. Billings baptized four before he left, and others are awaiting the ordinance. He is now aiding Elder Wilson in work in Rockingham county.

....Elder S. F. Bristoe writes from Coleraine Sept. 24th: "On the second Sunday I closed a meeting at Christian Harbor. Bro. T. T. Speight assisted me and did some of his best preaching. Brethren Matthews and Overton were also with us and helped in the meetings. The preachers and people all worked together. I baptized into the fellowship of the church seventeen and restored four. The most of these were grown people; one very old man who had been a prodigal for many years came to the Lord. And on last Wednesday I baptized the oldest man in our town into the fellowship of Coleraine church. To God be all the praise."

....The executive committee of the Trustees of Wake Forest College met in Raleigh last Wednesday to fill the vacancy in the College faculty occasioned by Prof. J. C. Maske's death. The committee thought it advisable to instruct the chairs of Greek and Latin to choose an instructor temporarily. We hear that Bro. R. W. Haywood has been selected. This gives department heads the entire responsibility and oversight, and relieves them of a great deal of incidental work. And it saves expense, too. When an assistant professor is elected he will be such a one as would grace the chair of the department to which he is assistant.

....Pastor Jenkins writes instructively and entertainingly on "How to Make the Prayer-meeting a Success,"—a problem that has sprinkled many a head with gray. And it seems to us that he has solved it. A reading of the article will surely help any pastor, not to speak of the great uplifting it will be to those whose prayer-meetings are wearisome . . . Sister Boner places her ideal high—as she should; and the superintendent that measures up to it—which every one should aim to do—will be the pastor's great lieutenant. With such introductory articles the RECORDER would be unjust not to fill the remainder of its columns with the best to be had.

....The idea that grand old North Carolina gives the poor, pitiful pittance of $1 25 to the children in her common schools! These schools are the hope, and the only hope, for the education of nine tenths of all the children within her borders. They are of infinitely more importance to the success and prosperity of the people than every college and university in the entire State.—Dr. J. L. M. Curry in a speech on Education at King's Mountain Association. Is Dr. Curry right in his conclusions, or are they who say that if it comes to be a question of which should be supported by the taxes of the people, the University or the common schools, the University ought to be sustained and the common schools abandoned.

....Eight missionaries will sail for the Orient, two going to work for God in Japan, and the others in China during the present month. Bro. Bryan and family are of the party. They are now visiting relatives and friends at Kenansville. The work that God has done through Bro. Bryan in our land, from Florida to Michigan, in the last year, is sufficient warranty that the Spirit is with him. No returned missionary could have created a better impression. He came known to few, but he is followed to the field by the prayers of thousands. Miss Lottie Price, a young woman of talent and consecration, is the only other missionary going from our State now. The five from other States are new missionaries. The party starts on the journey at Atlanta, where a farewell service will be held, and another will be held at Louisville.

....The following account of the deaths of Brother and Sister Newton is taken from a letter written to the Western Recorder by Rev. M. A. Stone, Lagos, Africa, July 31st: "While we were enjoying these spiritual blessings, death came into our home, church and mission, and took our dear sister Newton away from among us. Our hearts were made sad and sorrowful. Her death is a great loss to us. She took sick of that deadly African yellow fever on the 4th inst., and on the 9th she departed this life, 'safe in the arms of Jesus,' and was buried on the 10th. The native Christians of all denominations were present, and their tearful eyes and sad faces told how much they loved and respected her. I preached a funeral sermon over her to a large crowd of people in the Baptist church. Revs. Taars and Celbs helped me in conducting the funeral service at the graveyard by offering a comforting prayer. O, I can't tell you how much we miss her. The sad news came to Bro. Newton on his sick-bed. He was sick a day previous to her sickness, and was not permitted to see the face of his dear wife any more. He suffered much and long. It was decided by Dr. Rowland that Bro. Newton should go back to England if he would save his life. On the 23d inst. he was carried from the Mission House by four Crow men in the hammock to the steamboat. He was too weak to walk by himself. Messrs. Taars, Bingham, Celbs and myself accompanied him to the mail steamer Borny and spent the whole day with him on board. About 6 p. m. we shook hands with him, committing his soul and body to the Lord, and left the steamer, which started at the same time. On Saturday the 28th the sad news came to us that he died and was buried in the sea like the late Mrs. David. The sad news added to our sorrow and sadness."

Nearly all women have good hair, though many are gray, and few are bald. Hall's Hair Renewer restores the natural color, and thickens the growth of the hair.

Sandy Creek Association.

This Association, which is the oldest in the State, was organized in 1758, and was eighteen years old when the Declaration of Independence was made. It comprises churches in Randolph, Moore and Chatham counties. In its youth it was a very vigorous body, full of zeal for the extension of Christ's kingdom and embracing within its borders many strong churches and able ministers. It lost much by wholesale emigration immediately after the battle of Alamance, suffered much from raids of Tories during the Revolution, and though it has been the birthplace and the home of many of the ablest ministers of past generations, it has lost much of its prestige and is now numbered amongst our least aggressive Associations.

The body met this year at Love's Creek church, Chatham county, sixteen miles north of Pittsboro and about two miles from Siler City, a growing village on the C. F. Y. V. R. R. The church is an old structure with pulpit in the side and doors at each end and in the side opposite the pulpit. It is located in a grove near several public roads and in the midst of a large population. Rev. O. T. Edwards is the pastor and the Moderator of the Association.

The old officers were all re elected, viz., Moderator—O. T. Edwards; Clerk—W. C. Douglass; Treasurer—Daniel Hannon; and Executive Committee—Rev. G. L. Merrill, W. C. Douglass, N. A. Gilmore, H. H. Jordan and W. N. Straughan.

The Baptist Orphanage was represented in a very tender and strong speech by Bro. J. H. Mills—collection, $38 65; Ministerial Education, by Rev. L. Johnson—collection, $14 38: Baptist Female University, by brethren Stringfield, W. C. Petty and the writer; General Education, by Bro. W. C. Douglass, who discussed State-aid to higher education.

Resolutions, introduced by Rev. O. L. Stringfield, recommending the gradual reduction of the appropriation to the State University and the appropriation of the money to the common public schools, were passed.

Bro. J. D. Hackney and son and Bro. Dixon made some unique speeches on midnight prayer-meetings, which produced but little if any of a devotional spirit. They were followed on the same subject by Bro. Webster of Siler City in a more serious strain.

The Treasurer reported cash in hand for Home Missions, $48 19; Foreign Missions, $92.45; State Missions, $35 05; Associational Missions, $28 00; Colportage (collection on Sunday), $9 78; minute fund, $31.47.

The writer arrived on the ground too late to hear the letters read, and cannot therefore report the numbers added by baptism, but learns that there had been good revivals in a large number of the churches.

Mrs. H. T. Chapin had a special meeting with the ladies to arrange for organising woman's missionary societies in the churches of this body.

Mrs. B. W. Hatcher had some good singing on Sunday morning by the Sunbeam Society, and the singing by the choir during the session, and especially on Sunday morning, was very good.

Twenty four brethren renewed their subscriptions to the BIBLICAL RECORDER, and twenty three invited it to visit their families for the next four months.

The RECORDER representative is under special obligations to Dr. H. T. Chapin and Deacon H. W. Peoples for providing him a conveyance to and from the Association. He cherishes pleasant recollections of the hospitality of Brother Gilliland and others who were not readers of the RECORDER.

The Association goes next year to May's Chapel.

NOTES.

Bro. H. W. Peoples is seventy-five years old. His wife is seventy six, and they were born on the same day of the month. He has been reading the RECORDER for more than half a century, and promptly renewed his subscription for year, paying two dollars in advance.

Revs. G. L. Merrill of Franklinsville, L. R. Dixon of Goldston, and T. J. F. Anderson of Carthage, are the coming young pastors of this Association. They believe in going forward.

There was preaching at Love's Creek and Siler City every night during the Association. The congregation at Siler City on Saturday night made a thank-offering of $5.04 to the Siler brethren to help them finish their new house of worship.

The smallest and youngest churches in this Association seem to be the most liberal and aggressive.

Brethren L. Johnson and O. L. Stringfield captured the brethren with their talks and sermons.

Bro. J. H. Mills and his work have a warm place in the hearts of all lovers of children.

Interesting State Statistics.

Sunday, Sept. 30th, was "State Mission Day" with the First Baptist Sunday-school of Raleigh. Some especial music and citations of Scripture texts by classes were interesting features of this occasion. Bro. J. C. Scarborough and Drs. J. W. Carter and C. Durham made brief addresses, abounding mostly in statements of facts, which were impressed upon the minds of members of the school. From these three addresses we are permitted to give the following statistics, which no doubt will be of interest to our readers:

North Carolina is 520 miles long east to west; average width from north to south, 100 miles; number of square miles, 52,000; population, 1,617,947—1,026,457 whites, 581,490 colored; number of inhabitants to the square mile, counting both races, is for the whites 19.98, and for the colored, 11.18; per cent. of population, whites, 64 06, and of the colored, 35.94; number of people of school age, from 6 to 21 years, 616,099—399,370 whites and 216,729 colored, as reported to the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction by the county superintendents; ocean coast line, about 350 miles; sound coast line, about 500 miles; streams are navigable for small craft to Fayetteville, Kinston, Tarboro and Weldon; territory is coast region, hill country, and mountainous region; voters, 328,589—whites, 207,292, colored, 116,297; white women over 21 years of age, 207,292; colored women over 21 years of age, 114,295.

There are about 300,000 Baptists in the State, which shows that over 18 per cent. of the entire population are Baptist church-members; there are about 175,000 white Baptists, and 125,000 colored; number of Baptist churches in the State, 2,800—1,500 white, and 1,300 colored. The white Baptists have in the employ of their State Mission Board, ninety missionaries, preaching the gospel in about three hundred destitute neighborhoods.

Possibly Not "the Largest," but the Best for Sure.

Mr. C. C. McDonald, Raleigh, N. C., says he has received more returns from his BIBLICAL RECORDER advertisement of the 19th ult. than from all his mediums; and he has been advertising several months. That is worth thinking about, if you are on the lookout for a business producer. We only ask a trial.

Mr. Wayne Allcott has been running his Standard Dictionary advertisement with us five weeks. Three months ago he sent out propositions to fifty North Carolina publications, some of them claiming 20,000 circulation. He has received more returns from the RECORDER investment in five weeks than from all his mediums in three months. And if you don't believe it, do as he did, and see for yourself.

It is difficult to trace school patronage; but Prof. Bagley says that whenever he undertakes to trace the Littleton High School patronage, he runs into the RECORDER columns.

This is news only to those who do not advertise with the RECORDER. You notice we never lose a patron. That's because it pays.

There are industries and businesses in North Carolina that will fairly hum if you put the RECORDER behind them. Be of good cheer.

Atlantic Association.

The next session of this body will meet with Antioch Baptist church, Pitt county, Oct. 16th, 1894.

All the delegates and visiting brethren who will attend the Association, and who will come by rail, will please send their names to me at Winterville, N. C., as early as Oct. 12th. R. D. CARROLL.

Vanceboro, Sept. 17, 1894.

Read the advertisement of Darden's Shoe Store, Greensboro, N. C., in this issue of the RECORDER. We recently looked through this elegant stock of ladies and men's fine shoes, and can assure the public that there is no shoe store in the State where better and more stylish goods are to be had.

We know Mr. Darden personally and can confidently assure the public that any dealing they may have with him, whether by orders or in person, will be pleasant and in every way satisfactory.

appointed to confer with a similar committee to be appointed by the A. B H. M. S. with reference, first, to co-operation between our Home Board and the Society in work among the colored people of the South; and, second, with reference to a more definite understanding in regard to the territorial limits of the work of the Board and the Society among the native white people, the Indians, and the foreign population of the country."

UNANIMOUS ACTION OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE.

1. As to Schools among the Colored People. First, that the H. Board of the S. B. C. appoint an advisory local committee at each point where a school controlled by the A. B. H. M Society is or shall be located, and that this committee shall exercise such authority as shall be conferred upon it from time to time by the A. B. H. M. Society. Second, that the control of the schools shall remain in the hands of the A. B. H. M. Soc. but these local advisory committees shall recommend to the A. B. H. M. Society any changes in the conduct, or in the teaching forces of these schools, including the filling of vacancies, with the reasons for their recommendations. Third, that the S. B. C. through its H. M. Board shall appeal to Baptists of the South for moral and financial support of these schools; and that these local committees shall encourage promising young colored people to attend these institutions. Fourth, that the joint committee recommend to the respective bodies appointing them the adoption of the work in the foregoing section as unanimously expressing their views as to the work in the schools among the colored people.

2. As to Mission Work among the Colored People. It is unanimously voted by the joint committee to recommend to our respective bodies that the A. B. H. M. Society and the Home Mission Board S. B. C. cooperate in the mission work among the colored people of the South, in connection with the Baptist State Bodies, white and colored, in the joint appointment of general missionaries in holding Ministers and Deacons' Institutes, and in the better organization of the missionary work of the colored Baptists. The details of the plan are to be left to be agreed upon by the bodies above named.

3. As to Territorial Limits. The committee of the A. B H. M. Soc. not being instructed to consider any subject except cooperation in labor for the colored race, respectfully refers to the Board of the A. B. H. M. Society the proposition of the committee of the S. B. C. on the subject of territorial limits and ask for it favorable consideration. (The following is text of proposition referred to.) "We believe that for the promotion of fraternal feeling, and of the best interests of the Redeemer's kingdom, it is inexpedient for two different organizations of Baptists to solicit contributions, or to establish missions in the same localities, and for this reason we recommend to the Home Mission Board S. B. C., and to the Am. Bapt. H. M. Society that in the prosecution of their work already begun on contiguous fields, or on the same field, that all antagonisms be avoided, and that their officers and employees be instructed to cooperate in all practicable ways in the spirit of Christ. That we further recommend to these bodies and their agents in opening new work to direct their efforts to localities not already occupied by the other.

Meeting adjourned after devout thankfulness to God for his guidance in our counsels and prayers for his blessing upon the work now undertaken.

Two Good Men Gone.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have recently been on a visit to my birth-place, Lilesville, where I spent a week very pleasantly with Bro. L. Johnson, one of the best and most universally beloved pastors in the State.

On my return home I learned that Bro. L. B. Allen was critically ill. On Sept. 8th he died of softening of the brain. He was a member of the Louisburg Baptist church, one whose loss will be keenly felt both by the church and community. He was a good man, a good husband and father, a good and consistent member of the church and a good citizen.

The death of Prof. J. C. Mauke was also a sad affliction to me—it came as a personal bereavement. We were raised in adjoining counties, were students together, sympathised with each other because we knew of each other's struggles for our education, and were the most intimate friends. He was an accurate student, an apt and popular teacher, a most loyal friend to Wake Forest College, and best of all a devout and sincere Christian. He was a man of exceptionally pure character. I have known him for thirteen years and have never seen in him an act or motive that was open to criticism. He was one of the purest of men, and I loved him as an own brother.

W. B. MORTON.

Louisburg, Sept. 20, 1894.

Eastern Union, Raleigh Association.

This body meets with Smithfield Baptist church, Sept. 28-30. Rev. O. L. Stringfield will preach introductory sermon. Brethren Worley Creech, N. B. Broughton, E. S. Moore, J. M. Beaty, F. H. Poston, T. R. Crocker and A. M. Simms are on the program. It will be pleasant and profitable. Come. Hope the churches will not fail to send in contributions for our work.

O. C. HORTON, for Committee.

Magnolia Nervine quiets the nerves, drives away bad dreams, and gives quiet rest and peaceful sleep. Sold at John Y. MacRae's drug store, Raleigh, N. C.

From Rev. C. W. Blanchard.

Dear Recorder:—This has been the busiest year of our life, and in some respects perhaps the most fruitful of all. All things have not approached the mark our fancy had set in the beginning. This seems always to keep just ahead. No "wonders" have been worked. No revelations of "new theories" or "doctrines" make us turn away from the past with disgust. Things run about as they ever have run, and must continue to run, with a basis of success, on aggressive but conservative lines.

This has been indeed a hard year financially. Perhaps no church has failed to feel it. But the spirituality of a people is determined by the sacrifice they make in giving, rather than the amount they give. I believe the people have been willing, and with an abundant crop to harvest, would come up with unusual liberality at the close of the year if what they made was worth anything on the market. These hard times will soon be dissipated by the self-denial and management of the people.

At each of my churches we have had a real spiritual revival this year. At most places there were good ingatherings. The work is all steadily progessing.

In the providence of God, we trust, we are led to believe it our duty to vacate our present field. In leaving, we could not say too many good things of the people of each charge. They are noble, generous and persevering. The pastor who follows me will find them ready helpers and in full sympathy with all the Conventional work.

At Green Level we have served a five years' pastorate. In that time we have baptized about 110, and added a goodly number by letter. The church now numbers about 260 members. The church house has been repaired, and a good Academy after modern style has been built and a school now running under the care of Rev. J. M White of Apex.

At East Durham we are closing with this month a three years' pastorate. Serving this church for half of our time, we have about doubled its membership. The church-house has been repaired and much advancement made in the work of the church. Much material around this place is yet to be worked, and scores of unconverted people throng our congregations.

At Berea we are filling a vacancy made by the death of Rev. T. M. Leary last winter. There is a bright future for these brethren if they will build them a new house of worship—a thing that should be done in the near future. I hope the next pastor will continue to press this need before the brethren.

Cary is one of the best churches in the State—always united in what it does and always doing something. About a week ago we closed a most interesting meeting with the church. It remains to know what the ingathering will be. We are hopeful of several worthy additions at our next meeting.

Wherever our lot shall be cast in the future, we will not be forgetful of the people we leave. We could not hope to find better anywhere. We pray that God may send them a worthy shepherd to lead them.

C. W. BLANCHARD

East Durham, Sept. 17, 1894

From Albemarle, N. C.

Dear Recorder:—A few lines from our field might not be out of place.

On the first Sunday in August, 1894, I began a meeting of days at Holly Mt., Montgomery county, aided by Bro. B. Thompson. The church was greatly revived and five additions were made by baptism.

The third Sunday in August, 1894, I began a meeting of days at Pleasant Grove, Montgomery county. Bro. D. S. Morton was with me until Tuesday night; also Bro. James Jordan preached an able sermon for us on Tuesday. The meeting continued one week, at the close of which I baptized twenty-two; since that time I have baptized seven; previous to the meeting I had baptized four, making the total for the year thirty-three. Pleasant Grove bids fair to become one of the strongest churches in the county. The brethren are stirred on the subject of missions and will raise all the money they can for that purpose, to be paid over at the next meeting of our Association.

Barbee's Grove church is without a pastor, and therefore is in a bad condition, generally speaking. I held a series of meetings for them beginning the first Sunday in September, aided by Bro. E. P. Harrington. The church was much revived. At the close of the meeting I baptized six. Others are expected to join soon.

On Saturday before the fourth Sunday in this month I begin a series of meetings at Rocky Mount, Anson county. Pray for us there. Yours in Christ,

W. G. MORTON.

Good Meetings.

Dear Editor:—I remember seeing in the RECORDER a statement asking the brethren of the State to let you hear from them in regard to meetings. As a result of a meeting at Concord, Greenville county, six were baptized; at Bethel, Wake county, fifteen were baptized and restored, three awaiting baptism, and others will follow; at Bay Leaf five were baptized and restored, and others will take the ordinance of baptism soon. God greatly revived the churches, and the members seem to have a greater zeal for good than ever before. Collections are much larger since our meetings.

We will begin a meeting at Creedmore the third Sunday instant. If nothing prevents, Brother Tyree will be with us. We have a nice church building which cost $1,200, built through the efforts of some few members of Concord church. A great opening. May God give it to the Baptists.

Yours truly, M. P. D.

Speaks through the Boothbay (Me.) Register, of the beneficial results he has received from a regular use of Ayer's Pills. He says: "I was feeling sick and tired and my stomach seemed all out of order. I tried a number of remedies, but none seemed to give me relief until I was induced to try the old reliable Ayer's Pills. I have taken only one box, but I feel like a new man. I think they are the most pleasant and easy to take of anything I ever used, being so finely sugar-coated that even a child will take them. I urge upon all who are in need of a laxative to try Ayer's Pills. They will do good."

The Annual Appropriation to the Normal and Industrial School.

If the reader will pardon us this time, the RECORDER columns shall not descend to personal matters again. Indulgence is asked because the word of the RECORDER is at stake.

If we had no other evidence that Tennyson was endowed with prophetic power, the following lines would be sufficient:

"And the parson made it his text that week,
and he said likewise,
That a lie which is half a truth is ever
the blackest of lies,
That a lie which is all a lie may be met and fought outright,
But a lie which is part a truth is a harder matter to fight."

It is a reasonable proposition that a sane man will not commit a wrong without some plan of escaping opprobrium if intercepted. We anticipated that President McIver would reply to our editorial of the 12th not unlike he has. Let us see if the meshes are not more closely about him for his struggles.

In a personal interview President McIver asked us to agree to leave the question in dispute to other parties. He named Treasurer Tate. At that moment he had the letter from Treasurer Tate in his pocket; but we didn't know it. We declined to accept him for other reasons. Will not the public say that President McIver would have shown more confidence in his own side, not to mention fairness to us, if he had named some one from whom he had not received a written opinion?

The letter is President McIver's fort, if, indeed he have one. Treasurer Tate says: "The annual appropriation, i. e., the amount your institution will be entitled to draw from the State Treasury each year hereafter, as the law now stands, is $12,500." According to Treasurer Tate, therefore, the annual appropriation is the amount "your institution" is entitled to draw from the State Treasury each year hereafter. The man had to call in the future and assume the guise of a prophet to get a definition on which President McIver can stand. The public is not concerned with what Treasurer Tate thinks the Normal and Industrial School will be entitled to draw hereafter. If President McIver had his way, the Treasury couldn't hold the amount, we fear. Treasurer Tate doesn't know how much the institution will be entitled to draw hereafter. The public have that to decide; and we hope they will see to it that the $12,500 is reduced. Suppose it is reduced to $10,000, then, according to Treasurer Tate, the annual appropriation for 1893-'94 is what the School is entitled to draw hereafter—that is, in 1895—which is $10,000. That is not the fact. Hereafter has nothing on earth to do with the point at issue. The public has all it can stand in the present. Prophets are without honor everywhere.

The Treasurer goes on to say, "$4,500 for each of the years 1893 and 1894," etc. "For each of the years" means annually, if it means anything; but we apprehend consideration for President McIver led Treasurer Tate to use the phrase instead of the brief and all-sufficient word, annually. Consideration ought to be shown some folks; and we cheerfully overlook this instance. In one sentence Treasurer Tate uses "each year hereafter." It is reasonable to think that he would have included the present year as well, if it would not have deprived President McIver of his only semblance of argument; for the fact is that the appropriation of $12,500, as well as that of $4,500, is made for 1894. In another sentence he uses "for each of the years." Both terms can be better expressed by the word "annually." We leave that to the reader's common sense and knowledge of the usage of our mother tongue. $12,500 for "each year" now and "hereafter" is $12,500 annually; $4,500 for "each of the years" is $4,500 annually; $12,500 annually, plus $4,500 annually, is $17,000 annually. And whatever President McIver and Treasurer Tate may have to imagine of the hereafter, we prefer to keep soberly and safely in the present in such matters. $17,000 is nearer $20,000 than it is to $12,500. On this rests the RECORDER'S veracity in this matter.

Here is a letter written for the RECORDER by Treasurer Tate four days after he wrote that one published by President McIver:

"NORTH CAROLINA,
TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
RALEIGH, Sept. 18, 1894.

The appropriation to the Normal and Industrial School for Girls for the years 1893 and 1894 is $12,500 for each year (Chapter 189, Laws of 1891, Sec. 8, and Chapter 182, Laws of 1893, Sec. 1.) In addition to this there is an appropriation of $4,500 per year for two years—1893 and 1894—to pay indebtedness of said School. These amounts are paid from the Public Fund.

Under Section 2 of Chapter 182, Laws of 1893, $9,000 of the North Carolina four per cent. bonds belonging to the Board of Education were invested according to the provisions of said Chapter.

I made demand on last Saturday for the interest and am informed that the same will be immediately paid.

Yours respectfully,
SAMUEL McD. TATE, State Treasurer."

Notice that the word "annual" is studiously avoided; and for Mr. Tate's sake do not ask why. Notice that he comes backward to the serious present, telling no prophecy of hereafter. Notice that "$12,500 for each year," plus "$4,500 per year," amounts to $17,000 "for each year" or "per year" or annually; and an appropriation of $17,000 annually is an annual appropriation of $17,000; and if it be given to the State Normal and Industrial School and no other be given, it is the annual appropriation to that School. And not by any manner of means should President McIver be allowed to say it is a loan. He has not yet been given authority to controvert dictionaries and attach his own peculiar definitions to our English language; and we are determined he shall not.

Now as to the loan (which means gift) of $9,000, let us assume Treasurer Tate's guise as prophet for a moment. Mark us! The long-expected traveller from New Zealand will have sketched the ruins of St. Paul's, and his children will be playing marbles on the parched bed of mythical Niagara when that $9,000 has been paid. Again, to the sober Present. If the Normal and Industrial School accumulates enough money to pay a debt of $9,000, its appropriation will be straightway diminished, unless the profits thereafter are divided among the teachers.

President McIver says in his card: "The institution pays from its revenue from fees four per cent. on this amount" ($9,000). In his letter to the RECORDER, Treasurer Tate writes, Sept. 18th, four days after he had written to President McIver, and after President McIver had visited Treasurer Tate (by the way, one would think Treasurer Tate's letter was written to President McIver at Greensboro), Treas'r Tates writes, "I made demand on Saturday for the interest," when President McIver came to get that saving, prophetic letter, we suppose. President McIver uses the present tense "pays." Interest is due, but up to Sept. 18th, after good notification, it had not been paid. Is that square? Nearly two years are gone, and that interest—which President McIver says is "collected annually"—has not been paid. Does it require a prophet to say that the principal will never be collected! We requested Treasurer Tate to say to the RECORDER readers how much interest was due on the $9,000; and how long it had been due. His letter, published in this article ignores this request. For Treasurer Tate's sake, do not ask why.—EDITOR RECORDER.

A Family Reunion.

The home of Bro. C. G. Jones, Sr., near Leaksville, N. C., was the scene of happiness during the last days of August, 1894, by the coming together of the scattered members of his charming family. On Aug. 18th, Rev. C. G. Jones, pastor of the First Baptist church in Chattanooga, Tenn., with his wife and three daughters, was met at Spray and carried to the home of his childhood, where loving hearts awaited his coming. On the following evening,, Mrs. C. B. Pratt, three children, and Mrs. W. C. Jones received a similar welcome. The next day brought Mr. L. A. Jones, two children, Mr. W. C. Jones and Mr. C. B. Pratt; and thus the family reunion, so eagerly looked forward to, was complete, except the presence of Mrs. L. A. Jones, who was kept away by sickness.

It was the pleasure of the writer to be numbered with these happy people, having been thrown with them so intimately in former days. Bro. and Sister Jones are to be congratulated in having such handsome sons and pretty daughters and grandchildren.

Calvin preached two fine sermons in the Leaksville Baptist church on the first Sunday in September.

It is useless to say that the very best that willing hands and loving hearts could provide was spread before these children and their friends while at the dear old home. If these earthly reunions are so pleasant, what may we expect the heavenly one to be! May the blessings of God rest upon us all scattered again as we are, and especially upon the two old ones now all alone.

Their true friend,
J. H. LAMBERTH.

I want to express my extreme gratification at the appointment of this worthy young man to the Chair of Modern Languages in Wake Forest College. Of course I know nothing personally of his scholarship, but that is sufficiently vouched for by the degrees conferred on him by Washington and Lee and Johns Hopkins Universities. But of his personal and moral qualifications for the place I can speak advisedly. His father is one of the most conscientious Christian men I know, and the son has been faithfully trained to walk in his footsteps. I baptized him about twelve years ago when I was pastor in Lexington, Va., and I have all confidence in the strength and sobriety of his Christian character.

I believe I was the first to nominate him to certain Trustees for this Professorship while at the Convention in May last, and afterward to President Taylor. I regard the election as a good fit all around, and heartily congratulate all parties concerned.

Articles of Bro. Stringfield's Faith.

1. We believe that the establishment of the Baptist Female University is a work divinely appointed, and the special work for the enthusiastic consideration of the Baptists of the State at this particular time.

2. We believe that the Lord has plenty of money in the pockets of his people to make the school equal to the demands of the womanhood of our State.

3. We believe that He has a number of men and women in the State whom he will influence by his Spirit to contribute one thousand dollars each, and a few who will contribute ten thousand dollars each to the great work.

4. We believe that a great host of his people will contribute from one to five hundred dollars.

5. We believe that the patronage of the school will be equal to that of any school in the South.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 19, 1894.

To My Brethren.

Dear Brethren:—By the mysterious providence of God, we are again in the United States. For eleven months my wife was a daily sufferer from the terrible malarial fever which is so common in Brazil. She fought against it bravely, but with little or no success. After treatment by three skilled physicians and consultation with two others, they told us that we would be compelled to return to the United States. With sad and heavy hearts did we turn from the field where so many laborers are needed.

While it is the desire of our hearts to labor for the salvation of the Brazilian people, we bow in submission to the will of Him whom we serve, and who has never yet made a mistake. We cannot always understand the leading of Providence, but we know that "when the mists shall have rolled away," we shall be able to see that He did all things well. Although we are not permitted to remain and work in Brazil, we have the consolation that we have at least made an effort. We are simply leaning upon the loving arm of our Heavenly Father, and praying that He may lead us to accomplish His will, and live for His glory, even though it be through the deep, dark waters of affliction and disappointment. Your humble brother,

SAMUEL J. PORTER.

Richmond, Va., Sept. 15, 1894

She Didn't Take With the Gentlemen.

She was refined, intelligent, and not bad looking, but somehow she never seemed to take with the gentlemen. They didn't like her listless ways; they said she hadn't any "snap" about her. Poor girl! she was suffering from functional irregularities, and it was actually impossible for her to take much interest in any thing. But a change came. One day she heard of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. She procured a bottle, and she had not taken half its contents when she felt like another woman. Now she is in the enjoyment of perfect health, and has suitors by the score. No woman need suffer from functional irregularities and weaknesses. The "Favorite Prescription" is a safe and certain cure for all the weaknesses to which women are peculiarly subject.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure constipation, biliousness, indigestion and headache. One a dose.

The Bright Side.

Cheerfulness can become a habit, and habits sometimes help us over hard places. A cheerful heart seeth cheerful things.

A lady and a gentleman were in a timber yard situated by a dirty, foul-smelling river.

The lady said: "How good the pine boards smell!"

"Pine boards!" exclaimed the gentleman. "Just smell this foul river!"

"No, thank you," the lady replied, "I prefer to smell the pine boards."

And she was right. If she, or we, can carry this principle through our entire living, we shall have the cheerful heart, the cheerful voice, and cheerful face.

There is in some houses an unconscious atmosphere of domestic and social ozone which brightens everybody. Wealth cannot give it, nor can poverty take it away.—Miss Muloch.

From Haw River.

Dear Recorder:—Will you please let me tell your readers that we are moving along smoothly in our church. We have bought a lot on which to build a house of worship, and with the Lord's help expect to have a house up by next spring. We have about eighty members.

We have called Rev. J. C. Hocutt to preach for us another year. He is a hard worker and a faithful pastor, and we regret very much that he has given up the work in Burlington. It will be good for the churches which secure his services. We have weekly prayer meetings with much interest.

We think the work in this part is on the advance, and the outlook is hopeful.

Yours truly, C. P. P.

"Disfigured For Life"

Is the despairing cry of thousands afflicted with unsightly skin diseases.
Do you realize what this disfiguration means to sensitive souls?
It means isolation, seclusion.
It is a bar to social and business success.
Do you wonder that despair seizes upon these sufferers when Doctors fail, standard remedies fail,
And nostrums prove worse than useless?
Skin diseases are most obstinate to cure.
CUTICURA REMEDIES
Have earned the title Skin Specifics,
Because for years they have met with most remarkable success.
There are cases that they cannot cure, but they are few indeed.
It is no long-drawn-out expensive experiment.
25 cents invested in CUTICURA SOAP
Will prove more than we dare claim.
In short CUTICURA WORKS WONDERS,
And its cures are simply marvelous.

Sold throughout the world. Price, CUTICURA, 50c.; SOAP, 25c.; RESOLVENT, $1. POTTER DRUG AND CHEM. CORP., Sole Proprietors, Boston.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Statesville will have a snuff factory.

Ed. Fuller, convicted of murder and sentenced to death, has been acquitted, having secured a new trial.

Rev. J. D. Arnold is in charge of Greensboro Female College until a successor to Dr. Reid can be regularly elected.

Fire in the dry house of Dunn and Coughenour's mill near Scotland Neck destroyed 10,000 feet of lumber last week.

The Tuckasiegee Lumber Co. with a capital of $600,000, has been organized to operate near Asheville, by New York capitalists.

A schooner was wrecked on Frying Pan Shoals, near Wilmington, Friday. The crew were rescued. Other sailing vessels were reported in distress.

The Charlotte Observer says Mr. J. A. Westbrook earned $14,000 the past season raising strawberries, having twenty-five acres in cultivation.

Doctors J. A. Faison of Mt. Olive and A. S. McGeachey of Fayetteville have been elected first and second assistant physicians at the asylum for the insane at Raleigh.

It appears now that our State farms will yield rich returns this year. The flood season is almost passed; and Gov. Carr and Supt. Leazar report the crops in excellent condition.

A fast train ran into an open switch near Charlotte Sept. 26th. The engineer and fireman jumped and were injured painfully. The passengers escaped injury. The switch was opened by scoundrels.

Mr. Jas. Brown, Supt. of Long Island Cotton Mills, Catawba county, was shot to death in his store the 26th. He had been missing articles and remained in the store over night to catch the thief. There were evidence of desperate encounter.

A "capitalist" from Massachusetts has purchased 3000 acres of land near Southern Pines which he will convert into a park. Two Italian prospectors have been giving our well kept immigration men an excuse for living in the last few days.

In the superior court of New Hanover couty last week, D. M. Williams recovered $11,200 as damage against the Southern Bell Telephone Co. A glass insulator dropped upon his head from one of the Wilmington telephone poles, from which serious illness resulted.

A mother walked all the way from Dinwiddie county, Va., to Raleigh in order to petition the Governor to pardon her prodigal son. She failed the first time. She came again last week; and her son, who was in the penitentiary for eight months for larceny, is pardoned. Such a son of such a mother!

Politics in the State is warming up. There are speakers in abundance. The latest is a new Republican candidate for Vance's seat, ex Congressman Ewart. It had been thought that Mr. Pritchard would have no opposition from his own party for this place. There is fusion in some localities; and the number of the disaffected is unusually large.

Two students of the State University have gone to New Haven, Conn., to meet Yale students and others in a tennis tournament. Davidson College students announce that they can play foot ball at the college. Wake Forest cannot raise a strong enough team to put in the field this year, since its big man went to Trinity, on consideration. Trinity and the University will probably be the only intercollegiate contestants.

General News.

The health of the Czar of Russia is said to be critical.

The gold reserve is now about $60,000,000, and increasing.

So far four Arctic expeditions have reported failures lately.

The Deb's strike is still in the courts. A daily paper last week devoted a column to a speech by Mr. Deb's lawyer.

Two more U. S. war vessels have been ordered to China by proper authority, to protect American interests there.

Tremendous riots involving the destruction of millions of dollars of property are reported to be going on in Rio, Brazil.

The price of cotton is as low as ever, and, despite that business generally seems to be improving, there is small prospect of a general increase of prices.

Levi P. Morton and David B. Hill are the Republican and Democratic nominees for Governor of New York. C. S. Fairchild is running as a reform Democrat.

The United States Navy and Treasury departments are undergoing reorganization. Thirty Treasury clerks were reported to Treasurer Carlisle the other day, for going to HOTEL TICES.

Japan is still victorious in the war. China is reported to be in dire straights, lacking ammunition and foresight. Viceroy Li Hung Chang is going to take personal command of China's troops.

The Lucania established a record for trans Atlantic travel last week that will probably stand several months as the stormy season prevents ocean racing. From England to America she came in five days, seven hours and forty-eight minutes.

Last weeks's storm did damage along the Atlantic from Maine to Cuba. Florida lost millions by damage to the orange crop. The wind blew at a storm rate for several days, and many houses and cottages were damaged. So far no lives have been lost, though the results out at sea are not known. The corn and rice crops were damaged.

How North Carolina Stands.

Dear Brethren of North Carolina:—According to an apportionment of the amount needed to pay off all obligations and support our missionaries in the field this year, we should look to your State from May 1st, 1894, to Sept. 15, for $3,375. In that time we have received $1,081 57. W. Con., $184 74

"Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 10: 2.

The work is the Lord's and we are his. Let all the churches respond to the call of the Master. Fraternally,

R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.
F. M. Board, Richmond, Va., September 18, 1894.

TO THE BAPTISTS OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Dear Brethren:—I have sent letters to your pastors asking them to help the Foreign Mission work as soon as convenient. When as lovers of the cause and faithful men of God, they present the work to you for your assistance, I trust that you will cordially co operate with them. Many who can give but little themselves can influence others. However small your gift, if given aright, God will bless it. He knows what you have and your heart.

Our contributions for the last few months have not equalled our expenditures, but God has blessed our workers on the foreign fields. Many converts have confessed Christ. He has blessed us also in many ways at home. Among other blessings, bounteous crops wave over our land. Let us now honor the Lord with "the first of the firstfruits."

We should not only pay all past due obligations, but provide for those who must soon go out to the foreign field. Talk to your pastor and your brethren about this work. Counsel together. Pray for God's Spirit to open our eyes and our hearts to see and know our duty.

Last year over ninety one cents in every dollar that came here was sent to the foreign fields. We are trying to keep down expenses for you, but you, brethren, must co operate with us in furnishing the means to carry forward the work.

Every church and every member of every church ought to rejoice that each can take a part in sending the gospel of Christ to those who linger in darkness and in death. What you do, do for Christ's sake.

May your church respond soon.

Fraternally,
R. J. WILLINGHAM, Cor. Sec.
Richmond, Va., Sept. 22, 1894

Reduced Rates to Tar River Association.

Reduced rates have been secured from the Wilmington & Weldon and Norfolk & Carolina railroads to the Tar River Association, which meets in Scotland Neck Oct. 11th. Tickets will be on sale Oct. 10th, 11th, and 12th, and will be good for return as late as the 17th. Rates will also be given over the Raleigh & Gaston Railroad.

Persons coming by way of Norfolk & Carolina can make connection at Hobgood at 10 a. m. On other trains they will be met at Palmyra if they will notify me.

E. E. HILLIARD
Scotland Neck, Sept. 28, 1894.

News from Oxford.

The Baptists are making strenuous efforts to complete their new house of worship. Last Sunday they asked Pastor Hardaway to go North for help. This he will do in a week or so. Meantime, help from churches of North Carolina will be thankfully received. Our house and furniture will cost us not less than fifteen thousand dollars, and the burden is heavy. When completed, the house will be one of the prettiest in the State.

The Seminary is in a flourishing condition. The number of boarding students here is fifty per cent. larger than the highest number present at any time last year; and several more are expected Oct. 1. They impress us as being remarkably earnest and interested. I am quite sure that we never before had so high an average of intelligence.

The Calliopean Society has reorganized with a large and enthusiastic membership who purpose doing much for the Society during this Session.

The Maggie Nutt Missionary Society has resumed its meetings, which give promise of being interesting and spiritual.

The two new teachers—Mrs. Lacy and Miss Gaff of the Leipsic Conservatory—are fully meeting the high expectations raised by the favorable reports concerning them.

The old students of the Seminary will be glad for their sisters and friends to be in charge of Mrs. Twitty, who is again Lady Principal.

Altogether the outlook for the school is full of hope.

Dr. March goes next Sunday to preach for the Baptists in Burlington. We hope they will not capture him. His departure from this Association would be a great loss. He is our Nestor.

Bro. Stradley grows spiritually, intellectually, and in favor with men.

Bro. Devin's presence in our meetings is a benediction. This church has been greatly blessed in having two such men as William Hill Jordan and R. I. Devin to spend their declining years in our midst. May the latter remain yet many years with us.

F. P. HOBGOOD.

Montgomery Association.

This body will be held with Mt. Gilead church, commencing on the 18th of October. Visiting brethren will be met at Norwood, N. C., Oct. 17th, 18th and 19th, and conveyed to and from church, a distance of eight miles, if such brethren will notify the Clerk of Mt. Gilead Baptist church on what day they will be at the depot.

By order of Mt. Gilead Baptist church.
CHURCH CLERK.
Mt. Gilead, Sept. 21, 1894.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY
OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,200 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 100,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one half of the language) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

enables you to begin to enjoy the use of the Dictionary at once, paying only a small sum down. Write to us and learn how favorable are the terms upon which it is sold. Best canvassers wanted in every county in North Carolina. Address

The Doctor's Discovery.

DR. BROWN, OF DAVID CITY, NEB., FINDS A MEDICINE OF RARE VIRTUE.

HE FIRST CURES HIMSELF WITH IT, AND THEN PRESCRIBES IT FOR HIS PATIENTS WITH GRATIFYING RESULTS.

(From the Lincoln, Neb., Call.)

Many of the citizens of David City, in this State, believe that the days of miracles are not passed.

Dr. Samuel L. Brown is a pioneer resident of David City, having lived there for twenty years. He is well known all over Butler county, having practiced medicine in every part. It is his recovery from a very serious disease that is looked upon as a miracle. When visited by a Call reporter Dr. Brown gladly related the history of his sickness and his final cure.

"I have a hearty appetite now, which is in great contrast to that of a short time ago. This will be my first step into the field of a personal interview, but I am so enthusiastic over my recovery that I feel like conducting a regular experience meeting. I have been troubled with different sick spells for twenty years, these attacks rendering me quite weak, and in the right condition for the severer troubles that afterward came upon me.

"Six or seven years ago partial paralysis set in upon my left side, and I soon became affected by kindred ailments. The pension board found my trouble to be "partial paralysis of left side, varicose veins of both legs, and left varicocele." I was also troubled with Diabetes. I became entirely unable to perform manual labor, having to give up the larger part of my practice. I could hobble around by the use of crutches and cane. I tried every medicine that I ever heard of in endeavoring to relieve my suffering. Patent medicines as well as local prescriptions were exhausted in the search for my restoration to health.

"About a year ago I read an advertisement of a medicine called Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, in the National Tribune, of Washington, D. C. They seemed to fit my case, so I sent for samples. I was so well satisfied with the samples that I sent for more, as they acted directly in harmony with nature. Those are the things I look for in treating disease. I give my patient remedies, not medicines. I used a number of boxes of the pills, and I am now entirely relieved of all my several ailments, and am able to move about once more, without being hampered with crippling diseases.

"Even at my mature age, I again do some practicing, and always use Pink Pills where the diagnosis of the case favors them.

"I now have a remarkable case at Brainerd, which I am treating. Augusta Talbot, the postmaster at Brainerd, was suffering from diabete and insipidness, and was in thes first stages of Bright's Disease. The Doctors had failed to give him any relief when I was called and took charge of the case. All hopes of his recovery had been given up and his wife did not expect him to live three weeks. He is now on the road to recovery. The Bright's disease was headed off, and the other ailments overwhelmed. A happier family cannot be found than that of Postmaster Talbot, of Brainerd.

Dr. Brown made the following affidavit to his remarkable cure before a prominent notary.

Dr. Samuel L. Brown, being first duly sworn, states the above facts are true.

(Signed) DR. SAMUEL L. BROWN.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this seventh day of September, A. D. 1893, at David City, Neb. E. S. RUNYON, (Signed) Notary Public.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People without doubt mark the beginning of a more healthful era. They were first compounded by an eminent practitioner, and used as a prescription for many years in general practice with almost incredible success. They are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves, two fruitful causes of almost every ill that flesh is heir to. These pills are also a specific for the troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, all forms of weakness, chronic constipation, bearing down pains, etc., and in the case of men will give speedy relief and effect a permanent cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price (50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2 50—they are never sold in bulk or by the 100) by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., or Brockville, Ontario.

Statement.

To the Brethren of the Central Association: In the minutes of the recent session of the Association you will notice in the financial table that Wake Forest church is credited with $19.20 for ministerial educational. As a matter of fact, the church gave to this object during the associational year, $244.96. Of this amount, $225.76 did not pass through the hands of the Treasurer of the church, but was handed directly to the Corresponding Secretary of the Board of Education; hence failed to appear in the report of the church's work. The total amount raised in the Association for this object should be $481.70 and not $355 94, as appears in the minutes.

I make this statement that Wake Forest church may appear in its true light, as the active friend and not as the passive enemy of ministerial education.

State Fair Notes.

Each succeeding week adds increased proofs that the coming Fair will be one which will delight every North Carolinian. In addition to the large volume of correspondence which brings advices of extensive and elegant exhibits, letters are being received from all parts of the State in which people express appreciation of the work being done to promote the success of the Fair and their intention to attend it.

The list of attractions is rapidly growing, and already include such novelties as the Wonderful Working World; Berry's World Museum; Bohemian Glass Blowers; noted mind readers and mesmerists; European Novelty & Trained animal Show; the great Cyclorama of the Battle of Gettysburg.

Entries and announcements of entries received to date already exceed the list of any previous Fair held.

The intellectual and practical program will be replete with interest and valuable information.

The time for testing milch cows for the first premium of $40, second premium $25, and third premium of $15, under conditions named in the premium list is extended to October the 15th. This is an unusual and very valuable feature of the Fair, and parties interested in the value of milch kine should take special notice of the provisions of the test.

A Vigorous and interesting program has been arranged for Education Day.

Resolutions of the Newbern Church.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—The following resolutions were passed by the Newbern Baptist church at their monthly conference held Aug. 7th, 1894, with the request that they be published in BIBLICAL RECORDER.

Fraternally, J. W. BIDDLE, C. C.

Resolved, That we part with our brother, Rev. B. W. Spillman, who has preached for us during Bro. Ford's absence with profound regret; that he has endeared himself to us during his short stay by the simplicity and sincerity of his manner, by his earnestness and ability as a preacher, and by the brilliant promise he affords of a very large development and future usefulness.

Resolved, That in the opinion of this church, people will be blessed who will secure his services as pastor, and we heartily commend him to all Baptist churches.

A local Fair is being held at Salisbury this week.

MARRIED.

PAUL—WILLIS—On Sept. 11th, 1894, at Springfield M. E. Church, by Rev. E. C. Bobbitt, Mr. W. L. Paul of Davis Shore, N. C., and Miss Lina Willis of Smyrna, N. C.

LOWERY—RANDSDALE—On Sept. 16th, 1894, at the residence of the bride, by Rev. Wm. H. Joyner, Mr. S. P. Lowery and Miss M. E. Randsdale, both of Franklin county.

DIED.

WILSON—Mrs. G. O. Wilson died at her home in Yanceyville on Sunday, Sept. 16th, 1894, in the thirty-fifth year of her age. She suffered long, but patiently. Hers was a beautiful Christian life. Having given her heart to Jesus when only eight years old she served him faithfully to the end. Her remains were laid to rest in the Baptist cemetery in the presence of a large crowd of sorrowing friends. Weep not, husband and friends, for her spirit is at rest.

J. R. JONES.

FOSTER—On the 19th of September, 1894, Capt. C. L. Foster departed this life at his home in Milton, in the sixty-sixth year of his age. In his death the wife and two daughters lose a kind and loving husband and affectionate father, and our church one of its best members. But our loss is his gain. He was a good man, and was ready when the summons came. May we meet him in heaven.

J. R. JONES.

TURNER—On September 6th, 1894, in Anson county, N. C., E. Laura Turner died after an illness of many months, in her seventy-first year. She left a husband and nine children to meet her in that beautiful world. She lived a consistent Christian life; was a member of the church over thirty years; loved by all who knew her; and had been a constant reader of the RECORDER for about thirty years.

A RELATIVE.

RENFREW—Mrs. B. F. Renfrew (nee Miss Stella W. Jenkins) was born June 5th, 1870, was educated at C. B. F. Institute, professed religion and joined the church while a student of that school in 1885, was married to Mr. B. F. Renfrew Dec. 27th, 1893, and died Sept. 11th, 1894. She was a member of the Baptist church and of the Ladies' Aid Society of Roxobel. Her husband was railroad agent at Hertford, N. C., formerly of Nashville, N. C. As to herself of a meek and retiring disposition, she was bright and happy towards others, and was greatly beloved for her Christian spirit and character. The only and loved child of her mother, the Lord has seen fit to take her to himself.

"Hadst thou asked us, well we know
We should cry, 'Oh, spare this blow!'
Yes, with streaming tears would say,
Lord, we love thee, let her stay,
But the Lord doth naught amiss,
And since he hath ordered this,
We have naught to do, but still Rest in silence in his will."

A. C.

RANDOLPH—On the 15th of September, 1894, Mrs. Nannie V. Randolph, the loving wife of Bro. R. R. Randolph, and beloved daughter of Bro. R. B. Flora of Moyock, N. C., departed this life in her 27th year, from the home of her sister, Mrs. L. C. Ives, Hickory Ground, Va. Sister Randolph was educated at the C. B. F. Institute. Her father took all pains and expense to fit her for life. She was highly accomplished, and it and that she died so young. The Lord had a place of more importance for her to occupy in heaven. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord." She was a member of Shady Grove church, Currituck county, N. C. She is now a member of the church triumphant in heaven. She leaves a father, mother, two brothers and two sisters, husband and one child to mourn their loss, but their loss is her eternal gain. The writer was called to preach the funeral, but he could not preach, but only weep with the dear family, and share with them in their troubles. She was to me as a dear sister. God bless the dear father, mother, brothers, sisters, husband and little Frank. The remains were carried to the old family graveyard at Moyock, N. C., and placed beside the loved ones who had gone before.

P. S. C. DAVIS.

Tributes of Respect.

By request of Jonesboro Baptist Sunday-school, we the undersigned committee submit the following tribute of respect to to our departed teacher, Miss Ella Brooks, who died August 25th, 1894.

Her life was marked by loyalty to her church and Sunday-school, which will live long in the memory of the community, church, and especially her Sunday-school class.

We know that it is well with the righteous dead, and while the stars were looking down from their golden thrones, amid the swell of harps and the songs of angels, her spirit passed into glory.

In her last hours she remembered her Sunday-school class in prayer and sent them a letter, encouraging them to be faithful unto death. We will ever cherish her memory as a faithful teacher and friend.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Goes by Special Order to Paris for the Uric Acid Diathesis—The Only Known Solvent of Stone in the Bladder — Its Value in Bright's Disease, &c.

Dr. Thomas H. Buckler, of Paris (formerly of Baltimore), Suggester of Lithia as a solvent for Uric Acid.

"Nothing I could say would add to the well-known reputation of the

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

I have frequently used it with good results in Uric Acid Diathesis, Rheumatism and Gout, and with this object I have ordered it to Europe from Coleman & Rogers, of Baltimore. Lithia is in no form so valuable as where it exists in the Carbonate (the form in which it is found in the Nature's mode of solution and division in water which has passed through Lepidolite and Spodumene mineral formations)."

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

The following plate is from a photograph which forms a part of a communication of Dr. GEORGE H. FRANCIS, of Danbury, Conn., to the New England Medical Monthly for Nov. 1889 (see page 76 of that journal), and represents some of the largest specimens of

Two Ounces and Twenty-seven Grains of Dissolved Stone, from a patient under the action of

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Smaller particles, and a quantity of Brick-dust deposit, Dr. Pierce states, were not estimated.

Dr. Cyrus Edson,
Commissioner of Health, New York City, and President of the Board of Pharmacy.

"I have frequently made use of

in my practice, with excellent results. It is a potent remedy for correcting Rheumatic Diathesis. In a case of Uric Acid Gravel, in which I recently prescribed it, its beneficial effects were apparent after the third dose. I have also prescribed it with great benefit in Bright's Disease of the Kidneys."

In Stone of the Bladder, Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Nervous Exhaustion, diseases peculiar to Women, Chronic Malarial Poisoning, Chronic Disorders of the Stomach and as an Antidote to the Liquor and Opium Habit, this water has a curative record second to no other water in the world.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f. o. b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

PRICES: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 65c.

Temptation.

Oh, weary way! so dark, so hard, so rough;
With trials sore beset,
Like those which in that wilderness
Our Master met.

We struggle on and struggling fall,
Unless we look above
To him who sends his messengers
Of comfort and of love.

We note too much the stones, and thorns,
Along our road;
Too little note the hands outstretched
To ease our load.

O living Christ! who hears each moan
Of sore-tried breast;
Oh, may we know those messengers
Of love and peace and rest!

To thee they came when thou hadst won
Thy conflict brief.
To us they come in every weary hour
Of trial or of grief.

O angel ministers who strengthen us!
Forever are ye near,
In all our weary pilgrimage
Through desert drear.

O angel messengers! stay ever close;
Give eyes to see.
O Father-heart! give strength to bear,
And peace in thee.

Tact in Christian Work.

In seeking to lead the unconverted to Jesus Christ for salvation, every Christian worker should first of all depend on the aid of the Holy Spirit; and then he should use common sense in the selection of times and opportunities. Tact also is necessary, that the right words may be spoken at the right time; and that advantage may be taken of unexpected circumstances and words spoken by others. In this article I will give some illustrations of tact as found in the work of London city missionaries, and of its results.

A missionary to the docks tells of a skeptical policeman, who always opposed him. One day this man said to the missionary, "Well, I see you are at the old game of trying to make others believe what you don't believe yourself." The missionary replied: "Have you found God yet?" "No; of course I have not. How can I find what does not exist?" The missionary replied: "Have you been everywhere?" "Yes," answered the man. But the missionary said: "No, you have not been everywhere, even in this world; and further, you have not visited the nearest planet. May not God be where your search has not extended?" A wild laugh burst from the man, and the missionary, discouraged at what he deemed a failure, left him. On a subsequent visit to these docks, this policeman met the missionary in a friendly manner, and taking him by the arm; he led him to a police sergeant, and said: "I have often publicly insulted this gentleman without cause or reason, and now I wish to apologise just as publicly, and ask his forgiveness"; and then to the missionary, he said: "God has forgiven my sins, sir, will you for your Master's sake do the same?" The words which had so enraged him had led to his conversion.

While a missionary was in a public house, a man went to the bar and said: "A pint of four ale; if you will, miss. Put two pen'worth of religion in it, if you don't mind." "Don't supply the last article," said the bar maid. Turning to the missionary the man said: "Perhaps you supply that article, Mr. Missionary." "No, not exactly," was the reply, "but I can tell you where you can get it, and at once, free, gratis," and then, opening his Bible, the missionary read: "Ho! every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters," and ended with the words, "without money and without price," he added, "you cannot get it cheaper, for not even the two pence you spoke of, is required." This led to a long conversation, which was supplemented with several visits to the man's house, and he was finally led to exchange the tap room for the church of Christ.

"Excuse me, but really you know your gospel is not for the present age. It is not adapted for the nineteenth century," said an educated man. "You are quite right, sir," replied a missionary; "God did not intend it to be. He intends that the present age shall be adapted to his gospel."

Visiting a sick woman whom he had led to Christ, a missionary was glad to find the husband at home, but sorry to find that he was a skeptic. "Now I am going to put a plain question to you," said the man. "Can you give me an instance of a definite answer to prayer?" The missionary replied: "Yes, sir, I can. Six months ago your wife was not in the enjoyment of Christ as her Saviour. Myself and others have prayed for her. There she is now, a saved sinner, and I contend that this is a blessed answer to prayer." The man was silenced, for he admitted the reality of the change in his wife.

"It is no use giving those tracts to me," said a man to a missionary, "I am an atheist." The missionary replied: "If you are an atheist, you are false to your creed, for when you cut your hand with an iron hoop a short time ago, I heard you use the name of God, and you prayed to him distinctly that he might strike you blind." One of his workmates said: "He has got you there, Long Bob;" and many others who were around murmured their approval.—Our Young People.

Good Men Profitably Employed.

"Yes, sir, we have a number of grand, good men working for us, and they are making money, too, doing better for themselves than they could in any other line." That is about the way Mr. B. F. Johnson of the firm of B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va., stated one case in referring to their advertisement for representatives to devote all or part of their time in the interest of their business.

Chicken Cholera and Its Prevention.

Why submit to heavy losses from this disease! Up to April, 1894, this disease had not been on the Experiment Farm to our knowledge. Early in that month a hen became sick and dumpish, with dark comb; all food and water was refused. It was thought useless to treat this case, but Epsom salt was administered and this followed with copious watering, put in the mouth with a spoon. The hen was placed in a warm, sunny place, isolated from usual runs, and recovered very slowly.

Another hen died in a few days, and then another and a cockerel, and several persons who had had experience with cholera pronounced this disease to be cholera. The hen and cockerel died near night, and next morning two other hens were dead and eight more were in different stages of the disease.

Treatment was begun at once. Two hens were killed and buried, as those previously dead had been. The six were brought out into the sunlight and given salt and water.

The house and yard were thoroughly disinfected with one pint of strong sulphuric acid to eight gallons of water, as suggested in poultry books. The hens themselves were sprayed with this. Their drinking water was charged with carbolic acid (one teaspoonful to half gallon water) and asafœtida was put in their food at the rate of one heaping tablespoon to the food of thirty chickens.

The next morning six hens could not get off the roost, though all but two had gone up as usual the night previous, after their treatment. These were treated as before and put outside the yard. Before night all but four hens were walking about pecking grass. After three days of isolation these four were returned to the yard cured, and all have been in good health since. Six hens and a cockerel were lost before the health of the flock was restored by the treatment as given above.

Had we known the disease at first it is doubtful if a single bird need to have been lost. Promptness to disinfect and treat the sick birds will save many losses. The doses of salt, not before recommended to my knowledge, doubtless helped rid the birds of the cholera bacilli sooner than if it had not been given, and so hastened the eradication of the disease. The asafœtida acts as a diffusible stimulant to help keep the birds warm.

The drinking water was for some days kept charged with carbolic acid, and all that is now needed to secure immunity from another attack is a second thorough disinfection and to continue for some time the addition of carbolic acid to the drinking water.—F. E. Emery, Agriculturist, N. C. Experiment Station.

Home Seeker and Home Getter.

The local building society is capable of doing great good in any community; it presents the best form of co operation, but it must be used intelligently and with patient persistence if it is to achieve its purpose, writes Addison B. Burk in a practical article on "Buying a House with Rent Money," in the October Ladies' Home Journal. The home seeker must not be discouraged by the fruition of his plans. The term seems long to those about to enter upon it; very short to those who have attained the goal. Those who rent houses do so for twenty, thirty or forty years, and have at the end nothing to show for it. The home getter may have to labor fifteen or twenty years before he succeeds in his desire, but, that accomplished, he may profit by the want of wisdom of the improvident and buy other houses in a shorter period. Of the future we know nothing; the guide to action is the present, and the prudent man will begin now to save whatever his income may afford in the way of surplus, and presently he will find that he has the margin with which to buy a home, and some years hence, if he shall make wise use of building societies, he will be not only the owner of the house in which he lives but a landlord.

Misjudged.

Speaking of how often we misjudge people's motives, and how sometimes, because we see at the moment but a part of what they are about, we reach harsh conclusions, the Quiver cites the following:

Among the lots put up at auction was one, "A pretty pair of crutches." In the crowd was a poor crippled boy, and the crutches were just the thing for him. He was the first to bid for them. An elderly, well dressed man bid against him. There were cries of "Shame! shame!" in the crowd. The boy bid again, and so did the old gentleman. The boy bid all he had, but the old gentleman outbid him once more, and the poor little lad turned away with tears in his eyes. The crutches were knocked down to the elderly man, who, to the great surprise of all, took them to poor little cripple and made him a present of them. The crowd were now as enthusiastic in their praise as they had just been with their abuse, but the old gentleman heard nothing of it; he had disappeared even before the little boy could thank him. To judge by a part is often to misjudge the whole.—Selected.

And better than gold.

Keep a Clean Mouth.

A distinguished author says: "I resolved when I was a child, never to use a word which I could not pronounce before my mother." He kept his resolutions, and became a pure-minded, noble, honored gentleman. His rule and example are worthy of imitation.

Boys readily learn a class of low, vulgar words and expressions, which are never heard in respectable circles. Of course, we cannot think of girls as being so much exposed to this peril. We cannot imagine a decent girl using words she would not utter before her father or mother.

Such vulgarity is thought by some boys to be "smart," "next thing to swearing," and yet "not so wicked;" but it is a habit which leads to profanity and fills the mind with evil thoughts. It vulgarizes and degrades the soul, and prepares the way for many of the gross and fearful sins which now corrupt society.

Young readers, keep your mouths free from all impurity, and your "tongue from evil;" but in order to do this, ask Jesus to cleanse your heart and keep it clean, for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Selected.

MANY CHILDREN

—as well as thousands of grown people, have been cured of scrofula and other blood diseases, by taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Every disorder that can be reached through the blood, yields to its purifying qualities. Eczema, Tetter, Boils, Carbuncles, and the worst Scrofulous Sores and Swellings are permanently CURED.

Miss Harris.

Mr. Thos. Harris, of Wakefield Station, Sussex Co., Va., writes: "About four years ago my daughter, Helen G. Harris, was afflicted with Eczema in a distressing form. She tried medicines too numerous to mention, but they did no good. I told her that I would write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after a few months' use of his medicines she was entirely cured. I believe your medicines unequaled.

Mrs. Jno. H. Richardson, a widow living near Wakefield, Va., a few years ago, was in extremely bad health, and used your proprietary medicines with entire success."

HE WHO would pursue letters to success must acquire enduring patience and unflagging hope. Talent alone will fail of the mark. To become a successful author one must do what many attempt, what many attempt vainly many times, what few achieve just once in a while,—must write a book that the public will enjoy a day and tolerate a decade. And you did know that books are being produced at the rate of 25,000 annually! And you do know that you and your friends are fortunate, if you get an idea of, not to say read, as many as fifty a year! What volumes of discouragement that 25,000 imports!

But, we'll write a magazine article, and another, and then a story, and then get our autograph and picture and life-sketch printed, says one; it's such an easy, delightful dream. If any one's lot is to be envied it is that of the men and women who write a good story once in ten years and write of their common whims, their fancies and guesses, and have their pictures printed, their names heralded, their coffers filled, the meantime. To write well once, to write one's name and pose thereafter, what a charming existence! But did you know that that handsome, sleek fellow, or that ugly, moody female, whose picture is to be seen in the current prints,—that they wrote long and well but vainly many a time before Minerva—who is a grim-visaged male editor usually—smiled upon them. And now all those old rejected manuscripts are rehashed and sold at ten dollars a page to the publisher who caters to a people of cults and whims and tastelessness!

Minerva crowns few to-day. The editor of the greatest of literary magazines said in a personal letter not long since that he had already reviewed and edited enough articles and stories to occupy his journal until 1901. An editor of another—of more serious design—has said that he rejects a hundred articles for each one accepted; and, you know, those that are accepted are mostly from pens that have already attained repute—the crown.

The way of the writer is hard. Yet this prospect, a thousand times intensified, will not discourage one who dreams that literary success will be his. No man has been known to withhold anything of literature that he had reason to think worth the effort to create. No man has deemed himself capable of lasting or even evanescent, though popular, literary work of any kind, but that he undertook it. And that can be said of no other human vocation or avocation. In none of them is success so successful, as the world regards the word.

ONE of the greatest weekly papers published Senator Hill's political obituary two years ago. The humorous weekly papers held him up to scorn, one depicting him in the Senate beneath the shades of Hiscock, whom he succeeded, and Evarts who preceded him, as a pigmy among giants. He himself seemed to have realized that he had had his day. But not so. After a season in a minor part he now appears in a new role—a statesman—the boldest on the stage; and he was only a politician at best before. The star had not set. Senator Hill is not a statesman now; but he has no superiors in political life. When the President must be upheld, Hill was chosen; and he was not wanting. When the Northern division of his party lacked a representative, he was ready; when the final reckoning came, he was on his party's platform.

Senator Hill does not inspire one's confidence. He is not consistent. He is probably a demagogue; he has thousands who worship him for no real reason. He is a consummate trickster, a past master of politics. He will never be President, because he is at odds with the South and West and Northern protection. In fact, he may be defeated for Governor of New York State.

Senator Hill has few associates, is unmarried, has no bad habits, eats by rule, and sleeps when he has put all his work behind him. His abstemious life enables him to climb over or to dig under his less wary opponents. His entire energies are devoted to one thing—politics; and advancement of himself is his life-motive.

ANOTHER man of whom ill is always being foretold—none of which comes to pass,—is the Emperor of Germany. Young, proud, ambitious and energetic, he dared undertake the cares of State, when one less proud than he would have let them stay upon the tried and willing shoulders of the Iron Chancellor. No wonder that so young and so war-like a man in possession of such vast power, vested with such responsibility, was occasion for much uneasiness the world around. Probably the best soldiery on earth is at his beck; and he is by birth and rearing and avocation warlike. He was mad, many said once; and no one envied Germany's and Hohenzollern's fate.

Years have passed and Germany is conservative and peaceful and advancing. William grows greater—in the love of his people and in peacefulness—each year. Only the other day it was revealed that he, most war loving, ambitious and well-armed of all the war-threatening sovereigns of Europe, is making efforts to secure an international conference to seal the peace of Europe and achieve disarmament. He would have Europe no longer a camp; he would free his land from the burden of supporting hundreds of thousands of armed men; he would have them cultivate the arts of peace. And this is the fiery young Emperor William, who was said to be the last of the Hohenzollerns. How are the prophets confounded!

WHAT a day for silver! One hundred years ago, October 15th, 1794, was man first made glad by possession of the shining, ringing, reassuring wheel, stamped with the approval of our government, that since has been joy and woe, slave and master, of millions, that since has separated States, drawn sectional lines anew, and divided nations from one another; that since has been made the master, now the subject, of gold, that has drawn upon it the attention of the world, inspiring orators, perplexing authors, absorbing students, making and unmaking men; that now, every great nation's hand against it, stands before its masters—its quondam slaves—trembling for the morrow, yet hopeful—repudiated, hated, accursed, but not friendless nor lacking able friends. It is a sad time for the silver dollar to celebrate; yet it may look backward along the columns of figures, and take pride in the history they tell. Its friends are tried and true, and, ever reverting to that record taking fresh courage, they are determined to restore it to its place of full and unquestioned service.

How many silver dollars might take part in the centennial of that choice thousand and fifty eight, which were issued from the Philadelphia mint ten decades ago? The number is 419,000,000, and every one of them is full legal tender, just as full and just as legal as gold. They say silver was demonetized twenty-one years ago. At least, that is when adverse legislation in the United States began. But it seems paradoxical that, while only 8,031,000 silver dollars were issued before 1873, 419,000,000 have been issued since—during this twenty-one years of demonetization or adverse legislation, whatever you call it!

There are hundreds of books relating to the silver question, there are thousands of newspapers that lose no opportunity to represent its claims, there are thousands of others that contend it has no claim. Within it is the kernel of the problem of finance, the problem most baffling of them all.

The silver dollar's centennial is one not altogether of gloom. Its friends are legion; and this very year they are striving as never before to reconcile it and the powers that be—not alone here, but across the waters.

THE ring of politicians in New York City that is named Tammany has reached the acme of corruption. It is repudiated by the party that it has imposed on for years; but through the power of money and the power that the regime has, to kill and make alive, to give office and take away, it holds the Empire State in its clutches; and it saps it of honor and wealth. It is the boldest and most corrupt political order on earth. Just now great efforts are being made to strip it of its prey in the November elections. A committee of seventy reputable and determined citizens, representing all parties and many political creeds, has been selected to lead in the struggle against the self-seeking ring of officials. Such a committee was appointed once before, but it itself contained office seekers, and office seekers are not reformers—never. The present committee, however, realizes that a time for self sacrificing patriotism is upon them; and they deserve the sympathy of every patriot in their efforts.

IT is not a time of boasting, that is, not for really great enterprises. Tremendous, gigantic, are entirely inadequate terms to apply to three works that man is now proposing; but as they are not involved in politics, and are also too needful to have to advertise, too meritorious not to be appreciated, the public hears little of them.

A wealthy company is building a suspension bridge from New York to New Jersey across North river, of a single span of 3,100 feet, provided with six railway tracks, with room also for carriages and footmen—a structure more beautiful and more magnificent than any pontine structure in the world, and the building of which will occupy hundreds of men five years, that will cost in all about $30,000,000,—this the smallest of the enterprises to which we referred. Up there at the Niagara falls—America's most boasted natural phenomenon—a company of men, whose wealth seems not less than their enterprise and daring—is boring tremendous tunnels, blasting through rock and building through water, to steal from abundant Nature a particle of that great force which has wasted through the centuries, which has been merely a sensuous gratification hitherto, and make it man's own servant. Enough water will be diverted from the river into turbine wheels to generate 50,000 horse-power. This is all that is sought, and it is so small a particle of Niagara's store that its removal will not be perceptible. It is a power, however, that converted into electric force and transmitted hundreds of miles, will light the great city of New York and move the wheels of many great industries. How great is God! How great are his creatures!

This work at Niagara is nearing completion. It is the equal in magnitude, and as far beyond ordinary human thought as were Cyrus Field's dreams that achieved the trans-Atlantic cable. Little do great doers say. And away across the waters in silent, slothful Holland, where the men and women tend gardens and catch fish, where all is patience, and change is unknown, they are planning as the young American, more daring, better equipped, abler though he be, has not the patience nor the patriotism to plan. These slow, ancient folks have been thinking about draining the Zuyder Zee for a hundred years; and they have concluded that it is desirable. Now the doing doesn't bother them, for they have patience that faileth not. It will cost them $150,000,000, and occupy them thirty-three years. It will reclaim from the river seven hundred and fifty square miles of land, which, they calculate, are worth just $5,000,000 more than it costs to regain them. They are going to confine the river within massive walls and conduct it out to sea. They are slow, but they move ponderously; and their work lasts.

Contrast Between the Baptists of the First Decade of this Century and the Last Decade.

According to Asplund's register the number of Baptists in the United States of all sects in 1790 was only sixty five thousand, a fourth of whom were probably found in Virginia, which at that date contained about one fourth of the population of the Union. At the beginning of the present century the Baptists in the United States numbered about eighty thousand. At that time there were no Baptists east of the Mississippi or north of the Ohio. In 1850 the Baptists in the United States and Canada were estimated to number about one million. At the close of this century, 1900, the Regular or Calvinistic Baptists in our country will be about four millions. These, with the seven other kinds of Baptists, will number not far from six millions.

At the beginning of this century the Baptists had only one literary institution of a high order—that was Rhode Island College, with one single building—now Brown University. There were several academies in the New England and Middle States where classical studies were pursued.

Now they have more than two thousand colleges, seminaries and high schools. Then they had only a few educated men, and there was a prejudice against educated preachers.

In 1800 the Baptists had not more than one or two educational societies. Now they have them by scores. It was with the greatest sacrifice and perseverance that a young man who wished to qualify himself to preach the gospel among us, acquired the rudiments of an academic education. Now our young men entering upon the ministry find no difficulty in educating themselves. Students for the ministry with us pay no tuition fees, whilst in many of our denominational schools board is also given. In 1800 not one Baptist preacher among fifty was educated, now the uneducated preachers form the exception. Theological schools then were scarcely thought of by Baptists. Now we have probably a dozen, some of which are among the best in the country.

While the English Baptists had a Missionary Society in operation, with Carey, Ward, Marshman and Thomas as missionaries in India, the Baptists of the United States had done nothing in this direction at the close of the eighteenth century. At the beginning of this century there were mission societies in Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Charleston to supply home destitution, especially among the Indians. The missionaries employed were merely itinerants, and did not stop long in any place. Prior to 1810 several foreign mission societies were organized, whose contributions were sent to the English Baptists to aid them in sustaining their missionaries. We had not a missionary nor a convert among the heathen, for it was, until 1814, during the second decade, that the Baptist Triennial Convention was formed, of which R. B. Semple of Virginia was the first president. This Convention inaugurated the missionary enterprise among American Baptists. Adoniram Judson and Anne Haseltine, his wife, were their first missionaries. Our success has been wonderful. God has put the seal of his approbation upon the efforts made by the Baptists of the United States to christianize the heathen.

The denomination, North and South, have largely more than a thousand consecrated men and women as missionaries, native helpers, teachers and Bible readers. And though our force of laborers is not so numerous, nor our contributions so large as those of the Presbyterians and Methodists, yet the Baptists of this country have more converts in heathen lands than any other denomination in the United States.

The beginning of this century found Baptists without Sunday-schools, Bible or tract societies or literature of any kind. The Baptists then were poor and generally among the illiterate classes, and had as a matter of course very little appreciation of literature. "The ignorant Baptists" was a common appellation on the part of their enemies, and was lamentably true to a great extent. Even to-day Baptists are not a reading people, especially in denominational literature. While the children of Episcopalians and Presbyterians are pretty well drilled in their respective creeds, those of the Baptists are often left to drift about with every wind of doctrine.

The first newspaper among the Baptists seems to have been the old Missionary Magazine, published first in Boston in 1803, and edited by Dr. Baldwin, who issued it once every three months. We had no means of diffusing information among our people then. Now our facilities are almost all that could be desired. No denomination in the United States exceeds the Baptists in the number of papers, magazines and other periodicals, issuing weekly or monthly from the press. In the American Baptist Publication Society we have an institution that is scattering broadcast throughout the land our denominational literature. Besides this grand agency, others of less magnitude are doing a good work in the distribution of religious literature.

At the beginning of this century we had no authors among the Baptists. Other denominations did not look to us for help in diffusing religious information through the press.

Meantime some of the Baptists of England had acquired quite a reputation as authors and writers, among whom may be named Defoe, Bunyan, Ivemy, Jones, Gell, Kelpin, Fuller and Robinson, Booth, and others. Learned men, scholars and distinguished preachers were few and far between at that time among us. The number of D. D.'s could then almost be counted upon one's fingers and thumbs. While we had no theologians or scholars to compare with Broadus, Harper or Foy, yet we had quite a number of eloquent and effective preachers, who no doubt were equal to the modern ministry in power. The fact is, that our ministry of the present day has gained in culture but lost in power.

Baldwin, Sands, Parkinson, Staughton, Marshall and the Furmans were among the leading men in our denomination in those early times. The theology of the Baptists was High Calvinism. This was the test of orthodoxy. A sermon was incomplete that did not contain something about election, predestination and foreordination, final perseverance of the saints, divine sovereignty, &c. These, with the mode and subjects of baptism, were Baptist hobbies. Gill's Divinity and his Commentaries formed the principle part of a Baptist preacher's library in these times. The evil effects of such theological teachings from unlearned and unstable men were fully seen to our shame and sorrow, when Luther Rice and his co-adjutors attempted to enlist the Baptist rank and file in the cause of foreign missions. This ultra Calvinism among us then developed itself with a formidable antinomian and antimission element that finally separated from us and did our cause much harm. Then do nothing Baptists went out from us singing "stand still and see the salvation of God," and they have verily stood still, while in many places their Pedobaptist friends have walked in and taken their children away from them. There is no telling the odium and the damage these deluded Baptists have brought upon us as a denomination. Some of the preachers of these times who were more conservative in their theological tenets, and who were not imbued with the polemic spirit of the age, dwelt much upon personal religion, often relating in the pulpit their Christian experience, dwelling on the promises of the Scriptures as sources of comfort and of faith. Preaching then was with rare exceptions extemporaneous. If a preacher had on any occasion to read a sermon, he called it reading and not preaching, and would apologize to his congregation for doing so. Some who were compelled to use notes used the utmost caution in keeping them concealed. Such was the prejudice on the part of the masses against the use of manuscript or notes in the pulpit that the majority of preachers preferred to risk extempore preaching than to adopt the former method of speaking. And many of these latter became correct and effective speakers.

The people thought that the preacher need not study his sermons. If one was called to preach the Spirit would give him utterance. But both preacher and people realized in time that in order to understand the Scriptures one must study them. It is not surprising that our Baptist fathers, with such views, held to a free gospel, free as the rain from heaven. Ministers preached without compensation. "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel" was sometimes quoted as an argument that ministers must preach whether paid for their services or not. The preacher could use his six days for labor in support of himself and family just as his brethren did. It was his duty to attend the place of worship, and while there why not use his gifts for the edification of his brethren? Col. Harris, at the ordination of a young minister, warned him whatever he did never to receive any compensation for preaching. The motto of the age with the Baptists seems to have been, "the Lord keep him humble, and we will be sure to keep him poor." It was no uncommon thing then for a preacher to labor daily on his farm or at the work bench and preach to some half dozen churches. Some merchandized, taught school or practiced medicine. There were not in the whole country a dozen Baptist preachers outside of the towns and cities who were supported by their churches. Even the far-famed and talented Jesse Mercer of Georgia relied upon his farm for a support, although pastor of four strong churches, each of which could have supported him.

New Testament Studies—No. 9

BY RIGHT C. MOORE.

THE PAULINE EPISTLES.

It is a noteworthy fact that twenty-one of the twenty-seven books of the New Testament are in epistolary form, six being addressed to individuals, ten to local churches, and five to Christians in general. They were written by five of the Apostles—Paul, James, Peter, John, and Jude—during the period from A. D. 52 to 69. Letter writing, uncommon among the Greeks but familiar to the Romans, was a positive necessity in the Christian church and an an invaluable aid to the Apostles in the spread and growth of Christianity. Of the many epistles written by the founders of the Christian faith, only a few remain to us. Some of them are only private notes, while others are so logical and learned that they may properly be termed elaborate essays. "The epistles constitute an authentic and invaluable commentary and exposition on the practical and doctrinal meaning of the life and teaching of Christ."

1. Author—his life. Before the beginning of his ministry to the Gentiles, the Apostle was called Saul, that being his Jewish while Paul was his Roman name. He was born in Tarsus in Cilicia. His father belonged to the tribe of Benjamin, was a strict Pharisee, and possessed the privileges of a Roman citizen. Having mastered the Greek language and the art of tent making in Tarsus, he was sent at an early age to Jerusalem and brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, one of the most eminent doctors of the law. He became an ardent foe to Christianity, and while on a mission of persecution to Damascus he was gloriously converted. He at once began preaching, and spent about three years in Arabia and Damascus. Driven from Damascus he went to Jerusalem, and through the introduction of Barnabas was admitted among the Apostles. His ardor incurs hostility, and again urged to flee, he returns to Tarsus by way of Cesarea. Thence, invited by Barnabas, he goes to Antioch where together they toil unremittingly for a year; and after a short relief trip to the Jerusalem brethren, they go forth as missionaries. On their first tour they went to the island of Cyprus where Elymas was smitten with blindness, and Sergius Paulus was converted; to Perga in Pamphylia where John left them, returning to Jerusalem; to Antioch in Pisidia where they aroused intense interest and bitter opposition; to Lystra, where a cripple was healed and Paul was stoned; to Derbe, whence they returned to Lystra, Iconium and Antioch; having left elders in every city, they returned to the coast and from Attalia sailed home to Antioch in Syria. Paul then attended the council at Jerusalem where he gained his point against the circumcision of the Gentile converts. Silas becomes the chief associate of Paul on the Second Missionary Journey, and they go through Syria, Cilicia, Phrygia, Galatia, and passing by Mysia arrived at Troas where Luke joins them, and Paul is called into Macedonia; at once they set sail, touch at Samothrace, land at Neapolis, and journey to Philippi, the home of Lydia, the converted jailer, and the soothsaying damsel; passing through Amphipolis, Apollonia and Thessalonica, they came to Berea, where they gained many converts; leaving Silas and Timothy, Paul proceeded to Athens, preaching a powerful sermon on Mars Hill, and to Corinth where he wrote the first two of his letters now extant, pursued his trade of tent making, preached every Sabbath, and by Jewish enemies was brought before the proconsul Gallio; stopping at Ephesus and Cesarea, he sailed to Cesarea and went

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 10, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

An exchange remarks that Methodists beat the world for inconsistency when they preach that immersion is unscriptural, but take a convert off and immerse him, if he asks it. But then, you know, the Pedobaptist leaders are saying now that immersion is baptism—the baptism that Christ ordered.

IF REPORTS at the Charlotte convention are to be as cheering as we hope they will be, the pastors have got to do a lot of face to face preaching among their flocks—their "forces"—from now till the meeting. There is time and occasion for good, persistent and united work in the weeks that remain.

TRY a doctrinal sermon on your people. They are not to be blamed for becoming tired of the monotonous talking much and saying little that is characteristic of weak-minded brethren. "Ye shall know the Truth." When a man overlooks the doctrines he neglects fundamental truths, which are essential to freedom.

NOTE that those who oppose "close communion" deny that immersion is scriptural baptism. Granting the latter, "close communion" follows as the night the day. It is natural for those who deny plain Bible statements to try to evade the "inconveniences" of others by misinterpreting the Bible. That inconvenience plea gave origin to infant baptism.

HERETIC BRIGGS says that the ministerial market is suffering from over-production, and that half the preachers ought to stop preaching and abandon their pulpits. The Examiner says he is quoted as saying: "The Protestants could well dispense with 50,000 of their 90,000 clergymen. There is $549,000,000 invested in church edifices, which is $300,000,000 more than is necessary. The statistics of our Protestant churches is startling; and the bankruptcy of many of them is inevitable unless there be a change." Certainly 50,000 preachers like Briggs could be dispensed with.

A RECENT writer proposes the following remedies for the drink evil:

> "Moral suasion for the man who drinks;
> Mental suasion for the man who thinks;
> Legal suasion for the drunkard maker;
> Prison suasion for the statute breaker."

That is aptly said; and there is just as much reason as there is rhyme in it.

Speaking of prohibition and politics it occurs to us that while we hear a great deal of "the power of the saloon in politics," we hear nothing of the power of temperance in that phase of existence. Now why? Is politics unworthy the good influence of temperance men? Must a man forget the drink evil when he votes? May one forget it on any occasion? Not in politics, particularly, but in one's daily life should determination to destroy the liquor evil be prominent. And there ought to be moral, mental, legal and prison suasion.

The power of the religion of Jesus Christ should be set over against the power of the saloon and other agencies of the devil everywhere all the time.

LET us say to those of our readers who read the Charlotte Observer that a suggestion in that journal the 4th inst. is entirely misleading. The RECORDER'S business relations with President Winston have been similar to those existing now with Messrs. Ayer of Philadelphia, Cheney of Toledo, and lately with Mr. Allcott of Raleigh, the Electrolibration Company, etc.

Our contemporary's rule of not accepting pure reading advertisements is the exception to the rule in North Carolina, and, so far as we know, in the South. And here is a difference that caused misunderstanding not long ago. We stated that money was being used to circulate certain statements. But we did not think for a moment of asserting that the journals which accepted these statements on consideration were in the least dishonorable. The RECORDER'S Dr. Pierce and B. F. Johnson readers, for instance, are sufficient guarantee of that. We have certain pages on which paid matter cannot appear; but if it is wholesome, there are pages on which it may have space. The editorial on the subject was aimed solely to show that the upholders of State-aid were working anonymously, and betraying a disinclination to discuss the issue openly and above-board. If State-aid men had undertaken to refute Dr. Taylor's arguments, instead of talking of side-issues and applying epithets, the present stage of discussion would not have been reached.

LITERATURE FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

It is a fact that more literature is issued with a view to the Sunday school than is devoted to all the other departments of our work. Religious papers are indeed abundant, but a reading of the reports made by the American Baptist Publication Society and our own Southern Board will convince one that their output of Sunday school literature is greater than that issued under Baptist auspices for other purposes. Of course they do not confine themselves to the primary object of the Sunday-school, namely, the instruction and training of the young; but for a long time have they been designing much of their work for the instruction of the old, yea, truly the pastors themselves. It was a slow achievement, and it is difficult to realize even now how greatly these publications have changed the character of Sunday schools and Sunday-school work. It has been well said that the first great Sunday-school worker would not recognize the present institution, were he living. His idea of instructing the very young is conserved in an isolated department now—the primary. And there are helps and helps and publications and publications graded to well-nigh every stage of human development. They are enough to enlighten us all; and their abundance and diversity threatens to confuse. The work that is absorbed in their preparation is enormous. And they are next to free tracts in cheapness.

But these publications are only a part of the printed Sunday-school helps. And they are so thoroughly and carefully prepared that any one may use them to advantage. We have merely suggested that their abundance and diversity are liable to become confusing. And we have called attention to the change they have wrought in the public conception of the purpose of Sunday-schools. That they were once entirely for children, that that was their original purpose; and that the literature devoted to them is to a considerable extent far and away beyond the young,—these facts are worth serious consideration. And the question is spontaneous, are not the schools encroaching seriously upon the churches? They should never be more than adjuncts.

As the periodical helps have multiplied, books—the old Sunday-school "stand bys,"—have lost caste. Sunday school libraries have been made to give place to papers, etc., which seems to us unfortunate.

The impress of a wholesome book upon a growing intellect outlasts a thousand lessons taught from papers. The one acts upon a receptive object, the other is usually "drummed in," if it gets in at all. A book is read spontaneously, but a Sunday-school lesson is too similar to day-school experiences to be desired. Thus books have a decided advantage in the beginning. They do not refer to the lessons, but they do deal with life; and that is all that they need do.

A child in whose hands good books are placed will develop more soundly than "lesson helps" can develop him. But what does "good books" mean? That is a very pertinent question,—one that none will dare to fully answer.

There is on our table an old Blair's Rhetoric, bound in calf. It has a Sunday-school tag pasted in it; but we have been informed that the authorities of the Sunday-school to which it was given cast it out with others that were judged to be unfit. It does seem that the old, serious analytical work would be useless in a Sunday-school library; it would have been so far as the most are concerned, but it would have helped some young man to gain an idea of the structure of the language he speaks. It is more precious than jewels beside the flaccid milk and water stories that infest so many Sunday-school libraries. It is sacrilege to mention it in the same breath with the enormous lot of gaudily bound compositions of fiction, whose import is fittingly expressed by that abominable, nauseating term, "goody-goody." If we must have one or the other, let it be Blair by all means.

But there is neither reason nor room for extremes. Good books, whose design to wield good influence is not perceptible, save in their effect upon readers, are cheap, though not abundant. There are religious works of practical and instructive nature. There are stories by recognized authors which, though not designedly religious, are powerful life-moulders; and they will never disgust a youth with books in general as some so-called religious books do. To say pious things and draw pious pictures is not religion. To conceive a morbid plot of love and religion and "happy ever afterward" rot mixed in horrible proportions, does not help religiously or intellectually. One of Louisa Alcott's works is worth a million of the like. And there are many others who are recognized as having written books that will influence generations. And their books cost no more than the milk and water stuff.

Books are man's best friends. They come cheaply now. Every family that can should purchase a work of known worth as often as possible; and the Sunday-schools should undertake to place them within the reach of those who cannot buy.

FIFTY-ONE DAYS.

In this paper the Treasurer's report shows that $7,068 65 have been received for State Missions since the last Convention. Remember that $3,000 of this was on the debt of last year. In fifty one days from the date of this paper the report of the Treasurer for this Convention year will be closed. To take the Board to the Convention free of debt, seven thousand dollars for State Missions must be received in the next fifty one days. We earnestly urge every pastor and every church to aid during October and November with State Missions.

SERIOUS QUESTIONS.

Dear Recorder:—A letter addressed to this church has been received from Miss Fannie Knight. In this letter she states that she can no longer communicate through the RECORDER; that its columns are not open to her; that it suppressed her letter, &c., &c.

Is this true?

She further complains that the Board would not pay her the salary due her for the three months prior to the time the Board severed relations between them—though she was at work for the Board during the time.

Is this true? If so, on what grounds did the Board do this?

Yours, JNO. E. WHITE

Edenton, N. C., Oct. 6, 1894.

We have it on good authority that letters and literature of the nature of that referred to in the preceding letter are being widely distributed in our State.

The RECORDER opened its columns for several months to a full and free discussion of the Gospel Mission movement. The people became tired of it. And the discussion was serving to divide rather than unite. We thought it highly desirable to try to bring it to an end. We stated at the time that the Gospel missionaries had gone forth; that they had opportunity to make good all their promises, conclusions and assertions. It is a time for work, not words. But the Gospel Mission is still debating a question that time and actions alone can settle. It should be borne in mind that missions are for the sake pre eminently of the heathen.

We have never refused to print a letter from gospel missionaries relating to their work. We are glad to print them. Being persuaded, however, that the "Gospel Mission" is unwise; knowing that at best it is an experiment, we cannot be faithful to duty and permit the RECORDER columns to be used in urging its claims. The "Gospel Mission" can commend itself through the RECORDER columns by a record of work. Sister Fannie Knight's letter was not published because it was a series of arguments,—in Christian spirit—against the Board. Printing it would have necessitated a reply, a rejoinder, another and another: the question would be opened. In her letter Sister Knight states that she can probably get support from a certain part of the State other than the East. When her Association determined to work through the Board, she should have fallen back on that support. Sister Knight is pious, consecrated and faithful, one of the editor's personal favorites. But her letter is, in his opinion, too unwise to be published.

In answer to Bro. White's first inquiry: It is illogical and unwise, not to say unjust, to affirm that one can no longer communicate through the RECORDER, when only one communication has been refused publication, and when, too, a personal letter was written explaining the refusal. And Sister Knight and all her co-laborers can communicate through RECORDER columns.

We can easily answer the second inquiry, but in the premises it is better to leave it to the Board.

IT IS helpful to turn backward to other times once in a while. Tradition, custom and history are great agencies of conservativeness.

On our first page a brother, one who thinks well before he writes, begins an article comparing Baptists in the first and last halves of the present century. It seems to us that it would be difficult to obtain a topic more interesting and instructive and generally helpful.

One hardly realizes what a difference has been wrought, what growth there has been. And it was achieved without revolutions or sensational discussions. The change is the product of development through revelation.

The emancipation of Baptists from ignorance, yea, from voluntary ignorance, is one of the blessedest realities of the times. And it is almost beyond belief that Baptists use more printed matter—the great foe to ignorance—than any other sect. Perhaps they need it. Baptists have probably the best theological institution in the land. A hundred years ago most of us were opposed to such instrumentalities.

The article will be continued in our next issue.

POPE LEO, eighty-four years old, and holding on to his throne with a grasp that old age and poor health cannot loose, is quoted as saying that his Cardinals are dividing the bear-skin before the bear is caught or killed. And they are. There is about as much speculation and wire pulling relative to the successor of Leo as there is in the question of the next President of the United States. And these Cardinals have Christian spirits! And when one of them becomes Pope he will be holy and infallible.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

NOTES FROM HERE AND THERE.

Louisburg promises to be one of the prosperous towns of the State. The tobacco market is doing much for the business interests of the town. Sixteen thousand dollars were paid out during two days of last week. Dr. Meadows has just completed a new hotel, and opposite this Mr. Neal is erecting a handsome brick store. Bro. J. S. Barrow and Bro. A. D. Green are among the oldest brethren in the town, yet they are active in business and unusually vigorous for men of their age. Bro. Morton, who has been sick for some time, we are glad to say is improving.

No bachelor could expect more or better attention than Bro. Morton receives. He will preach the introductory at the Tar River Association. Brethren Wilder, Meadows, Timberlake and perhaps others will attend the next meeting of the Association. Bro. E. S. Green informed me that all debts pertaining to the church were paid every Monday morning.

The Tar River Union failed on account of the rain. The same program will be continued for December.

The Warrenton brethren have some interesting plans for mission work in Warren county. Some sprightly young man who is willing to work, having some preaching ability, and who desires to pursue his studies in a good school in connection with his work at some mission points, might find it to his interest to write to Bro. Taylor.

The Green River Association, which was held at Big Level in Polk county, was well attended. Dr. Landrum was in better health than usual and was again made Moderator. The church was too small for the crowd. The roads had been nicely worked, the grove cleared up, plenty of tables, no lack of anything except water. All pledges were paid, and the church planned more work than heretofore for next year. Bro. J. H. Taylor in a most cordial manner welcomed the Association, giving a brief history of the church at this place.

"In all of our successes and failures, our joys and sorrows, we have been able to trace the golden thread of a kind Father which has led us along in our efforts to glorify His name in the world."—C. B. Justice, at Green River Association.

The churches in this Association will support a young preacher at Wake Forest next year. We hope to see a large number of Associations do likewise. This would be the most satisfactory way of doing this work so far as it be practical. We met several young men who will shortly come to Wake Forest. This was my first trip to Polk county. The land is fine, the homes comfortable, and the people very clever.

One of the best pastors in the State said in his speech on periodicals: "The RECORDER is not dependent on me, but on the other hand I must have the paper in order that I may be informed about our work and be able to instruct my people."

Dr. Durham discussed the subject of general education in the grove so that all might have an opportunity of hearing.

The people of the State owe Dr. Durham a debt of gratitude for the faithful and untiring efforts he has made to put this matter before them.

"If the membership of our churches were properly informed by the pastors, few if any of the churches would fail to come up to the full measure of their duty." This was uttered by one of our most faithful pastors.

Forty new subscribers and the renewal of most of our old subscribers was a good record for the Green River Association. For this we not only thank the subscribers themselves, but we are grateful to the Moderator and other brethren who rendered us valuable aid in this work. J. C. C.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....THE RECORDER nineteen weeks—fifty cents. Tell your people.

....Rev. W. B. Oliver of Wilmington was a visitor at Raleigh last week.

....Rev. J. F. Tuttle has been called as permanent pastor at Whiteville.

....Sister Kate Taylor wife of the missionary to Brazil died on that field recently.

....Had you noticed how clearly the date on the label of your paper is printed of late?

....Brethren Oliver and Peele have returned to Wilmington after brief absences.

....Rev. V. M. Carter has changed his address from Salisbury to Jerusalem, Davie county.

....Rev. C. J. Walt, D. D., deceased, of Fall River, Mass., bequeathed $1,000 to Elon College.

....Dr. H. M. Wharton will aid Rev. E. M. Poteat in a meeting at New Haven, Conn., this month.

....Miss Alberta Newton will continue to labor in Africa, if her health permits. Her zeal is commendable.

....Bro. Newton's last letter is typical of the man. He was always working and planning to work more.

....Rev. S. F. Conrad assisted Rev. C. C. Haymore in a meeting at Germanton last week.—Winston Sentinel.

....Missionary W. D. Powell has secured a house and the means to support an orphanage at Toluca, Mexico.

....That article on the prayer meeting by Rev. C. A. Jenkens is first-class. His plan is most excellent.—M. A. Adams.

....Nearly two hundred students have been enrolled at the Louisville Seminary. The opening is particularly encouraging.

....The Western North Carolina Convention will not charge for collecting foreign mission funds hereafter, says the Mission Journal.

....The Robeson Association meets Nov. 13th, 14th, 15th, at Ashpole church, instead of October 30th and 31st as had been announced.

....We regret to hear that Rev. W. B. Morton is sick. We trust his indisposition is not serious and that he will quickly regain his usual vigor.

....The remains of Sister Martha Hunter, sister of Rev. J. Olive, of venerable memory, were buried at Apex the 29th ult. She lived and died in the Lord.

....Rev. E. C. Bobbitt called in to see us last week on his return to Franklinton from Smyrna, Carteret county, where he has served as pastor about a year.

....Dr. Jas. M. Rawlings becomes editor of the North Carolina Presbyterian, editor McLaurin becoming business manager. The new order has our best wishes.

....Rev. S. J. Porter and wife are spending some time with relatives in Columbus county. We understand that Bro. Porter will take up work while at home.

....Dr. Lansing Burrows, the lately-elected assistant secretary of our Home Mission Board, has resigned his Augusta, Ga., pulpit after a service of eleven years.

....Our four months offer ought to add a thousand names to our books this fall. They have been coming in very well; but there are many pastors yet to be heard from.

....Dr. C. D. McIver, President of the Greensboro Normal and Industrial School, and Treasurer E. J. Forney refuse to make known the income of said school.—C. Durham.

....The appropriation of the taxes of the people to higher education in North Carolina is not a help, but a hindrance to the best educational interest of the people of the State.

....It is human to try to accomplish by abuse what argument cannot. It is the loser who thinks hard of him who has justice on his side. Anger bespeaks discouragement.

....We are giving our columns a "resting spell" from the State-aid question this week. We cannot see the end of what is yet to be said and printed before the Legislature adjourns.

....The church at Hawkinsville, Ala., which Dr. W. A. Nelson has been serving some time, is so well pleased with that servant of God that a hearty, indefinite call has been extended him.

....Dr. Taylor is still in New York on business. He will probably return this week. Prof. W. L. Poteat is chairman of the Wake Forest Faculty while Dr. Taylor is on leave of absence.

....We were glad to have a visit from Dr. John Mitchell Monday. He informs us that his Board is now sustaining thirty six young men at Wake Forest, six having recently been taken on.

....Rev. A. D. Hunter will represent the RECORDER at the Atlantic Association, Elder J. H. Lamberth at the Tar River, and Bro. J. E. Greene at the Brier Creek. Brethren, treat them well.

....Two hundred and forty students are enrolled at William Jewell College, Mo., where two Wake Forest men are making their mark as professors, namely, Chas. E. Smith and J. H. Simmons.

....New York State will be away ahead of other States if it adopts the recommendation of the late constitutional convention to make all forms of gambling illegal. That would mean a new New York.

....Rev. L. R. Pruett of Charlotte writes: "Last Sunday morning I made a five minutes talk on the RECORDER." And as a consequence our list of subscribers at Charlotte was increased. A good example.

....Wednesday evening, Oct. 10th, at St. Paul's church, Suffolk, Va., Miss Annie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Shepherd, and Mr. John B. Booth, will be united in marriage. We extend best wishes.

....The college athletic question is settling itself—at Wake Forest. It has been formally announced that that institution will not be represented on the foot-ball field this year. Some of the brethren are resting easier.

....Principal E. Lee Fox, of Friendship High School and Business Institute, Curtis Mills, N. C., says that his institution is in better condition than ever. He is preparing young men for college, and hopes to send some to Wake Forest.

....The Watchman, the Examiner, the Journal and Messenger, and the Standard of Chicago, are favorable to the magazine form of religious newspapers. The Western Recorder, the Standard and the Baptist and Herald, of Texas, have yet to announce their intention of changing.

....Rev. D. Cale writes from Potecast: "I have had meetings with my churches and they are all much revived, and I hope better prepared to work for the Master. Seventy-two members have been added to my flocks this fall.

....Rev. J. J. Thompson and Miss Mattie May Allcott will be united in marriage at the Baptist church, Clarksville, Va., the 17th inst. Bro. Thompson is a North Carolinian, of whom we are justly proud, and we join his many friends in wishing him and his a life of usefulness and joy.

....The selection of Rev. W. C. Norman of Wilmington to take up Dr. Reid's work at the Greensboro Female College is most fortunate. It was our privilege to know Dr. Norman when he lived in Raleigh, and we never knew a Christian gentleman who combined qualities of head and heart better than he.

....Bro. Hight Moore resumes his New Testament studies this week with an excellent one on Paul. These studies cannot fail to guide one in study of the New Testament, and, doubtless, they will awake an interest in many. Prof. Poteat will complete his series on Paul after awhile.

....Bro. Tyree is having the aid of Rev. J. L. White in a meeting at Durham. The town is stirred, and many are brought to seek salvation. Bro. White is one of the most vigorous of revival preachers, and Bro. Tyree one of the safest leaders; between them God will do a great work at Durham.

....Those who go in the party will be R. T. Bryan and wife, with four children; Miss Lottie Price of Asheville, N. C.; Miss Willie Kelly of McKinley, Ala.; Miss Julia Macbeath of Owensboro, Ky.; W. W. Lawton of Estill, S. C.; N. Maynard and wife of Covington, Tenn. All go to China, except the two last, who go to Japan.—Foreign Mission Journal.

....We are grateful to Prest. C. S. Vann and Secretary Jno. C. Bond of the Edenton Agricultural and Fish Fair for a ticket to the 1894 meeting. From the preparations and announcements we judge that the Chowan section will be on its mettle the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th inst. We can testify that the best in the world lives and grows around Edenton.

....At the Fayetteville Street Church, Raleigh, Brother Stringfield pastor, a good meeting has been going on for several weeks. The pastor has the advantage of a good working membership, and even while he is travelling for the Female University the services do not flag. Twelve persons have been baptized into the fellowship of the church recently. The meeting continues.

....Have you noticed that the man who asked Dr. Taylor several insinuating questions has kept his name to himself? Dr. Taylor offered to answer the questions, if the questioner would reveal his identity. It has been some weeks now, but the questioner is still ashamed to show his face. Dr. Taylor has had experience with anonymous writers before, as an ex-president of a well-known institution might witness.

....Elder Mark Baldwin writes that a presbytery consisting of Elder E. J. Adams and himself, met with our church at Union Grove, Yadkin county, Sept. 16th, and ordained Bro. T. C. Myers to the full work of the gospel ministry. The usual order was observed, Elder Baldwin examining the candidate and preaching the sermon, Elder Adams praying and delivering the charge. Bro. Myers begins work as pastor of the church that called his ordination.

....Deacon J. H. Alford, who is a fixture in our office as foreman of the RECORDER composing force, is attending the annual meeting of the International Typographical Union at Louisville, Ky. At this meeting the organization is expected to take steps relative to adjustment of conditions occasioned by the introduction of type setting machines. Bro. Alford is representing the local organization; and being the senior Raleigh printer, he is eminently qualified for the trust.

....Bro. Blakely H. Matthews writes that he has read Bro. Caddell's remarks as requested, and that he wishes to know what Bro. Caddell had in view in incorporating the remark in his notes about Plymouth. It is a case of what Bro. Caddell meant to say and what Bro. Matthews understands him to say. Bro. Caddell was mentioning a practical instance—an object lesson—of the liquor evil, and of the foolishness of men. He did not have Plymouth in mind. We are sorry none of the good people of Plymouth asked for an explanation when the article first appeared.

....It is worthy of note that in his short letter from Shanghai, China, Bro. Tatum does not refer to the war. This is reassuring. Hon. T. R. Jernigan, United States Consul at Shanghai, is well known to North Carolinians, and we know that he will do all that is possible to protect our interests. Great Britain has joined in with the United States for the protection of mutual interests. Japan is still the victor and China is demoralized. The latter is suffering just what worked against the North so long in the late war—lack of head, indecision; and China will conquer, if it conquers at all, just as the North did—by superior capacity to lose men.

....It has been a joyful privilege to his many acquaintances in Raleigh to grasp the hand of Rev. Jonathan Wood of Raton, New Mexico, who is visiting his native State for a season. Bro. Wood was pastor of the Third Baptist church of Raleigh some years ago, but, after a session at Wake Forest College, his health failed, and he had to seek a more invigorating atmosphere. Our readers will doubtless recall the letters he wrote from his adopted home telling of a great change in his health. Bro. Wood is looking well now. He reports his Raton work in good condition; and he was greatly pleased to find his former flock in a handsome new church and in the midst of a good meeting, to which he readily gave aid.

Farewell.

Dear Brethren, Sisters and Children:—As this is the last Journal before our departure for China, allow me a few farewell words.

We will leave our home in North Carolina October 15th, and hold farewell meetings in Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville, and Louisville, and sail from Tacoma, Washington State, October 30th, on Steamship "Tacoma."

I can find no words to express my gratitude to God and to you for the warm welcome and glad reception which you have given us everywhere. The work at home has been hard and tiresome, but very pleasant, and I return, if not very much physically stronger, mentally and spiritually refreshed. The many large and sympathetic audiences to which I have spoken, the many grasps of loving hands, the many God-bless yous, the many kind words will be called to mind over and over again to inspire and encourage us in our work for the days to come. We return with glad hearts, cheered by the thought that many loving Christian hearts go with us, and many earnest prayers follow us. We are very much encouraged, too, by the fact that we have found our Baptist people everywhere so deeply interested in Foreign Missions. Times have been hard, and the home interests are now making great demands upon you, and justly so; but we feel that as the times improve, and you know more of the teachings of God's Word—study the Word—and the result of the work, you will increase more and more in giving, going and praying for this work. Information is the one thing needed. Dear brother, dear sister, dear child, will you not study God's Word more, and study, too, all the sources of information about our foreign mission work? Read our religious paper. Read the Foreign Mission Journal. Send to the M. B. Mission Rooms, 9 W. Lexington Street, Baltimore, Md., and get tracts and leaflets, read and pass them on to some one else. "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you." 2 Cor. xiii. 11. With Christian love.

MR. AND MRS. R. T. BRYAN, and children, Katie, Lula, Eliza, Robert.

Erratum.

The usually correct printer of the RECORDER makes me say in my note respecting Dr. Gorrell, "I have all confidence in the strength and sobriety of his Christian character." Instead of "sobriety" I wrote "stability."

But let me not be understood as thinking him deficient at all in the grace of sobriety. As a boy he kept pace in this particular with the traditional judge, and I doubt very much whether he has materially changed his gait.

From Bro. Tatum in China

Dear Recorder:—You know Misses Willie Kellie and Lottie Price have been appointed by our Foreign Mission Board as missionaries to Shanghai. They have been appointed most a year. The ladies of Alabama are raising funds to send Miss Kellie, and we hope to see her after two or three months.

We understand that Miss Price of Asheville, N. C., is not to come this autumn. That would be such a disappointment.

Brethren, sisters and Sunday school children, put your hearts together and see that the Board is justified in sending Miss Price when Miss Kellie comes, and she, you and we will be glad together.

Yours for China,

E. F. TATUM.

The New Association.

The following churches have gotten letters from their Associations to form a new Association: Reidsville, Greensboro, Buchanan, Liberty, and I believe Summerfield. These are invited to meet with the Greensboro church, Wednesboro, October 17th, at 10:30 a. m., for the purpose of forming the new Association. Other Baptist churches grouped about Greensboro are cordially invited to send fraternal messengers.

The churches mentioned above should each send three delegates who will attend. One day will be enough for this first meeting, and we sidcerely hope the churches will all be represented.

This movement is the beginning of a great work for this portion of the State, and we sincerely hope the churches will enter heartily into this first meeting.

Bro. M. A. Adams of Reidsville has been invited to preach the sermon on Wednesday night.

We hope that the pastors of said churches will meet with us and give us their counsel and help. Fraternally,

CHAS. A. G. THOMAS,
R. W. BROOKS,
G. W. WHITE,
Committee.

Railroad Accomodations to the Atlantic Association.

Dear Recorder:—The Wilmington and Weldon Railroad Company will arrange to sell tickets to Ayden and Winterville, on account of the meeting of the Atlantic Association. Arrangements have also been made to have the train stop at the church and let off and take on passengers during the meeting from Oct. 15th to 18th. Passengers from north of Winterville should purchase round trip tickets to Ayden, and passengers south of Winterville should purchase round trip tickets to Winterville.

Let all come who will. All who come will be taken care of.

Charlotte Notes.

Dear Recorder:—The Baptists in Charlotte and Mecklenburg county, when compared to the financial and numerical rating of some other denominations, are weak. But of recent years they have grown in wealth, numbers, liberality, and spiritual life. We now have two prosperous churches in the city of Charlotte and several churches in the county. There are about six hundred Baptists in the city. With this cohort of truth-loving soldiers, we hope to abound more and more in the work of the Lord. The field is constantly widening before us, especially here in the city.

There is one encouraging feature about our work, viz, a great many of those who are coming to Charlotte are Baptists, and they are coming from the country where you find Baptists indeed. Some of these country members are the purest, the bravest and the best. They are Baptists of courage, of conviction, of faith. Many of them are poor people, it is true, but their sons and daughters are learning to work as clerks, bookkeepers, and also in factories, foundries and machine shops. In these boys and girls, our churches will find ardent supporters, if they are converted and trained for the church and for God.

In the days of persecution and in the time of an established church, and when there was a "governmental interference" with religious freedom, our Baptist fathers left the towns, cities and centers of influence and went to the country in which they preached and organized churches from which some of our noblest men and women have come. Long live the sacred memory of these pioneer Baptist preachers! We are receiving into our churches the children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren of the charter members of the old country churches.

The Tryon Street Baptist church is one of the constellation of churches, located in the heart of the city. It is in the centre of the group. I don't know a church whose location was more wisely secured. Sometimes our Baptist brethren are unwise in locating their churches; but the Tryon Street brethren will have a central location for all time to come. The church is strong, consisting of more than three hundred members. A large and appreciative audience greeted their venerable pastor, Dr. Pritchard, who had been absent for a month preaching to the Central Baptist church in New York. The Doctor looks well, fresh and happy. He preached with power last Sunday.

The Olivet Baptist church is located on the corner of Trade and Cedar streets, one block from the Southern (R. & D.) depot and in a popular community. There is not a vacant house in this part of the city. We have recently closed a meeting in this church which was interesting, helpful and unifying. There is a oneness among us. In such there is power. Large and anxious congregations attended the services, sometimes filling the house to its limit. Quite a large number made professions; ten have been baptized, and others are expected soon. Some of the Olivet brethren and the pastor went down to Dilworth, S. C., and held services last day afternoon. The Baptists of Charlotte must soon turn their attention to this growing, beautiful portion of the city.

We are beginning to think about the coming Convention in December. I believe it will be the largest host of the Baptists of North Carolina in the history of the Convention. Charlotte is the right place.

Reidsville Letter.

Dear Recorder:—It has been sometime since my last letter. I have been too busy to write. Since coming here I have been very busy all the time. We have four mission points, and we try to hold a meeting at each of these every year, and also one in in this town. This year the deacons asked the pastor to hold the meetings at all the points. Accordingly we began our first one at Harmon school-house the latter part of July. The meeting lasted one week. It rained every day, though the congregations were good, and the interest deep. There were eleven professions of faith in Christ. I have already baptized seven, and there are others to follow. This is in the heart of a Methodist section. We have a corps of four teachers, who go regularly every Sabbath at their own expense, to conduct a Sunday-school at this point. The outlook is bright.

We next began a meeting at Sunnyside Mission, about three miles from town. Here also the brethren and sisters go every Sunday. They have a good school. The Lord greatly blessed our labors here, and twenty-three professed faith in the Saviour. All have either been baptized or stand approved for baptism save one, and she expects to come. They have all the lumber, some money and a lot toward a house of worship here. They hope to build soon. Their idea is to remain in organic connection with the Reidsville church and have afternoon service one Sabbath in the month. The outlook is good and we expect great things for the Lord from this point.

All along we have been baptizing, and the Lord has been continually adding, but it was the general desire of our people to begin a series of meetings in the town. Ten days ago we began, and I have never seen a better meeting. I shall have to give the professions here as we are not through receiving and baptizing yet. We have approved about forty for baptism, and there have been eighty-six professions. We will receive a great many more yet; just how many I do not know. We all feel like saying, Praise the Lord all ye his people, for he is good.

In all these meetings the brethren and sisters have worked, and worked faithfully. A better corps of workers it would be hard to find. We closed our service of meetings here last night. The interest was as great as at any time during the meeting, but I was completely broken down and stopped to rest. We have not been able to seat the people. Last Sunday night, after doing all we could to seat them, fully one hundred stood upon the inside of the house during the entire service and all the windows were crowded from the outside, and then a great many were turned away. Of course this was an unusually large gathering, but we have been unable to seat the people for several Sunday evenings previous.

Our membership is near four hundred. Pray for us, for the work is great and the responsibility of so many babes in Christ transcendently so. We begin a meeting Sunday week at Three Forks. The church owns a lot at this point. Will write more after this meeting is held. With best wishes for your success, I am,

Yours truly, M. A. ADAMS.

Reidsville, N. C., October 4, 1894.

Pastor Beard's Labors Blessed.

Dear Recorder:—Our church, Sharon, is in a prosperous condition. We have had a great season of refreshing from the Lord. On the third Sunday night in September our protracted meeting commenced, and continued seven days, resulting in one of the most powerful revivals it has been my pleasure to be in. Christians were strengthened, and sinners converted. There were twenty-one buried with Christ in baptism, and six others were received by letter and restoration.

Bro. C. E. Beard is our pastor and did most of the preaching, and I can truly say he is a workman approved of the Lord. He took charge of our church three years ago, when we were almost dead, and through his labors and the blessings of God we are now alive and at work, and our members more than doubled.

Brother Beard tells me that at his other churches where he protracted, the Lord met with him and gave him souls for his hire, as the following result will show: Shiloh, twenty by baptism, three by restoration; Brier Branch, six by baptism, two by restoration. Judging from the converts of our church, they prove more enduring and steadfast than those of evangelistic ingathering, who so soon, like the sow, return to the wallow in the mire.

Bro. Beard is now engaged in a meeting of days at Washington. May the Lord be with him and bless his labors in the conversion of souls. He seems to be thoroughly consecrated and alive to the work of the Lord, and is endearing himself to the hearts of the brethren.

MECKLENBURG AND CABARRUS ASSOCIATION.

We kindly invite Dr. C. E. Taylor, Dr. C. Durham, Dr. John Mitchell of the Education Board, and the Rev. J. B. Richardson of High Point, and the RECORDER representative, to come to our Association (the Mecklenburg and Cabarrus) at Arlington. You all can come to Matthews. Please notify F. M. Hinson at Arlington of your coming, and we will see that conveyances meet you.

The Association will be held on the 18th, 19th and 20th of October, 1894.

A. W. CRABTREE.

Meetings.

Dear Recorder:—I will give to you in as few words as possible an account of meetings held with the four churches of which I am pastor. I held a meeting of seven days with each church with results as follows:

At Long Creek six were received for baptism. At Link's Chapel two were received. At Salem nine were received, seven by baptism, and two by letter; two were restored. At Bruington eight were added by baptism.

The interest was good at each place, and the churches greatly revived. Rev. J. J. Payseur was with me through these meetings and did most of the preaching. He is a good preacher and worker.

Stanly Baptist Association.

The next session of the Stanly Baptist Association will be held with the Corinth church, Rowan county, N. C., five miles northeast of Gold Hill, Thursday before the first Sunday in November, 1894. Representatives of the various departments of our work and visiting brethren will find a cordial welcome; and if they will write to Bro. Calvin Morgan, Gold Hill, N. C., and inform him of the time of their arrival, they will be met at Gold Hill.

R. D. TESTER, Clerk.

South Fork Association

Will convene at Maiden church, in Catawba county, on Thursday, October 25.

Maiden is on the narrow guage railway about midway between Newton and Lincolnton. Visiting brethren coming on the western railway will change cars at Newton, those coming by the central road will change cars at Lincolnton, and those by the air line railway will change cars at Gastonia. We are expecting a large number of brethren from a distance, especially Drs. Bailey, Durham, C. E. Taylor, Pritchard, Hufham, and Bro. Mills, and any and all others who may see fit to visit us are cordially invited.

Brother Crabtree on His Field.

Dear Brother Recorder—The readers of the RECORDER have not heard from me in some time. Will you please allow a few words from a servant.

My first meeting at Oak Grove on the 4th Sunday in July, 1894, lasted seven days, and I baptized three. Then to Howells on the 5th Sunday. The meeting lasted six days and I baptized two, and others will be in the near future. Then to Cold water on the 1st Sunday in August. The meeting lasted nine days and I baptized three, and others will be. Then to my home church (Arlington) on the 2d Sunday in August. The meeting lasted nine days and I baptized four in spite of John E. King's doctrine. This makes 64 that I have baptized at Arlington in two years and ten months. During the Arlington meeting I went to Willson's Grove on Wednesday and baptized seven for Rev. J. S. King, who is not yet ordained. Rev. J. C. Alderman, of Concord, and Rev. J. A. Hoyle, of Maiden, did the preaching at Arlington, and did it well. The brethren want to see them again.

On Monday after the 3d Sunday in August I reached Beaver Dam church in Union county, where I assisted Bro. D. A. Snider for six days, and on Saturday Bro. Snider baptized twelve happy souls and two others joined that evening, and several other professions and about fifty mourners left at the altar. This was one of the grandest meetings I ever attended.

I went from Beaver Dam to Olive Branch church. This is another church of Bro. Smith's. I stayed at Olive Branch six days. Some professions but no additions.

Then back to my own work at Chany's Hill church on the first Sunday in September. The meeting went on for seven days. Baptized ten, and on Saturday before the 5th Sunday in September I baptized six more at the same place. I also baptized three at Oak Grove on the 4th Sunday in September.

I was out nine weeks and two days and got to stay at home six days in all. I have been preaching in this community for two years and eleven months, and have baptized 160 persons.

I have resigned all six of my churches and am open for work anywhere the good Lord may want me. Our church at Arlington has turned out thirty six for joining a society. This is John King's second advent doctrine. We want to cleanse our church and then we think it will work better when all the dead barnacles are taken off.

Pray for us, brethren, in the work.

up to Jerusalem, whence after attending a festival for a few days, he returned to Antioch in Syria.

The Third Missionary Journey was characterized by the writing of four great Epistles (Corinthians, Galatians, Romans), a stay of over two years at Ephesus, visits throughout Galatia and Phrygia and into Greece, a journey thence by land and sea to Cesarea, and the fifth and last visit to Jerusalem. In a fierce tumult the Jews sought the Apostles' life, but he was placed in Roman custody, and to avert a plot of assassination, was carried to Cesarea. He there appears before Felix, Festus and Agrippa, and as an untried prisoner he is granted an appeal to Cæsar. The chief points of the voyage to Rome were the wreck and a three months' stay at Malta, and short stops at Syracuse, Rhegium and Puteoli. Placed at Rome in the custody of the pretorian prefect, Paul was at once treated with special consideration, and for two years he preached in his own hired house to Jews and Gentiles. After this, it is likely that he was released and visited Greece, Asia Minor, and Spain. But he was again apprehended, cast into the Roman prison and treated as a felon. Luke only of his old associates remained by his side. In the second letter to Timothy, the last of his life, Paul declares himself ready to die, and writes in triumph, "there is laid up for me a crown." He was beheaded under Nero about the year A. D. 67.

2. Author—his qualifications. The qualifications of Paul for authorship far exceeded those of any other of the New Testament writers. (1) He was highly educated in Greek literature and general culture. (2) He was thoroughly versed in Jewish law and tradition. (3) With ardor and success he studied and mastered the doctrines of Christianity. (4) He engaged in a vast missionary work, traveling extensively, organizing numerous churches, and preaching with power both to Jews and Gentiles (5) He He had participated in a long series of debates over all possible points of the Jewish and Christian faith. (6) He had a considerable pastoral experience in confirming, correcting and instructing the various churches. This course of rigid, enthusiastic labor continued about fourteen years before any of the Epistles were written. Then the great Apostle began his theological writings "with such energy, enthusiasm, vigor of argument, fulness of learning, utter sweetness and kindness of heart, and inexhaustible and unfailing piety, as were perfectly competent for the work." From time to time during a period of thirteen years he wrote and sent forth his invaluable Epistles. His toil, both literary and pastoral, for the new religion was so important and influential that he has been called the Christian Moses.

3. Dictation? Paul himself did very little writing with his own hand. This was probably due to weak eyes or other physical disability or because he was unable to easily write the Greek characters. Hence an amanuensis was uniformly employed and sometimes, as in the case of Tertius (Rom. 16: 22), he appears in his own person. However, such insertions are rare and the body of the Epistles is taken direct from the lips of Paul, he giving in his own hand at the close his personal salutations and signature.

4. Compilation. "The Epistles of Paul are the earliest literary relics of Christianity. Their value was speedily recognized by the church and they were gathered into one volume." This was styled the "Apostolos" or "Apostolicon" and embraced only ten of the letters of Paul, those to Timothy and Titus being omitted. It was widely popular, and, taken with the gospel, formed the rule of faith for many believers in early times.

5. Order. That which appears in the Common Version is not chronological but was perhaps "determined by the relative bulk of the letters or by the comparative rank and importance of the cities and churches to which they were addressed. Thus, for example, the letter to the Romans stands first since Rome was the capital of the empire and those to the Corinthians come next because Corinth was in importance the second city to whose people Paul wrote. The epistles to individuals, following those to collective audiences, also appear in an order of dignity: first come the letters to Timothy, the favorite disciple; next, the one to Titus, the evangelist; last, that to Philemon, a private Christian. Hebrews was placed at the close because its authenticity was doubted in early times.

6. Classification. The letters of Paul have been classified according to their authenticity (Renan), their chronology (Dods), and their contents. The chronological order is the most simple, suggestive, and significant, and (after Dods) we may arrange the Pauline Epistles in three groups: "(1) Those written during the period of Paul's missionary activity: 1 and 2 Thessalonians, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, Romans. (2) Those written during his imprisonment: Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, Ephesians. (3) Those written after his release in the closing years of his life: 1 and 2 Timothy, Titus."

7. Chronology. In the study of the Pauline writings a definite chronology leads to a clearer understanding of the writer's circumstances and a better observation of the growth and harmony of his ideas. Though the dates of the Epistles cannot be determined with absolute certainty, the following are highly probable: 1 and 2 Thessalonians were written in 53, about fifteen years after Paul's conversion; after a lapse of five years, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians, and Romans were written; the close of the next four years finds Paul in prison where, in a few months, he wrote Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon; three or four years later the pastoral epistles to Timothy and Titus appear. Hence we have four chronological clusters of Pauline Epistles written in the thirteen years between 53 and 66 A. D.

8. Aim. The burning desire of Paul was to disseminate the living principles of the gospel. The burden of his writings is to declare that salvation, secured only through Christ and not by the works of the law, is open to Jew and Gentile who are both in equal need and equally capable of enjoying its privileges. Some other features of his main purpose were (1) To locate a permanent record of truth. (2) To throw authoritative light upon peculiar circumstances. (3) To comfort believers in the work and inspire them to yet nobler effort. (4) To correct incipient error and preserve the church from subsequent heresy. (5) To win adherents to the true faith from all classes.

9. Authenticity. Even the most sceptical assailants of the truth have never doubted the genuineness of four of the greatest of the Pauline Epistles: Romans, 1 and 2 Corinthians, Galatians. These four letters form the "quadrilateral of Christianity" and are of untold value in facing unbelievers and in establishing the leading truths of the gospel. Renan, with the great school of severe criticism to which he belongs, grants that Philippians, 1 and 2 Thessalonians are also unquestionably authentic. The entire collection of Pauline Epistles, now embodied in the Scripture canon, universally received as authoritative in antiquity, has been confirmed by the trial of centuries, and stands unmoved and unbroken in the white light of modern critical research.

10. Style. The writings of Paul are marked by "power, fulness, warmth and perspicuity" (Tholuck). "His sentences are often long and intricate. His style is full of thought, prone to digression, but highly accurate, well guarded, and rich in allusion to the Old Testament" (Angus). "There are frequent and complicated antithesis, numerous plays upon words, an accumulation of prepositions, and frequent and peculiar parenthetical phrases" (Alford). "The style of these letters shows a man of eager, impetuous temper who on that account as well as through the fullness of his matter, is impatient of dialectic restraint. In his hurry to carry his thought forward he sometimes forgets what he has been saying and passes on to another point, more urgent perhaps, leaving the original sentence unfinished; while in his eagerness to express himself he is often careless of the coherence of his thought." "The epistles of Paul bespeak him to have been a man of most exalted genius. His composition is peculiarly nervous and animated. . . . A negligent greatness appears in his writings. Full of the dignity of his subject, a torrent of sacred eloquence bursts forth and bears down everything before it with irresistible rapidity. He stays not to arrange and harmonize his words and periods, but rushes on as his vast ideas transport him, borne away by the sublimity of his theme. The pages of Paul are a golden mine in which the diligent workman, the deeper he digs, the more he will discover; the further he examines, the more he will find."

From Elder W. J. Hopkins.

During the year or more since I wrote of the work in this section, our experiences have been from one extreme to the other. Praise the Lord! He has been very merciful and of tender care, and will ever remain the strength of his people.

All through this section the work is advancing, and we have had some precious meetings.

During the summer it has been my privilege to preach in five or six counties, and God has blessed his word. In August we had a gracious blessing at one of my churches (Bethel, in Iredell county). This was a feast of good things, and it could not have been otherwise with those two men—seemingly "born preachers" of a plain pure gospel—brethren G. L. Finch and D. W. Pool coming to us full of the Spirit, preaching such plain, solid, convincing sermons, bathed in love's tenderness, winning twenty precious souls to Christ. Biltmore brethren may well be happy with Bro. Finch, and we all learned to love those brethren by hearing so many good things said of them by their pastor. In years to come we will all remember tenderly Pool and Finch in the work done at Bethel. Along other lines this church has continued to grow, and the best people have been our workers and helpers; so that spiritually, temporally and numerically, Bethel is advancing—not full grown, thank God, but growing—more to be attained.

At Mooresville, the fight has been warm and prolonged—sin within and sin without—grace abounding, yet more and more. The workers have kept the command, "Be faithful." God has given greater increase than during any other of the six years I have served them, and I think at the closing of this sixth year we have something new for this church, viz., amount balance due, $000! We are very weak as men count weakness, but God has led us and helped us, sent friends to our help this year, and we expect him to guide and help us in future.

Owing to the nature of the work we are attempting for the Master in this section of the country, I have moved my residence, and until further notice correspondents will please address me at Rock Cut, Iredell county, N. C.

My health has greatly improved this summer, hence I have so many things to be grateful for, that I am, and have been for some time, holding daily thanksgivings to God and his people.

Then being surrounded by such pastors and faithful men as D. W. Pool, A. H. Goodin, G. H. Church, C. C. Pool, W. J. Wyatt, J. M. Ballard, A. W. Setzer and others, who would not thank God and press on? Fraternally,

W. J. HOPKINS.

Only the Scars Remain.

"Among the many testimonials which I see in regard to certain medicines performing cures, cleansing the blood, etc.," writes HENRY HUDSON, of the James Smith Woolen Machinery Co., Philadelphia, Pa., "none impress me more than my own case. Twenty years ago, at the age of 18 years, I had swellings come on my legs, which broke and became running sores. Our family physician could do me no good, and it was feared that the bones would be affected. At last, my good old mother urged me to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I took three bottles, the sores healed, and I have not been troubled since. Only the scars remain, and the memory of the past, to remind me of the good Ayer's Sarsaparilla has done me. I now weigh two hundred and twenty pounds, and am in the best of health. I have been on the road for the past twelve years, have noticed Ayer's Sarsaparilla advertised in all parts of the United States, and always take pleasure in telling what good it did for me."

The Late Prof. J. C. Maske.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT ADOPTED BY THE EUZELIAN SOCIETY OF WAKE FOREST COLLEGE.

It is with profound sorrow that we chronicle the death of Prof. James C. Maske, which occurred at the home of Mr. F. M. Purefoy, Wake Forest, N. C., Monday, September 17th, 1894.

Prof. Maske was for several years an active member of the Euzelian Society, and for the past three sessions an instructor in Latin and Greek at Wake Forest College; therefore, be it Resolved first, That in the death of Prof. Maske we not only have lost a wise teacher, the Society a loyal member, the College a strong supporter, but each and every student realizes that he has been deprived of a personal friend. He was peculiarly adapted in education, and, what is more important still, in Christian character and loving disposition, for the position he so ably filled. His life was one continual, unrelenting, heroic struggle for an education, and so every boy in College, no matter how obscure his parents, or in what extreme penury he was situated, knew that he could go to Prof. Maske with all his difficulties and receive genuine heartfelt sympathy. His beautiful character was clothed in a naturally modest and retiring disposition, but as acquaintance grew, the love and respect for him steadily increased. It was only by his most intimate friends that he could be appreciated. It is truly remarkable to find one having a disposition as tender and sympathetic as the kindest of mothers coupled with a manly honesty and integrity as uncompromising as justice itself.

Every student on entering any of his classes was immediately impressed with his painstaking and careful exactness. No College duty was too small to merit his attention. Indeed his indefatigable industry and precise truthfulness became proverbial among the students. A word of praise from Prof. Maske was opposite to flattery as truth can be to a lie, and it became to the fortunate boy who received it an incentive to harder labor.

We are permitted to know the struggles of his youth, we were beginning to see the bright rays of the dawn of his manhood, and then God, in his infinite wisdom, for some mysterious reason, gathered him up to ripen in eternity. Oh, how glorious to contemplate what would have been the maturity and the full development of a life founded upon such a strong rock of faith in God and devotion to principle. Truly in the death of Prof. Maske we have sustained an irreparable loss.

Resolved second, That we extend to his mother, brothers, sisters, and other relatives our most sincere sympathy, and commend them to the loving Master whom our departed friend so faithfully served.

Resolved third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to Prof. Maske's mother, and one to the BIBLICAL RECORDER and Wake Forest Student for publication.

Itching, burning, scaly and crusty scalps of infants cleansed and healed, and quiet sleep restored by Johnson's Oriental Soap. Sold at Jno. Y. MacRae's drugstore, Raleigh.

From South Carolina.

Dear Editor:—The RECORDER never fails to interest me with its strong editorials and newsy letters from the brethren. I could not be content without its regular visits, for while it has been my lot to labor in another State, I still feel a deep interest in the struggles and successes of my brethren in the dear "Old North State."

During the summer I have been quite busy in protracted meetings. I began with the third Sunday in July, and since then have preached ninety six times, and have increased in weight all the time. This is a healthy section and a good place in which to do hard work. The meetings for the most part have been very good.

I am just home from Packsville in Clarendon county where I went to assist Bro. E. D. Wells in a meeting. The Lord was with us from the beginning and opened the hearts of the people to the gospel. There had been forty-nine accessions up to the time of my leaving, and others will doubtless follow. Bro. Wells and his little wife are dearly beloved by his people for their work's sake.

The summer has been made lonesome to me by reason of the fact that my wife and the boys have been away spending the time in your city, but they are at home now much improved. J. N. BOOTH.

Union, S. C., Sept. 21, 1894.

Are Our Gifts a Test?

Dear Recorder:—I notice that the churches sent to our Treasurer during September for Foreign Missions, $454.90. Are our gifts a test of our interest in this work? It is at least true that our gifts will increase our interest in any cause to which we contribute. We are apt to look after an enterprise in which we have put our money. If you want to be more interested in the Lord's work over the seas, put your money and your prayers in it.

Have the churches of the Tar River Association made their contribution for this part of the work? If not, please send it by your delegates to the Association to be held in Scotland Neck, unless you prefer sending it before to the Treasurer of Convention. This is a great Association in churches, numbers, and territory, great in its interest in State Missions and Orphanage, and let us be symmetrical and great in Foreign and Home Missions. R. VAN DEVENTER.

Henderson, Sept. 27, 1894.

The Meeting at Union.

We began a meeting at Union on Saturday the 8th of September and continued it until Sunday night the 19th. During the meeting fourteen were added to the church. Two were restored, and eleven were baptized on Sunday night one was received who had been a member of another denomination, but had gone astray. He came with confession of his sins and pardon.

Bro. Samuel Saunders of Murfreesboro assisted us in the meeting and did some strong preaching. His sermons are edifying to church members, as well as invitations to the unsaved.

The attendance was large. Many heard who have not yet confessed Christ.

J. B. BOONE.

Church-building.

"To overbuild is wasteful; to underbuild is sinful."

This remark has been applied to building houses for religious worship. "To overbuild is wasteful;" that is, to put more money in a house than is necessary to make it neat and comfortable, and also to build more houses than are needed. To do the last, is a great waste of money and strength. To build houses too near to others already built, is a waste of money. To pull down, or so weaken neighboring churches that they cannot do good work, in order to build up another weak church, is a waste of strength.

"To underbuild is a sin;" that is, not to put money enough into needed houses to make them comfortable; or, not to build houses where they are really needed, is a sin against those who are destitute of religious privileges.

Children's Day at Ephesus.

Sunday, September 23d, was set apart for "Children's Day" at Ephesus church. We had with us our young brother, Jasper Howell, a Wake Forest student. He preached a most excellent missionary sermon from the text, Mark 16: 15—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." I am sure every one was pleased with the sermon, and he had many pressing invitations to visit us again.

After a sumptuous and enjoyable dinner, the exercises of "Children's Day" began. Miss Eva Edwards presided at the organ and discoursed good music for the occasion.

The Superintendent made a brief address and begged the consideration of the audience for the children who were to take part in the exercises.

The Sunday-school sang "We'll work till Jesus comes." Then we had singing and recitations by the children according to the published program, which was carried out very well.

Bro. Howell made a good address on missions. A collection was taken, and after prayer and the doxology, the crowd dispersed, well pleased with the exercises.

A Grand Mission Field.

The sun does not shine on a grander mission field than that presented to-day to Southern Baptists among the Negroes in our midst. May God give us grace to see and to seize our golden opportunity, that with consecrated zeal, sanctified wisdom, and self-denying liberality, we may enter the fields "white unto the harvest," and gather for the Master's garner the precious sheaves.

Our pastors ought, in a judicious way, to seek opportunities of preaching to the Negroes, counselling them about their work, and helping them in every way in their power. There may have been a time when, under evil counsel, the Negroes would not receive kindly such overtures, but I am satisfied, from wide observation, that there is now a much more kindly feeling, and that, as a rule, they will gladly welcome our offers of help. And surely it needs no argument to show we are recreant to the commission we hold as ambassadors for Christ if we are not ready to avail ourselves of every opportunity, and to count it a high privilege to break the bread of life to these perishing ones of God's poor.

How Can We Best Help the Colored People?

The demands of duty to these people become more and more urgent as the years go by. We must not suffer the need of our white population to absorb so largely our means and our interest as to exclude proper efforts in their behalf. We must give more to these millions who, though of alien blood, live with us on the same soil and share with us the weal or woe of that country which is the native land of both. The question, "How can we best help them," is a grave one. The Board has given to it long and careful thought. The conclusion it has reached has been confirmed by years of experience. It has become a well grounded conviction that our chief work for them must be the better fitting of their active ministry for the instruction and government of the churches placed under their care. Most effective work has been done in this direction during the past year. That done by Rev. J. M. Brittain in Georgia, and Rev. W. H. McAlpine in Alabama, has come nearer to the true ideal of such work than has ever before been attained. The Board will be glad to unite with State Boards in other States in the promotion of this work.

Of Bro. McAlpine's work in Alabama, the State Board says: "Bro. McAlpine is doing a work among the colored ministers which is being blest of God, approved by our pastors and churches and appreciated by our colored brethren."

Of Dr. Brittain, the report of the Georgia State Board says: "He has labored very faithfully and with gratifying results, eliciting the confidence and hearty commendation of those among whom, and for whom he has labored, both white and colored."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

Jno. C. Brewster, a Raleigh hardware dealer, died the 1st inst.

Six burglars have been captured at Burlington. There was a regular gang of them.

A Mrs. Blandy, calling herself the lady evangelist, has been holding meetings at Winston. She lives in New York.

W. H. & R. S. Tucker & Company of Raleigh have been awarded the contract to furnish the State Guard with 1,200 blankets.

Capt. W. H. Snow, mayor of High Point, has been impeached. It is alleged that he refused to swear in a policeman, regularly appointed.

A gang of boy thieves were apprehended stealing a box of money and checks from the receiver of the First National Bank of Wilmington, the 5th.

Some months ago 150 negroes left Mecklenburg county to work in the iron mines of Alabama. They have returned and memories of their trip are not pleasant.

The Court at Lumberton last week found J. B. McCormac guilty of murder in the second degree, and sentenced him to fifteen years servitude. Henry Horne was sentenced to death. It has been stated that more than sixty men have been tried for murder in this State this year. How many have been hanged?

Three negro prisoners in the Fayetteville jail tried to escape the 4th inst., by throwing a blanket over the jailer's head as he entered the door. A struggle ensued, the jailer's pistol was discharged, wounding an assistant and one of the prisoners. Through the composure of a woman the other prisoners were held. There were no escapes.

At the Wake Superior Court last week Geo. Mills was convicted of the murder of Iana Wimberly and sentenced to death; Ransom Brodie convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to fifteen years penal servitude. Murderer Perry, and A. J. Wimberly, indicted for implication in the murder of his daughter Iana, will be tried next court.

Rev. E. B. McGilvary, the brilliant young Presbyterian missionary, who left Moore county to go to Siam as a missionary, and who, his "much learning" having lead him into heresy, gave up the work and returned, has been called to an instructorship in the University of California. He was well behaved for a heretic, having kept himself and his views quiet.

General News.

The courts have decided that laborers have a right to strike in bodies.

Congressman William L. Wilson has returned from England, where he was highly honored.

Work has been resumed on the Panama canal; but not on so large proportions as formerly.

Six men were killed and ten wounded in the collapse of a condemned building at Detroit, Michigan.

The United States has five cruisers in Chinese waters and will have eight by December 1. All missionaries in the far interior have been advised to approach the seacoast, where protection is easier.

"Flying Jib," the pacing gelding, made a mile in harness under two minutes for the time in history, the 4th inst. He was on a kite-shaped track and had a running mate. Time one minute, fifty-eight and a quarter seconds.

H. W. Howgate, for many years chief of the National Weather Bureau, but who embezzled funds from the Goverment about fifteen years ago and has since been a fugitive of Justice, has been apprehended. He was living in New York.

Florida held a State election the first of last week, but so far we have seen nothing more definite than this sent out the 4th: "The Central court has granted a temporary injunction restraining the county canvassers from canvassing the returns on account of alleged illegal acts of the inspectors."

The election news from Georgia is to the affect that Democrats carry the State by a very small majority. Populist carry many counties and will have elected many Legislators. The vote is attributed to the fact that the nominees and campaigners of the Dominant party were divided on the silver issue.

Prof. David Swing, the noted Presbyterian heterodox preacher, died in Chicago last week. Prof. Swing went further in his heresies than either Briggs or Smith have, yet his natural gifts and deep learning enabled him to maintain a congregation and even to have his sermons sent out in stereotype to papers.

Reports from the China-Japan war are conflicting in details. It is clear that Japan is winning. What China is doing is not known. Some say its Emperor is to be deposed; that the empire is to be divided into four parts. Others say that the viceroy has been displaced. It was stated last week that the Chinese government had purchased a torpedo of new and marvellous design from a Texas inventor. The missionaries in the interior are in some danger.

The Asheville brethren and sisters gave Miss Lottie Price, China missionary, a farewell service recently. Sister Price was born and brought up in Philadelphia, her parents dying when she was ten years old. She has been contemplating the foreign work for five years.

An Offer of $200 in Gold.

Possibly no book of its character of recent years has sold so rapidly as "Talks to Children about Jesus." Agents often sell from ten to fifteen copies a day. A new set of plates, with many beautiful illustrations has just been made for this book, yet it is sold at a remarkably low price. The publishers R. H. Woodward Company of Baltimore, Md., are now offering most liberal terms and premiums for securing subscribers. Any one securing two hundred subscribers before the Christmas Holidays will get $200 in gold. Freight will be paid on books, and credit given. A canvassing book sent postpaid for thirty five cents. Write at once to the publishers for canvassing book and further information. R. H. Woodward Company also publish a number of other popular books.

State Fair Notes.

The greatest success ever attained by the North Carolina State Fair is assured for 1894 (October 23, 24, 25, 26) if weather conditions prove favorable.

There is a genuine and wide spread State interest in it. Each succeeding day adds something.

The agricultural, stock and poultry exhibits will surpass anything ever seen in North Carolina and perhaps in the South.

Among the prominent exhibitors will be the widely known Glencoe farm of Onslow county; the Alamance farm of Alamance; the Vanderbilt estate of Buncombe; the Hege poultry yards of Forsyth; the Osceola Poultry yards of Craven; the floral gardens of H. Steinmetz; the Occonneeche farm of Orange, the Sedgefield stock farms of Forsyth, and other prominent farms almost without end.

The rail road rate is one fare for the round trip.

From Rev. G. W. Gardner.

Brother Bailey:—You announce in last week's RECORDER that I have been called to Warrenton, this State. That is a mistake. I have not been called there, and I am happy to say that I am by no means anxious to be called away from Jackson to any place just now. I am in the midst of a glorious meeting with my church. Eleven have joined to date and the work goes on with increasing interest. May God give our people the victory in North Carolina over the advocates of State schools. If every Baptist in the Commonwealth would work with a fourth of the vigor of the RECORDER there would be no doubt about the right prevailing.

G. W. GARDNER

Jackson, Ga.

In the business year just closed 11,335,989 pounds of plug tobacco were sold at Winston; the sales of leaf amounted to 15,108,989 pounds, averaging $6 32.

Acknowledgments.

[The Treasurer requests that when money is sent, the name of the contributing church, society, or individual, and the object for which the money is intended, be clearly stated. Ordination.

At the call of Pine Hill Baptist church, Mecklenburg county, N. C., a presbytery, composed of Elders D. A. Snider and A. W. Crabtree, met at their church Sunday, September 30, 1894, and organized by the election of A. W. Crabtree, Moderator, and D. A. Snider, Clerk. Then the church presented Bro J. W. Snider to the presbytery, and after a thorough and highly satisfactory examination of the candidate Bro. D. A. Snider preached an excellent sermon from the text, "My spirit shall not always strive with man" to about 100 Presbyterians and opened their eyes. At the close Bro. A. W. Crabtree made the ordination prayer. The writer presented the Bible, and the Moderator the charge to the church, and the benediction was pronounced by Bro. J. S. King.

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,300 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one-half of the language,) is "all I need," or even a 215,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world. The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

Last Letter We Publish from Bro. C. C. Newton.

Dear Brother:—Last Saturday morning we took some medicines, provisions, travelling beds, &c., &c., and accompanied by Mrs. Newton and Alberta, went over to Hausa Farm, one of our stations out from Lagos. Part of the journey, say twelve or thirteen miles, was made in a canoe on the lagoon and then up the Oguda creek. The remainder of the journey, seven or eight miles, was by a narrow path through a great forest of towering trees, among whose limbs the monkeys play and parrots wild sound their untrained notes. Of course it required most of the day to complete the journey of about twenty miles; but it was both pleasant to ourselves and profitable to others, since we declared the good news as we went even to many who had not heard it.

The sun was about an hour high when we reached our destination. We employed the time until dark going from house to house, speaking a word to the people in their homes. Where there are sick we give sympathy and advice. At night a considerable crowd assembled in front of our house to hear the Word.

Early Sunday morning, even before we were up, the leading men of the village called to salute us before going to their farms to work. I dressed hurriedly, went out, and after expressing my pleasure at having them call, preached to them. They listened with intense interest, replying occasionally and pleasantly. They were unwilling to accept the offer of the Gospel for themselves, but rather preferred that we should teach these doctrines to their children, who were young and would have more time to improve the many opportunities opening to them in this new and wonderful Kingdom of Jesus. They were all Mohammedans except one, and only look at things as they are to give them help in this life. In my audience were the Gbalogun (general), Balé (governor), Awon Olori (chiefs), and the Abaayba (elders) of the town. They were mighty men of the place. They would not believe. They went their way to their farms to work on Sunday. Yes, they do not keep Sunday as we do.

After breakfast, at the usual hour of meeting, we had a very different audience from the one just mentioned. It was the common people. The members of the church, friends, and children came up to the house of God for the regular Sunday morning meeting. We had a most interesting and joyful season. After preaching, we opened the door of the church, and twelve were received for baptism. At 2 P. M. we assembled on a bank of a stream near by and read the Scriptures, sang, prayed, talked, and baptized twelve. At 4 P. M. we preached again to a good congregation at the church, and administered the Lord's Supper to the twenty-six members present. At night a large crowd of heathen came and heard the gospel in front of our house again. The people brought mats and sat on them on the ground while we preached. This is their usual and, of course, most comfortable way of sitting.

Monday morning the members came to salute us as we were coming away. We had a delightful conference with them about enlarging and improving the house, together with a talk about enlarging the work. They show a willing mind. We prayed together and left them.

Yesterday, one of the men who was baptised last Sunday brought to me his brother, saying that he, too, wanted to be taught the way of life. I spent some time with him, telling him what to do to be saved. To-day they were here together again. We taught him again, and prayed with him. There is a growing interest in our work. Surely this is the work of the Holy Spirit. Time would fail me to tell of the very interesting work Mrs. Newton and Alberta did in a private way. Some wept when they were told to await our return to Hausa Farm for baptism.

All join me in kind regards. Pray for us. I am &c., yours faithfully.—C. C. Newton, Lagos, West Africa, in Foreign Mission Journal.

DIED.

CHEEK—On Sept. 5th, 1894, of diphtheria, Arthur Banks, son of C. N. and S. E. Cheek of Manndale, aged two years and seven months, lacking three days. Banks was the joy and pet of the household. Though gone, he is safe from this world's temptations and cares, with Jesus in that bright home above. May the Lord comfort the hearts of the bereaved. ADA L. CARTER.

HOLLINGSWORTH—Mrs. Martha Hollingsworth departed this life on Wednesday, September 26th, 1894, in Goldsboro, N. C., at the age of sixty-three years. She had been a member of the Baptist church for about forty years, having been baptized into the fellowship of Johnson church, in Duplin county, by Elder Alfred Guy. She moved to Goldsboro about fourteen years ago, where she died, surrounded by her loved and loving children and other near relatives. She leaves three sons and two daughters to lament their loss. She was a modest and unassuming Christian, adorning the doctrine of Christ by a meek and quiet spirit. C. A. JENKINS.

MELVIN—Died July 27th, 1894, at Nichols, Coffee county, Ga., George Fletcher Melvin, son of D. B. and Annie J. Melvin of White Oak, Bladen county, N. C. Being in his thirty-third year, of unusual health and vigor, even he had to die after a struggle of more than forty days with the dreadful fever. One of the best specimens of good nature and hospitable kindness, he made friends everywhere, and in his last illness, far away from home and kindred, more than necessary attention was given him. A member of White Oak Baptist church for more than twelve years, well owned of God, he said he was ready; to die was gain.

WILLIAM BRUNT.

JACKSON—Mary Ann Jackson was called up higher, and departed for her heavenly home from Elizabeth City, N. C., Sept. 30th, 1894, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. She was the oldest member in the Baptist church in the city. Her husband and children had all crossed over before her. She left a large circle of grand and great-grandchildren to sincerely mourn her loss. Her death grieved the little great-grandchildren as if it were the death of mother. To the last she was tender, sympathetic and helpful. She always loved the little ones, and they loved her in return. All who knew her knew her only to love and praise her. Her death was beautiful and peaceful. Her life has been one of Christian fruitfulness. Her reward will certainly be one of the brightest crowns. C. S. B.

WARD—At the home of her husband, Charles J. Ward of Oxford, N. C., Mrs. Meta Britton Ward, on Sept. 26d, 1894, in the forty-second year of her age. Mrs. Ward had for months been ministering to the comfort of her sick mother; and not long after her mother's death, which occurred in July, she was taken with fever, and being worn down with her long and anxious ministry, she fell a ready prey to her disease. When will Oxford lose two more devotedly pious women than Mrs. Ward and her sainted mother? Truly we may say of them, they "were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided."

Both of them were members of the Episcopal church. Mrs. Ward was one of the kindest and best of women; one of the most consecrated and sweet spirited of Christians. In her home, in her church, in her community, she was most deeply beloved. "She is not dead, but sleepeth." She leaves too little girls and her devoted husband greatly crushed by her death, but trusting in God that he will comfort and sustain them in their trial.

A FRIEND.

MARSH—Mrs. H. L. Marsh, wife of W. B. Marsh, died August 21st, 1894, aged fifty-five years. She leaves an aged mother, husband, one sister, one daughter, grandchildren and many relatives and friends to mourn her loss, who mourn not without hope. She has been a consistent member of the church for many years, death finding her a member of the Baptist church at Beaver Dam, N. C. As a neighbor she was ever ready to lend a helping hand in time of sickness or distress; as a helpmeet to her aged husband she was a loving and devoted companion, being exceedingly industrious and an expert in all of her domestic affairs; as a mother kind, gentle, and ever ready to give wise counsel and good advice; as a Christian, God-loving and God-fearing woman, who had living grace while she lived, and dying grace when she came to die, and whose body we believe sleeps in Jesus, while her ransomed spirit reigns with her Lord in glory.

"She had no fear of death,
A Saviour's hand was near
To guide her across the river,
And drive away all fear."

BURNS—"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." One of our most useful and esteemed sisters of the Wadesboro Baptist church is no more! Mrs. Tempe Bernice Burns, consort of C. B. Burns, died at her residence Sept. 22d, 1894, in the thirty-ninth year of her age. Her spirit took its immortal flight just as morning came. O what a beautiful hour!

The deceased was the only child of loving parents (Mr. James M. Henry and wife Mrs. Manica Henry), and was of an ancient descent of the lineage of pioneer Missionary Baptist. Sister Burns left seven children, an affectionate companion, an aged parent, with a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss, but I trust their loss is her eternal gain. Two children preceded her to heaven. Sister Burns had made many friends and not a foe. We miss her voice in the choir, we miss her advice, and oh how we miss her at night. But mamma, precious mamma, is in heaven with Jesus. Her happy soul would not return back to wander through a lifetime desert of years, notwithstanding the devoted ties of husband, father, and darling pledges.

Sister Burns lived and died a true Christian. Her gentle hands were ever ready to dispense charity to the needy; to extend Christian sympathy to the poor and afflicted children of God.

I would say to a sorrowing parent, bereaved husband, sisters and children, be ye also ready, for the Son of Man cometh as a thief in the night. KITH.

Tributes of Respect.

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father has called from time to eternity Leola H., daughter of Jordan and Missouri A. Tyson, in the twenty-eighth year of her age. She was a consistent member of May's Chapel church and Sunday-school, and as we desire to record some expression of our feeling, therefore be it

Resolved 1. That while we mourn the sad death of her we loved, we do humbly bow to his will "who doeth all things well."

Resolved 2. That in the death of Leola our church and Sunday school has lost a faithful member, but we hope to meet her in that blessed home where parting comes no more.

Resolved 3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathies and earnestly pray that God will sustain them in this their sad bereavement.

Resolved 4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the record of our Sunday-school, a copy sent to the bereaved family of the deceased, and to the BIBLICAL RECORDER for publication.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs.

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its massing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents, of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Prices: Leatherette, 50c; Cloth, 63c.

Scientific Discoveries.

FACTS WHICH THE MILLIONS SHOULD UNDERSTAND.

Obemeyer, Koch, Pasture, Biggs, Radame, Amich and many other scientific investigators have revolutionized medical treatment of human diseases in the last few years. With their fine magnifying glasses they see and know that the most malignant and fatal fevers; that all nasal affection, throat-diseases and lung troubles; that all blood poisons and blood affections, as shown by rheumatism, inflamed joints and running sores; that bright's disease of the kidneys, liver complaints, impotency and female weakness are caused and produced by microbes—small living germs of life.

All medicines and remedies heretofore have failed on throat affections and lung troubles. Such medicines are not manufactured on a scientific basis. Drop such a medicine on a spider, a bee or even a fly; and ten to one that such an insect will commence to eat of the preparation.

Then let a small portion of Swamp Angel Medicine strike the same insect, and instantly you have a corpse. Then let a small portion of Swamp Angel Medicine fall on a board three inches or more from a fly, and instantly it commences a series of girations, and soon falls over dead, killed by the poisonous gases of Swamp Angel Medicine. Then pour out thirty drops of Swamp Angel Medicine in sugar and swallow it, close your mouth, and you can feel liquid fire and gases coming through every air-cell of you lungs and passing off through the nostrils. Common sense must thus show you that the same gases which are so deadly to the fly must certainly have a similar effect on the "Tubercle Bacilli," the moth-eating parasite of the lungs, and all other microbes and parasites which produce human diseases and human pain.

On March 1, 1894, I had been using Swamp Angel Medicine about fourteen months, from 100 to 300 drops a day. On my return to Atlanta, after an absence of less than a year, selling this medicine, I stepped up to Mr. Wright, Chief of the detective force in Atlanta, and one of the smartest men in Georgia, in remembering faces, and extended my hand. He said: "Really, I don't remember you; seems like I have seen you somewhere." This is Dr. Swamp Angel, the man you saw three straight months every day, at 97 Decatur street, selling medicine. "Indeed! Indeed! Is that so? I never would have known you. How you have changed! You look ten years younger. What on earth have you been doing to yourself?" "Taking from 100 to 300 drops of Swamp Angel Medicine every day," was the reply. Mr. Brannon, chief clerk, for city delivery, for the Lamar, Rankin Drug Co., who waited on me every day for drugs for three months, did not know me on my return. In fact, kind people, few people who knew me a year ago as a consumptive invalid, can recognize me today. I weigh 160 pounds, have a good appetite and all the powers, faculties and ambition of a man in the prime of life. Now, let me say to you, if you have symptoms of lung diseases or any germ disease, don't delay if you are are not dying. Try Swamp Angel Medicine; it never fails. Over 1,000 remarkable cures of diseases are in my books and reported by letter. I can only give the names of a few.

THEIR NAMES ARE MANY.

Margaret Morton, 45 Courtland street, down in bed six months with consumption. In less than one week after commencing the use of Swamp Angel Medicine, she was walking around and attending night shows. In two weeks she was walking a mile in the hot August sun. J. W. McDonald, West End, Ga., suffered thirty years with throat and lung diseases. Cured sound and well with Swamp Angel Medicine. Dora Strickland, DeKalb county, down in bed three months with consumption. Was walking about everywhere in a week after commencing the use of Swamp Angel Medicine. Isaac Harper, Bass Point, Ga.; J. R. Timmons, J. B. Cooper, Mattie Tompkins, Aleck Haywood, all of Atlanta, were cured with Swamp Angel Medicine of lung diseases. M. W. Connor, of Wrightsville, Ga., February 1, 1894 writes: "Gave a consumptive Swamp Angel Medicine. He gained fifteen pounds in three weeks." This beats the record. Could add one hundred or more remarkable cures, but space won't admit.

RHEUMATISM CURED.

Theodore Fletcher cured with two bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine after spending $300. T. J. Gaza cured with Swamp Angel Medicine after suffering five years. Mrs. D. Bronvill cured a badly swollen and inflamed arm in one night with Swamp Angel Medicine. Ephraim Johnson, in bed six months with inflammatory rheumatism, cured in three weeks with Swamp Angel Medicine. G. W. Owens suffered since the war with rheumatism. Cured sound and well with Swamp Angel Medicine. W. S. Nunnally, rheumatism all over the body and partly paralyzed. Cured sound and well with Swamp Angel Medicine in two weeks. The above people live in Atlanta. Mr. Hiker, of Buchanan, Ga., on crutches three months, commenced with Swamp Angel Medicine. In two threw his crutches away; in a week, out in the field at work. A late case is reported as follows; J. M. Jones, J. P., Dogo, Ga., 1, 14, 1894, says: "My wife has been in bed eight months with rheumatism, and one bottle of Swamp Angel Medicine had her nearly well." So it goes in hundreds of cases. Can't name them—no space.

Harvest Song.

Laugh out, laugh out, ye orchard lands,
With all your ripened store,
Such bounteous measure nature yields,
How could heart ask for more!

The golden rick, the bursting bin
Of rich and ripened grain,
Bespeak the wealth which all may win
In Industry's domain.

The cornfield set in grand array
Of solid rank and row
Are streams of wealth which, set this way,
And soon shall overflow.

Laugh out, laugh out, ye ripened fields,
With e'er increasing mirth;
The joy your bounteous measure yields
Shall bless the whole round earth.

Help That Was Salted Down.

"Didn't you get pinched with the cold a great many times while you were voyaging around so long out west?" asked a father of his son, as he sat by his side once more with the surf growling on the rocks before the door. "Not very much, for there was always some one on the widest prairie to take me in and give me a shelter. And even the few moments when I was chilly it helped keep me warm to know of you thinking of me here by this cosy fireside.

"But weren't you afraid sometimes that you wouldn't find a house, or any kind of a port to protect you against the blizzards and cyclones?" asked the old man, though he smiled happily at his son's truthful words.

"A little at first," was answered, "until one day after I had found shelter almost as unexpectedly as if it had sprung up out of the brown grass of the prairie. Then it came over me like a flash that this would be a common experience for me wherever I might go."

And then, with the tears of gratitude shining in his eyes, the young man laid his hand on his parent's knee, as he said: "Father, you have salted down help for all of us children wherever we may go. That thought has kept my heart warm and happy, however dark the way may have looked."

"Hey, Martin!" said the old man, as he leaned forward with a bewildered look upon his face, though he put his own broad palm tenderly over the son's hand.

"It's rather an odd figure, I know," was answered, "but that's the homely way I've always thought of it out West, where it was so good to hear or even think of some phrase that sounded like Maine. You know, father, when the rest of the fisherman here took their idle days to smoke and drink, you were salting down fish for fall or winter. Well, you laid up more than that for all of us children. You never turned a stranger away hungry or without a place to sleep. It seemed a little rough for us boys to give up our beds some nights. But you had us do it, and God has blessed you. All that I think of as salted down, preciously saved, help for your own boys. Mother helped you with it. God bless her!'

"It seems but little we did," said the old fisherman. "It was nothing like what I would have done had I had more means."

"Salted down," the father mused, wiping the tears from his eyes. "Yes, that figure will often come to me when you go back West again."

"'Once I was young, but now I am old, but I have never see the righteous forsaken or their seed begging bread.'" That was what the dear old mother softly repeated as she stretched out on her knee the thick warm mitten she was knitting for one of her boys who was away fishing on the Grand Banks. —Our Young People.

Florida Cisterns in Tree Tops.

A surveying party were resting at noon in a forest in Florida, when one of the men exclaimed: "I would give fifty cents a swallow for all the water I could drink."

All were very thirsty, and there was not a spring or stream anywhere in the vicinity.

While the men were thus talking, the surveyor saw a crow put his bill into a cluster of broad, long leaves growing on the side of a tall cypress. The leaves were those of a peculiar air plant. They were green, and bulged out at the bottom, forming an inverted bell. The smaller end was held to the tree by roots grappling the bark. Feeding on the air and water that it catches and holds, the air plant becomes a sort of cistern. The surveyor sprang to his feet with a laugh.

"Boys," he said, "that old crow is wiser than every one of us."

"How so?" they asked.

"Why, he knows that there are a hundred thousand water tanks in this forest."

"Where?" they cried, in amazement.

The surveyor cut an air plant in two, and drained nearly a pint of pure cold water from it. The men did not suffer for water after that, for every tree in the forest had at least one air plant, and almost every air plant contained a drink of water.—Sunlight.

A Boy's Amusements.

It does not suggest itself to me as needful to make hard and fast rules about a boy's strict keeping at home in the evening, writes Mrs. Burton Harrison. If he is engaged in the usual routine of study preparatory for college Friday and Saturday evenings are tacitly considered the only ones of the week available in which to accept invitations to attend concerts, lectures, etc. An ordinarily ambitious boy has all he can do to prepare his lessons for the following day in the brief time remaining after the late dinner of modern custom. One would consider it a lamentably-ordered household whereof the lads made protest against this customary routine.

As to the nature of amusements to be prescribed for growing youths, it is impossible to dictate to parents who in the widely different habits of thought on this subject in America, have so many standards of propriety. Each home is a law unto itself in deciding the limit of entertainments allowed away from home. Many people see no objection in a good play at a standard theatre as a means of affording pastime for a boy's evenings. But so much that is indescribably repellent to good taste and decency has crept of late years upon the stage, shaking out its banner boldly on the outer wall of the theatre where all may see and know what is in store for them, it does seem that authority should draw the line. It is too much the practice of city life to let the boys of the family select for themselves the spectacle or play which is to be the diversion of their week. Relying upon the name and prestige of a "first-class theatre," parents inquire no farther into the nature of the entertainment, with the result that it is a common experience nowadays to hear girls and boys innocently discussing between themselves representations upon the stage of themes their elders would blush to name to them. I say innocently because I have faith in the average boy and girl of our society, and the very frankness of such comment disarms suspicion of more than a desire to be up to-date in theatrical affairs.

The mother's supervision of her son's evenings under roof should be felt, not seen, by the object of her solicitude. It should be exercised continuously from the hour of his leaving the nursery to that of going out to take his place as a man among men.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Telephone Talk

You tell when a level is level by noticing the bubble in it. You tell the level headedness of a man of sense by noting his nonsense and the place it occupies. If the level were all bubble, it would be useless. If the man were all nonsense, he would be useless. The nonsense must be swimming in a regular ocean of sense or you can't call the man level-headed.

The level headedness of a man depends upon something more than that bubble of nonsense. It depends on the man's foundation. A level is no good in palsied hands, or on a tempest tossed sea, or an earthquake-rocked table. The usefulness of a level depends on the solidness of its support. It is just that way with a level headed man. He must rest on the Rock of Ages.

Furthermore, a level headed man must be a warm hearted man. A level is not worth much if it is frozen up. To be level-headed, one's wits must run smoothly, one's intellect must be responsive, one's eye must be quick, one's sympathies fluent. We are apt to speak of the hard hearted, worldly-minded, close-fisted, unimaginative Gradgrind as a level-headed man. No term could be worse applied.

But still, a level must not be all liquid. The liquid portion of it must be contained in some solid receptacle. And a level headed man must not be ready to move at every man's beck. He must have about him something solid, dogged, resolute, fixed as the wood of the level. It is this wood, you will notice, that gives direction to the level. The like element of directness and stability must go to make up every level-headed man.

Are you level headed? Ask yours if four questions: Is my bubble of nonsense justly proportioned? Am I founded on the real things of time and eternity? Am I pliant and responsive where I ought to be? And, where I should be, am I fixed and resolute? —Golden Rule.

To remove the constipated habit, the only safe treatment is a course of Ayer's pills, followed by a laxative diet. Most other cathartics do more harm than good, therefore leading physicians recommend Ayer's pills, especially as a family physic.

"What is Your Thought Like?"

Did you ever play the popular game with the above title? There is a serious game called life in which each of us has great stakes. Whether we win or lose depends largely upon what our thoughts are like. We know that thoughts lead to acts. By the repetition of acts, habits are formed, and habits make character. "Thoughts are the parents of deeds that may be crimes," says a great modern teacher. Does a man become a thief or a murderer all at once? No; the terrible crime of which you read yesterday had its beginning in a thought indulged perhaps in the boyhood of the criminal. Said a wise father to his angry son: "Bring a smooth board, a hammer, and a nail. Now drive in the nail." The son obeyed. "Now pull it out." Again he obeyed. "Now pull out the hole!" An absurd command, you say, but not more absurd than to suppose that the influence of evil thoughts and acts can be wholly effaced.

Modern scientists tell us some curious things about the formation and destruction of the nerve cells of the brain. They say by the repetition of thoughts or acts, nerve cells become "specialized" so that the thought or act repeats itself automatically. A mere boy may share the impure thoughts and evil deeds of bad companions until his probable doom is written in the very structure of his brain.

Professor John de Motte, a scientific lecturer, who is also a careful student of the nature and habits of young people, says: "Rudyard Kipling tells us that a 'puppy dog chews up a few cakes of brown Windsor soap and boxes of blacking as a necessary part of his education, and he grows to be a respectable dog after all.' But boys and young men are not puppy dogs!" All vicious indulgences in thought or action leave their indelible impress. If you would be a true man, be a pure hearted, clean handed boy.—Young Reaper.

How to Tell a Tree's Height.

A correspondent in the West sends the Youth's Companion a suggestion for a simple method of measuring the height of a tree. It is as follows:

Take a stick a foot long and measure the shadow which the tree casts at the same time. Divide the length of the tree's shadow by the length of the stick's shadow, and the result will be the height of the tree.

OF SPECIAL VALUE in breaking up sudden attacks of colds, chills, fevers, and inflammation—Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They carry off these troubles at the start. And if you would only keep yourself in proper condition with them—the liver active and the system regular—you'd find you couldn't take diseases easily.

These tiny, sugar-coated "Pellets" are the most perfectly natural in their action—no griping, no violence. Take them for wind and pain in the stomach, fullness, and dizziness. They absolutely and permanently cure Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Sick or Bilious Headaches, and every Liver, Stomach and Bowel disorder.

Equitable Life

DURHAM, N. C., Mar. 27, 1894.
Mr. W. J. RODDEY, Rock Hill, S. C.
Dear Sir:—When the settlement of my policy for $50,000 in the Equitable was first made, I expressed some dissatisfaction at the outcome, but since I have had more time to look into the matter, I am persuaded that I have had cheap insurance. I have always regarded the Equitable as one of the strongest insurance companies in this country, and am carrying at present a policy for $25,000 on my wife and one for $50,000 on my own life, and have had these policies in force for more than 10 years.
Yours, very truly,
J. S. CARR.

Everyone should look into life insurance; should compare it with other investments; should study it in connection with their own condition in life. Let us send you some facts and figures.

A STRIKING vestige of sectional bias is the fondness of Southerners for prefixing the adjective Southern to the titles of their enterprises. On the other hand, the Northerner seldom manifests sectionalism in any way that may affect his business interests. He is too business-like to limit his patronage by qualifying terms, however proud or patriotic he be. And doubtless the Northerner is right. The word Southern, Southern this and Southern that, has been used and misused and abused until it has become a by-word, bearing no weight, neither of prejudice, nor pride, nor patriotism.

There will never be need to appeal to a Southerner's patriotism, not if he were born in the South. The spirit is of the soil. The South will never lack for patriots; but it is injured even now by this narrow minded pretense of patriotism for business purposes only, so marked in the extensive and varied application of the word Southern. It is time people were refusing to be influenced by slogans and shibboleths, time to be after getting the best and the most for one's money. Local pride and patriotism are desirable so long as they are confined within proper limits; but business enterprises are not within their compass. As a denominator of a thing physically or geographically Southern, the word has honest use.

The field of the Northerner is wherever there's a chance, so long as there is possibility of persuading one that his wares are best of all, on their own merits. The Southerner names his enterprise Southern, seeks patrons on the ground that his wares are Southern, and thereby advertises that they are intrinsically inferior. In business, usefulness or desirableness, or both together, are the factors that ought to determine one's preferences.

THE rock-bottom of newspaperdom, the broad and immovable foundation on which rests the wonderful modern system for the diffusion of information, is the country weekly. It has opportunities, privileges and obligations, too well-known to be mentioned here, that are peculiar. The power of these papers is ultimately the power of the press, for the influence of the daily depends on the corroboration of its statements by the weekly. There is grave danger at present, however, that the opinions and the ideals of local papers will be conformed to those of the more imposing daily—a consummation that marks the end of a weekly's usefulness. For, indeed, the function of the latter is to help mould and express the local opinion and ideal, not according to the criterion of a general medium, but according to the peculiar conditions of the community.

The breadth of the country paper's influence is suggested in the fact that, of 23,000 newspapers in the United States, 15,000 are issued from country towns, circulating in aggregate 50,000,000 copies. The office equipment, necessarily modest, if not squalid, in the best of them, is valued at $40,000,000; and they support 400,000 persons. They educate, rather inspire the uplifting of, millions.

ONE would not have wondered at the number of responses a man received not long ago to an advertisement of "Doctor Wanted," if he had known that there are more than 100,000 physicians in the United States, at least one to every six hundred inhabitants, an exchange says. It is not unlikely that the number of M. D's is quite as great as that of D. D's, etc. One is surprised at the number of students of medicine in view of these facts, since of the six hundred, which are one physician's portion, there are some who never get sick, some who rely on patent medicines, others who patronize only the most popular physician, and others who do not pay. If the followers of Æsculapius continue to increase there will have to be further divisions of ailments, one confining himself to this, another to that, each having become a specialist, each getting his own particular recompense.

With each year great advances are made in the knowledge of the human structure and of its ills. But strange to say with all this knowledge the number of the sick is not less, nor is the number of those who die of old age greater. Physicians learn how to remedy, heal and alleviate under proper conditions, but they do not, nor can they, govern the conditions. They know how to kill microbes, but the microbes are too many and too versatile for them. Since the small pox was overcome it has been frequently announced that the principles of that achievement have led to the mastery of consumption, yellow fever, typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc. But the end of these ills is not yet.

Neither pains nor means have been spared to discover the sources, remedies, curatives and emollients of physical afflictions; men have devoted their lives to investigation into every imaginable phase of diseases, but they are not yet positively sure of any except emollients, nor is it hoped that the boon of the others in their entirety will be granted soon. The physician is a necessity, however, because he can always soothe and often cure a sick one, or stay a malady's progress. But the hope of the world is to escape disease and physicians by proper living—temperateness, carefulness of diet, regularity of exercise, and cultivation of a philosophical serenity of mind and habit.

IT REQUIRED a man who cared little for his own, a bold, iconoclastic being, self confident and independent, to stand before a renowned company of scientists and enumerate what they did not know. But Lord Salisbury, on being chosen president of the British Association, says an exchange, did do this very thing.

The distinguished speaker—distinguished as a politician more than as a scientist—confined himself to three colossal ignorances. Scientists speak of atoms, every thing is atoms, they say; Lord Salisbury told them they do not yet know what an atom is. Chemists have resolved the things of the earth into about seventy elemental forms. Salisbury told them they had no reason to affirm that these elements have been resolved to the utmost, that they cannot say there are not a thousand elements instead of seventy. One does not know whether "the atom of an element be a movement, or a substance, or a vortex, or a point having inertia, or whether there is any limit to its divisibility. Those who talk and talk of atoms, it seems, do not know what they are talking about.

Scientists are prone to talking of a stuff called ether, but none of them have seen or made any. It is said that light and electricity travel by means of it; but that is theory. The scientists claim to know that it undulates, but they have never analyzed or weighed or handled any of it.

Finally the speaker told them that despite that study had revealed the conditions of life, none of them could create. They can do no more than the farmer who puts the seed under the ground. They know what seed is; but the seed they make, let it look ever so promising, will not sprout. No man can make a finger-nail or a blade of grass, although any chemist can dissolve either into its parts, and see of what it is made. God alone can give life. This demonstrated, how can one doubt that by him alone can the higher life be attained unto?

IGNORANCE is often concealed by theories, which, indeed, are acceptable only until superior explanations are devised. One sees an apple falling, and attributes its downward course to a something called 'gravitation.' What gravitation is no one knows. The word stands for something by which all things are invariably influenced; but that is all that can be said. The aurora is attributed to magnetism, which, in turn is endowed with relationship to apparently black spots, said to be holes many times larger than this planet, on the sun. But no one knows what magnetism is, or why holes in the sun should make the sky to glow. Men have their theories; they cannot prove, not even to their own conviction.

The heights and depths of Evolution are compassed with theory. There is nothing solid. Evolutionists are never at a loss for a theory as to the origin of anything. One of them rose up not long ago and told how babies came by their characteristics. He showed why very young ones are usually fat, why all of them try to swallow everything within reach, why "the majority of them are pleasing to the eye and have inherent winning manners,"—which, by the way, he did not try to demonstrate,—why they fear strangers, why they are subject to terror in darkness, and, finally, why they have such powerful and untiring vocal powers. But the entire lot of theories were useless, as the writer based them on the "ungentlemanly" conduct of our ancestors just after they lost their tails, and, consequently, ceased to make their habitation in the tree-tops. Such theories do not prove anything; they do not help; they are explanations that do not explain, which, by the way, are characteristic of Evolution.

Contrast Between the Baptists of the First Decade of this Century and the Last Decade.

[CONCLUDED FROM LAST WEEK]

There has taken place among us quite a change in some respects for the better, in other for the worse. Our churches now want men who give their whole time to the ministry. This is well, and to be sought after where churches are able to give their pastors ample support. Most of our churches do not want a minister to teach and preach at the same time. But would it not be better, with our weak and feeble churches left out in the cold by the strong ones, to secure pastors who are able and willing to supplement their salaries by teaching, or some other legitimate calling?

The preachers in those times did much pioneer work and made extensive journeys preaching the gospel from house to house in the regions beyond.

We do not read of their being dyspeptics or subject to the ailments of modern preachers. We are not informed of their spending their summers at the springs, in the mountains, or at fashionable seaside resorts. No one in those times aspired to take a trip to Europe or a pilgrimage to the Holy Land. They were content to labor unknown in obscure places. The presumption is that Baptist preachers ninety years ago had better constitutions, stronger lungs, better throats and better digestive organs than our preachers of to-day. There was more permanency in the settlement of ministers. The Baptist itinerancy had not been inaugurated at that period. Andrew Fuller said some preachers in his time seemed to have been stung by a gad fly, as they were ever on the run. Were he now living he would be at a loss for terms to express the present fickleness and restlessness of both churches and preachers. Dr. Burrows once said that the trouble with our country churches was that they wanted a two thousand dollar man for five hundred dollars. Such churches are apt to go pastorless much of their time. Churches were often pastorless then for want of preachers. Not so now. One third of our ordained ministry are not in the pastoral work. If the harvest is plentiful, so are the laborers. There was quite a contrast in the style of church architecture then and now. Our Baptist fathers went to one extreme, and we, their successors, have gone to another. In their poverty, they reasoned themselves into believing that any place was good enough to worship the Lord in, hence in the summer the groves or the bush arbor furnished them a suitable place for public worship. In winter they often met in private houses or barns. Many of these log cabins or barn-like structures set apart for religious services had neither stove nor fire place, and it was no unusual thing for congregations to set for hours in the cold listening to the lengthy sermons, sometimes two hours long. Some of the houses of worship rented or leased out the lower story for business, so that it was not unusual to see a building the upper story of which was used as a place of religious worship and the story below as a place of merchandize. In a building of this sort, in the lower story ardent spirits were sold. A wag says Benedict wrote upon the side of the house the following stanza:—

> "There's a spirit above and a spirit below,
> A spirit of joy and a spirit of woe;
> The spirit above is the spirit divine,
> The spirit below is the spirit of wine."

And after the Baptists began to build good houses no money was spent for stained glass and outside adornments. They were content with the utmost simplicity. They did not want any steeples. They were satisfied to be like their English brethren who were not allowed to have steeples on their churches. A house costing $25,000 was considered ample to meet all the requirements of a place of worship in cities like Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Not so now. A hundred thousand dollar house is demanded in these cities. This is why so many of the finest churches in our large cities are heavily mortgaged, and why so many even of our strongest churches stagger for years under crushing financial burdens.

A congregation that fancies it needs a hundred thousand dollar house could build for half that sum such a house as it needs. The vanity, pride, selfishness and rivalry now exhibited in church building is lamentable to contemplate. Thousands, and possibly hundreds of thousands of dollars, uselessly spent by Baptists every year to decorate and embellish their church property, might be better expended in sending the gospel to the heathen or in supplying destitute fields in our own country. It is evident that in the matter of church building we are fast running into a reckless and hurtful extravagance.

In locating houses of worship our predecessors of nearly a century ago made many sad mistakes. Villages and towns were as a rule avoided, and churches were planted at obscure places in their vicinity. This accounts for the number of villages and towns to-day where no Baptist house of worship can be found. Perhaps our preachers, although then enjoying the boon of religious liberty, were reminded of the days when they were incarcerated in prisons, hence they wished to get far away from jails and court houses. Or it may have been that the preachers for the most part being uneducated wanted to shun the culture and intelligence of villages and towns.

Houses of worship in towns were often set back from the street on some lane or in the suburbs, because some died with a view of enhancing the value of his property would give a lot, or sell one cheap. The consequence was that the upper classes of society were repelled from such places of worship. Now it is the other extreme—the danger being that the poor may be ashamed to attend our gorgeous churches with towering steeples, gothic windows, velvet cushioned pews, and Brussels carpeted aisles. Baptists now are not ashamed to come to the front.

Radical changes have taken place in church music. Some of the best talent of the age has been given within the last twenty five years to musical compositions adapted to church worship and our Sunday-schools. Yet, while this is true, the old hymns which have stood the test of centuries ought not to be discarded. Our Baptist fathers had few hymns and few tunes, which were sung in a dragging and holy tone. The tendency now is to the contrary,—quick, light and irreverent. There were no leaders in those times who understood the science of music, and all who could make melody in their hearts to the Lord sang the praises of God. The singing was congregational. There was no praising God by proxy. Paid choirs were unknown, or choirs of any description. There was no paid organist, for there were no organs or other musical instruments. These staid old Baptists had an inveterate prejudice against all sounding instruments, and associated them with his satanic majesty. Had an organ then been carried into a Baptist church the membership would have left in disgust. Such was the prejudice against all musical instruments that a wealthy Baptist lady in Virginia was excluded from her church because she purchased a piano for her daughter. And the Baptists were not alone in their opposition to the introduction of instrumental music into their church services. The first church organ imported into the United States from England was for a Congregational church in Boston. Such was the prejudice against its use that it lay in the vestibule several months before it was unboxed and put up. (Benedict.)

A wonderful change has come over our people as they have become enlightened, if not more spiritually minded. Musical instruments are now found in all our churches whether in town or country.

There is one thing worthy of special mention in which the Baptists in the early part of this century surpassed the Baptists of the present. They were people of one book. Those who could read, studied the Scriptures more closely than we do now. Baptists then were assailed from every quarter and from every standpoint by Pedobaptists, who dubbed them with the names of bigots, fanatics, dippers, plungers, and as letting their children run wild into heathenism because they did not put the seal of the covenant upon them. The Baptists were thus driven to depend on themselves, and hence, like the Bereans, searched the Scriptures diligently for proofs of the doctrines they held. A few milk and water Baptists could not stand the fight, and hence went over to the Pedobaptists.

But we have more of this class to day when other denominations are singing us to sleep with Siren songs of let us have peace.

The Baptists in those early days surpassed us of to day in another respect. They delighted to converse with their neighbors and around the fireside on religious topics. Personal religion, embracing their conviction, conversion, trials in life, the consolations of the spirit, and the great doctrines of Scripture, were themes ever fresh and interesting to them. At this day such topics are considered obsolete, and such conversation as distasteful and out of place.

These Baptists were violently opposed to dancing, fiddling, and playing, theatre going, horse racing, and the like. They were more inclined to strict honesty in their business transactions, not being given to sharp practices. They were not run mad to get rich. We do not to day measure up to them in these things.

We have grown in numbers, intelligence, wealth, social position and influence, also in Christian activity and beneficence, but has not our Christianity extended more in surface than in depth?

Other points of contrast between the Baptists of the first decade and those of the last decade of the century might be alluded to, but the length of this article forbids further extension.

How We May Know.

Hereby we do know that we know him if we keep his commandments.

Whoso keepeth his word in him verily is the love of God perfected.

He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked.

He that loveth his brother abideth in the light, and there is none occasion of stumbling in him.

He that doeth the will of God abideth forever.

A Christian, when he makes a good profession, should be sure to make his profession good. It is sad to see many walk in the dark themselves who carry a lantern for others.—Parker.

Dr. Holmes's definition of afternoon tea was given in these graphic words: "It is giggle, gabble, gobble, and git."

Those who desire proof that the Gospel is from God need only to note its effects.

Essentials of Good Teaching.*

In glancing over the program for the second annual Chautauqua of the Sunday-schools of the North Carolina Baptists, the topic of "Essentials to Good Teaching" loomed up so conspicuously before the writer's vision that all other topics vanished, and what to say and how to say it has been the thought of many days. Recognizing the dignity and intellect of this august body, for a woman (who from the day of the apple episode down to the present day has been dubbed the "weaker vessel" simply because she made a lasting impression on Mr. Adam and inherited the displeasure of all the Adams by grieving his physical presence with the protuberance known in common parlance as Adam's apple) to attempt to write a strong article would be a literary impossibility, hence the weakness of said article I hope will be kindly attributed to purely natural causes.

But to the subject of Essentials of Good Teaching. No subject presents such an infinity of good suggestions, and though the writer may bring out no specially new thing we trust a discussion of the topic may bring out other stronger points.

The art of teaching is God given, hence I lay down as the first essential a life hid with Christ in God. No man or woman who has not first learned at the feet of the great Teacher can teach men. Only as we come in contact and loving touch with Him "who spake as never man spake before" can we talk to men. A heart on fire with love and zeal for God, realizing all life lost without Him, will by its very nature compel men to listen to the blessed gospel. Dr. Peter Bayne, in his History of the Free Church of Scotland, says of Robert Smith Candlish (then but little known) that he was more anxious to excel than to shine. The distinction between the two is a very fundamental one, showing solid attainments and superficial accomplishments. Would that every teacher in this assembly and all over the green earth could have this motto emblazoned on their heads. Regretfully we say it, but the average teacher desires to shine rather than excel, and his supposed success is apt to follow without much mental exertion. But as others will follow on the Preparation of the Teacher, I only touch here and go on.

As the second essential to good teaching, I would claim the desire to excel, not as men pleasers, but that the work may stand when all else is burned up. No teaching is good unless taught by one whose heart is thoroughly into the work. The world is fast waking to the truth that men and women must be in love with their subjects to make a success, as nothing succeeds so greatly as success. The teacher who goes before her class with a well-prepared lesson taught in a cold, careless manner, fresh from some frivolous conversation or social surroundings, with not a moment spent in the secret of her closet imploring the light of the Spirit to guide and interpret the truth aright to those who sit in spiritual darkness, cannot expect to hold her class or show them any beauty in the life she would hold out to them as the only life worth living. When, however, its precious truths are presented in a loving, tender manner, with a heart overflowing with love for God and human souls, with the eyes suffused with tears as they peer into the faces of scholars yet unknown to the great Teacher, impressions are then and there made which will honor God and demonstrate the power of good teaching. Personal acquaintance will find a welcome place in the essentials of good teaching. A class acquaintance is not sufficient to show our interest in this the greatest of all Christian work. Progress demands sacrifice, and the true teacher will sacrifice time, talent and all to make progress in her work. A step into the home life of our pupils, where we can see into the lives of our scholars, and mingle sympathy and help where needed, is another essential in holding the affections of our class. Prof. Drummond says the greatest thing in the world is love, and without it all life is vain and formal. It is the open sesame that places teacher and pupil on equal ground, for however much we love we are not fully equipped for the work nor satisfied unless we are loved in return. Recognising the great responsibility resting upon us as teachers to prepare the lesson (and nothing so fully shows us to greater disadvantage than a poorly prepared one), I cannot lay too much stress upon the keystone of all teaching, the sweet sympathy of tone.

While on earth Christ healed by his miraculous power, but coupled with it the gentle, loving hand-touch. We can deal out God's Word in unstinted measure, we can show our intellectual accomplishments, and men will sit and listen, but when the hand is laid on shoulder or head and the trembling voice of the teacher whispers, "I am praying for you," or "I want to see you saved," then it is that heaven's benediction descends upon the work, and the heart is rejoiced to see the icy exterior of hitherto men give way and the lips utter, "I, too, want to be saved."

Oh, teachers! how we have failed to touch men. The face that looks so hard and cold Sabbath after Sabbath as we try to win souls to God is but a poor index to the satisfying soul who longs for God, sympathy and heart

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

A GREAT testimony to the worth of "How Far Should a State Educate" is that those who denounce it show an utter ignorance of its arguments. Some one remarked the other day that the people who are most afflicted with the habit of talking are least used to the sensation of thinking.

IT IS well known that if a negro family move into the most ordinary tenement house, the white families will move out almost in a body. It is tolerably plain that we at the North are not quite ready to act upon the doctrines that we preach to the South.—Watchman, Boston, Mass.

Good, brother; your honest frankness persuades us that there is at least one paper at the North prepared to teach the South.

PREST. MCIVER has refused, Dr. Durham informs us, to make known the income of the institution over which he presides. This doesn't sound well. Public officials are public servants; public institutions are public property.

It is Prest. McIver's business to let the public have the facts.

IT IS undeniable that the friends of the University know how to sing its praises; and this would be a virtue if they would follow up their much talking with a little material support. The self-possession with which they boast exhaustless devotion to their ancient mother and, with the next breath, declare that they cannot and will not sustain her, is paralleled in the instance of the man who spent so much time making love to his wife that she starved for want of bread.

It is certain that the ancient institution would pray her loyal, loving sons for more work and less words, were the former not exacted from the men and women of the State, whom our ancient University has never helped.

It is undeniable that every man who has attended the State University is indebted to the men and women of the State—the men and women whose children have not clothes to wear to the free school. It is undeniable that scarcely one in a thousand of the sons of this institution feels obligation to the public. It is an outrageous fact that most of the remaining nine hundred and ninety-nine seem to feel entirely above not only the poorer classes, but all others. When it comes to disposing of public money, it's all very well; but they cannot be brought to think that they can discharge a debt to the State by contributing of their earnings for the education of some poor boy at the University. Oh, no, indeed; that's the taxpayers' business!

When the University alumni, from ancient times until now, are gathered together at the centennial next June, they should not be startled if the ancient mother exclaims, "We are very many, but not very much!"

THE Baptist who falters in the presence of great odds, or who is cast down with perplexities, or who allows the puerile sneers or wretched allegations of men who have no arguments, to divide his attention,—such a Baptist must not have an acquaintance with the history of his fathers.

The struggle against State-aid has begun. Heretofore the effort has been to inform. Now the effort is to mobilise the forces aroused by information. It may be years before it can be wisely and effectively concentrated. A few weeks might suffice.

Public sentiment is undoubtedly with us. Many who believe will not act as they believe because they have conflicting convictions. Their hearts are true; and in time they will be active participants in the work for Christian and Popular Education. There is need of patience. There is swelling underneath political chicanery a sentiment, as broad as the State, that will assert itself sooner or later.

It is certain, even at this early stage, no matter what the complexion of the Legislature, that the appropriations to the University and the State "Normal and Industrial" will not be increased. No representative will be so bold as to pursue such a course.

Meanwhile there is every reason for encouragement. Interest in the subject continues to grow. Free schools have more friends than ever. Christian colleges have more supporters. The public is alive to public interests; they will know hereafter the fundamentals of their taxes.

The cause is worthy of the persistent loyalty of its friends. There are elements in it that will survive years of politics, that will excite interest whether candidates are elected or not.

THE EARTHLY RELATION OF CHRISTIANITY.

The gentleness of the methods and processes of Christ's work is exemplified in the Parable of the Sower. Powerful over death itself, able beyond doubt to have overthrown the Cæsars, he labored after the manner of a man who prepares the ground, plants, cultivates, and patiently waits. He was content to sow the seeds, preferring gradual and gentle swelling and breaking of the ground to jarring discord.

It was a part of Christ's mission to lift up the world here and now as well as in heaven. If the Christian religion debased the human condition it would be an unworthy way to higher things. If a man were less a man, less worthy of respect and confidence and admiration, or communion or association with his fellows, because of his Christianity, it would not be surprising that men despised that religion. But we have yet to know the man who is not lifted up in the eyes of his fellows by active pursuit of the principles of Jesus Christ. One may be despised by one's unworthy companions of other times, but even they will admire a reformed man's course, if he steadfastly adhere to the principles once embraced. Now there are fanatics, whom nothing adorns; but the trouble with them is they too often forget the spirit of their principles, though devoted to the accomplishment of them. They usually injure their cause by making themselves more prominent than it. They are exceptions.

It has been stated by one who had visited nearly every nation on earth, that not only the people who were most civilized were Christians, but also that in the heathen countries where Christianity had been introduced the people are more civilized. The converted Africans, Indians and Chinese, are already better conditioned humanly as well as spiritually than their benighted fellows. Christianity is enlightenment; it is development. The design and the influence of the principles of Christianity are as clear to us as are those of the heat and the light of the sun. It is a great consolation to be able to trust in Christ; to leave all to him; but Christ is more than a consolation. He is not only an atonement, not only an intercessor, but he is also the Great Head, the Exemplar. Christ came on earth not merely to show a suffering people a future rest, not merely to ease their present with hope in the future, but he came also to be followed, to develop, to elevate those who follow him on earth. The Jews looked for a mighty leader and deliverer. They were mistaken only in the conception of what constitutes a mighty leader, in their idea of what deliverance means. Their hope was in war, they desired a deliverer who would release them from the bondage of men; and they were impatient of the mild mannered man who called himself King of the Jews, but who held no throne, nor marshalled armies. The bondage of Rome was more grievous to them than was the bondage of sin. Christ would deliver them from both in time; but they could not endure to be delivered from so easy a master as sin, while Rome flourished. Christ sowed seeds. He would not make them a mighty free nation all at once; and they were angry. He would sow the truth and make them free by development; but they were impatient. Christ knew that in their condition they were unprepared for freedom. What would they have gained had they thrown off Rome without breaking sin's power?

Now it is a common misapprehension that Christ is not the Great Head, the Exemplar, the Leader, on earth. Because he didn't appear with a battle-flag, the Israelites would not follow him. They were heartily in favor of reforming the world, but violently opposed to beginning with themselves. Because Christ is not present in person now he is frequently regarded as one who is not leading, but one to whom, nevertheless, final account must be given, which latter, indeed, is true. But the forgiveness of sins has been so often preached that the rendering of that final account does not seem—at the distance—of consequence. Christ is the only leader a Christian has, and no other is fit. If a Christian does evil, professing to follow Christ, the more unpardonable is the sin. It has been well said that every Christian carries the kingdom of Christ with him everywhere. The principles once espoused cannot be advocated in one instance and overlooked in another, cannot be observed to day and put aside to-morrow. Christ is everywhere. There are no troubles that he will shirk, there are no privileges that one should try to keep from him. One cannot make a convenience of Christianity; for profession of it imposes grave responsibility.

The Christian religion is meant to be lived by its professors on earth just as surely as Christ came on earth to save sinners; and one who humiliates Christ by professing him and not living his principles, is unworthy to be called a child of God. Church members ought to be roused out of the idea that Christ is thousands of miles and hundreds of years away. He is with his followers always,—his followers, mind you; not those who profess to follow. He is as much the King of kings on earth as he is by the throne of Almighty God in heaven.

THE SITUATION RELIEVED.

The Southern Baptist Convention has a proposal,—it is yet a wanderer, but not quite homeless. Give District of Columbia Baptists the plaudit. They have come nobly to the rescue, and invited our Convention to meet in Washington City, and a sigh of relief goes forth from many a fearful city. A better meeting place cannot be desired. Every man wants to see Washington.

The invitation is on the "pay as you go" plan. That is, the brothers-in-law, sisters-in-law and mothers in law can take advantage of the reduced rates to Washington and put up on their office-holding relations, but the delegate who goes for work, but who has no office-holding kinsman, must stop at a hotel and pay his bill. Visiting relations have harassed the Conventions hitherto; they will feel especially privileged at Washington. But if Washington can stand it, we can. And Washington stood Coxey.

The Washington Post states that an effort is to be made to persuade Northern Baptists to meet at the capital the same week with those of the South, thus bringing represen tatives of 4,000,000 Baptists together. This, however, is one of those "nice" plans that never materialize.

WE wonder if Prest. McIver has paid that interest which he was so alarmed about last month. Demand by the State Treasurer has been made for it twice, at least. Prest. McIver would have impressed our readers that it was paid regularly had we not known better. We would ask Treasurer Tate about the matter a second time, but we hesitate to trouble him to invent the arrangement of words and sentences requisite to telling the truth and not humiliating Prest. McIver.

WE HAVE upheld the opinion that our missionaries in China have been in no unusual danger since Japan China hostilities became active. The note from Bro. King, the absence of mention of war in letters from brethren Tatum and Bostick, the departure of Bro. Bryan and company, substantiate this opinion.

In the Lenoir Topic last week and the Charlotte Observer of Sunday are accounts of troubles in Canton, occasioned by the plague. Two American women were beaten and a native preacher was killed. Bro. Greene's letter closes, "After this every one kept quiet a few days and excitement died away."

China is said to be asking for peace. The nation seems to be in sorry plight for war. Japan's forces have charge of Korea, and an army of Japanese soldiers is approaching China's capital, Pekin.

ONE seeks vainly to frame a higher or more deserved tribute to Oliver Wendell Holmes than is given him when it is said that the poem—"The Chambered Nautilus,"—on our last page, was incarnate in him. It will live hereafter wherever English Letters are loved.

At first Dr. Holmes was a physician; he was a doctor of Medicine even after he had become Doctor of Philosophy and of Letters. He won success as a writer on topics relating to medicine; he became the companion of thousands as "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table." But, though his place in literature was indisputable, he clung to medicine; and, having been a writer of essays and sketches and poems half a century, read and loved by millions, it must be said that the work on which his fame rests was incidental, his life having been seriously devoted to medicine, in which his title to high rank is unquestioned.

In literature Holmes has the advantage of his contemporaries, so far as popularity is concerned. He is probably less of a poet and more of a plain philosopher than any of them. By no means Whittier's equal as a poet, he is more popular because there is no taint of sectional hatred in his work; lacking the abundant sentiment of Longfellow, he had just enough of it to be suggestive; and the rest is more than compensated for by a rare vein of unaffected humor. While the more scholarly Lowell is acrimonious, Holmes overflows with fellow-feeling and frank good-nature. He possesses a realness, a plainness and a tenderness that Emerson and Bryant never knew.

All of them, Poe, Hawthorne, Emerson, Bryant, Longfellow, Whittier, Lowell, Holmes, having passed away, the place of not one of them filled, it is not to be wondered that the horizon is expectantly scanned for promise of others worthy to receive their mantles; nor is it to be wondered that no one appears for a season.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....Expansion for Christ means development of self.

....THE RECORDER nineteen weeks—fifty cents. Tell your people.

....Our Echo, Asheville, is a weekly, instead of a monthly, as we stated.

....Fifteen candidates were baptized by Pastor Adams at Reidsville the 7th inst.

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Rev. Dr. Geo. B. Taylor has resigned care of the First Baptist church, Macon, Ga.

....Rev. Geo. J. Dowell of Durham is recovering from his recent attack of malaria.

....Rev. Dr. J. L. M. Curry will deliver an address at the State Fair at Raleigh next week.

....Dr. H. L Morehouse has been elected Secretary of the American Baptist Education Society.

....Our Western North Carolina brethren meet in Convention with Clyde church next week.

....Rev. J. O. Gough Manning, S. C., called to see us Monday on his way to visit friends in Wake Forest.

....Rev. C. G. Jones of Chatannooga, Tenn., has been called to the care of our church at Covington, Ky.

....Rev. T. J. Taylor will begin helping Pastor Gwaltney in a series of meetings at Wake Forest in November.

....Bro. R. W. Britton is now located at Potecasi instead of Woodland. He has a very good school at Potecasi.

....Editor Gulley retires from the Spirit of the Age, the temperance paper, and Rev. R. H. Whitaker succeeds him

....Washington sets the pace, and it's "pay as you go." We are glad the Convention has a proposal at any rate.

....Ponder this statement: The saloon burns up $23,000,000 of our national resources every week.—Standard.

....Rev. W. C. Norman has refused the presidency of Greensboro Female College. He felt called to stay in the ministry.

....Boys and girls in England have saved $85,000 and with it bought a ship, which they have given for missionary work.

....Rev. W. B. Waff is a born worker. "Had a good day at Cool Spring the 7th; received six new members," he writes.

....Rev. L M. Curtis of Aulander, says the Windsor Ledger, has accepted a call to serve Republican church the ensuing year.

....The Japs and Chinese have by this time learned what it is to go away from home to learn the news of their own affairs.

....Nine additions have lately been made to our Fayetteville church, says the Baptist, growing out of a meeting held at a mission point.

....Seventeen additions to our number at Magnolia resulted from a recent meeting, in which Rev. J. B. Harrell aided pastor O. P. Meeks.

....Rev. H. C. Moore of Monroe sends good news: "The Lord is blessing me and I rejoice." The work at Monroe continues to grow.

....Dr. Lansing Burrows, lately asked to become assistant secretary of our Home Board, has declined, and will remain in Augusta, Ga.

....Rev. M. P. Matheny baptized eleven persons in the Catawba river the 7th inst., says the Gastonia Gazette, in the presence of 1,500 people.

....The Baptist and Reflector very pertinently asks a Pedobaptist, "Whom do you baptize, the children of God or the children of the devil?"

....Elder Archibald Cree has resigned care of our church at Roxobel. Bro. Cree has done well at this point and his successor will find a good field.

....Rev. Jonathan Wood, who has been visiting friends about Raleigh, left Tuesday on his return to Raton, New Mexico. He will visit relatives in Virginia on his way.

....We were glad to have a visit from Rev. Samuel J. Porter last week. Bro. Porter had just been visiting Wake Forest and was highly pleased with the conditions there.

....Rev. A. A. Pippin, says the Smithfield Herald, conducted a meeting at Lee's Chapel Baptist church near Earpsboro recently, which resulted in sixty-six additions to the church.

....Dr. W. L. Wright has been pastor of Leigh Street church, Richmond, Va., three years, during which there have been 272 additions to his flock. The latter numbers 950 now.

....We regret to say that work on our promising new church at Washington has been stopped for want of funds. Bro. McLeod trusts that it will not be long before it is renewed.

....Pastor A. P. Stoker, of Denton, informs us that Elder G. W. Henderson, of Blaine, has been aiding him in a meeting of much power. There were twenty-one professions of religion.

....Mr. Henry M. Shaw and Miss Bessie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Buxton, will be united in marriage in the Baptist church at Jackson, N. C., October 24. They have our best wishes.

....We are grieved to learn of the death of Bro. Jno. T. Barnes of Wilson, in his sixty fifth year. Bro. Barnes was a loyal Baptist and his efforts are perpetuated in our present strength at Wilson.

....Rev. T. S. Wright, of Peachland, says the Southern Index, has been called by the Baptist churches around Rockingham to fill the vacancy caused by Elder Tuttle's late resignation, which takes effect November 1.

....The RECORDER is not read by inactive members. There's a moral here.

....Allow us to suggest that a reward, say another scholarship on the Cameron debt, be offered to all who will swallow the "Facts about the University" lately sent out.

....Next to your church, the school in your neighborhood should be guarded most jealously. There ought to be a school wherever there is a place for religious worship.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard passed through Raleigh last week on his way to Rome, Johnson county, where he is holding a meeting. Bro. Blanchard's thorough loyalty to our denominational enterprises is an example that all may well emulate.

....We regret to hear of the serious illness of Rev. C. V. Brooks of Jonesboro. Bro. Brooks has lately lost two sisters by fever, and now he is stricken. He is a young man of undoubted pluck and vigor, and we hope for him an early recovery.

....The Watchman is responsible for the statement that it is understood that there is a somewhat zealous attempt in the Episcopal church to found an order of celibate clergymen. And so they go Romeward—their general direction from the beginning.

....The Memorial church, New York, is the first Baptist church in that city to use individual communion cups. It is probably composed for the most part of that class of humans that are sometimes called "peculiar," at others fanatical, and at all times foolish.

....We shall not press our nineteen weeks fifty cent offer much longer. We hope to give all Associations the opportunity of this arrangement. If each pastor will mention the arrangement to his people as soon as possible we are sure it will result in untold advantage.

....Rev. F. H. Martin of Lumberton has been called to the care of Scottsville church, Portsmouth, Va., says the Atlantic Baptist. We hope Bro. Martin will be inclined by the Lord to remain yet awhile at Lumberton, where he has become so well identified with the work.

....Rev. J. R. Pace sends up further testimony that he appreciates a good opportunity. "I told my congregation Sunday, 'The RECORDER nineteen weeks fifty cents.' Here are four new subscribers." Bro. Pace has sent us nineteen on this offer, and he thinks he will get more.

....The church at Sawyer's Creek has just completed a handsome Sunday school and dressing-rooms and baptistery. This will give them excellent facilities for work and demonstrates the possibility of such things in the country. Why should city churches have all the conveniences?

....No man in North Carolina should be excused for not having an opinion on the State aid question. Enough has been written and said to establish anyone in an opinion, except those office seekers who are determined to keep on the fence. Beware, every one of them will get off on the wrong side.

....In the face of specific and unmistakable statements in the Bible no one but a fool can think that the soul is not immortal. The trouble with the Adventists is that they have no hope of heaven and, therefore, wish there were no hell. God pity a man who says he is not better than a dog, except physically.

....Associations are meeting two or three at a time now. Somebody ought to sow the seeds of truth at every one of them. Information will remedy many weaknesses. Remember the great need of our Boards; remember, too, that charity begins at home, and that the Orphanage is worthy of prayer and sustenance.

....Our church at Shiloh, away down east, has extended a hearty call to Dr. R. R. Overby for two Sundays a month in 1895. Bro. Woodson has done a good work here, but his health, Bro. J. H. Morrisette informs us, will not permit him to serve this people longer. Bro. Overby will bring the blessings of the Lord with him.

....The Conference of Christian Workers, composed of eminent representatives of many denominations, was held at Rev. A. C. Dixon's Hanson Place church, Brooklyn, last week. An interesting program of topics was discussed, Rev. E. M. Poteat being one of the topic leaders. Like most interdenominational affairs, the conference will not be heard from till it meets again.

....A meeting held with Corinth church, near Elizabeth City, resulted in eighteen accessions to the church. Others are expected to follow. Bro. Scarborough, of Murfreesboro, helped until Friday evening, and Dr. Blackwell came on Saturday. These brethren preached the old gospel in the power and demonstration of the Spirit.

....It seems that American newspapers are making more capital of the Japan and China war than are the Japanese and Chinese. A personal letter from Bro. Bostick, written Aug. 15th, was received last week, but it contained no mention of war or trouble. Chefoo, China, Bro. Bostick's postoffice, has been taken by the Japanese, the papers say.

....Pastor W. P. Jordan sends the following good news: On the second Sunday in September, 1894, we commenced a meeting of days with the church at Eureka, in Gates county, N. C. Brethren Josiah Elliott, Josephus Tynch, and Bro. Howell, from Norfolk, did the preaching for us. Ten were added to the church by baptism as a result of the meeting. From the fifth Sunday in September to the first Sunday in October we held a meeting with the church at Rocky-hock, in Chowan county. Bro. W. B. Waff did the preaching for us to the delight of all who heard him. On the last day of the meeting the pastor had the pleasure of baptizing twenty-five as the result of the meeting.

....Rev. A. L. Stough has resigned care of Kinston Baptist church to take effect end of the year.

....The North Carolina Teacher for September is before us. It is replete with contributions of value and interest. Among others, Prof. Holt's vigorous treatment of the "Relation of Preparatory Schools to Colleges," and the series of prize contest poems on the white oak, which Editor Harrell says is the State tree, are particularly interesting.

....We are grateful to Rev. J. M. McManaway of Louisiana, Mo., for an invitation to be present at the meeting of the General Association of Missouri Baptists at Louisiana. He writes: "The work that is now being done in North Carolina for Christian Education will have to be done in all the States. Its principles are universal. You have done pioneer work bravely."

....Wm. H Holleman, for half a century looked upon as a leading citizen of Wake county, an upright man and discreet counsellor, a Christian worthy of the name, died in Raleigh the 13th. Bro. Holleman was eighty-three years of age, throughout which he wore the white flower of a blameless life. His funeral was preached from the First Baptist church at Raleigh the afternoon of the 15th.

....Rev. N. S. Jones, of Salisbury, spent last week aiding Pastor Royall in a series of meetings at Mt. Vernon Springs, Wake county, where he is well remembered as a former pastor. Bro. Jones is, as ever, wrapped up in the work at Salisbury. It is a hard field, but we have a foothold there now, thanks to Bro. Jones' prayerful persistency. Sixty persons have joined our Salisbury forces within the past year.

....It was a pleasure to read the following in the Durham Globe the 10th: "Rev. Jesse Howell, the oldest Baptist minister in the State, will preach Saturday and Sunday morning at Yates church and Sunday evening at Hopkins Grove." Three sermons in two days is about as much as a man in his prime is equal to. Our readers will recall that Bro. Howell was seriously ill last winter, and everyone wishes him many more years.

....The Latin and Greek texts collected by the late Prof. J. C. Maske have been donated to Wake Forest College by his executor, Mr. W. A. Williams. They will be known as the "J. C. Maske collection of ancient classics," and are for a memorial of his scholarly instincts and loyalty to Wake Forest College. The collection numbers about three hundred at present, and it is earnestly hoped that the lamented professor's friends, schoolmates and pupils will make such additions as they can.

....Bro. R. W. Haywood, whom the executive committee has chosen to assist the chairs of Latin and Greek until the vacancy caused by the death of Prof. Maske is filled, was the honor man in the late graduating class; and his average mark has never been excelled at Wake Forest. Throughout his course Bro. Haywood worked conscientiously and steadily, and it became a proverb that he would lead any class he entered. As editor of the Student he manifested an acquaintance with general affairs that is unusual for a valedictorian. He is a student and a writer in whom there is promise of much development.

....In a private letter from China, Bro. W. D. King writes: "The war with Japan is on. We get word from the coast once a week and hear of naval engagements and sinking of ships and loss of lives. It is saddening to learn of the destruction of human life. It is remarkable how little the people of the nation concern themselves in such matters. I will guarantee that not a hundred persons in all this great city (Chefoo, we think,) even know that China is at war. It is a matter that concerns the Emperor and his troops. The people have nothing to do with it unless it be to rebel if too heavy taxes are called for. The only effect the war is likely to have upon us is to delay our mails."—Christian Index, Oct. 11.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING AGENT.

THE EASTERN ASSOCIATION

met last week with the church at Lisbon, in Sampson county. At least, a few brethren got there, but had to hurry away in order not to be shut in by the overflow of two rivers which surrounded the church. The representatives, however, of the large number of churches in this Association were not able to get there at all. This was a great disappointment to us all. The community around Lisbon church is one of the finest in the State. It had been many years since the people here had had an opportunity of entertaining the Association, and they were looking forward with much pleasure to this meeting.

In the absence of Bro. Stuart, who for many years has been Moderator, Bro. Swaim of Wilmington was elected Moderator by the few brethren present.

Bro. A. P. Herring was made Clerk, in the absence of Bro. Blackburn, who did not reach the Association till just before its adjournment.

The business, which was of so much importance, was principally referred to the Executive Committee to do as best it could in carrying on the work for another year. And while we can hardly hope for as good results as if the brethren had met and discussed the work, yet we hope much good work may be done by the churches during the year.

No one was more disappointed than the RECORDER representative. However, he will try, by visiting as many of the churches as possible, to redeem as far as he may the fine opportunity he lost in not meeting the brethren at the Association. Meanwhile let those who can send the money direct to Raleigh.

We shall remember with much pleasure the kindness of Bro. A. M. Herring, who did so much to make us comfortable while at his home.

Great Work at Durham.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—For two weeks our church has been enjoying a most gracious season of revival. In many respects it has been the greatest meeting I have ever known. The Holy Spirit has manifested his presence and power more plainly and powerfully than it has ever been my privilege to see. With scarcely an exception, every member of this church, not kept away by sickness, has been blessed and the whole church wonderfully revived. All are happy in the Lord, and I believe have resolved to serve God as they have never done before.

Deep conviction has prevailed among the unconverted, and we hope a great many have been saved. It is believed there have been a hundred and fifty conversions, and probably more. Some of these have been notable conversions, because of the means which led them to Christ or their remarkable experience or because they were considered difficult and unhopeful cases. The whole town seemed to be more or less under the influence of the meeting. Many Christians of other churches worked and prayed with us and shared in the blessing. The crowds were overwhelming. Our church was often filled and packed long before services began, and many every night were unable to get in. Several times hundreds had to go away because there was not standing room in the house. In all the meetings perfect quiet but great solemnity prevailed, and it was plain to see that the deep conviction which prevailed was produced by the Spirit and the truth.

Bro. J. L. White, of Asheville, my predecessor, did the preaching and conducted the meeting.

I can say with perfect sincerity I have never heard more attractive and effective preaching in any revival I have ever attended. I know enough about his work when pastor here in Durham and I have heard enough about his usefulness as pastor in Asheville to assure me that he is exceptionally gifted as a pastor. But as an evangelist, it seems to me, in some important particulars he is more gifted and more effective than any evangelist I have ever heard. He believes in and relies upon prayer. He honors the Holy Ghost. He preaches and emphasizes all of the important truths and doctrines relating to salvation, which I fear are sometimes ignored because they are not popular. He is remarkably happy and effective in the use of incidents and illustrations, but always makes them serve the purpose of impressing some truth rather than simply to entertain and please. In the conduct of the meeting he is wise and discreet, and displays most excellent judgment and tact. It was a joy and sweet feast to this church and many other friends in Durham to have him with us and hear him preach, for he won a large place in the hearts of all while pastor of the church, and I am sure will now have a larger place than before. To me it was a privilege and pleasure I shall never forget to have him with me, for in so short a time I learned to love him very dearly as a noble hearted and earnest fellow-laborer in the Master's service. We all feel very grateful to God from whom this great blessing has come to us, and I feel confident that my noble church with a large addition to its working force and increased spirituality and prayerfulness will do greater things than ever before in building up the Lord's kingdom.

Your brother in Christ,

Seminary Letter.

Dear Recorder:—The North Carolina boys, and especially the new ones, were glad to welcome the RECORDER this week. It came as a letter from home telling of those we love. We are glad we are here, and especially glad to find the Wake Forest boys with such a good record.

There are twelve North Carolina men here, among whom are brethren Cullum, Millard and Blalock who will finish their course this year.

The Seminary opened Monday with 179. Dr. Broadus gave the boys some wholesome advice about their work, health and success in general in his opening speech Monday morning. On Monday night Dr. Sampey delivered the introductory address at Walnut Street Baptist church. His theme was Christ in the Old Testament. It was instructive and entertaining.

There are now 215 students here, and still they come. All of the professors are well and hopeful of a good year for the Seminary. The students are of a high order and most of them are well prepared. There are men here from all quarters, England, Canada, Japan, Syria, Persia, Sweden, and all parts of the United States.

We hope to have a pleasant and profitable year. There is a great opportunity here for work and improvement. There are numbers of young men in North Carolina who ought to come here, and it is not too late for them to come this year. Brethren Sledge and Reddish are here, we three. We hope to see others come. We are all well and hard at work.

Very truly,

J. D. ROBERTSON.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 6, 1894.

From Mount Airy.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Our church and community have realized a very great loss in the deaths of Sister Galloway and Bro. R. T. Nutt. Their places cannot be filled. We miss them so much at their homes.

I have held several interesting meetings this fall. Quite a number have been added to the church by baptism, and others will follow. I have several other engagements to fill yet this fall.

I closed my year's work at Pinnacle Station (Shiloh church) last Sunday. Sunday evening I baptized several. Among the number was Lawyer Phillips, one of the best men of Stokes county. He did us great service in the Legislature a few years ago, and has been a great help to the people of this county. He comes into the church as an active helper in the Lord's work, and we feel that he will be a great blessing to the church.

When I took charge of Shiloh church, one year ago, quite a debt was hanging over the church. Sunday evening the treasurer informed me that my salary was all paid, and all the other debts arranged, and that I was unanimously called to serve the church as long as I thought it best for the cause.

The work from what I can see and learn in this part of the State is encouraging, and all the churches are moving forward, and notwithstanding the hard times our collections have been good.

Yours in Christ,

C. C. HAYMORE.

Notes From Watauga County.

Editor Recorder:—After an absence of a year and a half I have been privileged to visit my old home, Boone. Not many changes have taken place. Some of the Lord's people have passed over the river, and have left sad vacancies in hearts, homes and the church—vacancies that will be hard to fill. I spent last fifth Sunday there, and tried to preach Sunday and Sunday night. The people seemed spiritually cold. They have not had much preaching this year by any denomination. Bro. J. L. Sherwood was called to succeed Bro. E. F. Jones as pastor of the Baptist church, but he has not been able to serve them regularly. Two strong churches, Three Forks and Brushy Fork, are on either side of Boone, neither more than three or four miles distant, and these and the Boone church might unite on some pastor, locating him in Boone and letting him preach twice a month there and once at the others. I wish the brethren would think about it. A revival of religion is much needed, and may the Lord early give them a refreshing from his presence.

I met Bro. J. G. Pulliam, late of California. He is stopping with his father in law, Bro. Robert Shearer, who has just given Bro. Pulliam a farm in Watauga county worth several thousand dollars, but he does not purpose making his home in Watauga. He is thinking he may locate in or near Asheville. He will attend the approaching session of the Western Convention. Bro. Pulliam is off in Ashe and Alleghany Association for a week or two in meetings.

Bro. David Greene is succeeding well as pastor of Flat Top church, near Blowing Rock. The church enjoyed a gracious revival last year, which gave it more spiritual life. I feel much solicitude for Flat Top, having served it myself nearly six years, and because it is the only Baptist church close to the famous Blowing Rock summer resort.

Brethren J. L. Sherwood and J. F. Davis are doing pastoral work both in Watauga, and Johnson county, Tenn.

The Three Forks Union met at Cool Spring church, near Boone, and notwithstanding the rainy weather the meeting seemed to be well attended, judging from the number of brethren who passed through town going to and from. The Three Forks Association, I learn, has not forsaken all the other objects of the denomination for the sake of Foreign Missions on the "Gospel Mission plan."

The churches and associations that have agreed to support the independent missionaries ought not to be expected to help largely in the other objects of our Convention, as near and dear as they are to their hearts, because they have promised to stand by those brethren, and they must not be allowed to starve in a foreign land. I am of the opinion the Three Forks Association did the past year for Foreign Missions more than for all objects in any previous year. Let there be no unpleasant insinuations against those working on the new plan, "for we be brethren."

Boone is a small village nestled among the mountains, but it offers three candidates this year to the people, two for the judgeship and one for solicitor.

Since returning home I have learned that Bro. W. R. Bradshaw aided Bro. Crown in a meeting with Globe church last week. Bro. Crown has been sick, but I hope he is well ere this.

Bro. C. C. Pool is conducting a meeting with Blair's Fork church this week. Bro. J. M. Shaver will help him.

Invitation to the Convention

Dear Recorder:—The churches of Charlotte would be delighted to offer free entertainment to all who may be pleased to attend the Convention, but like the conies of the Bible, we are "a feeble folk," and shall be obliged to extend an invitation only to those who are delegates to the Convention, to the Women's Missionary Society and the Convention of Young People's Societies, if such convention shall be held. We will at an early day ascertain the rates our hotels and boarding houses will charge such as may wish to pay their own way, and publish them. It is a matter of the first importance that we shall know beforehand who are coming, and we therefore urge all who expect to attend to notify the pastors, T. H. Pritchard or L. R. Pruitt.

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 15, 1894.

To the Yeopim Union Meeting.

Dear Brethren:—The last Union Meeting was very thinly attended because of inclement weather, and funds are very much needed to pay off our missionaries and for the Baptist house of worship in Hyde county. This, therefore, is to request all churches in said Union who have funds in hand for State Missions, or the Baptist church in Hyde, to send the same to me and due acknowledgement will be made.

J. T. WAFF, Treas.

To the Pastors of the Baptist Churches of North Carolina.

Dear Brethren:—We see in every issue of the Foreign Mission Journal, and also in other religious newspapers, appeals for means to liquidate the great debt incurred by the Foreign Mission Board in sending out missionaries and supporting them on the fields. As we read these appeals our hearts are made sad, for we know that the existence of this debt means the postponement of reinforcements which are so necessary to the success of the work. Brethren, is it not possible that your churches can do more in the future for the cause of missions than they have done in the past! We know that many have been faithful in giving to missions; but more must be done if we would hold our own.

The missionary on the field realizes, as the people at home cannot, the need of a sufficient number of workers at each station to carry on the work successfully. Hence we are impressed to make this most urgent appeal to you, to do all in your power to arouse your people to make an effort to cancel this debt at once. We are confident that if this matter can be rightly brought before the Lord's people that they will not let this debt stand for one month longer. You can present it to them as no one else can. A number have applied to our Board to be sent to foreign fields. God has called them to go, and the work needs them; but how can they go except they be sent! Brethren, it is here that this matter rests largely with you. Can not each pastor in the State so rouse his church that they will get to work to help pay off the debt, raise funds to send out new missionaries, and support a missionary on the field! Some churches are not able to do the last, i. e., support a missionary on the field, but may not two or more such churches unite in supporting a missionary; while many wealthy churches can each support one, two, or more missionaries. God promises to bless his people under certain conditions. What are those conditions? "Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house, and prove me now therewith, saith the Lord of Host, if I will not pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Such a blessing as God has promises, you need in the home, and we need on the foreign field. But the only way to get it is to bring "the whole tithe into the store-house" of the Lord.

Dare we withhold from the Lord his own! Brethren, we beseech you to give this matter earnest prayer, and act upon it at once. We cannot afford to go backward. It is impossible to stand still.

Yours in the work,

Resolution of Appreciation.

PLEASANT HILL BAPTIST CHURCH,
CLYDE, N. C., Sept. 22 1894.

By order of the church the undersigned committee submit the following:

WHEREAS, It has pleased God in His inscrutable wisdom to call Bro. E. E. Blount from the labors of our church.

In behalf of the church we extend to Bro. Blount our prayerful thanks for his faithful service as pastor, his sympathy for the sick and afflicted, his deportment as a citizen, neighbor and husband, his earnest efforts for the cause of Christ. He has carried his flock to the Great Shepherd and ask his blessings upon them. We say, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." But should God in his infinite wisdom call our brother to his labors again, our loss will be the gain of another church equally as worthy.

Our church has lost a noble brother and sister whose lives have been fully consecrated to every interest and upbuilding of our church and good of the community, and we further extend to our beloved, retiring pastor and his estimable wife, our most heartfelt thanks for their earnest labors.

Resolved, That a copy of the above be furnished Bro. Blount, one placed upon the minutes of our church and a copy be furnished the W. N. C. Baptist for publication.

Jean Paul, in his autobiography, describes his first communion: "I thus left the altar with a clear, blue, infinite heaven in my heart. This heaven revealed itself to me by an unlimited, stainless, tender love, which I now felt for all mankind." It is, indeed, such a love that is given to those who keep near to God. A love that includes all mankind, and the sequel will be found in those lines of Coleridge:

He liveth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small,
For the dear God who loveth us
Has made and loveth all.

An Offer of $200 in Gold.

Possibly no book of its character of recent years has sold so rapidly as "Talks to Children about Jesus." Agents often sell from ten to fifteen copies a day. A new set of plates, with many beautiful illustrations has just been made for this book, yet it is sold at a remarkably low price. The publishers, R. H. Woodward Company of Baltimore, Md., are now offering most liberal terms and premiums for securing subscribers. Any one securing two hundred subscribers before the Christmas Holidays will get $200 in gold. Freight will be paid on books, and credit given. A canvassing book sent postpaid for thirty five cents. Write at once to the publishers for canvassing book and further information. R. H. Woodward Company also publish a number of other popular books.

Good-by.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Will you allow me space to say good-by!

Dear brethren, sisters and children: You have done many kind things for us; said many kind things to us and about us. We are glad to return to our work, and we go feeling that many hearts accompany us and many prayers will follow us.

You send us back greatly refreshed and strengthened in heart, mind and body. We leave home October 15 with six new missionaries—Miss Lottie Price, Asheville, N. C.; Miss Willie Kelly, Marion, Ala.; Miss Julia Mackenzie, Owensboro, Ky.; Rev. Nathan Maynard and wife, Covington, Tenn., and Rev. W. W. Lawton, Estill, S. C. We will hold farewell meetings in Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville and Louisville, and sail from Tacoma, Washington on steamship "Tacoma" October 30. You will pray for us as we go. 2 Cor. 13:11, 14.

Missionary Day Observed

Dear Bro. Bailey:—Our school observed Missionary Day Friday night, October 5th, using mostly the program prepared by the Sunday-school Board of our Southern Baptist Convention, and raised the sum of $32.18 for missions and had a pleasant and profitable time, and we commend the observance of this day to the schools of the State. I never saw children work more willingly, and think it just the thing to train and develop our Sunday-school scholars in the duty of giving to missions, something our older people have never learned, and a missionary collection usually causes long faces.

It seems to me that a similar idea might be introduced in our schools for State Missions and so train our children in giving to all the objects of our Convention. When the children are thus properly trained the future of our churches will be assured, as the lessons taught and principles instilled thus early in life will bear fruit in mature years to the glory of God and the advancement of his cause.

Our church and mission work is growing steadily under Bro. Thomas' leadership and we hope to hold the Baptist fort and steadily go forward. A meeting at our mission school last week produced some spiritual results, and we trust its influence may extend to the up-town church.

The RECORDER grows better as it gets older. May it live long and get still better as the years go by.

Yours fraternally.

touch. Then when the desire to excel rather than shine has been lost in the struggle to save others will we shine as the stars forever and ever, for God has declared it. Then instead of excelling by shining we will shine by excelling.

Another essential, by a great deal an important one, is personal application of the lesson. For ten years I have tried to teach, and week after week the greatest blessing I get is as I cull the strong every day points and apply personally to scholars and self. No lesson is well taught unless some lesson has be focussed on the heart and brain of those who sit before us.

Teachers of North Carolina, do we feel the weight of responsibility resting on us to give the pure, unadulterated bread of life to those in our classes, when so much scepticism, infidelity, atheism and men's opinions are taught for the Word of God. If ever in the history of the world the pure Word was needed, now is the hour. The perilous times are upon us, and how can we fight and lead others on to the battle for our God unless armed by the sword of the Word. Teachers, soldiers of the living God, arm yourselves and gird yourselves in the whole armor, and then, having done this, stand for God and right!

The lesson text is essential, and the applications of its truths doubly so, for out of it comes the issues of life.

While as Baptists we deal strictly in essentials and consider not the non-essentials, as not existing in God's Word, let me press this truth, know the Word, know your scholars personally, their joys and their sorrows, their individual needs, and give truths suited to help and cheer them in the struggle to become better men and women for Christ.

Can I afford to leave out another essential, magnetism, study it, invite it, for the great Magnet drew men unto Himself, and if we would be like Him we will draw men also. If in our teaching and contact with men we be lost in Christ, then men will see the Christ in us and we will draw in our lives and examples. While on earth Christ had the companionship of mortal men and longed for sympathy, even as we do. Let us give words of cheer to those we are trying to take with us to the eternal city of our God, and as we desire appreciation and love in our work, give in unstinted measure to those who need it the word of praise, the smile of encouragement give freely.

The essentials of good teaching can only be learned by lives fraught with experience and sacrifice. Discouragements will come, and often weary and fainting by the way we will desire to give it all up to somebody who can do it better than I. How we long for appreciation sometimes in our hours of despondency and we are tempted to turn away thinking our work all a failure. But thanks to His unspeakable gift, He has promised to be with us, and although not always on delectable mountains of rejoicing viewing the landscape o'er. Away down in the valley toiling we see no success, the shadows gather, the clouds lower. Hear Him declare, Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of life. The river of our God is just before, loved ones are waiting to bid us welcome, the song of the white throng comes floating across. Jesus says, Yet a little while and I will come again. Brother, sister in the work of our Master, can we afford to do less for Him? Nay, God help us to be more faithful, more consecrated, and soon we will cross over bringing our sheaves with us to lay them down at the feet of Him "who hath redeemed us and bought us with his own precious blood."

The Intermediate State.

Dear Recorder:—I find in your paper of August 29, 1894, an article written by Bro. A. B. Ervin upon Hades, Tartarus and Paradise, or the Intermediate State of the Soul. I am a reader of the RECORDER, a member of the Missionary Baptist Church, and I hope a Christian. I feel a deep interest in the truth and its transmission to all the truth hungry in Christ. I consider it my duty, likewise the duty of every Christian, to carefully examine, investigate and test all principles of faith set forth as doctrines of the church.

Finding this article as I do, unaccompanied by comment or criticism, I take it for granted that it voices the sentiments of the leading exponents of our faith. Being cautioned and advised by God in his divine revelation to hold fast to that only which is true, therefore I hope Bro. Ervin, or some one of the many contributors to the RECORDER, will reconcile this statement relative to the intermediate state of the soul in the article referred to above, with what Peter said in his memorable sermon on that day when Pentecost had fully come and he was fully under the influence of divine inspiration. According to the statement now under consideration that "hades is the place the departed spirits of wicked men are cast into," then Christ was a wicked man, for Peter says in Acts 2:27 hades was the place from which Christ was resurrected. Therefore he rested during his intermediate state between his death and his resurrection in hades.

Next, there seems to be something mysterious about the word paradise. Bro. Ervin says it is the home of the righteous during their intermediate state. He bases his conclusions upon Christ's answer to the thief on the cross, "to day shalt thou be with me in paradise." Now, this question seems to come up, Did Christ go to the place he calls paradise, or heaven, or the throne of God that day? Bro. Ervin says yes. John in his gospel, 20:17, says no, for he had not yet, on the third day, ascended to the Father. Now, another question, Who is right, Ervin or John? This occurred on the third day after his crucifixion, and let me say, If he had not yet ascended, where was he? Peter agrees with John that he was not in paradise, but disagrees with Bro. Ervin and says he was in hades, that unseen state of darkness—yea death. See Job 17:13

An intelligent and lucid explanation of these seemingly inconsistent statements of Bro. Ervin will be highly relished as meat in due season to me, and I trust to many others of the household of faith. There must be something yet to learn about the word paradise, that is, as to its true meaning when used by Christ in addressing the thief. The origin of the word is neither Greek nor Hebrew, but Arabic. Its legitimate definition is a garden in the sense of felicity and delight. Now what makes and guarantees a more refined state of felicity and delight than one in which all possibility of harm and evil is excluded, representing a place, symbolically, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest. That place is called death. See Job 3:17–19; also 22. The 18th reads, "There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor." 19th, "The small and great are there; and the servant is free from his master." 22d, "Which rejoice exceedingly, and are glad when they can find the grave." This agrees with Peter, Acts 2:27, grave being from hades, hades from sheol, the unseen state.

The Scuppernong Union at Roper.

Dear Recorder:—This Union met at Roper, an enterprising town on the Norfolk & Southern railroad, September 28 and 29th.

Saturday at 11 o'clock, after a few minutes devotional exercises, the Union reorganized, electing J. W. Bryan, of Plymouth, Moderator, and Mr. Rudder, of Roper, Secretary.

The following question for discussion was then proposed: Does the success of the Lord's cause depend on numbers? A very lively discussion by E Ludford, Bro. Ferrell and the writer.

Committees were then appointed.

Then Union then adjourned and met again at 2 o'clock p. m., and after hearing reports of committees and some very appropriate remarks on the success of the Union, adjourned to meet at 8 p. m.

At 8 p. m the Union took up the proposed question: The relation of pastor to members and members to pastor. Bros. J. W. Bryan, E Ludford, Rev. Mr. Merritt, of the M E church, and the writer took part in the discussion, which was truly interesting.

We then adjourned and met in Sunday-school mass meeting at 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Several short and lively talks were made by J. W. Bryan, E Ludford, Capt. Williams, Bro. Wence and the writer, after which good reports were heard from the several churches, viz: Sound Side, Roper, Mt. Pleasant and Plymouth.

The hour had arrived for the 11 o'clock sermon. Just at this time we noticed that the equinoctial storm had cleared away and we found ourselves in a crowded house, for all Israel had turned out. All the denominations of the town met us under the Baptist roof. Oh! for that spirit of cordiality in every place. The writer did the best he could for them from the 7th chapter of Judges.

Immediately after the sermon the unfinished business was taken up and finished as far as possible.

The Union then adjourned to meet at Mt. Pleasant Saturday before the fifth Sunday in December.

Brethren of Scuppernong Union, attention! This Union is composed of ten churches, located in Washington, Tyrrell and Dare, but only four of them came up to the help of the Lord at Roper.

What was the matter with Columbia, Creswell, Mt. Zion, South Shore, Gum Neck and Roanoke Island? Yes, I know we met in the storm and on the day the Democratic primaries were being held. Is it not a fact that a great many of the Israel of God went through the rain to these Democratic meetings instead of coming to the Union? Which is more important, the work of the Lord or the work of parties?

Let us make a grand rally at Mt. Pleasant in December. We have some very important work to do.

Cordially yours,

BLAKELY H. MATTHEWS.

Juvenile Temperance Society.

Dear Editor:—It was my privilege to be at the juvenile temperance society the last Monday night in September, which is composed of children, with a good Baptist sister, Mrs. W. W. Hill, the mother of Rev. T. B. Hill of Wake Forest, at the head. Would to God that we had more good Baptist sisters that would take a part in this good work of training the young minds for good, for the Scripture saith, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it.

The society gave a very interesting entertainment that night, after which I made a few remarks. The society raised funds for the children to take a trip to Buffalo Lithia Springs, where they had a nice time, so I learned.

Let us all pray God's blessings upon the temperance cause at Virgilina.

INFLUENZA,

Or La Grippe, though occasionally epidemic, is always more or less prevalent. The best remedy for this complaint is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"Last Spring, I was taken down with La Grippe. At times I was completely prostrated, and so difficult was my breathing that my breast seemed as if confined in an iron cage. I procured a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and no sooner had I began taking it than relief followed. I could not believe that the effect would be so rapid and the cure so complete. It is truly a wonderful medicine."—W. H. WILLIAMS, Crook City, S. D.

Talks About Law.

A Law Book That Everybody Needs

BY JUDGE ROBERT W. WINSTON.

"Wherein such legal principles as touch the daily business of the people are treated in a manner within the reach of the average mind."

FROM PRESSES OF EDWARDS & BROUGHTON, RALEIGH, N. C.

The Book Contains

Two Hundred Pages. It is divided into thirty-two chapters. It treats of thirty-two main subjects, and scores of collateral ones. The print is large and clear; the paper is smooth and heavy; the binding is bright and cheery; the index is very complete. A feature of the book is its phrasing. For example, turn to page 147, "Innkeeper and Guest." The eye, with no effort, falls upon these large head-lines:

"Leaving Door Unlocked,"
"Pullman Sleeper Not an Inn,"
"Horses and Vehicles,"
"Injury from Rats and Mice."

Under each of which is a concise statement of the law on that subject.

The following subjects, among others, are treated: "Farm Law," "Sunday Law," "Bills, Bonds and Notes," "Enticing Servants," "Forcible Trespass," "Wilful Trespass," "Statute of Frauds," "Banks," "Corporations," "Damage Cases," "Accidents from Spring Guns," "Usury," "Married Women," "There being no Will," "How to Write Your Will." The law of Telegrams, of Railroad Tickets, of Railroad Accidents of Negligence, of Nuisance, of Self defence, of Injuries by Vicious Animals, &c., &c.

In presenting this little book to the public we feel that we are doing a service to lawyers, doctors, farmers, merchants, mechanics, laborers, and all other classes of our people.

Notes of Travel.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I have many times intended to write to you, but have hitherto neglected it. One cause of this neglect or failure to write is that in January, 1893, I was the victim of a fourth attack of la grippe, and was very sick—near death. Since then I have not enjoyed my usual vigor, mental nor physical, though I am improving.

Mrs. Solomon and I returned a week ago from our vacation, which we very much enjoyed. Passing through Louisville and Cincinnati, we went to Warren, Ohio, to visit our daughter, with whom we spent several weeks. Our visit there was very pleasant.

From Warren we visited Sharon, Pa., where I was pastor of the First Baptist church 1875—1880, and spent a week among the dear friends there, receiving every possible manifestation of Christian love. They occupy a fine new house, costing them about $50,000. Sharon has a population of about 12,000. Our stay of a week was all too short to gratify our own or the desires of our beloved friends. But we could not remain longer with propriety.

Leaving Sharon and stopping again in Warren for a few days, we boarded a train on the Chicago and Erie road and went to Huntington, Ind., where I was pastor two and a half years, but had to leave on account of the failure of Mrs. Solomon's health. Here, too, our reception and treatment were all that could be required. I preached once to my former charge in Huntington. This town is about the size of Warren, O. It is overdone with religious denominations. Besides the Catholics, there are two Baptist churches, one Methodist, one Evangelical, one Lutheran, one Episcopal, one Presbyterian, one Campbelite, one German Reformed, one Church of God, and one Dunkard or German Baptist, who are now building a fine house of worship. Huntington is a stirring business town. It has six fine public school buildings with forty-two teachers in them. The Romanists have a large school besides, and have charge of about, if not entirely all the saloons in the town, of which there is likewise a very large oversupply.

After a stay of five days in Huntington, we left for Chicago, which we reached in about five hours, and were met at the Dearborn station by our two sons and the wife and son of our oldest boy, all of whom now reside in Chicago. I have often visited Chicago and spent a great deal of time there. But it has not ceased to be a city of wonders as well as of winds. We visited the grounds of the late World's Fair, and although the torch had made it comparatively a desolation, still there is much remaining of interest to those who did not attend the Fair. There were some ten or twelve of the buildings remaining, among them the Fine Art building, now the Field Museum—quite a number of pieces of statuary, among them the gilded statue of the Republic, with some of the gold leaf off, I suppose by the intensity of the heat produced by the burning of some of the adjacent buildings. The most interesting object, to me at least, which we visited was the Masonic Temple. When I was in Chicago before, this building had the lower story up. Now it is 302 feet high—twenty-one stories. It has sixteen elevators run by hydraulic pressure, at the rate of 9 miles an hour between floors. During a theatrical performance in the dome or upper story sometime since, when there were said to be five hundred persons on the upper floor, an alarm of fire was raised, and in four minutes every person was down and on the street without injury to a single person. This is said to be the highest building in the world, and from its upper story you can see into five States besides looking over a large portion of Lake Erie. It has eighty-eight miles of telegraph wire connected with it. What cannot human ingenuity accomplish!

Leaving Chicago on the E. I. Railway, we came through Evansville, Ind., to Robard, Ky., in about twelve hours' ride and three hours' waiting to visit our other daughter and family, and spent a delightful week with them. Thence we came home, after two months of delightful vacation, much improved in health, and ready for work.

The Sunday I was in Chicago, I heard a good sermon from Rev. Mr. Wheeler of the Fourth Baptist church, Ashland ave. and West Monroe street, from the words of Paul, "Wherefore, O king, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." His theme was "Christian Fidelity."

On Monday morning I attended the conference of the Baptist pastors, and enjoyed it much. There were about forty-five, I think, present, among them the renowned Dr. Harper, President of the Chicago University. I did not make his acquaintance. Of course, Dr. P. S. Henson was there and made a few remarks characteristic of himself—full of wit and wisdom.

Union Meeting.

Union meeting met at Providence Baptist church Saturday before the fifth Sunday in this month, but owing to inclemency of the weather very few gathered on that day. Nevertheless some were there and the Lord's spirit was with them and blessed the meeting. It continued to rain all the morning while we were coming in, consequently no service before noon. After partaking of dinner, Bro. J. A. Beam being on hand religious service was conducted by him which was profitable to all. Organization was formed by electing Rev. J. A. Beam, President, and J. W. Downey Secretary. There being no delegates from other churches no Treasurer was elected.

Having no program the questions were taken up as thought of. First, What shall be the object of the Union meeting? The brethren appointed to speak were not present, whereupon remarks were made by brethren E. S. Pearce, James Walker, W. I. Duncan, and Rev. J. A. Beam. They discussed it from most all the different standpoints and made it very interesting.

After singing "Cross and Crown" the next question was discussed, What is the difference in being under the law and grace? After remarks by brethren J. W. Downey, E. S. Pearce, H. Long and Rev. J. A. Beam exercises were closed after singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," to meet at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

September 30, Sunday morning, exercises commenced by singing "Stand up for Jesus." After prayer by Bro. Pearce the Sunday-school mass meeting was opened, which was discussed by brethren Thomas Street, Rev. J. A. Beam, Rev. H. F. Williams, Rev. J. J. Landale, James Walker and E. S. Pearce from every different standpoint. We wish so much that those who do not attend Sunday-school, especially church members, could have been in it and heard the invigorating speeches that were made.

On motion, in the absence of Bro. J. S. Hardaway, Bro. H. T. Williams was called upon to preach. After singing "Jesus lover of my soul," Bro. Williams preached a most excellent sermon on the subject of duty to man—(1) love God supremely, (2) love self as we ought to, (3) love our neighbor as ourselves. After singing "O, for a closer walk with God" and prayer by Bro. Downey, exercises closed with Sunday-school exercises.

On motion, Union meeting adjourned. It was a very interesting meeting to all who attended. The great trouble was more preachers were needed. Hope the meetings will continue, and let us who are Sunday-school people the next fifth Sunday in December make it as interesting as possible by attending.

Commercial Power Development at Niagara.

Ernest A. Le Sueur, in the Popular Science Monthly for September writes of the power of the Niagara Falls:

The total fall between Lakes Erie and Ontario is 329 feet, and is made up as follows: From Lake Erie to the head of the falls, seventy feet; the falls, 161 feet, and below to Lake Ontario, ninety-eight feet. Consequently, the total power running to waste is more than double the five million horse power on the falls. An idea of the proportion that this total bears to what may be called the world's consumption of power may be had from the fact that it is computed to be equal to the total of all the steam-generated power in the world.

The geographical situation of the falls with respect to nearness to the present great power consuming centers is, as hinted above, not quite all that could be desired; but there are nevertheless several cities within reach, electrically speaking, which will use an enormous amount. Buffalo may be said to be next door, and Rochester is within easy reach. In the not too distant future we may expect to see the great electrical manufacturing works in Schenectady operated, as is meet, by electrical power from Niagara.

The power company has, however, made branch track connections between the territory owned by it and three important railway lines which all pass within a few miles of the property. These connections and the good freight rates which have been contracted for in various directions, together with the cheapness of power, will in all likelihood attract to the spot manufactures, besides those which have already undertaken to go there, to an extent that will make it the foremost power consuming center in the world.

A Voluntary Testimonial.

The following was sent us in a personal letter, and is published without the knowledge of the Institute. Unsought testimonials are best.—Editor.

I took the Keeley treatment for tobacco habit nearly three years ago. I recommend it to all who wish to try it. I had been chewing twenty years. I have no desire for it now. A friend of mine had an appetite for strong drink. He took tobacco treatment and it cured both. It costs five dollars, and can be taken at home.

The glory of missions is seen in four things. It is seen in:

1. Their origin. The movement began in paradise, and was reinforced in the great commission on Olivet and the planting of the kingdom of God, which was typified in the stone out from the mountain to fill the whole world.

2. Their motives operating on the Church of God. These are found in the greatness and peril of man. Man is immortal, and to insure a blessed immortality he must be made pure.

3. Their methods. Go, teach, baptize; secure repentance, faith, conversion, and organization into the church. With the living voice goes the Bible.

4. Their triumphs. They made a new East, a new Europe, a new America, and hasten to conquer the remotest nations. The gates of the nations are all open; the head of the Christian column already enters the strong work of paganism. The objections to this movement are frivolous. Evolution finds a new headship in Christ, and paganism objects to the succor of the poor and war on caste. The leveling principle is the glory of the gospel, and the hindrances will ere long be swept from its path.—Joseph Cook.

"Blessed is the man that maketh the Lord his trust, and respecteth not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies."

Subject for October: Colored People.

"The needy shall not always be forgotten." Increased contributions needed to enlarge the work of institutes for instruction of colored ministers.

Study Topics.—The claims of the colored people upon us as Baptists. May not a closer union between the Baptists North and South be secured for the educational and religious interests of the colored people. Rome's effort to secure control of the colored vote.

Colored People.

POPULATION.

"The negro population of the South, numbering not less than seven millions, is a vast field for missionary labors."

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

When emancipation came they had been in the United States 255 years. What was their condition? I speak of those in slavery. Physically, they were the best cared-for laborers that the sun ever shone upon.

Since their emancipation, schools have been established by Christians of the North, and by State appropriations of money for educational purposes, and with those who could avail themselves of the advantages of education, there has been marked improvement in their physical appearance, and in their intellectual development.

Education does not make men Christians, but it gives a higher value to a virtuous life. It creates self respect; and with that class of the colored race who have been brought under its influence, I think I am safe in saying this is not an exception to a general rule.

WHAT GOD HAS DONE.

I do not attempt to interpret the mystery of Providence in permitting the cupidity of nations superior in intelligence and power, to bring them to these shores, I only know they came as barbarians; and here, in slavery, they were brought in contact with Christian civilization; that millions of them have become willing subjects of the "Prince of Peace," and that to day they are endowed with the rights of freedom and citizenship.

WHAT MAY BE DONE.

Above all, by the love of Christ, let us not neglect them. They are poor, they are dependent. He who "took upon him the form of a servant and was obedient unto death, even the death of the cross," who died for them as well as for us, has placed them here and laid their responsibility upon us. They are human beings, like ourselves destined to the judgment, and to the rewards and retributions of eternity. Let us do what we can to extend to them the blessings of redemption, and thus glorify Him who "gave his life a ransom for all."—Rev. William H. McIntosh, D. D.

Joseph Cook writes: "If the colored populations of the world are to occupy their opportunities, they must develop native leadership. They will immensely outnumber the whites in the tropics; they thrive where the whites perish. There is at present a most impressive lack of able native leadership in the populations of Africa. This lack is to be supplied gradually by the development of native capacity as Christianity and education advance in the dark continent, but especially by the training of able Africans outside of Africa to go thither as religious, educational and commercial leaders."

We regret that there appears so little disposition upon the part of the educated negroes of this country to aid in the elevation of their countrymen in Africa.

Does anyone doubt that these people need help, and we can best give them the help they need? The gospel of salvation, of cleanliness, of thrift and education will work all the reforms necessary. Living with them, and really sympathizing with them, as others not similarly situated cannot do, let us take up this work just to our hands and do it "In His Name." Bible classes are held for them by some, missionary societies are conducted with others, while mothers' meetings and industrial schools can combine in one effort many forms of helpfulness. The Romanists are sleeplessly at work, and have ordained their first colored priest to labor among his own people. A very large institution has just been completed for this branch of work. Sisterhoods are specially engaged in caring for the children. We have much better opportunities and are first on the ground. If the Romanists supplant us we shall have ourselves alone to blame.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

State News.

A pants factory will be established at Raleigh.

Two men were arrested in Wake county for burglary last week.

Wilmington banks are offering money on good security at 6 per cent.

The public schools at Wilmington opened the 8th with nearly 2,000 children attending.

Dr. W. E Hall of New York City delivered two enjoyable lectures at Wake Forest last week.

The Norwegian barque Ojer grounded on Cape Fear bar the 10th, and is a total wreck. The crew was saved.

A Philadelphia man has an option on the valuable Cleveland Springs hotel property, and will probably take it.

J. A. Abernathy has purchased the Lincolnton paper mills property and will convert it into a 5,000 spindle yarn mill.

The King's Daughters have opened a womans' exchange at Charlotte, i. e., a place where woman's work may be bought and sold.

The building and machinery of the High Point Furniture Company were destroyed by fire the 9th inst. Loss $10,000; some insurance.

It is announced that the News and Observer of Raleigh will increase its capital stock to $30,000 and equip its office with two type setting machines.

Nine prisoners escaped from the Madison county jail the 10th. Two of the men were under sentence of death, two under indictment for murder, and two for rape.

It is stated authoritatively that the Duke Cigarette Company will not leave the State. The Durham tax assessment was the cause of the rumor of its determination to leave.

The State Auditor has been issuing warrants for the School Fund derived from the sale of swamp lands, etc. Each county gets a portion of the gross amount, which is $43,966.93.

Much damage was done in the low lands, crops are being injured, and dams and bridges washed away, by the severe rain storm last week. The State farm crops along the Roanoke are safe.

Oct. 12th is the date the corner-stone of the first building of the State University was laid. The anniversary was observed as usual last week, the day being a holiday and Prest. Winston holding a reception at night.

They've had a cooking school in Asheville and now have one in Charlotte. What's the matter with Statesville having one? It's a greater accomplishment than art and music. —Statesville Landmark. Why doesn't our "Normal" and INDUSTRIAL School teach it?

A wreck on the Asheville and Spartanburg Railway the 9th inst., says the Asheville Citizen, was one of the most disastrous that ever occurred on that division. A wild engine ran into a freight train, killing four men, crippling another, smashing a dozen cars, and ruining the engine.

General News.

The condition of the health of the Czar of Russia is very serious. He has Bright's disease.

Two hundred thousand stamps of varying denominations have been stolen lately by a Government clerk.

Dr. Minnigerode, pastor of Christ church, Richmond, Va., and pastor of Jefferson Davis for many years, is dead.

It is now said that the cotton crop will amount to more than nine million bales. The number last year was about eight millions.

A new French syndicate is at work on the deserted Panama canal. The world is determined to "make a way or find one" across this isthmus.

The twentieth annual convention of the American Association of Bankers met at Baltimore last week. It represented $150,000,000 and unknown power.

Twenty-one thousand mill operatives of New England, who have been on a strike against reduced wages, have resumed their vocations, having effected compromises with the mill owners.

Prest. Cleveland has proclaimed amnesty to the Mormons who were undergoing punishment for violation of the law. He says they are no longer disobeying the law. Polygamy is being abandoned.

Ex-President Harrison and Governor McKinley, who would be President, are campaigning at a great rate. Each of them made a dozen speeches in a dozen different towns, from the rear of railway cars one day last week. It is said that no two of Harrison's efforts were similar.

$1,795,980 souvenir World's Fair Columbian half-dollars remained in the U. S. Treasury at the close of the Fair. At one time it was thought that they would demand fancy prices, and many of them were sold at a dollar each. Now however the above amount of them will be infused into circulation as legal tender currency.

It is said that the Lexow investigating committee has not yet reached the bottom of the corruption in which the New York city government has been soaking several years. Revelation after revelation of complicity in crime, and of blackmail, extortion and political partiality, is being made. There are four sets of candidates in the field in New York city this fall. Tammany is making the effort of its life and is running a man named Strauss. Among the accusations becoming faces, for mayor.

President Cleveland is still resting at Gray Gables, Mass.

At the annual session of the International Typographical Union, held at Louisville, Ky., last week, W. B. Prescott, of Toronto, was re elected President for the fourth term. He is not yet thirty years old. Mr. A. G. Wines, of St. Louis, was elected Secretary-Treasurer. The next session will be held at Colorado Springs, Col.

An exchange says silk is being manufactured in Bradford, England, of wood pulp, a Frenchman has learned how to make as good India rubber as grows and a Yankee company is making a substitute for natural gas that can be used for lighting, cooking and heating purposes at a very low expense. The world is moving as it never has.

Five train robbers held up an express train between Richmond and Washington City the night of the 12th inst. and secured nearly $200,000 from the express car. Such daring as this is without parallel in the annals of crime. The man got on the train when it stopped for a drawbridge, and when it reached a deep cut near Quantico, on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railway, rushed from the tender into the cab and compelled the engineer and fireman, on their lives, to stop the train. The express man resisted until his car door was shattered with dynamite, which was good evidence that his life would be forfeited if he resisted longer. He was compelled to unlock the Adams Express safe, from which about $200,000 was stolen. Several shots were fired, but no one was struck. There was no attempt to rob the passengers. The rashness of the robbers is suggested in the fact that they cut the engine loose from the cars and sent it forward at full speed unmanned. Had it not fortunately been turned into a row of cars on a sidetrack serious loss of life would have resulted, for it would have met a passenger train within a few minutes. The robbers are suspected of having acquired their skill and nerve in the West. They left Virginia soil by boat, going across the Potomac to Delaware.

WHY NOT BUY THE BEST?

THE STANDARD DICTIONARY

OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, UPON ORIGINAL PLANS.

Published by FUNK & WAGNALLS' CO., New York City. 2,200 pages. 5,000 illustrations. 300,000 words. 175,000 more words than the latest Webster. 75,000 more words than the Century.

The editors (247) engaged upon the various departments of the Dictionary have been selected from the front rank of English and American scholars; each is representative of all that is latest and most approved in his own field of exploration and research; and each is an accepted authority in his sphere. From beginning to end the Standard Dictionary is the work of men thoroughly equipped in the schools of science, literature, and art, and of experts in all handicrafts and trades. It seems neither extravagant nor invidious to claim that no more capable and vigorous body of workers, in touch with the spirit and movement of the times, has ever been called to the making of a dictionary in any language. As has been well said, "This Dictionary will be, in fact, the joint product of many minds, reflecting the whole scholarship of the present age."

THE PEOPLE

appreciate the fact that the services of college presidents and professors, eminent scientists, clergymen, principals and superintendents of schools, editors, physicians and professors of medicine and anatomy, printers, musicians, electrical and civil engineers, judges, lawyers, and every class of business people are valued in accordance with their information and accuracy.

THE TIME HAS PASSED

when a 50,000 word dictionary (Stormonth) will do "just as well," or a 105,000 one (Worcester) will "answer my purpose," or a 125,000 one (Webster International, leaving out one half of the language,) is "all I need," or even a 225,000 one (Century in six volumes, leaving out 75,000 of the latest words and phrases) is "more than I can manage." 2,500 words might have answered all purposes one hundred years ago, but it is the "up-to-date" people we are looking for now.

Whenever You Wish to Employ a Professional Man and he owns the Standard Dictionary

you can rely upon him, for he has the largest, latest and best dictionary containing the best information from the best scholars in the world The Standard Dictionary is quoted and

Used by the United States Supreme Court

and all other American courts, as the final authority on the meaning of words and phrases. The special type, color plates, engravings, paper, press-work, binding, all delight and surprise one. Never before have such immense resources been so liberally used upon a dictionary. It was the purpose of the editors to make

The Standard a Full and Authoritative Dictionary

in every department of science and art, that all terms used in botany, geology, chemistry, law, medicine, the trades, as well as the terms of general literature, should be defined.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

enables you to begin to enjoy the use of the Dictionary at once, paying only a small sum down. Write to us and learn how favorable are the terms upon which it is sold. Best canvassers wanted in every county in North Carolina. Address

State Fair Notes.

Matters have crystalized into such shape as to assure beyond doubt the greatest success ever attained by the North Carolina State Fair.

Numerous attractions have already been mentioned of both practical and amusing character.

Tuesday, which is Educational Day, promises to be one of the most interesting of Fair week. A number of schools will be in attendance, and an address will be delivered by Dr. J. L. M. Curry, a great advocate of popular education. One of the great features of this day will be a chorus of five hundred school children to sing "The Old North State."

A new feature of practical interest just added is an immense exhibit of road machinery, showing every implement for making good roads from a pick to a fifteen-ton steam roller. Some of the machinery will be in operation. A Road Congress will be held in the city on Wednesday night of Fair week, to which everybody interested in this important question is cordially invited. Gen. Roy Stone, the United States Road Engineer, of Washington, will be present and deliver a short address. Addresses will also be made by practical road workers who will speak from actual work and experience.

Flat Rock Union Meeting.

Dear Recorder:—I send proceedings of Union Meeting for publication, by request of the brethren.

The Union Meeting was held at Flat Rock church, Sunday, Sept. 30th, 1894.

On motion, Bro. J. E. Alford was made Moderator.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Bro. J. J. Barrow. Subjects selected for discussion were:

1. Ought moderate drinking of intoxicating liquors be tolerated by the church?

2. What advantage is there in the connection of the work of the church and Sunday-school?

The first subject was discussed by several brethren of this church and visiting brethren, who seemed to be very feelingly and deeply interested on the subject.

On motion, the first subject was dropped and the second subject was called for. Many good points were given on this subject.

The day was very pleasantly spent in union with the brethren of this, and sister churches.

There being no minister present the brethren seemed to feel that there was something for them to do, and their united efforts were pushed forward in the cause.

S. R. JONES, Sec'y.

MARRIED.

PEAR—FERRALL—On Sept. 20th, 1894, in the Baptist church at Reidsville, by Rev. M. A. Adams, Mr. J. A. Pear and Miss Lizzie Ferrall.

MOSS—SPRUILL—On Oct. 3d, 1894, at Elizabeth City, N. C., by Rev. Calvin S. Blackwell, Mr. Walter Moss of Newport News, Va., and Miss Eva L. Spruill of Edenton, N. C.

DIED.

GOWER—A good woman has entered into rest! September 11th, 1894, Mrs. Catharine Young Gower, in her sixty-sixth year, was released from the sorrows that flesh is heir to, and in peace with God and all mankind, she Bid farewell to every fear,

And wiped her weeping eyes.

A short time before she died she sang that old hymn about the "Titles clear to mansions in the skies," with the chorus "I feel like I'm on my journey home." This is consoling; but much more comforting is the fact that she lived like she was on her journey home and her citizenship was in heaven. For nearly thirty years, with simple faith in God, she had been trying to live the life of the righteous, and so her last end was like his. She was meek, patient, economical, energetic and unassuming, ever more willing to suffer wrong than do wrong. But her life was far from being a failure. She accomplished much—much in many ways. Her influence extended far and near, and was felt by white and black. It is not dead yet. She being dead, yet shineth. The light from the Sun of Righteousness she reflected upon the world while in it ought to be held up that it may continue to shine. It ought to shine to bless the world through more than one generation. It certainly will.

Oh that her husband and her children, who loved her so dearly, and her many friends, may all follow her as she followed Christ, that we may all reach that place Jesus has gone to prepare, where we may be at home with mother in heaven.

HER SON.

CHANDLER—Sister Alice Maud Chandler, wife of Bro. J. K. Chandler, died Sept. 23d, 1894, in the forty-ninth year of her age. Some people claim sinless perfection. Sister Chandler made no such claim, but she often deplored her imperfections, and longed to be better. But I believe she was as near perfection as it is possible for a human being to be. Her life was such as to make her worthily rank among the best. No one ever doubted her piety. Her husband found her an amiable, helpful companion. Her children almost adored her as a kind, devoted mother. All her neighbors loved her.

The excruciating suffering of a dreadful cancer made her know that her end was near. She was ready. The hardest tie to break was that which bound her to her dear family. She begged her sisters to do all they could to help raise her children to be good and useful.

On Sunday evening, Sept. 23d, surrounded by a host of sorrowing friends, we laid her to rest in the cemetery at Amis Chapel church, Granville county, N. C., by the side of her two lovely daughters, who just one month before preceded their mother to the tomb.

May God's comforting grace be with this sorely bereaved family.

PASTOR.

NORMAN—Donnie Shannonhouse Norman, wife of L. W. Norman, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Shannonhouse of Hertford, N. C., was born Feb. 28th, 1863, and died Sept. 10th, 1894. She graduated at the C. B. F. Institute, Murfreesboro, N. C., in June, 1881. As a child she was dutiful and obedient. At school she was studious and correct.

On her return home each department of church work was greatly helped by the faithful and untiring effort she put forth to revive and advance her Master's kingdom.

In 1884 her health began to decline. She was married in September, 1885. But notwithstanding poor health, her first love for Zion continued and increased as life's work drew near its close.

Bible reading and family prayer had become to be one of the most enjoyable services, and contributed to the piety and the spiritual development of the sweet home. As a wife, though afflicted with ill health, she was affectionate, patient and kind.

As a neighbor, she was beloved, and her consideration of the poor was manifested by her gifts whenever their needs were made known to her. But alas, the time came when this work was finished, and Hertford had to give up one who was beloved by all that knew her. In her Bible a chapter was found with these words written over it by her own hand "Read only this chapter over me when I am dead." This was done in her own home where she quietly lived and patiently endured sufferings until the Master came and gave his beloved a quiet sleep,

"From which none ever wake to weep,
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."

We all will miss her—the pastor, the church; but the devoted, kind and untiring husband alone can only know her worth. She leaves a husband, father, mother, two sisters, three brothers, many devoted relatives, and a host of kind friends to mourn their loss. May God's blessings rest upon the husband and help him look up through his tears to our Father's house, a place of rest, a home for the weary.

COTTOLENE.

It's Provoking

to be deceived; it's annoying to have a poor article of shortening. You can avoid both by seeing that your pail of COTTOLENE bears the trade mark—steer's head in cotton-plant wreath—and be sure of having delicious, healthful food. Other manufacturers try to imitate COTTOLENE, that's the best reason why you want the original article.

Where Water is Bad

It should not be drunk unless proper precautions are taken. More diseases arise from drinking impure water than people imagine and yet in the face of warning they continue to absorb the dangerous fluid. If you have any doubt—if you are travelling—if you move to a new locality—take no risks but put a teaspoonful of in the glass of water, as it makes it healthy and palatable.

On a journey it is always dangerous to drink much water—take BROWN'S IRON BITTERS along—some people would not start without it, for it keeps them in health.

THE PROGRESS OF SCIENCE.

Recently the health board of the German Empire analyzed the dust in one of their passenger coaches. In this dust was found over 20 different varieties of germ or microbe life. The specific germ of consumption, asthma and catarrh were found in abundance. Previous to 1873 the medical world did not know or believe that germ or microbes were the cause of human disease. It is now so well established that only the most ignorant doubt these facts. In 1873 the great scholar and scientific investigator, Obermeyer, discovered the specific germ of intermittent fever. This microbe is wonderfully small. If 500 in a bunch were to wiggle across the pupil of the eye it would not cause you to wink. In rapid succession Doctors Koch, Pasteur and others discovered that cholera, typhoid and yellow fever, consumption, asthma, catarrh, all throat and lung diseases, dyspepsia, rheumatism, snake-bites, mad-dog-bites, stings of insects, boils, tumors, wens, old running sores, liver complaints, kidney disease, female weakness, decaying flesh, decaying teeth and bald heads are caused and produced by parasites, germs and microbes. Flux, diarrhœa and dysentery are produced by fermentations in the stomach.

On December 13, 1893, Dr. H. Biggs, bacterialogist of the health board of New York, informed that body that consumption was a germ disease and was contagious. Any one with a fine microscope can distinctly see these little germs eating the live fiber and warm blood drops of a human being. In our judgment, there could be but one test of a medicine used for curing any disease: Will such a preparation KILL THE MICROBES? Thousands of medicinal preparations are put on the market which have sweet smells and tastes, and some are named after well-known vegetables and plants. It is all done to get the money—the benefit never comes. It is to-day a conceded scientific fact that there is but one preparation manufactured which is an instant deadly poison to all germs, microbes and insect life, and yet pefectly harmless to human beings, even infants. A forfeit of $1,000 is offered to any one to find a germ, microbe or an insect that can live in it. It is claimed and proved by actual tests, that the gases of this preparation will kill a fly 3 inches away. When this preparation is swallowed into the stomach, in less than 10 seconds the gases are all through the air cells of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and passing off through the nostrils, killing, instantly, all germ and microbe life, wherever struck.

Over 100,000 bottles are now in the hands of the people with no complaints anywhere. The name of this wonderful preparation is SWAMP ANGEL MEDICINE. If it ever fails to cure any disease caused by parasites, microbes or germ life, or ever fails to immediately kill any human pain, return it to your druggist and get your money back. These wonderful oils, and gases, and extracts are securely corked and sealed in ½ pint and pint bottles. The regular retail price is $1 and $2. Twenty drops being a dose. Any druggist can get it for you, or cut out this ticket for the next 60 days, send it to any wholesale druggist in Georgia or this company and you will get the following reductions in prices:

THIS TICKET ENTITLES THE HOLDER — TO — ½ Pint Swamp Angel Medicine at Drug Store ..... .50 or ½ Dozen ½ Pints for ..... $2 00 or	1 Dozen ½ Pints for ..... 4.00 or ½ Dozen Pints for ..... 4.00 or 1 Dozen Pints for ..... $ 00 SWAMP ANGEL MEDICINE CO., ATLANTA, GEORGIA.

In our next issue we will give you a cut of the inventor of SWAMP ANGEL MEDICINE before and after taking. Look out for it. In writing mention this paper.

Special Notice.—Ministers and heads of religious denominations can get a free bottle. Write, giving reference and name of local druggist.

DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION.

Swamp Angel Medicine is a wonderful tonic, and therefore never fails on dyspepsia and indigestion. This trouble is simply fermentation of the stomach. Fermentation is regeneration. See yeast working and milk souring through a microscope. Millions of bugs are visible. So with dyspepsia, indigestion and sour belches; the gastric juices have failed to force digestion. One dose of Swamp Angel Medicine puts an immediate stop to all fermentation in the stomach. It kills the bugs. Cures, in Atlanta, on J. T. Timmons, W. S. Webb, J. H. Ray, O. K. Hornby, W. G. Gibson, J. J. Reid, John Stegall, and 100 more in Atlanta alone.

DEAFNESS CURED IN ATLANTA.

C. G. Tittenden was cured of deafness of fifteen years' standing. Celia White and Mary Caswell cured with Swamp Angel Medicine. Have never known it to fail in a case of deafness.

WOOLEN BREASTS, TUMORS, GOITERS, WENS AND SWELLINGS

Are caused by parasites. The milk in a mother's breast will sour and ferment. Then commences the mischief. Kill them every time with Swamp Angel Medicine. Goiters, tumors and wens are developed worms. Kill them every time with Swamp Angel Medicine. Wall Chapman, Sam Jones, colored, Mollie Dixon H. Temple, all of Atlanta, all cured of bad cases of tumors and goiters. Sam Jones, especially, was being choked to death with a large goiter on the neck. One month was wearing a collar and necktie—same as other people. Swamp Angel Medicine did the work. Could add 6 more cases. Space won't admit.

KIDNEY, BLADDER AND OTHER TROUBLES.

Swamp Angel Medicine acts most effectively on the kidneys. The urine often smells of the medicine, especially when taken in large doses. G. W. Williams, president of the sub-alliance at Stockbridge, Ga., could not stoop and pick up a pin. After using Swamp Angel Medicine three weeks could pick up 20 pounds. Made him a new man; better than he had been in twenty years. James Jackson, Atlanta, suffered for years with diabetes. Cured with two bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine. Russell Whaley, Atlanta, cured of inflammation of the bladder in one week with Swamp Angel Medicine.

ASTHMA AND CATARRH,

Conceded by the best medical experts to be caused by parasites, germs or microbes. Swamp Angel Medicine never fails to kill the bugs. Mrs. Spinks, living on J. J. Brogdin's place, near Lawrenceville, Ga., had been propped up in bed six months with asthma. In a week after commencing the use of Swamp Angel Medicine, she was up and doing her own housework. Could give you many remarkable cures of both catarrh or asthma. Swamp Angel Medicine will cure if you give it a trial.

ERYSIPELAS, DIARRHOEA AND COLIC

Are all caused by germs, microbes or parasites. John Daniels, Atlanta, struck with a base ball bat. A gash in the cheek and three teeth out. Erysipelas set in. Three days after, his face was a horrible sight. Saturday night commenced with Swamp Angel Medicine. Monday morning no symptoms of a swollen face. J. R. Clower, at midnight said: "Oh, I will die before day!" Congestion of the stomach. Dr. Swamp Angel pumped five doses, or 150 drops, into this gentleman in twenty minutes. He was up and walking about in one hour. N. H. Cheshire, a large farmer of Fulton county, says: "My mule was sick from 8 a. m. till 5 p. m. I then drenched with two tablespoonsful of Swamp Angel Medicine. In twenty minutes that mule was up eating oats." Miss Ella Clower, Atlanta, says: "Not one of the ten children has had la grippe, a cough or cold this winter. At the first symptoms of trouble we give and take Swamp Angel Medicine.

WHAT RETAIL DRUGGISTS SAY.

Dr. J. C. Cobb and Company, Buchanan, Ga., writes: "Three hundred bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine sold and guaranteed here. Only three complaints. She goes like a dandy and gives perfect satisfaction." Dr. C. D. McDonald, McDonough, Ga., writes: "Sold 100 bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine under a guarantee. Only one complaint." Bagwell, Bros., Lawrenceville, Ga., write: "Sold 160 bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine here. Guaranteed every bottle. It gives general satisfaction." Brooks and Ivy, Covington, Ga., writes: "Sold 100 bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine. Guaranteed every bottle. Never had a bottle returned." Wm. H. Lee & Son, Conyers, Ga., writes: "Sold eighty bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine here. Had one bottle returned." This certifies that I traveled with Dr. Swamp Angel from September 4, 1893 till February 15, 1894. I sold and guaranteed over 6,000 bottles of Swamp Angel Medicine during this time and only had to return the money for three bottles.

The Home Circle.

The Chambered Nautilus.

This is the ship of pearl, which, poets feign,
Sails the unshadowed main—
The venturous bark that flings
On the sweet summer wind its purpled wings
In gulfs enchanted, where the siren sings,
And coral reefs lie bare.
Where the cold sea maids rise to sun their streaming hair.

Its webs of living gauze no more unfurl;
Wrecked is the ship of pearl!
And every chambered cell,
Where its dim, dreaming light was wont to dwell,
As the frail tenant shaped his growing shell,
Before thee lies revealed,
Its irised ceiling rent, its sunless crypt unsealed.

Year after year beheld the silent toil
That spread this lustrous coil;
Still, as the spiral grew,
He left the past year's dwelling for the new,
Stole with soft step its shining archways through,
Built up its idle door,
Stretched in his last-found home, and knew the old no more.

Thanks for the heavenly message brought by thee,
Child of the wandering sea,
Cast from her lap, forlorn!
From thy dead lips a clearer note is born
Than ever Triton blew from wreathed horn.
While on my ear it rings,
Through the deep caves of thought I hear a voice that sings:—

"Build thee more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more vast,
Till thou at length art free,
Leaving thine outgrown shell by life's unresting sea."
—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

A Boarding School.

"I am sure I shall not like it at boarding school," said twelve year old Christine Wilder; "I wish we were not obliged to go."

"I know I shall not like it," echoed her younger sister Irene; "I wish there was some other place for us."

"As long as it seems best for you to come here while your father is away, you must not complain," replied Aunt Margaret. "This is the house; you will soon get over your first natural timidity and be quite content, I have no doubt."

"Isn't Miss Clemmer kind?" asked Irene, the moment they were by themselves in a room assigned them. "I loved her the moment she arose from her desk in so charming a way to receive us, and did not mind being left here then."

"Yes, she is kind in manner. That is the way she makes her money. I heard Aunt Margaret tell grandma so this morning."

"I think she is kind at heart, sister. We shall know when we find out if she is a Christian. You remember mamma said we should always find friends among the people of God."

"Aunt Margaret does not believe much in those things. She said that in time we should get over the grief of mamma's death. She did not say that God would help us in any way."

"You are in the night-time of sorrow now, but the morning will come," spoke a sweet voice at the open door. "How long is it since the morning of heaven's glory opened to receive your mamma?'

"Only six weeks," replied Christine; "and almost immediately papa was obliged to take that long voyage on business. There seemed no way open to us but to go to boarding school."

"All these events have made a great change in your lives. The days have seemed dark, I know; but God gives us times here in this world even, that seems like heavenly mornings."

"I remember once when I was ill," said Irene, "how long the nights were, and how glad I was when the shutters were opened for the morning light to shine in."

"Many sick people have had that experience, and it is well when events in our daily lives lead us to think of sacred things. Can you think of any one in the Bible who came to an experience after trouble that seemed like the daylight breaking?"

"I think," remarked Irene, after a little pause, "Noah and his family must have felt that way when the dry land appeared."

"And Jacob, when he heard that Joseph was alive," added Christine.

"Yes; and you will find illustration of this example in your daily reading. To every life sorrow comes—that is night; but joy follows—that is the morning. Those who trust in Christ as their Saviour have always a day spring in their hearts which assures them that the dawn will surely come, no matter how dark the night, nor how heavy the burden."

"O, you are one of God's people!" cried Irene, putting her arms around Miss Clemmer. Christine added: "I have been so unhappy that I wished to die. I forgot what mamma told us, that we must live on and be useful. We were indeed in the night-time of sorrow, but our coming here has been like the daybreak, because of your belief in our mother's Saviour."—Mrs. Annie A. Preston, in The Sunlight.

The Dimple Cheeked Village Maid

may not retain her dimples and rosy cheeks "blooming with health," until she finds a good husband. A little neglect or accident may bring about some one of the many "female" diseases and "weaknesses," to which the sex is subject, and health may be forever impaired, and hopes and happiness be at an end. Thanks to Dr. Pierce, his Favorite Prescription, prepared by him for women, cures the worst cases of uterine diseases, nervousness, neuralgia, irregularities, and "weakbodied." It is a great invigorating tonic and nervine, and rapidly builds up the health and strength.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, for constipation, for headache, biliousness, indigestion. Or constipation, always in favor.

A Service at Sea.

Dr. F. E. Clark describes a scene on an ocean steamship, between Shanghai and Hong Kong, as follows:

On the forward deck, at least fifty of our long cued passengers were gathered around the hatchway, on which was spread a great feast for the spirits of the departed. In the center a huge roast pig, crisp and toothsome, as if cooked to a turn according to Charles Lamb's famous recipe, held the post of honor. On either side his porkship was garnished by a bowl of cooked rice, a bowl of rice wine, and a basket of mandarin oranges—not an uninviting feast, by any means.

As I came on deck a gorgeously dressed Chinaman was prostrating himself on a square mat before the brown porker. After a few muttered invocations, the paper money having by this time all been burned, the pig was reverently borne to the side of the vessel and dropped overboard. Then the cooked rice was emptied into the sea, the wine followed the rice, and the oranges followed the wine, and went bobbling over the billows, apparently in a vain attempt to catch up with the pig, which was now drifting far astern.

Seeking for an explanation of these strange performances, I was told that in the year 1874 a great Pacific liner, with several hundred Chinamen on board, went down near this spot; and to this day, though a score of years have elapsed, whenever a devout Celestial passes this spot he makes an offering of pork and rice and wine and mock money to the departed spirits, that they may have something to sustain them in their ethereal existence.

Never were the superstitions of the far East brought into sharper contrast with the religion of the West. Here, on a steamer hailing from a Chinese port, owned and officered by nominally Christian men, with more than one missionary of the cross of Christ among the passengers, were performed the rites of grossest heathenism. Here were brought together on the same deck representatives of darkest Asia and brightest America. Here was a creed that demanded roast pork and boiled rice and mock money for its spirits, side by side with a creed that has for its chief article, "God is a spirit, and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth."—Selected.

How I Teach a Colt

When I wish to teach a colt to carry a saddle, I first put a blanket on him, folded to about saddle size, then a circingle strapped loosely. At the next lesson I make the circingle quite tight; at the third lesson, very tight. At the fourth lesson I tie the colt to the hitching post, and put a boy on him. He soon gets accustomed to the weight and does not mind it; then I take the boy off, remove the blanket and put on the saddle; then put the boy in the saddle, letting him sit there for fifteen minutes, but moving himself about, and otherwise making himself conspicuous. Then I put the saddle on the horse, put the boy on horseback, and lead the horse about fifteen minutes, then I give the lad the reins and let him gently exercise the horse for half an hour. After this course of training any man or boy can ride the colt, provided he has sense enough to manage him kindly.—Dumb Animals.

October Wedding Rules.

The number of bridesmaids and ushers at a wedding is altogether optional. At any large jewelry shop pretty articles for bridesmaids' souvenirs may be found. Among them are bangles upon which the initials of the bride and groom may be combined in a monogram, lace pins, prayer books bound in white, card cases, etc. For the ushers, scarf pins, pocket stamp boxes, cuff-buttons and pencils are in order, The bride usually presents her bridesmaids with their gloves, as does the groom his ushers. The groom furnishes the flowers for the bride and bridesmaids and the boutonnieres for the groomsman and ushers. The cards of invitation should always be provided by the family of the bride.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Helping The Minister.

"One thing helped me very much while I was preaching to-day," said a clergyman.

"What was that?" inquired a friend.

"It was the attention of a little girl, who kept her eyes fixed on me, and seemed to try to understand every word I said. She was a great help to me."

Think of that, little ones; and when you go to church, fix your eyes on the minister, and try to understand what he says, for he is speaking to you as well as to the grown up people. He is telling about the Lord Jesus, who loves the little ones.—Child's Gem.

Every leisure hour he had he studied such books as he could obtain; he worked hard at Blantyre factory in summer, harder at Glasgow University in winter, and rose step by step till he became Dr. Livingstone, the missionary and explorer of Africa, whose name as a Christian traveler will live to all ages. Only Jesus.

Nothing but the love of Jesus
Can supply my inmost need;
What though I have golden treasures!
He alone my soul can feed;
Only Jesus through the wilderness can lead.

Nothing but the love of Jesus
Can my longing satisfy;
From the fount of living waters,
If I drink not, I must die;
Only Jesus hears the fainting spirit's cry.

Nothing but the love of Jesus
Doth my wandering heart recall;
Nothing but his grace extended,
Can restore me when I fall;
Only Jesus loves me, notwithstanding all.

Nothing but the love of Jesus
Lights the way through sorrow's gloom,
Fills the barren waste with singing,
Makes the desert-place to bloom;
Only Jesus breaks the silence of the tomb.

AMONG THE FLOCKS

of people who visit the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., are many who are sent there, by those who have already, from personal experience, learned of the great achieved by the Surgeons of that famed institution. Little heroic, or cutting surgery is found necessary. For instance, TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are removed by Electrolysis and other conservative means and thereby the perils of cutting operations avoided.

Triumph in Conservative Surgery

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

RUPTURE, or Breach (Hernia) is radically cured without the knife and without pain. Trusses can be thrown away!

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and safely removed without cutting.

STRICTURES of Urinary Passage are also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases.

SOME ONE ought to preach a sermon to English and French literary men travelling in America upon that Scripture which warns men that the vain are given to much talking and the foolish to hasty judgment. An Englishman or Frenchman having become notable in Letters forthwith sets out for America. He gets within several large hotels, travels a few hundred miles, makes the acquaintance of a few railway conductors, porters, society men and newspaper men, and returns to his native land, more ignorant than ever of America and Americans. It then becomes to his advantage to write a book, attributing the idiocies of the people he has seen to all the people, portraying the knots on the tree as the tree itself, describing the flecks and flaws upon the surface as features instead of inevitable and unfortunate accidents. It is true indeed that there are enough of these to fill a book, but any fool can see them. It is true, also, that there is enough of pure and unadulterated unwholesomeness to console any conscience-troubled foreigner and his miserable, and, therefore, company seeking, countrymen. And they are welcome to it, if they will only get the real thing, in order that Americans may not appear totally and irretrievably depraved. But it is cruel to have insipid American emulation of foreigners mistaken for vigorous uncivilization. Make as many hyperboles about our highway robbers, Indians, cow boys, sneak thieves and their ilk as you please, but we protest that it is too much to speak of the habits of society people at a summer resort as American characteristics.

That these gabbling foreign travellers do not get a knowledge of the real and characteristic American evils is apparent in a chapter in Mr. Bourget's notes, now being published, that is devoted to society. He seems to have gotten an invitation to Newport, and there to have witnessed no end of pitiable false culture and insane emulation of the English. And he calls this American society, and thereby libels all but about one thousand of the natives. The Frenchman saw so much to ridicule and to pity at Newport that even his subjects repudiated the chapter. How much more heartily should it be repudiated by the honest people on whom this hideous Newport society life is saddled! But they are probably too honest to care.

To call the antics of a few, and, thank God, isolated society fiends, American, is less near the mark than to saddle an honest farmer with the depravity and the filth of the Italian quarter of a great city. It is doubtless true that Bourget spoke to the best of his knowledge and belief, but any one might have told him that it requires more than a week to become acquainted with any one but an idiot.

After all Bourget is not so much at fault, if one considers that the best of literary men now a days are not above writing by measure, the dollar being that measure. Publishers know only too well the weakness of a great multitude of people for reading outrageous and sensational articles by writers of repute. Bourget's review of his flighty visit is read and talked about by thousands, and that is the acme of the aspiration of many writers. The truth is of smallest account, if exaggeration brings the ducats. Diction, style, rhetoric, all, including decency, is put aside if one has become so noted that his name sells his works. And Bourget is famous. He has become a great realist since he made a story of very inhuman—not to say unreal—characters, lewd and base, that attracted the world's attention.

If one were arranging a scale of humanity, and if each class were graded according to usefulness to the world in general, beggars too low to be put in poor houses would be at the bottom, criminals next, and society folks next. The word society in its proper application is a good word. Society is the alimonc of the human race, at least, that is what it was intended to signify; but at present it is often used to designate an exclusive set of vain fools, who, deceived that the balance of the race is unfit for association with them, isolate themselves, and, to make manifest their isolation, dress in a certain kind of costume, eat at a certain unearthly hour, sleep when honest folks are working, walk with a peculiar gait, talk of their neighbors' bad habits, or their friends' misfortunes, have peculiar diseases, live artificially, and, therefore, ungodly and inhumanly, contributing neither to their own nor the world's development, and die—unintentionally, however—poor, in squalid friendlessness and mockery of comfort.

A town society set holds aloof from the poor and the hard working and the unpretentious. But its very leaders will remain on their knees all night before a leader of a city set. These people pretend to live, but the pretense is successful only with themselves. They are ludicrous until one considers that no small number of the rising generation is growing up thinking that life is not worth living "out of society." The truth is that the further one is kept from the society that divides honest men, the happier for him, and the better for the race. One who measures manhood by degree of birth is scarcely better than one who measures it by money. One who feels too good to associate with an honest man of manly instincts is next to the anarchist. The despiser of manhood is the enemy of order.

THE mark of sheep nature in human beings was brought into bold relief the other week. The English royal family does not know any better than to sprinkle its children soon after they are born. But it has so outgrown its subjection to church forms and decrees that the latest heir to the throne was sprinkled privately at the residence of his parents instead of in a church. Now, however, the church is much perturbed because private families, following the royal example, are having their children baptized at home. As a rule people are not ashamed of their religion, yet in this instance shame is not unnatural.

LABOR leaders are learning It has been announced that the two men most notorious for directing labor strikes in this country have said that they will never lead or approve another strike. As stated in these columns lately it is impossible for resourceless Labor to bring Capital to terms, as folly impossible as it is for an army with a few rounds of ammunition and a weeks rations to take a well provisioned fortress. The leaders referred to are President Debs of the American Railway Union and Master Workman Sovereign of the Knights of Labor. These men have either known all the while that strikes are unprofitable, or have been crediting Capital with less selfishness and more soul than is usually ascribed to it. The walking delegate, the well-paid labor leader and the demagogue in politics are the only beings who profit by strikes, while millions suffer. Labor's hope is the ballot, through which, by reason of superior numbers, it will sooner or later reduce Capital to terms.

THE Librarian of Congress, Mr. Spofford, was delegated to choose subjects for the statues of twenty-five of the most eminent men of the world. The Journal and Messenger publishes his selection in part as follows: Poetry—Homer and Shakspeare; Art—Angelo and Beethoven; Science—Newton and Henry; History—Herodotus and Gibbons; Philosophy—Plato and Bacon; Commerce—Columbus and Fulton; Law—Solon and Blackstone; Religion—St. Paul and Moses.

The aim seems to have been to place the greatest ancient alongside the greatest modern. There is a notable absence of statesmen and soldiers, which will be relieved, as the list is not yet complete.

IT is quite the fashion to think one's own particular vocation the hardest of them all. Farmers exaggerate and contemplate their woes and envy the merchant, who appears to have nothing to do save buy and sell; the merchant, in turn, perplexed with notes and drafts and the inevitable ups and downs of trade, envies his neighbor, the doctor, the dentist, or the lawyer, and all of them are probably inclined to think that the life of the school teacher, especially the college professor, the easiest on earth. One is tempted to say that a man who thinks his vocation more disagreeable or less worthy than that of another has missed his calling. Certain it is that a man in love with his work will not complain, is incapable of envying others. A certain degree of discontent, however, is desirable, but envy never.

Of all vocations, that of the editor is most berated, and unjustly, too. There is no newspaper reader but that is used to recitals of editorial woes. And yet editors cling closer to their calling than any others. They talk about hard work, but they are seldom persuaded to do anything else. They know the ills that await them, but that doesn't prevent them from meeting them half way. They know the ills of other people, and that, perhaps, keeps them from envying. And they knew, too, that the large and increasing number of beings who covet an editor's position will not allow one to overwork himself. And that may be fortunate, maybe not.

The Baptists and Liberty of Conscience.

SERMON PREACHED IN THE WEST WASHINGTON STREET BAPTIST CHURCH, GREENSBORO, SEPTEMBER 23, 1894, BY THE PASTOR,

CHARLES A. G. THOMAS.

Acts 22:28, "I was born free." And Acts 4:19, "Peter and John answered and said whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye."

Religious liberty is not a characteristic of the Baptists, but a distinctive and fundamental principle, without which they could not exist. A Baptist without this principle is a religious monstrosity—a fit subject for the national museum. The Baptist who disregards this principle at once departs from the faith and places himself by the side of those who have relentlessly persecuted with blood and fire the faithful heroes of the past. No intelligent and self respecting Baptist can deprive or even attempt to deprive a man, woman or child of their God given right of conscience. On this platform parent and child, prince and peasant, capitalist and laborer are all equally accountable to God. I have known a man to have his wife's patience to be worn threadbare by the persistence of efforts of husband to get her to join his church. I have known children to be deprived of their God given and constitutional rights and forced to join the church of parents. The Baptist man who does ought to be excluded by the church of which he is a member. He violates a fundamental principle of his church and puts upon his profession the brand of insincerity. Think of a Baptist compelling his child to join a Baptist church. He robs his child of its rights. He insults his church by perversion of her principles. He insults God by invading his dominion. I have heard of a Baptist doing such a thing, but if he ever did anything else I never heard of it. The prostitution of this Baptist principle eclipsed his whole life, and he is rarely heard from in his church and then only as cynic, crank, critic, and disturber of the peace of his home and church.

But some one says, "The reason the Baptists have thus been the advocates of soul liberty is because they have never had the opportunity to exercise force." Prejudice and ignorance (or falsehood) are stamped upon every word of this declaration Baptists have been in such positions through the ages past and are in many communities today, yet they have shown, not simply toleration after the manner of some denominations, but have insisted on unlimited freedom of conscience. It is impossible for the Baptists to do otherwise without overthrowing their dearest fundamental principle. The Baptists are consistent and logical, and no true Baptist will knock out the prop which holds him up. Strike out religious liberty and our doctrinal system falls. In Rhode Island the Baptists had every opportunity to exercise force, yet it was the birthplace of religious liberty in America. In 1764, the Rhode Island College (now Brown University) was founded by the Baptists. They positively stated in the charter, "There shall never be admitted any religious tests," and that "all the members shall enjoy full, free, absolute, uninterrupted liberty of conscience." And that its officers, the President alone excepted, "shall be free and open to all Protestant denominations." Of its Board of Fellows, twelve in number, only eight were required to be Baptists, and of its thirty six trustees, only twenty-two were to be Baptists. Is there a Pedobaptist school in the world so broad in its policy? Thos. Hollis gave the endowment for a Chair in Harvard College, yet up to 1876 no Baptist ever filled it. He also endowed ten scholarships in the same school, yet only four of these were specified for Baptists. Though a Baptist was the most liberal patron of this school, yet three Baptist preachers were imprisoned in 1729 because they refused to pay taxes to support the preachers of the denomination which controlled that College. In 1784, the Virginia Baptists were offered State patronage, but they refuse on principle. In 1785, the Georgia Baptists were offered State patronage, but they fought the law and sent messengers to the legislature to protest against it, and the law was promptly repealed. In Holland, in the beginning of this century, the king offered the Baptists the patronage and support of the State, but they declined it on principle. And only a few years ago, if my memory serves me right, Powell in Mexico refused a large sum offered by the State for a Baptist school. There are other historical facts along the same life which could be mentioned, but these are sufficient to show that the Baptists have been consistent in fighting for this great principle.

I. WHAT IS RELIGIOUS LIBERTY?

Archbishop Whately says of it, "We merely maintain that a man has a right, a civil right, to worship God according to his own conscience, without suffering any hardships at the hands of his neighbors for so doing."

An American writer says, "Soul freedom is the freedom to think and act in religious matters without human dictation or control."

We mean by religious liberty not only the liberty to worship or not as we please, but complete exemption from compulsory support of a church or any faith, which we do not approve. Religious liberty permits us to enjoy religious opinions and worship and places us on all questions of religion beyond the control of human power and directly accountable to God. We need to emphasize this principle more than ever. There is a tendency to intolerance among most people. Baptists need to put their faces against everything which tends to intolerance. They must not be satisfied with toleration. Nothing short of religious liberty is their watchword. In our dread of the Catholic, we may forget ourselves and say too much against him. He has the same right to teach his doctrines that you have to teach yours. But when he tries to get control of civil institutions and political office in order that he may deprive you of your religious freedom, you have a right to protest with all your nature. The anarchist has a right to teach his children there is no God and no hereafter, but when he teaches that others have no rights which he is bound to respect, and that laws are not to be enforced, then he becomes an object for the civil law. A man's conscience stands only before the bar of God and to him we must accord absolute freedom in its government.

II BAPTISTS HAVE BEEN THE GREAT ADVOCATES OF THIS PRINCIPLE THROUGH ALL THE AGES.

Roger Williams did not invent this principle. He took it up, elaborated it, and put it into practice. The progress of religious liberty in the world is due more to the efforts of the Baptists than any other agencies which have been at work in the world. Bancroft the historian, says, "Freedom of conscience, unlimited freedom of mind, was, from the first, a trophy of the Baptists." Bancroft was not a Baptist. The celebrated John Locke declares that "the Baptists were the first and only propounders of absolute liberty, just and true liberty, equal and impartial liberty."

Underhill tells us, "There is not a confession of faith, nor a creed framed by any of the reformers which does not give to the magistrate a coercive power in religion, and almost every one at the same time curses the resisting Baptists." The great denominations which came out of the Reformation as they gained power tried the power of force on each other, and each in turn, and sometimes combining, tried to force the Baptists. It seems that through all the ages Baptists have been common game for persecution.

In 1547, the Episcopacy had its Inquisition. In 1643, the Presbyterians took the thumbscrews and began to torture others. Calvin himself burned Michael Servetus. Luther said that the sword should "exercise its rights over" the Anabaptists. Zwingle said "that whoever submitted to immersion, after having been sprinkled, should be drowned. Melancthon advised in 1537 death by the sword as the punishment for Baptists. To day even it is no new thing to hear the Baptists sneered at, and to find social and parental influence brought to bear against them. I know children and wives whose lives are a burden because they are Baptists. I can cite one example that has occurred within the last twenty years within one hundred miles of Greensboro. A Baptist woman was whipped by her Presbyterian husband because she would not see her child sprinkled. Her father was a Baptist preacher. Her brothers are as noble men as walk the streets of any city, one of whom is a Baptist deacon. And what shall we say of the preacher who, knowing the principles of the mother and her great protest against the act, deliberately sprinkles her little child? One feels like crying, as Dr. Peck says Patrick Henry did when he saw three Baptist preachers tried for preaching the gospel, "Great God! Great God!! Great God!!!"

The pastor of this church had a Pedobaptist church closed against him because he was a Baptist, and for no other reason, and that within the last ten years and within a radius of twenty miles of Greensboro. The spirit of intolerance against Baptists is not dead yet in this land of liberty. But, thank God, the thumbscrews of civil authority can no longer be tightened upon us. No denomination which practices infant baptism can possibly advocate this great principle. The very act of infant baptism is a violation of this principle. To compel an unconscious, helpless and unwilling child to any ordinance of Christ, or into any church, is unscriptural—a violation of individual right and the beginning of a principle which stops at the lash and sword. In this violation we have the seed corn of persecution.

The first modern treatise ever written upon this subject was by Leonard Busher, a Baptist, in 1614. Its title was "Religious Peace, or a Plea for Liberty of Conscience." Take one sentence from it: "That it may be lawful for every person or persons, yea, Jews, Turks, Pagans and Papists, to write, dispute, confer and reason, print and publish any matter, touching any religion, either for or against whomsoever." In the Baptist Confession of Faith, 1611, we find this: "We believe that the magistrate is not to meddle with religion, or matters of conscience, nor compel men to this or that form of religion, because Christ is the king and lawgiver of the church and of the conscience." Long before this in 1560, the Baptists of Great Britain published protests to which John Knox replied. Through the dark ages for a thousand years, the men who defended this principle were hunted in caves and brought to the stake, or thrown to wild beasts.

The first treatise written in this country for full religious freedom was by Roger Williams in 1644. John Cotton, a Pedobaptist, replied to it defending compulsion. From that time on, the struggle continued until all civil enactments were abolished and every man had absolute freedom of conscience.

III. UPON THE PRACTICE OF THIS PRINCIPLE, THE BAPTIST DENOMINATION STANDS OR FALLS.

This great doctrine is the very essence of our position. If you strike out the fact that religion must be voluntary and free from compulsion, you knock away our doctrinal corner stone. Every part in our system depends on the other, and in turn helps to support the whole structure. Religious liberty calls for absolute freedom of choice. This calls for believer's baptism and positively and absolutely excludes infant baptism. The Baptist denomination is the most solid and compact of all, yet we have no great ecclesiastical system binding us together. The secret lies in the fact above indicated that our system is logical and scriptural. Let us see if this is true. Let the Baptists abandon (no real Baptist ever did or ever can do this) religious liberty, what follows? The right to compel others to accept our views. What next? The right to force into conformity those who in heart are not in sympathy with our views, and hence a mere formal religion. What next? Every argument we make against infant baptism falls, and every error which we have fought becomes a part of our polity. It is therefore absolutely impossible for any true Baptist to persecute or force any man, woman or child into the acceptance of religious principles. The inexorable logic of our system demands soul-liberty—personal choice—personal performance of all religious duties—converted membership—personal faith before the ordinances—independence of local church—separation from civil authorities, &c. The broadest and truest catholicity the world has ever known, or will ever know, is centered in and emanates from this glorious principle of religious liberty, which is truly the corner-stone of our system. The Baptist system could not stand for one moment without it, hence the great need of loyalty to it.

IV. THE INFLUENCE OF THIS PRINCIPLE AMONG MEN.

No principle ever had such a struggle as this. The Baptists have neither advanced nor receded, but have struggled amid the bloodiest contests in history to give it to the world, and the world has felt its power. This principle is incorporated in the first amendment of our constitution and put there at the instance of the Baptists of Virginia. Later on in Massachusetts and other States this principle prevailed. Already in other countries this principle has been working its way until to day there is a good degree of toleration in Germany, Sweden, France, Spain, Italy, and other countries.

Growing out of this comes civil liberty. All the blessings which we enjoy in this country are but the outgrowth of this great principle of religious liberty for which we so long contended; and it stands to-day as the mighty bulwark of the noblest interests of our great Republic.

But most of all has been the power of this principle upon religion itself. To it is due the development of the glorious idea of the spirituality of Christ's kingdom. It has thrown man upon his own individual responsibility to God. It has impressed upon him that religion is a personal matter. It has thrown benevolence on the individual and taken it from the shoulders of the State. It has lifted man into a nearness with God that he has never enjoyed since the time of Christ and has brought to him the realization of the relationship that he bears to God. May God help you to cherish this principle as the gift of his wisdom and love. Let us with the same diligence which filled our forefathers, and guided by the same spirit which led them, be faithful to the trust committed unto us, and with united efforts contend for the principle in every department of life. Its prevalence means a broader Christian horizon, and a complete overthrow of prejudice and bigotry. This principle enthroned in the lives of men will bring to pass the dream of Christendom—Christian union. Not until this principle prevails in the hearts of men will the Lord's prayer that his people shall be one, be consummated. For this let us labor and pray and wait.

The Mantel of Charity.

It is the one garment the fashion of which never changes. The years may go and come, and yet she who cloaks herself in this mantle is at once happy herself and the giver of happiness. In cut it never changes. It is always large and full, so that it can envelop those who are unhappy and give them warmth and comfort. Like the cloak worn by the prince in the fairy tale, it is invisible to all but those whose eyes are made clear by faith. It is the garment that I would like my girls to wear. It is true that much patience and much self denial are required before this cloak is put on, as it should be, for all time; but once assumed the amount of joy to be gotten from it, and the happy heartbeats to the wearers of it, cannot possibly be overestimated.—Ruth Ashmore in Ladies' Home Journal.

Nothing can work me damage except myself; the harm that I sustain I carry about with me, and never am a real sufferer but by my own fault.—St. Bernard.

Home is a working model of heaven, with real angels in the form of mothers and wives.—London Life.

The Biblical Recorder.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1894.

REV. C. T. BAILEY, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
J. C. CADDELL, AGENT AND CORRESPONDENT.

PREACH the whole Word, or none. God authorizes no man to say that jot or tittle of his word can be compromised. To say that any part of God's Word may be eliminated is to presume upon God; to say that any of it is out of date is to deny Providence.

THE infidel Revolutionists of France wrote over the gates of their burying plots, "Death is an eternal sleep." That is the infidel's only consolation. People who profess to preach the gospel ought to know better than infidels. Yet the Adventists prate of annihilation.

THE most pertinent and timely question, of all the questions of the day and other days and the future, is the question that Moses once asked: "WHO IS ON THE LORD'S SIDE?" One who settles that question for himself before taking a step, will never make a false step. And it ought to be the first question settled, in whatever position a Christian is.

CHRIST, whom people sneered at, calling him carpenter, instituted and ordained missions. Carey—a cobbler—was the instrument that the Holy Spirit used to fan the listless flame eighteen centuries later. God chooses his means not from among those whom the world calls great, for they are vain, but from the humble. One's station cannot be too low for full and marvellous service for God and humanity.

THE Charlotte Observer suggests that the people levy extra taxes upon themselves in order that the free schools may be maintained according to the Constitution, that is, four months each year! Let us suggest that a sensible Legislature can so apportion the public funds that no worthy institution or public interest will suffer—not even those not mentioned in the Constitution,—and the free schools be properly maintained. A body of honest, sensible legislators can do this. The people are in no humor to increase taxes.

"WOE UNTO him that giveth thy neighbor drink" was the text from which Rev. F. H. Martin preached a splendid sermon last Sunday morning. * * * He said that he would suffer his right arm severed from his body before he would vote for any man who would, knowingly and wilfully, use his influence to foster the curse of liquor.—Lumberton Robesonian.

That is saying a good deal, but it's no more than every Christian, who interprets the gospel of Jesus Christ as we do, ought to say.

Political parties have got to learn better than to nominate whiskey men; and they must be taught better by Christian people asserting their Christianity.

A party that is not good enough not to have to cater to bar-keepers and distillers and moonshiners is too low for human beings, whether they be Christians or not.

We oppose whiskey candidates just as earnestly as we oppose those who seek office as prohibitionist politicians. It is a personal matter.

THERE was a big baptizing at Charity Methodist church, near Traphill, Sunday. Twenty-five persons were baptized, nineteen of them by immersion.—Cor. Winston Sentinel.

There is but one mode of baptism, and baptism is not baptism except that mode is observed. One who reads the Scriptures will agree to this.

Now here is a man who actually approves two modes by administering each. He cannot be scriptural in both. He has helped some people to deceive themselves. He permits them to call something baptism that is not baptism, for there is but one baptism. He shows a lack of proper sense of the importance of God's word, and a lack of personal backbone.

There is but one right way. There is no mistaking that. At any rate there is no necessity for pretending that baptism is so slight a thing that it may be done according to the taste of the candidate.

All the significance of baptism depends on the mode. If baptism were regenerative, it might be otherwise; but baptism is a symbol. And symbols are not variable. Just as 10 has represented ten all these centuries, so does the going down into, the burial and the coming up out of the water, symbolize Christ's death, burial and resurrection. Sprinkling cannot be imagined to represent anything of the kind. It is a vestige of inane ritualism, a monument to Roman Catholic love of ease.

Baptism is not baptism except it be as Christ ordained; and he never ordained but one kind.

BAPTIST STRENGTH.

It is a recognized fact that the denomination of Regular Baptists is one of the sturdiest, if not the sturdiest, of Christian sects. Financially they may make a weaker showing than others, but as a body that possesses a peculiar sturdiness which gives it individuality and marks its components as fearless in assertion and pursuit of conscientious convictions, it stands first.

There was a time when great God-given principles were all that Baptists had. Their number was few; their power as a human force was unrecognized. They were sneered at, called dippers, Anabaptists, fanatics, and the like; but they adhered to duty with undaunted tenacity, and by the grace of God attained a strength that compels the admiration of men. Since Bancroft wrote of the Baptists, "They were trodden under foot with foul reproaches and arrogant scorn, and their history is written in the blood of thousands of the German peasantry; but their principles, secure in their immortality, escaped with Roger Williams to Providence, Rhode Island, and his colony is witness that naturally the paths of the Baptists are paths of freedom, pleasantness and peace,"—since those words were made a part of standard history, sneers and reproaches have become foreign to Baptist ears.

How is it that Baptist principles have spread? Surely none were ever so bitterly and doggedly opposed. Surely none ever had so unassuming apostles as they had in the sixteenth century. And yet the number of those who espouse them at the present time is several millions.

The evidence is that the Baptists five centuries ago were unassuming and undemonstrative. What has been achieved is not due to the ardor of men. It is true that Baptists have adhered to their principles, but they were not militant for a long time. There was a power higher than any temporal power.

No one denies that more is required of a Baptist than of other Christians. They have to make the boldest professions, they have to observe the Lord's Supper zealously and literally, and likewise they have to act according to the Scriptures, not as scholars and church dignitaries interpret them, but as the individual church does. Nothing is smoothed down or glazed over. And it is a truth that just as more is required of a Baptist so is a Baptist stronger in his religion than the average Christian.

"Denominational Strength" is the suggestive title of one of the admirable addresses included in Rev. Dr. T. E. Skinner's late work. It concludes with a statement of three principles on which much of the strength of the Baptist denomination rests: First, "a manifest conformity to Christian and apostolic doctrine;" second, the conformity with the spirit and will of Christ of our missionary, educational and benevolent aspirations; lastly, "our strength must be centered in the great necessity for and our conscious dependence upon the Holy Spirit." This last is the keystone. Strength consists not in numbers, not in persistency, but these, on the other hand, depend upon spirituality, and through it make strength.

There is one tie that binds Baptists together as the human devices which reproach other sects cannot. It is baptism. Starting with that symbol for a covenant that one will follow Christ wheresoever, proclaiming in the beginning by baptism that oneself has set out to follow the New Testament conscientiously and boldly, it is not to be wondered that Baptists, though disorganized by nature, are united in stronger than temporal bonds. Moreover, Baptists do nothing involuntarily. The infant child of Pedobaptists is sprinkled, "regenerated" and consecrated without its knowledge or consent. Baptists, on the other hand, are responsible to themselves and God alone. They have to do nothing for form's sake; they are asked to take no step in the dark. To be a Baptist is to be one of God's freemen.

Other denominations may be accused of having obtained what vigor they have through human organization, through subjection to elders and chief priests, but one looks vainly for "one in authority" among Baptists. The strength is seen, the source is the unseen Spirit of God.

THE trouble with Adventists is they never keep to one point long enough for one to come down on them. They jump from this to that, they take a few words of Scripture and conceal the context, they make a great pretense at arguing, when in truth they are delivering a jumble of words.

A man cannot preach the wholeness of God's Word, cannot say God keeps his promises, when he also preaches that a soul is mortal.

BRO. WHITE'S question as to the Board's relations to Sister Knight has not been answered because Bro. Willingham has been travelling some of the way across the continent with the departing missionaries. We hope to have the answer for next issue.

THE EDUCATIONAL ISSUE AND THE PUBLIC.

The majority of the people in North Carolina oppose State-aid to higher education. The fact that efforts against State-aid have been so extensively endorsed in so short a time signifies that many people were ready for the move. It signifies, too, that State-aid has not been of benefit to the great body of them that make the State, else they would not have been ardent to further the opposition.

That most of the people oppose State-aid to higher education, however, may not be signified at the polls; for, indeed, there are many who will hold their principles in abeyance for partisan reasons. A voter may conscientiously believe that this question ought to be deferred until contingencies of undesirable nature have been removed. But such a one will not defer it long. Only for the time being may one forego personal belief through conviction that the general welfare of the State depends upon the success of a party rather than the enactment of certain principles. But one who does this must perceive that his duty is to make his party espouse his personal principles. A party ought to stand for one's principles more nearly than any other before it may command one's loyalty.

It is fortunate that no political party has espoused the principles of "How Far Should a State Educate." They are the property of the public in general; and a Legislature will be elected, sooner or later, that will effect them. They have friends who will work for them in season and out. The election may disintegrate parties, but it cannot determine this matter. The people will hold the legislators elect, whoever they are, responsible. The individual members, instead of a political organization, must each measure up to the public's standard; and they that fail will not be forgotten. We shall continue to agitate the matter.

It is neither right, nor wise, nor constitutional for the State to appropriate taxes to higher education. Right, wise, constitutional, are very meaning words; but their title to usage in this connection has been thoroughly demonstrated.

It is a reproach upon our Constitution, it vitiates the source of the State's life, not to provide more means and more efficient means of educating the children who cannot otherwise obtain education. Thousands and thousands of uneducated children portend an era of stagnation.

By aiding higher education the State stifles the all sufficient and only laudable, the voluntary, system of maintaining institutions of higher learning. Protection of education and protection of industry are not unlike in their effects, except that it is the more grievous to tax a stockholder of an institution for the maintenance of a rival institution that tries to starve out its unprotected competitors.

By aiding higher education the State undertakes to equip men and women for life. Christians hold that one in whom the principles of Christianity are not instilled is not prepared for life. The State, pretending to observe this sentiment, makes a show of inculcating these principles It thus commits an offense against God and man, in that the attempt is a sham, for nothing distinct can be taught; and it reproaches the Constitution in that that instrument is trangressed by any act committing the State to a religion.

Failure to give the children in the State proper opportunity for education is unwise. To levy taxes for adding to the education of men and women comparatively well educated, of men and women able to educate themselves, of men and women well able to perform their duties to the State, of men and women, sons and daughters of wealth, who have none other purpose than self-gratification, to levy taxes for the education of these, while the tax-payer himself untutored even in the rudiments is barely able to maintain his family, to send men and women, of the classes designated, to Normal and Industrial Schools and to Universities, while no inconsiderable proportion of the youth in the State has no schooling, having to work for livings, while 350,000 boys and girls have not more than seventy school days annually, their teachers poorly paid at that,—to do this—which our State is doing this day—is prodigal disregard of the dictates of common sense that will reef the sails of progress and anchor the State in ever-widening, ever-deepening ignorance.

Baptist principles command us to proclaim our convictions. Baptist tolerance bids us be patient with the slow and considerate of the erring. Each man is asked to vote the dictates of his conscience, each Christian must determine—must say by his vote—"who is on the Lord's side."

"AND the smoke of their torment goeth up forever and ever; and they have no rest day and night." That's what the Bible says, and the statement doubtless includes persons who contradict God's Word.

PERSONALS AND OTHER ITEMS.

....THE RECORDER nineteen weeks—fifty cents. Tell your people.

....Ask your Adventist if Satan will be or has been annihilated.

....The Convention Committee is still waiting for an invitation on the usual plan.

....Rev. E. E. Blount, late pastor at Clyde, is residing temporarily at Greensboro.

....Rev. J. E. Greene is holding a revival at Ronda. Bro. Greene has an excellent high school at that place.

....Rev. W. C. Tyree baptized twenty-one into the fellowship of our Durham First church one night last week.

....There are only 15,302 Baptists in New York City. Time for some good brother to write "Darkest New York."

....Rev. T. A. Pounds of Archer Lodge came in to see us last week, bringing encouraging reports of his work.

....Fifteen members were added to our denomination at Jerusalem, Davie county, after the meeting by Elder J. N. Stallings.

....Rev. M. V. McDuffie of New Brunswick, N. J., is growing on the Northern brethren. He has been called to Portsmouth, N. H.

....President Taylor has returned from a trip North in the interest of Wake Forest College. Our readers will hear from him in the near future.

....Elder E. N. Gwyn, clerk to the Elkin Baptist Association, will please accept thanks for a copy of the minutes of the late session of that body.

....Rev. O. P. Meeks of Clinton recently baptized seventeen candidates after a meeting at Magnolia, in which Rev. J. B. Harrell rendered efficient aid.

....Rev. E. M. Poteat supplied for Dr. H. M. Wharton at Baltimore last Sunday, while the latter was holding a revival in Bro. Poteat's New Haven church.

....Rev. C. J. Thompson and bride of Lynchburg, Va., have been visiting relatives and friends in Durham and Wake counties. They are both deservedly popular.

....Rev. W. C. Newton has been called to our church at Dunn. Bro. Newton serves at Clayton and Shiloh, and is a member of the Senior class at Wake Forest.

....Bro. Durham is mightily pressed for time, working for State Missions and Education, but he had to find time to give our readers some important facts this week.

....People who are so fastidious on Sundays that they demand individual communion cups, drink out of public dippers at "fashionable" hotels and summer resorts.

....Brother and Sister John Waddell of Reidsville celebrate the twentieth anniversary of their wedding the 24th inst. May a score and a score more of years be added to them.

....It is stated in the Progressive Farmer that "last year $20,000 and $2,000 additional for repairs" went to the University. It should have been $20,000 and $10,000 additional.

....There has been a net gain of fifty-six in the membership of Tryon Street Baptist church, Charlotte, in the last year of Dr. Pritchard's ministry. There are 384 members now.

....Sister G. W. Quinn, brethren Lamberth, Hunter, J. E. Greene, and others, have our thanks for good clubs of new subscribers handed in last week. May their tribe increase.

....Rev. W. B. Harrell has resigned care of Mt. Gilead church, Cumberland county, and Rev. R. A. Moore has resigned his Hope Mills work, of which Rev. I. T. Newton has assumed charge.

....Rev. N. S. Jones has returned to Salisbury after having held a successful meeting with Pastor Royall at Forestville. There were several professions and the membership was uplifted.

....Bro. W. E. Mason, superintendent of the Sunday school of Dr. Gregory's Baltimore church spent Sunday visiting Raleigh Baptist congregations, and made an instructive talk at the Tabernacle.

....Secretary G. W. Lawrence of the Cumberland County Agricultural Society has our gratitude for an invitation to attend the Thirty-second Annual Fair at Fayetteville, November 14th to 16th.

....In our note about Rev. N. S. Jones last week "Mt. Vernon Springs" should have been Forestville, N. C. Bro. Jones was once at Mt. Vernon, Wake county, where he is lovingly remembered.

....Baltimore has also invited Southern Baptists to meet there, "pay as you go." It seems to us that a pay-as-you-go Convention, without any visiting relatives, ought to be a good investment for any city.

....A Baptist church will be organized at Poplar Grove, says the Smithfield Herald, where eleven persons were baptized last month after a meeting in which Elders W. B. Harrell and J. T. Jenkins preached.

....Rev. C. W. Matthews has been called to Beulah Baptist church, Chincoteague Island, Virginia. It is a prosperous church, having a parsonage and other conveniences. May the Lord be with pastor and people.

....Rev. H. C. Standridge writes from Hiawassee, Ga.: "We have had many revivals of religion in our part of the world. Have organized another church in the bounds of the Hiawassee Association. It is made up on a more missionary basis than some of our old ones. It would be a glorious thing if we had several new ones, or many of the old ones worked over. The RECORDER finds a lasting home wherever it gets a full test."

....Pastors in need of assistance should consider our four months fifty cents offer.

....Two hundred and eighty two churches were organized and 10,468 persons baptized by the 1,493 missionaries who labored under the auspices of our Home Board last year. There is no more fruitful work than Home Missions.

....We know a preacher who has chosen his sermon texts and topics for several months to come. He has chosen well, but we fear his sheep will complain of two much dust. "He maketh me to lie down in green pastures."

....The Examiner for October 18th is a most admirable number of that admirable journal. No metamorphosis was ever more radical or happier. New shape, new paper, new type, tasteful illustrations, and, as ever, wholesome reading.

...."The seed is the word of God." Luke 8:11. Now if you would like to have a package of the seed to sow among the unsaved, send a postal to Jno. T. Pullen, Raleigh, N. C., and he will forward you a package free of charge.

....Rev. A. B. Caudle writes from Waxhaw: "I baptized two at Waxhaw last Sunday (14th.) The church is in good condition, and has arranged to pay its pastor before the Association meets. I shall continue to serve them, the Lord willing."

....Bro. Thomas gives an account elsewhere of the organization of a new Association—the Piedmont. The name is good. The churches composing it, the Reidsville, Greensboro, Liberty, Buchanan and Summerfield, are a promising nucleus.

....Messrs. Jno. M. Heck, J. D. Hufham, Jr., and R. S. Sledge have been announced as marshals from one of the Wake Forest Societies for the next anniversary. The names remind one that new leaders are on the heels of the passing generation.

....Bro. D. L. Gore has just sent me a fifty dollar check for State Missions. Thanks. Who will do likewise? Your help is now greatly needed in State Missions. Help us, brethren and sisters, by a personal contribution.—C. Durham.

....The anonymous coward who asked Dr. Taylor several personal and impertinent questions in the public prints, and who has refused to divulge his name, although Dr. Taylor offered to answer the questions on that condition, is still ashamed of himself.

....We shall not press our nineteen weeks fifty cent offer much longer. We hope to give all Associations the opportunity of this arrangement. If each pastor will mention the arrangement to his people as soon as possible we are sure it will result in untold advantage.

....Dr. Cobb is getting on well with the "North Carolina Almanac" for 1895. It will have several new and attractive features. Dr. Cobb is the author of the first Baptist almanac published in this State, and he has a copy of it yet. It was issued in war times.

....Rev. C. W. Blanchard closed a good meeting at Peacock's Cross Roads last week, after which five were baptized. Others will follow. Bro. Blanchard will please accept thanks for four new subscribers to the RECORDER. He has sent us twenty or more this year.

....Rev. W. V. Savage has taken charge of our church at Tarboro, the pulpit of which Rev. Jos. G. Blalock has been supplying very efficiently since Bro. Hufham went to Shelby. Bro. Savage had to literally tear himself away from his Columbia brethren and sisters.

....We sympathize with Dr. C. G. McManaway of Charlotte, N. C., who lost his wife to heaven's gain last week. Mrs. McManaway's illness was very brief. She was thirty-seven years of age, and was educated at Peace Institute. Five children mourn her death with their father.

....Observe that the humble college president who wrote that fawning letter to the President of the University is still ashamed of his name, or rather ashamed to acknowledge his statements. We don't blame him; and doubtless the University is thankful that he keeps himself hid.

....Physical death is the separation of the soul from the body, usually attended by a process of violence and suffering naturally dreaded. Eternal death is final separation of soul and body from God and holiness, consigned to perpetual sinning and its consequences.—Rev. J. D. Pope.

....Bro. Van Deventer has sent us a program of a Baptist Young People's Meeting to be held at Charlotte in December. It reached us last Saturday afternoon, and as Monday is invariably devoted to getting the news in shape and preparing the type for the press, publication of it was deferred.

....Rev. Chas. A. G. Thomas' sermon in this paper ought to be read and reread by Baptists and distributed as a tract among Pedobaptists and State-religionists. It treats of a feature of our religion that is usually overlooked in the pulpit. We have an excellent sermon by Bro. Van. Deventer for an early number.

....Deacon J. H. Alford of the RECORDER office, whose visit to Louisville we noted recently, has returned; and he brought interesting news of Baptist affairs in Louisville. He worshipped at Dr. Eaton's Walnut St. Church, and also attended its Sunday-school. He learned that the first German Baptist church in the city was dedicated the 14th.

....Rev. G. W. Coppedge found time on his return from revival work to give us good news last week. Revivals in his five churches have brought out about seventy converts. Rev. A. A. Pippin and Bro. Chappell helped in the work. Bro. Coppedge has resigned care of New Bethel, Granville county, where he has served thirteen years. He has one Sunday unoccupied in consequence.

....The RECORDER is not read by inactive members. There's a moral here.

....Secretary Thos. G. Wood requests us to announce that a called meeting of the Board of Trustees of Chowan Baptist Female Institute will be held at Mt. Tabor during the session of the West Chowan Association, Tuesday afternoon, October 30th. A full attendance is urged.

....Rev. W. L. Bilbro of Warsaw held a meeting with Johnson church a few days ago that resulted in the baptism of twenty converts. Rev. A. A. Butler rendered effective aid. At Hallsville eight were received by baptism, after a meeting in which Elder W. H. Vanhoy aided Bro. Bilbro.

....Receipts of the Foreign Mission Board up to date are forty per cent. more than last year this time. This is a glorious fact. The Board will end the year out of debt if the present rate is maintained. Let North Carolina see to it that every cent expected of her is raised. We ought to do more.

....Rev. Jno. A. Shaw has been ordained to the full work of the gospel ministry at Columbia. Rev. B. H. Matthews preached the ordination sermon, Rev. W. V. Savage delivered the charge, Rev. Josiah Elliott presented the Bible, and the candidate asked the benediction. May the Lord keep and guide him.

....Missionary R. T. Bryan addressed a large congregation at Kenansville the 14th inst., that being the eve of his departure from this State for the foreign field. Kenansville is Bro. Bryan's home church, and it is natural that all the people thereabout delight to show their appreciation of such a noble Christian worker.

....The Tar River Association showed appreciation of Bro. Hufham's work in that section by instituting a "Dr. Hufham Fund," with which an Association missionary is to be supported. Doctor Hufham's work in the Tar River is his best memorial, but a plan for extending the stakes planted by him is next best.

....Rev. J. A. Campbell writes us of a model Association, the Little River: "Our body is young and small, but there is chance for great development. It is thoroughly united, in full sympathy with the Boards, wholly opposed to State appropriations to higher education, and devoted to associational mission work." There are good preachers in those parts.

....Bro. Guy L. Bunch of Raleigh and Miss Flora May Edwards, daughter of the esteemed senior member of the firm of Edwards & Broughton, were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents the 17th inst. Brother and Sister Bunch are deservedly popular, and we join their many friends with wishes for God's rich blessings upon them all their days.

....Prof. F. P. Hobgood, Jr., son of the excellent president of Oxford Female Seminary, has accepted charge of the high school at Matthews, Mecklenburg county, N. C. Bro. Hobgood comes of a distinguished line of teachers, the Royalls and the Hobgoods, and his work at the Oxford Seminary last year, we are informed, gave abundant evidence of useful capabilities.

....Rev. G. A. Bain, a student of Bro. Campbell's excellent Buie's Creek Academy, was ordained to the ministry recently. He baptized thirteen into the fellowship of Antioch church the 14th inst. for his pastor, Elder W. M. Page. Brother Bain has been called to take charge of two or three churches. It is his intention, however, to go to the foreign field as soon as he is prepared.

....Pastor W. J. Wyatt of Perth reports having had special revival meetings with his churches at Berea, Hebron, Hopewell, and Mt. Zion. At Berea Elders Pool, Hopkins and Setzer aided him, and two were added by baptism; Bro. Hopkins preached at Hebron, where two were added; at Hopewell, Elders McClure, Talbert and Ballard helped, and fourteen have been baptized; Bro. McClure assisted at Mt. Zion, where there were seven additions by baptism.

....At the regular monthly conference of the members of Meadow Branch Baptist church last Saturday, Rev. J. B. Richardson of High Point was recalled as assistant pastor for the year 1895. Rev. Mr. Richardson has been serving the congregation at Meadow Branch for the past three years. He is a preacher of wonderful force. On Sunday the congregation was greatly pleased to see their old pastor, Rev. E L. Davis, who has been serving them for nearly forty years. It was his first visit to the church in twelve months.—Monroe Enquirer.

....The Charlotte Observer would saddle the asinity of a Gaston county upstart candidate upon the educational issue—which it persists in calling "the University fight." Judging from the Gaston county man's course as outlined in recent Observers by himself and his friends we are compelled to believe that it is impossible for him to conceal his ears or restrain his bray even a few weeks; and that they would have been brought into prominence this fall, if the people had never joined in "the University fight."

....A Methodist Conference recently made complaint that property in possession of the State was being used at Chapel Hill for the University ball. President Winston attempted to remove the objection by saying that the University ball occurs after the close of the University session, and that the property referred to—gymnasium ball room—is not rented by the State except in school time. This may be satisfactory explanation of the particular University ball, but they had the "annual fall term dance," as it was stated in the papers, last Friday "evening"—i. e., from 10 p. m. till 3 a. m.—and in that identical gymnasium ball room, during the school term, while the property is rented by the State. It is in order for the versatile President Winston to devise another and a more convenient and consistent explanation, one that will hold its color through at least two washings.

....There are many Wake Forest boys who remember young John Allen as a general favorite at Wake Forest College two years ago, in knee-pants, bright, manly beyond his years, and clever in class-room and campus. The Wilmington Messenger is authority for the pleasing information that he is now manager of the Western Union Telegraph office at Wytheville, Va., having assumed charge of it the first of this month, which was his sixteenth birthday. He is a son of Bro. J. S. Allen, well known in Raleigh and Wilmington, now a leading contractor of Richmond, Va.

....The announcement of the marriage of Prof. A. T. Robertson and Miss Ella T. Broadus created quite a sensation among the students. We hardly suspected such a thing of the Professor.—Seminary Notes in Kentucky papers. It is a rare woman that wins Robertson. We had given him up for a permanent bachelor. But he's scriptural in all things, and that probably accounts for this happy consummation. It is not stated when the event will occur. The Professor was in Texas at the Convention when last heard from. Miss Broadus is a daughter of Rev. Jno. A. Broadus of the Seminary.

....'"The Lord has abundantly blessed my churches during the last six months," writes Elder G. P. Hamrick of Boiling Springs. Fourteen have been baptized at Grover as a result of a ten days meeting, and two more await the ordinance. Twenty-four were received by experience at Double Springs. At Henrietta two meetings of ten days each have been held this year, and eighteen converts have been baptized, and others will follow. Rev. J. C. Gillespie, a Wake Forest student, did most of the preaching in the late meeting at Henrietta. We are glad to know that the Henrietta church has been finished, and now presents a beautiful appearance.

....Rev. W. A. Smith has held meetings with three of the four churches in his pastorate with good success. His church at Bell's was much revived and there were two additions; at Perry's Chapel there were twelve professions and five have united with the church. Bro. Ed. Spruill aided in this meeting, Perry's Chapel is a good working congregation. At Cedar Rock there were about fifty professions of religion, thirty-two of whom were baptized the 14th inst. Rev. I. S. Boyles of Wake Forest assisted in this meeting, and he won a warm place in the hearts of his hearers, many of whom were students at Cedar Rock. Bro. Smith has eighty three students in the Academy, and he employs four experienced teachers.

Tar River Association.

This body met with Scotland Neck church, on Thursday, Oct. 11, 1894, at 11 o'clock. The Association was called to order by the Moderator, W. E. Bowers. After the letters were handed in and delegates enrolled, the body was organized by electing Bro. N. L. Shaw, Moderator, and Rev. A. G. Willcox, Clerk.

During the afternoon session, reports were read on the Support of Aged Ministers, and Obituaries.

At eight o'clock p. m., the introductory sermon was preached by Rev. W. B. Morton of Louisburg, N. C., from Josh. 13: 1; Num. 13: 30; Isa. 54: 2. As a request has been made for the publication of this sermon, and the readers of the RECORDER will see it, we omit some things which otherwise should be said about it. The unanimous verdict was, that it was one of the very finest missionary sermons ever heard before the Association.

Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock, devotional services were conducted by Bro. James R. Rodwell.

At 10 o'clock, the report on Associational Missions was read and warmly discussed by brethren on whose hearts this work has been placed. It was decided to raise and spend two thousand dollars in pushing the mission work in the bounds of the Association.

A letter was read here from the beloved Dr. J. D. Hufham, and it produced such an effect in the hearts of the people in this section, among whom the faithful servant of the Lord had gone preaching so long, that it was suggested that money enough be raised in Dr. Hufham's name to pay the salary of the best missionary in this Association.

In the afternoon, Foreign and State Missions were discussed by brethren Van Deventer and Durham.

At the night session, beginning promptly at eight o'clock, after prayer by Dr. John Mitchell, the Moderator announced the subject, "General Education." Bro. O. L. Stringfield took the floor, and spoke in interest of Christian education for young women. His speech was full of information, interest and encouragement in connection with the Baptist Female University now being built in the city of Raleigh. Then Rev. C. Durham, in his inimitable way, spoke at length to a very large congregation on the subject of general education. There are only two ways by which the great bulk of the people, who ought to hear what these brethren say can do so—that is, hear them, or have what they say put in print and read it. But both seem impossible.

On Saturday, the third day, religious exercises were conducted by Bro. Duncan McLeod at 9:30 a. m.

The report on Ministerial Education was read and discussed by its representative, Bro. Jno. Mitchell, who was followed by brethren J. A. Munday, F. P. Hobgood, C. Durham, J. R. Pace, W. B. Savage, and B. T. Vann. In the absence of many of the delegates who had gone home, no pledges were taken, but the churches were urged to take up collections to carry on this part of our work.

Later in the morning, the report on Home Missions came up, and called out brethren C. Durham, J. A. Mundy, A. E. Vinson (col.) and B. T. Vann, with very earnest speeches on this home work. A motion was made that the pastors put this work before their churches, and try to raise five hundred dollars this Associational year.

During the evening session the Sunday-school work was brought prominently before the body by many eloquent speeches.

In the absence of Bro. J. H. Mills, Bro. E. E. Hilliard looked after the Orphanage work and was faithful in it.

The RECORDER agent having to leave this evening, can only report that Dr. J. A. Mundy was announced to preach on Sunday at 11 o'clock, and Dr. C. Durham at 8 p. m.

While Bro. W. E. Bowers has served this Association faithfully for years as Moderator, Bro. N. L. Shaw, the newly elected Moderator, seems to be fitted by nature and grace to preside over such bodies, and put new life into the whole meeting.

The Association was never, because it couldn't be, better entertained than it received by the Scotland Neck people. We all loved them before, but better now than ever. Their newly-enlarged church was simply beautiful and full of people all the time.

The next session of this body will convene with the church at Wilson on Wednesday before the second Sunday in October, 1895. Bro. W. B. Savage is to preach the introductory sermon, and J. H. Lamberth alternate.

Atlantic Association.

The Atlantic Association met with Antioch church in Pitt county on October 16 h.

Some twenty years or more ago one Bro. John C. Cox bought land near what is now the Antioch church. Some years later Rev. Dr. Knight began preaching in the workshop of Bro. Cox, who patented the Cox cotton planter. This was the beginning of an important movement in business and religious matters as the Cox family became the leaders in business and religious work. It is now one of the best sections to be found—all beginning with one true Christian man.

High water cut off the attendance of a part of the delegation.

Bro. Albritton being absent, Rev. Rufus Ford, pastor of Newbern church, is chosen Moderator. Bro. C. B. Williams of Snow Hill was re elected Clerk.

The report on Ministerial Relief Board was presented and discussed

The report on Temperance was received. It was a good production. This very important report was discussed by various brethren. Many of our churches need to take a higher stand in this attack on this great evil. In this, as in many other things, we need more work, voting along the line of our praying.

The report on Periodicals strongly endorsed the RECORDER and Charity and Children, and all the publications of our Southern Baptist Convention. How our homes do need to be guarded from trashy and pernicious literature! It is easy to get lots of cheap papers, but many of them are dear in the main after all. It costs much to get up and run a good paper.

On Tuesday night Rev. C. A. Jenkens of Goldsboro preached the introductory sermon on our communion. It was an able and a clear defence of Scriptural communion. He showed that our communion should be called Scriptural instead of close. Everything about the New Testament church is close—a close membership, baptism and ministry. The New Testament church is the only perfect organization.

On Wednesday Dr. Durham spoke for an hour on State Missions in the morning. It was a great address. This man is a great power for God in our Master's work in North Carolina. We now have ninety two Baptist preachers to more than three hundred destitute neighborhoods.

Dr. Vann made an able address on Home Missions in the afternoon. He is thoroughly conversant with this great subject. We need so much to see that the twenty-two millions of people in the South have the gospel.

The Association requests that Bro. Jenken's sermon on the Lord's Supper be published in the RECORDER.

Dr. Mitchell presents the claims and needs of the Board of Education. Thirty six young preachers are being helped at Wake Forest. We need your aid. Help us.

At night Rev. O. L. Stringfield made a strong address on Female Education and in behalf of the Female University at Raleigh. This seems to us to be the one great interest now before our people. May the Lord incline and help us to build it.

Next came Drs. Durham and Vann on General Education. Two strong men on a most important subject, and no two men are better informed on this great question, unless it be Dr. Taylor.

Foreign Missions, the Sunday school work and the Orphanage were to be presented the last day of the session. Bro. J. H. Mills arrived as we were leaving.

From Bro. D. S. Williams.

Dear Bro. Bailey:—I am still in the land of the living. The dear old RECORDER comes to me weekly, and I enjoy it possibly more than I did in my youthful days. I rejoice to learn from it that the truth is making itself felt almost all over all the State of my nativity.

I thank God that I have been spared till 1894, and to see that the education of the children of the poor is being urged in North Carolina. In former days the rich received the benefit of the State's finances. I am glad to know that the injustice of such legislation has been laid before the taxpayers of the State, and I sincerely hope that it may be so changed that an equal distribution of the moneys may be made, so that the poor and rich may all fare alike in accordance with justice and the teachings of the State's Constitution.

I ask you to change my paper from Arkadelphia to Olmstead, Kentucky, after the 25th of this month, and that all my old friends may know that my future address will be Olmstead, Kentucky.

D. S. WILLIAMS.

Arkadelphia, Ark., Oct. 15, 1894.

Notes from Greensboro.

Last week I had the pleasure of a trip to my old home in Portsmouth, Va. It was a rich treat to visit again the scenes of my childhood and to greet loved ones and friends once more.

Many have been the changes since I left my old home twelve years ago to become a pastor. How the city has improved! What splendid buildings are seen on every square! The city has spread out in every direction until it seems to rival the Norfolk of twelve years ago, and now Norfolk seems to be pushing Richmond for the first place as a commercial centre. The churches and schools have greatly multiplied, so that to-day the "cities by the sea" present glorious opportunities for educational development and religious activity. The Scotsville church, Portsmouth, has called Bro. Martin of this State. This church is a very pleasant pastorate and affords fine opportunities for doing good as well as for self culture.

I failed to see Bro. Speight of the Atlantic Baptist, but had a pleasant chat with Dr. A. E. Owen. He was pastor for eight years. He baptized me, and it was indeed pleasant to have an opportunity to meet him in his home once more. He is doing a great work in that section, and the brethren say that his congregations are larger now than for a long time and growing all the time. They say, also, that he continues to preach with power. I heard good reports of brethren Hall and Watson, but did not have an opportunity to see them. From Portsmouth I went to Richmond. How beautiful this city! Richmond has become a "city of monuments" as well as of hills. I had the pleasure of going over Dr. Hatcher's new church while in Richmond. It is the best equipped house of worship I have ever seen, and one of the most convenient. The auditorium is beautiful. It will well repay any one to visit this splendid building. I preached in the Fulton church Sunday morning. This is Bro. Daugherty's church. The new house of worship, begun by Dr. Whitfield, is not yet complete, but the basement is finished and here the people worshipped. At night, I preached in Calvary church for Bro. Bagby. This is also a new house well arranged in the interior, and presents a fine appearance from the out-side. In contrasting these houses and congregations with our own in Greensboro, I felt that we were not behind them, but rather in the lead, and I thanked God for Greensboro church, and shall take courage for the future. I am now at home again and realize as never before "there is no place like home."

PIEDMONT ASSOCIATION.

This is the name of the new Association, composed of Reidsville, Greensboro, Liberty, Buchanan and Summerfield churches (Summerfield failed to get their letter on account of sickness of delegates, but will affiliate with us in our work). Dr. Rominger was elected Moderator, W. L. Kivett, Clerk, G. W. White, Treasurer. The Executive Board is composed of the following: E. A. Griffin, M. A. Allen, R. W. Brooks, Geo. Buchanan, and D. Winchester. Bro. J. L Lane was appointed a missionary to labor at Brown Summit, Piny Grove, Gibsonville, and another point to be determined by the Executive Committee. The funds are pledged and another missionary will be put in the field at an early date. More money was raised for State Missions, or rather Associational Missions, by these five churches than the Beulah has raised for several years. Every church was represented by full delegations. The delegates came with a mind to work. They came with hearts full of the Spirit, and the result was a most harmonious and profitable session. I have never known a brighter promise for an Association, and this little beginning will, like the mustard seed, become a great tree. The amounts pledged amounted to over $500 with prospect of an increase. The time for meeting is Thursday before the third Sunday in October, and the place next year will be Liberty church. Every delegate expressed himself as greatly encouraged at the work of this first session, and will carry back to his church a report which will help them on to greater activity than ever before. Bro. M. A. Adams preached the sermon on Wednesday night. It was a most appropriate and helpful sermon on "Burden-bearing." The people were delighted with the sermon. It will do us all good.

CHAS. A. G. THOMAS.

Sandy Run Association.

The Sandy Run Baptist Association closed its fourth annual session last Sunday. I have heard quite a number of brethren, both members and correspondents, say it was the best meeting of the kind they ever attended. Greater zeal than usual was manifested on every line of work. The talks on missions, education, &c., were spirited, enthusiastic, and full of facts. While talking on missions, the brethren seemed to have the burden of souls at heart. The speech of Bro. Caddell on religious literature will not soon be forgotten. Brethren present, who have frequently heard him, say they believe his address was the best effort of his life. Bro. Peterson's talk was practical, sound and good. Bro. Erwin Sorrells and others among our visiting brethren made good talks. Brethren, come again.
